The midsummer dullness in all lines of business sometimes creeps into Headquarters, and yet we are receiving some dues and donations with now and then a gift for the hospital and Temple. We are expecting that September and October will bring such a flood of dues that we shall be kept very busy, and for that we shall be glad. A question has come to the Corner, asking "What will the National W. C. T U. do with all the money if they do not pay for the Temple?" This good woman seems to think that all the money that has been sent for the Temple is held by the National. As much confusion seems to exist in the minds of many, notwithstanding the oft repeated explanations, we have thought best to answer it in the Corner, and try to explain the relation of the different interests. The W. T. P. A. receives all money sent for THE UNION SIGNAL, for books and leaflets published by it, for pledge cards, pins and L. T. L. supplies, etc. If any money is sent to the National treasurer for these, it is at once turned over to W. T. P. A. If money is sent to her for the hospital, it is immediately sent to the treasurer, Mrs. Bigelow. If gifts for the Temple are sent to her they are at once given to Miss Johnson, Mrs. Carse's financial secretary, or they are sent to Miss Dow. So that the National never has in its treasury any money belonging to these affiliated interests for any length of time, and the general officers of the National have never had any voice in determining how these sums shall be used. The only fund that has been placed under control of the National, that in any way belonged to these affiliated interests is the Willard Temple fund held by Miss Dow, and I feel sure that they will, when the time comes, dispose of that small amount in a wise manner that will give satisfaction to the donors and to all concerned. It seems impossible to make our friends at a distance understand that all these interests are legally incorporated societies, and that none of these are in any way responsible for the funds of the other. The National has its dues, its donations, and all money received for Minutes and Annual Leaflets, but all special funds are from time to time sent directly to the object for which they were given; for instance, the money sent for soldiers and sailors is at once forwarded to the superintendent of that department, and so of all other specified gifts.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association will be held at the Hospital September 5, at 1:30 P. M. Friends of the institution are cordially invited to be present.

(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.

The "A, B, Ab," of cleanliness: — Use Pearline, upstairs, downstairs, inside, outside, everywhere. Cleanness with Pearline is easier than with soap. Then, if a woman uses Pearline, isn't everything likely to be kept cleaner? "Hard work" is the reason for leaving many things dirty.

Pearline means better living, comfort, health, economy. 567

Millions NOW USE Pearline

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel:

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Colonel Turner; Second Illinois, Colonel Moulton; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers.

Convention Call.

IOWA.

The ninth annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the state of Iowa will be held at Waterloo, October 11 to 14, the executive committee meeting the 11th, the convention opening the morning of the 12th. A diamond medal contest will be held the night of the 13th, and Miss Lillian M. Phelps, of Canada, will speak the night of the 14th.

MARION H. DUNHAM, Pres.
BELLE H. MIX, Cor. Sec.

KENTUCKY.

The annual convention of the Kentucky Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Louisville, September 30 to October 4.

FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Pres.
NELLIE T. ARNSPIGER, Cor. Sec.

Convention Calendar.

WYOMING, Laramie, Sept. 7-9.
COLORADO, Denver, Sept. 21–23.
SOUTH DAKOTA, Mitchell, Sept. 21–23.
NORTH DAKOTA, Park River Sept. 23-27.
WEST VIRGINIA, Charleston, Sept. 28–30.
NEW YORK, Johnstown, Fulton county, Oct. 4–7.

Our Library Table.

PAUL, A Servant of Jesus Christ. By the Rev. F. B. Meyer, B. A., of Christ church, Westminster Bridge Road, London. Price $1. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago.

Prof. Dean C. Worcester, of the University of Michigan, will contribute to the September CENTURY a paper based on personal experience, entitled, "The Malay Pirates of the Philippines," and illustrated from photographs taken by the writer.

A new song book intended especially for temperance, prohibition, patriotic and reform meetings has been issued by Chas. M. Fillmore. Price 15 cents, four copies by mail, postpaid, 50 cents; one dozen copies, postpaid, $1.40. Address orders to Patriot Phalanx, 25 Cyclorama Place, Indianapolis, Ind.

A sister of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln will contribute to MCCLURE'S MAGAZINE for September an article giving reminiscences and recollections of Mrs. Lincoln, along with passages from her letters that furnish an intimate and very agreeable view of her home life and her relations with her husband, the great war president.

Everybody has heard of the Red Cross, yet comparatively few people have more than a vague idea of what it really is. Belle M. Brain, in a very interesting and timely article entitled "The Story of the Red Cross," in the September WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION, tells all about this great movement from its inception to the present day, with many illustrations.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith Angstman is the author of an important paper which appears in APPLETON'S POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY for September, entitled "College Women and the New Science." It is a discussion of the increasing attention which is being given by the institutions for the higher education of women to the subject of domestic science. She shows the great good which has already come from this movement, and the large future which it has.

THE STATE: Its Nature, Origin and Functions, and the Duties of Citizens. An address by L. T. Chamberlain, of New York City. The book is a vigorous discussion of the principles which are at the basis of the state in its nature, source and rightful power. It draws strong conclusions concerning the duties of citizens. If Mr. Chamberlain differs from the common view, it is not impossible that in the points of his dissent he makes a useful contribution to the discussion. The book is issued in cloth, deckel edges, at fifty cents. A. C. McClurg & Company, Chicago.

TWO PARABLES, by Charles R. Brown, a collection of sermons preached to the people of the First Congregational church in Oakland, Cal., based upon those two passages in the teachings of Christ. The author's purpose is, in his own words, "to interpret His words and apply their lessons to the needs of common life." He has succeeded admirably in drawing a parallel between modern needs and methods of charity, and the ancient Levite who "passed by on the other side." The book is both interesting and helpful. Price, $1.25. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago, Ill.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

The Home

The Art of Being Lovely at Home.

We were talking about the fine arts, and my visitor said, "Do you know what I consider the finest, hardest, highest art of them all?"

"Do tell me."

"The art of being lovely at home." And then I fell to thinking what the cultivation of that art means. It really is bringing the Christ spirit into home life, is it not?

At once I contrasted two homes where I am acquainted. In No. 1 there is a brilliant daughter, who is the delight of every fireside except her own. She reads and studies and is always picking up something in the thought-world which is interesting. But she never tells it at her own table. If the Tennyson poem or the latest essay has brought her an inspiration, she saves it for her coteries or for the coffee club, where occasionally a real, live author meets with her. She does not waste her talk on unappreciative people. If she could only know it, that mother whose early opportunities were small, but whose mental powers are good, would be the most appreciative listener who could be found. And those younger brothers and sisters, whom the oldest daughter looks down upon as "children" would care more for attention and little courtesies than any strangers possibly could. In fact, no one appreciates good manners and courtesy more than children.

The older sister talks gossip and the merest commonplaces in her own family when she takes the trouble to talk at all. She is often gloomy and low-spirited because her surroundings are not more congenial. Her father, who was invited through the thoughtfulness of a neighbor to a club meeting, where his daughter took part in a discussion, could scarcely believe that his daughter was the bright talker. Ah! what an uplift she could bring to that home if only she would.

Home No. 2 has an older sister who never dreams that she has any special gift. But she has, and it is this—the gift of making the people in her own home comfortable and happy. Not that she is not felt outside her home and is not interested in church work and study and her club, but it just seems that in her own home she is brightest and sweetest and best. She has the gift of seeing and using funny things, and of course her fun is never personal ridicule, nor does it relate to anybody's physical infirmity. But she gets so much fun out of family happenings and out of her reading, and she sets it out in such a comical way, that no one can help enjoying it.

This older sister in Home No. 2 finds in her history and classics and in the poems read in her club, material for most charming stories to be retold at the dining table or to interest the children when they have measles, and have to be shut in a dark room. Think of the education she is giving those younger brothers and sisters in this way. She has created such an atmosphere of sunshine in that home that even the servant girl and the sorrowful old aunt feel unwilling to have her away for a single day. Of course father and mother depend upon "our daughter" far more than the blessed child can know, and the brothers and sisters turn toward her as flowers turn toward the sun.

A college president was asked by a young man his advice as to what sort of a girl to marry, "Go into a large family and take the oldest daughter."

That depends. The oldest daughter in Home No. 2 would be worth her weight in gold.—Jennie M. Bingham, in Central Christian Advocate.

Palmyra Springs Sanitarium.

The thoughts of worn, weary and sick people naturally turn to a quiet place where all things are conducive to health and rest. Such places are ideal but they exist. To find beautiful springs with healthgiving properties; a lake with arms stretching off between the green hillsides, and alcoves filled with water lilies: to find a sky of softest tints spread like a canopy over fields and flocks, hills and valleys; to find a commodious house with perfect sanitary conditions—light, airy, well-furnished, scrupulously clean, with walls tinted in oil, long, broad halls, wide verandas, gas, electric bells, elevator, etc., and wearing a homelike, hospitable air that makes one drop the traveling bag with a sigh of relief at having reached a place of comfort heretofore existing only in dreams—go to Palmyra, Wis.

One may seek this place simply to be built up by generous, healthful food and the best of water, to drive, to row, to fish, to take Turkish, Russian, vapor, salt, or electric baths with massage treatment; to exercise in the gymnasium and Swedish movement rooms; or one may go there any time of the year, for skillful medical attendance. The name of Dr. Lawrence H. Prince, as medical superintendent, with a large consulting staff, aided by trained nurses, promises to sick people, and those convalescing from illness or severe surgical operations, all that skill and devotion has to offer. For illustrated descriptive pamphlet write to the sanitarium, or to Charles A. Birney, 912 Venetian Building, Chicago, Ill.

Petition Against the Canteen Now.

WHITE-RIBBONERS, CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS, EPWORTH LEAGUERS, GOOD TEMPLARS, CHURCHES, PASTORS AND PEOPLE — EVERYBODY, CUT OUT THE APPENDED PETITION, SIGN IT, SECURE OTHER NAMES, AND SEND IT TO PRESIDENT MCKINLEY AT ONCE. OR, IF YOU PREFER, USE THE ONE WE PUBLISHED LAST WEEK, OR WRITE ONE YOURSELF, BUT SEND A PETITION TO DO AWAY WITH THE ARMY CANTEEN, AND DO IT NOW:

To the President of the United States:

We do hereby respectfully petition that you will, to the extent of your authority as Commander-in Chief of the army, forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors at all post and camp exchanges, or elsewhere within the lines of the armies of the United States.

"Sanitas" Means Health.

By use of proper disinfectants homes can be kept entirely free from germs of the most dreaded infectious diseases.

How to have thoroughly sanitary surroundings is told in a pamphlet by Kingzett, the eminent English chemist. Price 10 cents. Every household should contain this little help to comfortable living. It will be sent FREE to subscribers of this paper. Write

THE SANITAS CO. (Ltd.),
636 to 642 West 55th Street, New York City.
Disinfectant and Embrocation Manufacturers.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Drinking Fountains
FOR
MAN and BEAST
Manufactured by
The J. L. Mott Iron Works
84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.
311-313 Wabash Av. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
Copyright 1896, by the J. L. Mott Iron Works.

SONGS OF HAPPY LIFE.
Compiled by Sarah J. Eddy.
Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, Superintendent of the Department of Mercy, says: "Probably the most delightful book of the kind ever issued. The literary merit of the book is of a high order, but its crowning virtue is that it teaches a tender and loving consideration for all created living things. It points to the highest ideals, and no child trained in its use will be likely to develop a coarse or cruel disposition."
This book should be in every home as well as in every school.
PRICE:
Board Covers (Nile Green) . . . 30 cents
Japanese Sea-Moss Covers . . . 40 cents
Postage . . . . . 8 cents
Special price to Boards of Education and by the quantity.
THE ART AND NATURE STUDY PUBLISHING COMPANY,
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.
STOP SMOKING!
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

MONTICELLO Opens the 61st year Sept. 29. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Prin., Godfrey, Ill.

FRANKLIN COLLEGE NEW ATHENS, O. 74th year. Board, tuition, room and books, $2.80 to $3 a week; $140 a year; books free: 8 courses; no saloons; catalog free, with plan to earn funds at home W. A. Williams, D.D., Pres.

MOTHERS Have you seen the ideal magazine called Little Folks, for LITTLE CHILDREN Full of beautiful stories and pictures. Samples free. Agents Wanted. S. E. CASSINO. 34 Pope Building, Boston, Mass.

CUT IN TWO Prices of Sewing Machines, Safes, Scales, Blacksmith's Tools, Road Carts, Buggies, Harness and 1000 other things. List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

W. C. T. U. News.

[Bright, newsy items of special interest are acceptable for this column, but do not send detailed reports of unions or conventions to us. Send them to your state reporter.]

MRS. MARY C. UPHAM has resigned her position on the board of Temple trustees, owing to a stress of other duties.

A TEACHER in a Friend's School in Ski-a-tooh, Indian Territory, recently held a medal contest. The medal was won by Mary Bluejacket.

MRS. BELLE ROWLEY, state superintendent of L. T. L. work in Michigan, is urging every Legion to hold a medal contest before the National Convention.

THE school of methods held at Willimantic, Conn., with Mrs. C. B. Forbes as leader, was an inspiring success, nearly two hundred women from different parts of the state being in attendance.

PLAINER clothes for school children is the reform suggested by the Mt. Ayr, Iowa, union. An exchange pertinently says: "The W. C. T. U. should have gone further and applied the reform to the Sunday-school, the church, and other public assemblages, and to the old as well as the young."

AT a medal contest held in Seneca, Ill., every woman bringing one or more gentlemen was admitted free of charge. This is an original way of getting the men out to a contest and probably was a successful venture. How would this plan work for our lectures, where the women are usually in the large majority?

OUR organizer, Mrs. U. F. Bruun, who is trying to capture the Norse people of the great northwest, has held thirty-three meetings in Minnesota since July 1, and organized five new Scandinavian unions. She has spent August in North Dakota and gives September to South Dakota, where her work will be under the auspices of the state Equal Suffrage Association.

THE Chicago Record says: "The W. C. T. U. women of Evanston are about to start on a crusade against the liquor traffic. They intend to confine their attention to the "speak-easies." These have been doing a thriving business lately, and have been openly soliciting orders. To sell liquor within the four-mile limit is a crime punishable with a heavy fine, but the owners of these wagons do as much trading as they please. John Burggeon was arrested recently, but when he claimed that the order had been sent to him, and that he did not solicit it, the case was dismissed. This has happened every time a driver has been tried, and the W. C. T. U. is up in arms. The police say they can do nothing with the present ordinance in force, and that it is useless to arrest drivers. The women are not content with this, and they have decided to secure a conviction."

MRS. ISABEL WING LAKE and Dr. Carolyn Geisel have traveled nine months in the western states. In that time they have visited 135 towns, opened 9 rescue homes, put 127 women into them and initiated them in the work, distributed nearly 14,000 pages of tracts, sold 240 books on the subject of purity; taken from men, 1,283 purity pledges, appointed 22 rescue superintendents, 2 state secretaries, held 333 meetings, visited and addressed 7 penitentiaries, 18 police stations; secured 343 new members, addressed 17 public schools, 33 parlor meetings, 30 mothers' meetings.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

The Temple, Chicago.

For Catalogue of our Publications apply Room 1110, The Temple.

BOOKS BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Glimpses of Fifty Years.

The eloquent story of Miss Willard's eventful life from childhood until the rounding of the half century, given by Miss Willard herself in her own graphic way. It is the record of a life of noble purpose inspired by the simplest but purest motive, combined with a breadth of ability and fervor of consecration rarely seen. This book should be in the hands of all the women of this and every other country.
Cloth $2.25
Half Morocco, gilt edge 3.00
Full Morocco, gilt edges 3.75

Woman and Temperance.

A book of inestimable value to all White-Ribboners, both as a book of reference and as a complete and accurate history of the movement from the days of the Woman's Temperance Crusade.
Cloth $2.00

A Young Woman Journalist.

A life sketch of Miss Julia A. Ames, a young woman of untiring energy, great faith, and devotion to the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. Designed to stimulate young women to noble achievement. This volume can not help but be an inspiration to all temperance workers, and in fact all Christian and philanthropic people anywhere.
Cloth . . . . . $ .75

Nineteen Beautiful Years.

The story of the life of Mary E. Willard, "my sister Mary," as she is tenderly called by the author.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 60

How to Win.

A book for girls.
Cloth $1 00

Woman in the Pulpit.

A strong presentation of the arguments in favor of the organization of women.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 50

A Classic Town.

History of Evanston, Ill. Profusely illustrated with views of "Rest Cottage," etc.
Full Gilt $1 00
Plain Cloth 75

A Great Mother.

The Biography of Madam Willard, written by her daughter, Miss Frances E. Willard, and her kinswoman, Mrs. Minerva B. Norton. No work of such value to mothers has appeared for years. It is both an incentive toward and an example of successful motherhood. White-ribbon mothers especially need to learn its open secret. Handsomely bound, elegantly illustrated.
Cloth $1.50

How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle.

This little book is not designed to teach the art of riding the bicycle, but is full of suggestions and thoughts which filled the mind of the writer as she mastered the silent steed. It is well named "A Wheel Within a Wheel." As fascinating as a novel, and an excellent book to place in the hands of lovers of this favorite pastime.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

Do Everything.

A handbook full of instructions and suggestions which make it of inestimable value to White-Ribboners.
Paper . . . . . $ .35

The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard.

Written by ANNA A. GORDON, for twenty-one years her private secretary, with an introduction by LADY HENRY SOMERSET. The book contains 416 pages, 8 inches wide by 10 inches long. Cloth, $2.00; half morocco, $2.75; full morocco, $3.75.

Miss Gordon says in her preface: "We believe this picture of her remarkable and winsome personality will bless and brighten every home that it enters, deepening in the hearts of its readers the desire to hold aloft her white banner of purity and peace, patriotism and prohibition, the protection of the home and the redemption of humanity.

Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

By MARY ALLEN WEST. Bound in cloth, marble edge, and full r ... gilt edge. Carefully written out o ... ge experience. In a letter to Miss West Madam Willard wrote: "If I could have but one book besides the Bible to help me in bringing up children, I would by all means choose to have this."
Cloth $3.00
Full morocco 4.25

The Temperance Movement; or, the Conflict Between Man and Alcohol.

By United States Senator H. W. BLAIR. The most valuable compilation of statistical information ever offered to the public.
Cloth $1.00

The Year's Bright Chain.

Compiled by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. A gift book of quotations from Miss Willard's works. Illustrated. For young people.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Thumb Nail Sketches of White-Ribbon Women.

Paper . . . . . $ .50
Cloth 1.00

Unanswered Prayer.

By S. M. I. HENRY.
Paper . . . . . Not in Stock
Cloth . . . . . $ .30

Bright Eyes.

Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised so as to suggest to children by means of outline pictures the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother or elder sister or brother on a Sunday afternoon in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.
Cloth . . . . . $ .20

Columbus and What He Found.

By MARY H. HULL. This is a history of Columbus, told in a most interesting and instructive manner to the writer's own three children and ten of their companions. It is a charming book. It contains 260 pages. It is as entertaining as the world-renowned "Robinson Crusoe," yet every fact is one of history, and goes to improve and enrich the mind of every boy and girl who reads it.
Cloth $1.00

The Junior Partners.

By A. M. RAWSON. Illustrated. Octavo, 410 pages. This remarkable story is strongly written and shows how a generous husband and father may be degraded and crushed by yielding to the demoralizing influence of the appetite for strong drink. The story is well told throughout, manly in sentiment, not narrow in portrayal, scientific in interpretation of argument and facts. The book is illustrated with a number of full page engravings and vignette cuts.
Cloth $2.00

White Ribbon Birthday Book.

By ANNA A. GORDON.
A book of the sayings of over 200 of the wisest and wittiest of women. Useful as a gift book for birthdays, as a guest book, and for a daily memorandum.
Cloth $1.00

Around the World by the Fireside.

Containing 160 photographic views from every quarter of the globe. Size 11x13 inches
Cloth $2.00

Child's Christ Tales.

By ANDREA HOFER.
The sweetest story on earth, in all literature and for all time is the story of the infant Jesus, and His wonderful coming among men. Send for this little book and show it to your friends, for it solves the problem of teaching the Christ-life to children.
Cloth $1.00

Lady Gay and her Sister.

A charming book for children by a well known author.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Boys and Other Boys.
Girls and Other Girls.

Two interesting books by Mrs. Lucy A. Scott, who wrote so charmingly for children. Just the books to give needed advice and help to boy or girl in the critical early teens. Not goody-goody, but clear, strong and faithful.
Cloth, each . . . . . $ .25

Bob Gripp's Trophy.

Cloth . . . . . $ .40

GIFT BOOKS

Containing Scripture Texts, Daily Readings for the Year.

Northfield Year Book.

Price $1.25

Gift of Love.

Gift of Peace.
Bound in white, each $1.00

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.
Bound in white vellum . . $1.00

The Shepherd Psalm.

White and silver . . . . . $ .60
Blue and silver 50

One of God's Lilies.

Story of the Soul of a Child.
Bound in white, each . . . . . $ .30

THE UNION SIGNAL

Official Organ of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

THE TEMPLE
CHICAGO

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, as second-class matter.

TERMS:

THE UNION SIGNAL

Is a weekly religious temperance paper of sixteen pages. Additional pages are frequently given without cost to the subscriber.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS

May commence at any time during the year.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Is $1 a year, payable strictly in advance. To pastors in the United States, Canada or Mexico, 50 cents a year, payable strictly in advance.

FOREIGN RATES

To all foreign countries included in the Universal Postal Union, the subscription price of THE UNION SIGNAL is $1.52 a year, postpaid.

REMITTANCES

Should be sent by check, draft, express order or postoffice money order, payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. Cash should be sent by registered letter. We cannot be responsible for loss if sent in any other way.

RECEIPTS

We do not send receipts for subscriptions, unless the request is accompanied with stamp. The change of date upon your address label will indicate within three weeks that the remittance was received.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

When a change of address is ordered, both the old and new address must be given.

DISCONTINUANCES

Subscribers wishing THE UNION SIGNAL stopped at the expiration of their subscription must notify us to that effect; otherwise we shall consider it their wish to have it continued. All arrearages must be paid.

ALL QUESTIONS

concerning contributions or the policy of the paper should be addressed to the Managing Editor. All business matters referring to THE UNION SIGNAL should be addressed to the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
The Temple, Chicago.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Official Organ of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

(EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY.)

An Illustrated Children's Temperance Paper.

TERMS.

One copy, per year . . . . . $ .25
In clubs of ten or more 20
In clubs of fifty or more, to one address . . .12
Sample packages for distribution, 100 to one address 1.00

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The regular issue of the paper contains, aside from illustrations, stories, poetry, etc., three departments, viz.: In Sunday School, Busy Workers' Corner and L. T. L. Letter Box.

QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON SUPPLEMENT.

Especially for the use of teachers in Sunday-school. Four pages containing temperance lesson helps, suggestions for observance of temperance Sundays, etc. This supplement can be secured without the CRUSADER at the rate of 65 cents per 100 copies, $2.75 per 500, $5.00 per 1,000. To regular subscribers the Supplement accompanies each paper free of charge.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unfermented Grape Juice.

Here is a simple recipe for unfermented wine, or grape juice. It will keep any length of time:

Pick the grapes from the stems (Concords are the best), wash and put in a large pan or porcelain kettle; put in water until you can see it through the grapes. Boil until tender, strain through a jelly bag. Put the juice on the stove and boil five minutes, then put into glass sealers, as you would any other fruit. Do not put in any sugar.

When you open to use, add sugar to taste.

EMMA A. WHEELER.
Paris, Ontario, Canada.

Signal Notes.

THE recent census showed 62,000 Protestants among the 31,000,000 people of Italy.

THE Democratic party of Maine has put in its platform a plank declaring for the repeal of the prohibitory law.

THE bubonic plague is again epidemic at Bombay. One hundred and three deaths were officially reported last week.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has offered the town council of Dumfries, Scotland, the sum of £10,000 ($50,000) to build a public library.

A DEACONESSES' National Total Abstinence League has recently been formed and federated to the Women's Total Abstinence Union of England.

CARROLL D. WRIGHT, government statistician, says that nearly $400,000 pass over the saloon bars in New York every day, and that 10,000 people starve to death every year in that great city.

MR. HALL CAINE, in conversation with an interviewer, said that woman suffrage worked admirably in the Isle of Man. "Has woman any civil rights in Man which she does not possess in England?" "Yes, she has a certain control over freehold property. For instance, I could not sell this house without first obtaining the sanction and signature of my wife."

THE annual report of Commissioner of Pensions H. Clay Evans, will show that at the close of the fiscal year, 1898, there were 993,714 pensioners on the roll of the bureau. This was a net increase of 12,960 over the previous year. There were dropped from the rolls during the year on account of deaths, 33,691, and for remarriage and other causes, 12,960 pensions were discontinued.

OFTEN when I have been asked what are the causes of crime, or what is the peculiar cause that sends most of our men to prison, I have of late years invariably answered, "The want of family discipline." The indulgence of the father and mother, who allow the child to grow up without any discipline to form character, leads almost inevitably to evil ways, and consequently to prison.—Ex-Warden A. A. Brush, of Sing Sing.

MRS. JACKSON, of Clitheroe, Lancashire, England, died recently. It will be remembered that seven years ago she gained a legal judgment, which is to English wives for all time, the same guarantee of personal freedom that Magna Charta is to all other citizens. Before the trial of this famous case, it was held in English law that the right of forcible restraint and possession of the wife's person belonged to the husband, and that he could imprison his wife at his own pleasure.

THE Michigan State Spiritualistic Association, in session at Lansing, has taken radical steps to protect the public against clairvoyant and mediumistic frauds. Henceforth no "medium" will be admitted to the state association who has not been passed upon officially and has shown mediumistic powers which are satisfactory to the highest spiritualistic body in the state. This is an attempt to drive disreputable clairvoyant and spiritualistic frauds out of business, by exposing them to the public in their true light.

The Philosophy of this is Old..... The Method is New

BAIRD STEAM FOMENTER.

Artificial heat and medicated vapors used in the treatment of diseases are now recognized by all leading physicians and surgeons as wonderful curative agents. Heat, properly applied, stimulates and enlivens the ailing parts of the body, enabling them to overcome the disease without leaving any injurious effects Heat, in a great measure, is life. It relieves pain, reduces inflammation, and quickens the circulation of the blood, thus aiding the system to throw off impurities.

Baird's Steam Fomenter supplies the most efficient, economical and satisfactory method of applying both dry and moist hot applications and for the production of medicated fumes, ever used in the sick room. It gives a continuous hot application of even temperature. The degree of heat may be regulated to a nicety, and if desired, the application may be continued indefinitely. Patients need not be disturbed from their sleep and rest nor exposed to sudden changes of temperature while changing the hot application, as in case of old methods. It rarely fails to cure Pneumonia, Pleurisy, Bronchitis, Croup, Diphtheria, Rheumatism, Appendicitis, painful Menses and many other diseases, when rightly applied. For inhalations and sweat baths it cannot be surpassed. It also provides an excellent vaporizing treatment for preserving a clear, soft, white skin and brilliant complexion. Send for descriptive catalogue.

Order from MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE,
President Temple Trustees, 1118 The Temple, Chicago

PRICE $1.50 TO $3.50

Manufactured by BAIRD BROS. & CO., 170 Madison Street, Chicago.
Watch for the next appearance of this advertisement.

LARKIN SOAPS

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample Soap if mention this magazine.
The Larkin Soap Mfg Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Publisher's Notes.

Personal.

If it is important to have your letters reach the business manager direct, kindly mark the envelope personal. The mail which does not bear this mark is opened in the business office, classified, sent to various departments, and faithful clerks employed to fill orders, ship publications, etc. Complaints should in all instances be sent direct to the business manager and marked personal. If you have special requests to make, please send these direct to business manager, marking envelope personal. Strict business letters should be addressed to Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Room 1110, The Temple, Chicago, not to the editors or National officers, as this frequently causes long delay in filling orders, etc.

The topic for the SEPTEMBER RESPONSIVE READING is "W. C. T. U. Literature," and is written by Miss Helen L. Hood, National superintendent of that department. We are told why the department is an important ally—or rather a necessary aid—to all other departments; how to push it; what helps are needed and where to procure them. Methods of circulating literature are given, also suggestions for furnishing the "wherewithal." Local superintendents of literature should see that this Reading is read and discussed by the unions generally.

BIBLE READING FOR SEPTEMBER. "Have Faith in God," by Mrs. Dora Webb, general secretary of the Reform Legislation branch of the purity department. The subject is treated under the following heads: (1) How can we obtain intelligent faith? (2) Saving faith; (3) Working faith; (4) A comprehensive faith; (5) An overcoming faith; (6) A steadfast faith. And the whole gospel of Christian faith is summed up in the words of the Master: "Believe that ye receive and ye shall have."

We ask as a favor that those reading our leaflets, will forward to us their opinions of any particular one which has been especially helpful in their union, their neighborhood or to some friend. This will materially help others in selecting appropriate literature.

"A Wheel Within a Wheel, or How to Ride a Bicycle."

This is the season when not only the son and daughter enjoy a daily outing on the fascinating wheel, but often father and mother and entire families indulge in the fascinating exercise. Miss Willard's devotion to the "silent steed" was well known to all white-ribboners and she believed it to be a means of soul as well as physical development. Her reflections as she mastered her "Gladys" are given to the world in her own inimitable style in the little book, "A Wheel within a Wheel," and she was very desirous it should be in the home of every white-ribboner where the bicycle was admitted, and in every one where it had no welcome.

It contains a number of excellent pictures of Miss Willard which do not appear in any other book and as the price has been reduced to 40 cents postpaid, it should at this season of the year meet with a large sale. If you have no interest in the "wheel" you can not fail to be interested in the adroit and inimitable way in which she "draws a moral" even from so ordinary a matter as riding a bicycle. Price 40 cents postpaid, W. T. P. A., the Temple, Chicago.

As the time for annual state conventions draws near, and those in charge of programs are selecting appropriate music, we have decided to offer our Convention Hymnals—which are an abridged form of The White Ribbon Hymnal—at 15 cents each, 25 copies $2.50, (no discount) These books contain a choice collection of music selected by Miss Marie Brehm. The cover is manila and sufficiently strong for convention purpose. For local unions no better investment could be made than in a number of these Convention Hymnals. Price single copies, 15 cents; 25 copies, $2.50.

Again we must remind our readers to write the name of the state at the heading of all letters. Envelopes are often mislaid or destroyed, and frequently we can obtain no clue to the writer of a letter, who is naturally offended because her requests do not receive prompt attention. Please, dear friends, put the name of the state always in your letters, as there are many towns of the same name in different states.

"WHAT'S a civilian?" "A civilian is a man who stays at home and thinks up ways for the army commanders to run the war."

$18 TO NIAGARA FALLS AND RETURN,

via Nickel Plate Road, on certificate plan. Tickets available on any one of our three through daily express trains, which carry through vestibule sleeping-cars and afford excellent dining-car accommodations. For sleeping-car reservations and further information, address or call on J. Y. Calahan, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. Van Buren Street Passenger Station, on the Loop.

IT was the first time Nan had seen any one husking corn. "Do you have to undress every single ear?" she asked soberly.

THE NICKEL PLATE ROAD

will sell tickets to Boston, Mass., and return at a fare and one-third for the round trip, on certificate plan, account of meeting of Street Railway Association of America, September 6-9, 1898. Two through trains daily, with service equal to that of any line between same points. You will save money by patronizing the Nickel Plate Road. J. Y. Calahan, 111 Adams St., Chicago, will be pleased to furnish any information relative to dates of sale, etc. Depot Van Buren Street Passenger Station, on the Loop. Telephone Main 3389.

BROWNLEIGH (visiting friends in the country)—"I don't often get such a good supper." Johnnie (son of host)—"Neither do we."

MEETING SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE, I. O. O. F.

Boston, Mass., September 19-24, Inclusive.

For this occasion the Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale September 16 to 18, inclusive, good returning until September 30, inclusive. For particulars, address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St, Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

AN ILLINOIS boy was recently asked to define the word "goblin," and solemnly responded, "A goblin is the ghost of a turkey."

NIAGARA FALLS EXCURSION

via Nickel Plate Road, at a fare and one-third for the round trip, on certificate plan, account meeting of Army of the Potomac, September 1 and 2. For full information, address or call on J. Y. Calahan, 111 Adams St, Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. Van Buren Street Passenger Station, on the Loop.

SPANISH Admiral—Do you know of any way in which we can surprise the enemy? Spanish Captain (musingly)—Well, we might hit one of their ships.

Don't forget the excursion to Boston over the Nickel Plate Road, September 16 to 18, inclusive, at rate of $19 for the round trip. Good returning until September 30, 1898, inclusive. Telephone Main 3389.

PRINCETON conferred on Dewey the degree of LL.D., Doctor of Laws. It strikes us that Ph.D., would have been the more appropriate degree—"Doer of Philippines."

$26 TO BOSTON AND RETURN

on certificate plan, via Nickel Plate Road, account of meeting of Street Railway Association of America, September 6-9, 1898. For further information, write J. Y. Calahan, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Depot, Van Buren Street Passenger Station, on the Loop. Telephone Main 3389.

MR. SPOUTER—"An heirloom, Johnny, is something that's handed down from father to son." Little Johnny—"Huh! That's a funny name for pants."

EXCURSION TO BOSTON.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell excursion tickets from Chicago to Boston and return for trains of September 16, 17 and 18 at rate of $19 for the round trip. Tickets will be valid returning until September 30, inclusive. On account of heavy travel at this particular time, those desiring sleeping-car accommodations should apply early to J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

RESIDENT SPIRIT—"What do you think of it? Isn't everything wonderful, transcendent, glorious?" Newly Arrived Spirit—"Yes! Isn't—isn't this your Chicago day?"

NICKEL PLATE EXCURSION TO BOSTON.

Tickets on sale for trains leaving Chicago September 16 to 18, inclusive, at rate of $19 for the round trip, and good returning until September 30. Also cheap rates to all points East. Vestibuled sleeping cars to Boston, and solid train to New York. Rates lower than via other lines. For further information call on or address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

A DENVER tot closed her prayer with: "God bless papa and mamma and Dewey and Shafter and Schley and Sampson and Teddy's Terrors, and I wouldn't be very hard on poor Admiral Cervera if I were you."

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 34. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, September 8, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Woman an Army Officer—A New Reform—Will Vote Against Licensing Liquor—Temperance—About Women—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, Frances E. Willard. By Ella Gilbert Ives 3
Poem, What it Means. By M. A. Burhans 3
Levi. Chap. III. By Ella Beecher Gittings 3
The Rev. John Russell. By a Personal Friend 4
Total Abstinence 4
Willard Hall Echoes 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
An Interview with the Japanese Minister of Education 5
Unexpected Victories in the Hispano-American War . . 5
The Temperance Pledge 6
The Election in New South Wales 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, When Mother sits Down by the Fire 7
An Ideal Mother. By Marguerite Hilton 7
"I'll Pay You for That" 7
Little Miss Fret and Little Miss Laugh 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
World-Wide Calls 8
The Mighty Czar 8
The Balance of Power 9
A Statement Concerning Rest Cottage 9
The B. I. A 9
Personals 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Poem, My Mother—The Y Almanac for 1899—Young Woman's Hour at the Japan National Convention—Notes—Woman's Power—A Vain and Delusive Hope 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Suggestive Program—Queensland—World's Wave Crests 10, 11
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Tennessee—Southern California—West Virginia 11, 12
W. C. T. U. NEWS 12
TREASURER'S CORNER 13
Notice—Where Our Speakers Are—Regimental Roll of Honor 13
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Important Notice About Resolutions 13

RED-LETTER DAYS.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DAY—SEPTEMBER 22.

The birthday of Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, first round-the-world missionary.

CHILDREN'S HARVEST HOME AND MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

The birthday of Frances E. Willard.

MEMBERSHIP WEEK—THE INTERVENING WEEK.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, St. Paul, Minn., November 11-16.

Notes and Comments.

MICHIGAN Prohibitionists, at their state convention, held in Lansing, August 23, adopted a three-plank platform. They declared (1) for the suppression of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes, (2) for direct legislation, and (3) for the "abolition of the invidious sex distinction on the question of suffrage."

PROF. JOHN KLINE, New York's prohibition candidate for governor, has forwarded to the committee his formal letter of acceptance. In that letter he pertinently points out that there is to-day no middle ground on the liquor question, "All men are prohibitionists or perpetuationists," and the real core of the New York campaign is, he says, "Taxation, perpetuation, as embodied in the Raines law, and the republican policy of revenue or the democratic policy of license, versus prohibition, as the only sound, moral, political, economical and humane policy opposed thereto."

ON page 10 of this issue will be found a program for World's Day, prepared by our National superintendent of press work, Mrs. Minnie B. Horning. As stated, it is intended to be suggestive only, and each local union will of course adapt the exercises according to circumstance. The "thankoffering" constitutes an important part of the observance of this red-letter day and is devoted to the promotion of W. C. T. U. work. The money should be sent to Mrs. Helen M. Barker, National treasurer, and will be by her divided equally between the World's and National organizations. This is in order that each local union may receive proper credit in the National report for the amount raised.

"WISE men change their minds, fools never." So runs the adage, and Prince Bismarck proved himself a wise man by publicly reversing, during the closing years of his life, his famous maxim, "no petticoats in politics." William T. Stead quotes him as saying to a deputation of women that he "regretted that so little influence in politics was allowed to the better half of the human race," and that he believed "that the results of elections would be more rational and more satisfactory if they were more under female influence than they are now." And on his seventy-ninth birthday this "superb type of the male monopolist," as Mr. Stead calls him, made this memorable confession of faith: "My confidence in the future rests in the position taken by the women of Germany. There is always a stronger power in the elementary affections of the womanly heart than in all the dissolving acids which destroy men's political parties." Every wise man, if he lives long enough, comes to the same conclusion.

"THERE is no new thing under the sun"—not even the Czar's idea of universal peace. And if, as some declare, it is a "romantic and beautiful dream," impossible of fulfillment, Nicholas II has at least the satisfaction of knowing that he is in goodly company. To Isaiah and to Micah, the inspired Hebrew prophets, the promise of a time when the nations should learn war no more, came as the "word of the Lord," and to seers and poets and the open-eyed all adown the ages has been vouchsafed the same beatific vision. The optimist of the present day derives no small encouragement from the fact that in this electric age ideas germinate, develop and bear fruit with startling rapidity, and the ideal alliance which shall make possible and natural a general disarmament of the nations is, we believe, destined in the not far distant future to become the real. God grant that day may dawn before our own beloved country is drawn into the meshes of a "war footing" by the illusive glamour of military glory!

IT will be recalled that at one of the meetings of the General Officers which followed the last National Convention Miss Willard herself offered to give, at the next Convention, banners to the local, county, district and state unions which should make the largest increase in membership during the year. The National Officers desire to state that this promise will be kept as a sacred pledge, and the fact that one will be working in harmony with one of Miss Willard's latest expressed desires, and putting forth efforts to secure the last gift ever offered by her, ought surely to act as a strong incentive. It has been decided that the banners shall be alike, and shall be modeled upon the "white-ribbon star-spangled banner," so dear to our leader and so doubly dear to us because of its hallowed association with the sad days in which all that was mortal of her remained with us.

SEPTEMBER 28 has been for years a sacred day in white-ribbon annals. Upon that day fifty-nine years ago our great leader first saw the light and entered upon her life mission of light-giving. This year the day will have a new and yet more sacred meaning. It will be her first birthday on the other side. What that will mean to her who of us can dream? But what the day ought to mean to us we already know. How can we better observe it, how can we more truly hallow it, than by following out the line of work indicated in the very name by which she herself baptized it, "Children's Harvest Home and Membership Crusade Day?" We canbuild no nobler monument to Frances Willard than by extending the principles to the promulgation of which she gave her precious life. We can do nothing more fully in harmony with her radiant spirit than to bring others into the radius of the influences which go out from our great organization. And surely we can not build upon surer foundation than upon the childhood of our land. Will not each local union the country over observe this day as she would have had it observed? Let us work carefully, conscientiously, practically, in a businesslike manner for new members. Let us use all the old methods that have for years been used and as many new ones as the combined ingenuity of each local union can devise; let us utilize our children, our young people, our young men and maidens, and those upon whose brows rest the crown of gray hairs; let us together "with a long pull and a strong pull" and a determined, consecrated effort seek to increase our membership this year as never before. If we could come up to the Convention at St. Paul numbering thousands in addition to those who were with us last year, would we not feel that her birthday had been fittingly observed and her memorial in human hearts built upon still securer foundations?

Current Events.

Woman an Army Officer.

Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee Appointed Assistant Surgeon, Which Ranks Her as Second Lieutenant.

FOR the first time in the history of the American army a woman has been appointed a member of the medical staff. Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, wife of Prof. W. J. McGee, of Washington, and daughter of Prof. Simon Newcomb, formerly of the naval observatory, has been regularly sworn in as acting assistant surgeon. This, according to Secretary Alger's order, would entitle her to the uniform of a second lieutenant without designation of rank.

Dr. McGee, when interviewed as to her appointment, said: "It carries the rank, pay and quarters of a second lieutenant, and I must wear a second lieutenant's uniform, which I am now having made. It will be the same as a regular officer's uniform, except that I shall wear a skirt instead of trousers. The skirt will be of army cloth, and the jacket like a man's, shoulder straps and all. My commission is for a limited period, to be renewed as my services are required. It will not alter the work I have been doing as a member of the Red Cross since the war began."

The appointment, while a novelty from a technical standpoint, is not the beginning of Dr. McGee's service with the war department. Throughout the war she has been in charge of the selection of the women nurses and of the 700 or more now in the field most have passed muster at her hands.

Dr. McGee has regularly practiced her profession in Washington for several years and is well known in medical circles throughout the country, having contributed several papers to the American Association for the Advancement of Science and to other scientific organizations.

A New Reform.

THE League for Social Service has been incorporated, with Josiah Strong as president, and headquarters at 287 Fourth avenue, New York city. Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson and Mrs. Margaret Sangster are on the board of directors, and the list of members comprising the advisory council includes the names of Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, Bishops Hurst, Potter and Vincent, Mr. Richard Watson Gilder and Revs. Charles H. Parkhurst and Edward Everett Hale.

The object of the League is to educate public opinion and the popular conscience, from the enlightening and quickening of which must come every needed reform, whether moral, political, industrial or social. The method includes (1) the preparation and systematic distribution of literature, (2) a bureau of information, and (3) a lecture bureau. The literature, which will be unsectarian and non-partisan, will discuss needed reforms and deal with the many subjects related to social betterment. It will be adapted to all classes and translated into as many languages as may be necessary to reach our polyglot population. It is expected that the various Young People's Societies in the churches will coöperate in the systematic distribution of the leaflets, so as to reach the million. The bureau of information will indicate the latest sources of information regarding present-day problems, whether religious, moral, philanthropic, industrial, social or civic. The lecture bureau will arrange lecture courses and secure lecturers on social problems.

Will Vote Against Licensing Liquor.

WHEREAS, The Good Citizenship Committee of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Third Christian Church, Lancaster avenue and Aspen street, Philadelphia, realizing the enormity of crime due to the liquor traffic, which is sustained by the vote of Christian citizens, and which has cast its blighting curse upon our fair land, do hereby present the following resolutions and declare its principles upon the question of the hour, "The iniquitous liquor traffic":

Resolved, That we declare the sale of intoxicants to be the foe of morality, the arch enemy of popular government and a public nuisance. It is soul-destroying in its power, and if it is not checked in its mad career, will eventually undermine the foundation of our government and country, which we believe is destined by God to be the example to all the world.

Resolved, That we, the undersigned Christian citizens of this republic, realizing the tremendous responsibility imposed upon us, shall not, by voice or ballot, support any party or principle that does not stand unequivocally against the licensing of the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That these resolutions be circulated among the Christian citizens of our society, church and community for their consideration and approval.

Temperance.

A BREWER of Milwaukee has received orders for 60,000 car loads of beer to be shipped to the Philippines.

THE citizens of Hyde Park, the prohibition district of Chicago, held a mass-meeting last week to formulate plans for the better enforcement of the law.

THE Central Ohio Conference of the Christian church adopted, unanimously, a resolution barring from the conference any minister who uses tobacco in any form.

Truth, an anti-prohibition paper of Detroit, Mich., publishes a list of thirty-nine members of the Michigan legislature who in the session of 1897 voted against a law to make the sale of liquor on the Fourth of July legal, it being unlawful under the present law of that state. All "lovers of personal liberty" are exhorted by Truth to see that these men are never again in the legislature.

A CORRESPONDENT at Toronto, Canada, writes: "The liquor men are using every means in this province and Quebec to poison the press. They are circulating lying statements in the French Catholic papers, and raising the race and creed cries to influence French Canadians against prohibition. So well organized is the prohibition strength becoming in every province that the most desperate efforts are being put forward in the press, and in secret ways by the liquor committees here and at Montreal, where the prohibition tide is certain to give an aggregate majority of about 50,000 for prohibition."

A ROUSING ten-days' plebiscite campaign will be opened at Toronto by the Canadian Temperance League, with a great gospel temperance rally in the Horticultural Pavilion, on Sunday afternoon, September 18. Eminent Canadian speakers will be secured. Meetings will then be held nightly, in various parts of the city, and another gospel temperance rally will be held in the Pavilion on Sunday afternoon, September 25. The date fixed for the opening meeting of the league series takes place on the day designated by the campaign committee of the Dominion Alliance as Plebiscite Sunday, when one or more prohibition sermons will, it is expected, be delivered in almost every evangelical church in Canada.

About Women.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, of Roumania, "Carman Sylva," has received a doctor's degree from the University of Pesth.

THE Democrats of Mexico, Mo., have nominated Mrs. Clara Snidow to the office of county clerk. Nomination is equivalent to election in that county.

MISS ESTELLE REEL, the newly-appointed superintendent of Indian schools for the United States, is attending the summer institutes of the Indian schools throughout the far West, and after this will visit all the agencies where schools are established.

WILHELMINA, the girl queen of Holland, attained her majority on August 31, and now assumes control of the government. The coronation ceremonies took place on September 6, amid great rejoicing by the Dutch people.

LATE advices by mail are to the effect that the reported accidental death of Miss Belle Allen, a missionary, in the harbor of Yokohama, Japan, was erroneous, in that her companion, Miss Simmons, alone, was killed, and Miss Allen will recover from her injuries.

THE will of the late Mrs. Lydia B. Littlefield, of Quincy, Ill., leaves $2,000 to the Congregational church of that city, $5,000 to the American Board of Foreign Missions, $5 000 to the American Missionary Society and $5,000 to the Congregational Missionary Society.

MRS. ELIZABETH CUSTER, widow of General Custer, has returned to her Georgia home from a trip to Egypt, where she was engaged in gathering material for another book.

MRS. ABBIE FISKE EATON, wife of the late Professor Eaton, of Beloit College, has been elected professor of German in Colorado College, and has accepted the position. Mrs. Eaton is the author of a number of German text-books, is a graduate from the University of Wisconsin, and spent three years in study in Germany.

MRS. THACKARA, General Sherman's daughter, who resides in Havre, France, her husband having been made the American consul at that post, has been elected a member of the board of managers of the Havre Society for the Protection of Animals. The members of the board are chiefly men, there being only two women besides Mrs. Thackara.

A GENEROUS white-ribboner, who does not wish her name made public, has given to Dr. H. M. Wharton a beautiful home at Ocean Grove, N. J., to be used for the care of orphan children. It consists of a large, new twelve-room house with ten acres of ground and out-buildings, and is valued at $10,000. The only conditions are, that it be kept as an orphanage, and that children of soldiers, American or Cuban, and the children of parents who have been ruined by drink, be given preference, and that the Home bear the name of Frances E. Willard. It will be called "The Willard Home." It will be supported by the free gifts of the people, and be entirely non-sectarian. Any one wishing to contribute will address Dr. H. M. Wharton, Baltimore, Md.

At Home.

A MASS convention of all interested in the work of the Illinois Christian Citizenship League has been called by President Patton and Secretary Shaw to meet in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, at Peoria, Ill., on Saturday, October 8, 1898, for the purpose of electing officers and transacting such other business as properly comes before the convention.

THE President has named five men to represent the United States in formulating a treaty of peace. They are: Hon. William R. Day, who resigns the office of secretary of state; Senator Cushman K. Davis of Minnesota, and Senator William P. Frye of Maine, the one the chairman and the other the senior member of the senate committee on foreign relations; Mr. Justice White of the United States Supreme Court, and Hon. Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune and ex-minister to France.

THE remarkable balance of trade in favor of the United States during the past year is being well sustained in 1898. For the past seven months there is shown to have been a decrease of $129,589,399 in the imports of merchandise, and an increase in the exports of $131,736,099. The gold imports during the same time increased $88,083,441, and the exports decreased $22,835,866. The imports of silver decreased $1,822,193, and the exports $3,381,424. In merchandise the decrease of imports, and the increase of exports, showed a gain of $261,325,498 in the balance of trade in our favor. Measured by material productions and resources, the United States is far stronger than any other nation.

Abroad.

MALIETOA LACUPEPA, king of Samoa, died on Monday, August 22, of typhoid fever.

EMPEROR KWANG SU of China, according to a dispatch from Peking, is reported seriously ill.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL HENRY, one of the chief witnesses against Captain Albert Dreyfus, now in exile for betraying army secrets, killed himself on August 31, in the Mont Valerien fortress, near Paris. He had made confession that the document which he offered at the trial had been forged to aid the army in the prosecution of Dreyfus. Upon hearing of the tragedy, General de Boisdeffre, chief of staff of the French army, resigned, and other officers are expected to follow in his footsteps. The developments have caused intense excitement in Paris, and the people are beginning to believe that Dreyfus is the victim of a conspiracy. The feeling is that a new trial will follow.

Contributed.

Frances E. Willard.

[Founder of the World's W. C. T. U.]

BY ELLA GILBERT IVES.

I SOUGHT a symbol of her will;
And, lo! an adamantine hill,
Where swaying harebells smote the rocks,
And living streams allured the flocks.

I sought a symbol of her heart;
And saw the spacious sky apart,
Stoop tenderly, with brooding breast,
Above a weary world's unrest.

I sought a symbol of her mind;
And borrowed from all humankind
A gift of each; till, myriad-faced,
A gem Time's rude forefinger graced.

I sought a symbol of her soul;
When through a prism a sunbeam stole;
Upon a harp a zephyr played,
Within a dewdrop heaven was rayed.

Dorchester, Mass.

What It Means.

BY M. A. BURHANS.

WHAT does the knot of white ribbon mean?
The love of God so tender;
Seeking the fallen to reclaim,
Winning the lost one back again,
And helping all who wander.

What does the knot of white ribbon mean?
The love of home and its pleasures;
Seeking to keep from the hearthstone far,
All that can hurt or harm or mar,
And guarding its sacred treasures.

What does the knot of white ribbon mean?
The love of the land we cherish;
Seeking to keep its manhood pure,
Battling with evil that fain would lure
Men down, till in sin they perish.

Yes; the knot of white ribbon means love of God,
Of home and of every nation.
Its wearers are working to hasten the day
When righteousness, temperance, truth shall have sway
O'er all the wide creation.

New Haven, N. Y.

Levi.

In Three Chapters.

BY ELLA BEECHER GITTINGS.

CHAPTER III.

"DON'T you worry, maw," said Levi, "the fire ain't so very near, and I reckon the wind'll change again right soon. Anyway I'm all fixed so I can save the house. An' even if I couldn't, you're so light I could carry you out like a kitten."

"'Tain't that, Levi—leastways not that alone—think of all the homeless ones to-night! I hope it isn't very cold."

"'Tis awful, for a fact. I never see nothin' like it. No, 'taint so very cold—a right keen air though, I reckon, if 'twant for the fire."

"But what are those dreadful explosions? They fairly shake the ground under us."

"I reckon the fire every now and then ketches on to a stick of giant powder, or some such truck—the town's purty well stocked up with it, you see—no, they ain't none about here; paw took it all when he went to the mine," this last in answer to her anxious glance about the room.

"Git the good Book, Levi, an' read me one of the Psalms of David. 'Pears like 'twould quiet me down a little. You can go out to watch ever now an' then, an' whilst you're gone I'll think over the good words."

"Which one shall I read?"

"Oh, most any one of 'em; there's a heap o' comfort in 'em all."

He opened at the fourth Psalm and read it through, patiently stopping to spell out the difficult words, though in truth he paid little heed to their meaning; for repeated explosions still rent the air and the yells of the excited crowd seemed nearer and nearer. At the last verse, his mother said eagerly:

"That's true, Levi, that's what I'd ought to do. Read it again."

"'I will both lay me down and sleep; for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety.'"

"That's it, my boy, we hadn't ought to forget that. I know I ought to go to sleep an' I'm a goin' to. I'm goin' to pretend it's Fourth of July an' it's just the cannons an' anvils I hear goin' off."

Levi was greatly relieved.

"You jest do it, maw. I'll take keer of you same's if you was awake. I'm goin' out now to see ef the wind's changed."

Sure enough it had changed! The smoke was drifting from them and the crowd was following it, all, excepting a few stragglers. Three or four men were coming up the hill toward him.

"I'll go tell maw the wind's changed, an' then I'll ask them men how bad things is over town."

Finding his mother sleeping quietly, he pulled the covers over her shoulders, turned the lamp lower and went out to wait for the men. They came forward with lurching, uncertain strides. They were talking incoherently and waving something in their hands. Levi saw that they were intoxicated and resolved not to interview them. He was turning to go inside when one of them addressed him.

"Look-ee here, stranger, we've got to blow up this house o' yourn, an' we give you just ten minutes to git out your stuff—that's reg'lation time—ten minutes—an' she goes!"

A great horror possessed the boy as he saw that what the man was brandishing in his hands was a stick of giant powder!

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "Why should you blow up my house?"

"Public safety, you know—stop spread of fire; them's the rules, blow 'em up fast's you come to 'em; sorry, but can't help it. Got jest two sticks left—one for this house an' one for that on up the hill yonder—go there first, an' back in ten minutes, reg'lation time."

Each of the maudlin group added confirmatory remarks, interspersed with oaths and hiccoughs. Levi knew that he was reasoning with madmen, yet he made one more attempt.

"But my mother is in there bedfast, an' I haint nowhere to take her. 'Twould kill her to lie out in this night air. Can't you see the fire's gone the other way? There ain't no danger here."

"Can't make no 'xceptions, orders is strict—back in ten minutes. Ef you ain't out, you're blowed to—see?"

"Bet yer life! blowed sky high."

"An' never come down any mo-o-ore!"

With such ejaculations the men staggered on up the hill. Their destination was a miner's cabin a quarter of a mile away. Levi knew it was vacant at the time, and had no doubt they would perform their deadly work there before returning. They could not get back in ten minutes; a wild hope possessed him that they might not come at all, being too drunk to remember. But, no, there was only one road back to town, and his house was on it; there was nothing beyond the miner's cabin. For several of the precious allotted minutes he stood motionless, too horror-stricken to act. It could not be! He and his helpless mother at the mercy of those madmen with such a deadly weapon in hand! The police help? No, every man in the neighborhood was down at the fire. His teeth chattered; how cold it was growing! And he must arouse his mother from her peaceful sleep and carry her out on the hillside, with no roof over her head and no place to take her on the morrow. Oh, it must kill her, the cold, the fright, the desolation. Homeless! And granny coming in the morning! He put out his hand and touched the logs of the little house caressingly; they were dear to him, every one—his own—the home he had earned for mother. Granny was to have seen it to-morrow! A frenzy of despair seized him. It must not, could not be! Mother had said God would help. He must help, for there was no other.

Levi went into the house. His mother still slept. He took a pile of blankets and the feather tick from granny's bed and carried them out on the hillside. He must be prepared in case God did not interfere. Ah! what was that? As he deposited his load in the shelter of a scrub-oak copse, a sharp explosion close by made the ground tremble under his feet. He glanced hurriedly up the hill to see a cloud of dust and flying debris where the miner's cabin had been. He flew back to the house. Wonder of wonders, his mother still slept. He sank on his knees and threw up his hands in desperate pleading:

"O God! God! help us! Show me a way! Maw said you would—the good Book says so—"

As he lifted his eyes in this strange petition they fell upon his father's rifle lying upon its pegs under the cabin roof. He sprang to his feet with a great thrill of hope. This was the answer to his prayer! How came his father to leave it? He had never done so before. He must have forgotten it; God made him forget it. He seized it fiercely and examined it. Yes, fully loaded and the cartridge belt beside it! Buckling the belt on hastily, he grasped the gun again and went outside. He was not a moment too soon, for the men were but a few rods away.

"O God!" he ejaculated under his breath, as he took his stand inside the fence and raised the weapon to position, "I won't shoot if I don't have to. I don't want to hurt nobody, but if some one's got to die it had best be one of them drunken rascals than mother—an' you showed me the gun—now help me to aim true if I have to shoot."

"Time's up!" yelled one of the men, "be ye ready? 'Sour last stick."

Although but a boy in years, Levi was of man's stature. He drew himself up to his full height, and with his gun pointed squarely at the head of the man who held the dynamite, shouted with the coolness of desperation in his tones:

"Yes! ready to shoot the first man that comes nigh my house with that cursed stuff."

Astonished at this unexpected and vehement answer, and seeing for the first time the leveled gun, the men halted and parleyed with each other.

"Light the fuse and fling it, Bill," suggested one.

But the same cool tones rang out in response: "The moment you light that fuse or make the first move to throw that powder, you're a dead man! I don't want to shoot nobody, but I'm fighting for my mother's life and I mean business! The sooner you clar out the safer for you. You gave me ten minutes, I give you two, will ye go?"

"He's got the drop on us, Bill, sure, come on. One house'll make 's good 'splosion 's another—we'll use it some 'ers else. Gosh! he's got the nerve! Can't ye see?"

And they went, scarcely stopping to look backward, lurching against each other in a sudden panic to be out of range of the shining gun.

Trembling violently, Levi sank upon his knees with the rifle clasped to his breast. The hot tears ran down his cheeks—so great was the reaction of joy—while he murmured half audibly,

"O God, I thank ye, I do so! Mother's safe an' I didn't have to shoot!"

He went in and patted the coverlets over his sleeping mother tenderly, whispering:

"I am jined to ye, maw. Granny was right an' there'll be a home fer 'er to come to in the mornin'. Sho! I must git that feather tick in afore it gits plum damp."

When granny's bed was restored, he patroled the premises, rifle in hand until daylight.

About six o'clock his father came home and found him fast asleep on the doorstep with the gun across his knees. He shook him roughly.

"What in time air ye doin' out here with that there gun?"

Levi started, rubbed his eyes, stared about a moment and remembered. He told his father all about it.

"What time is it, paw?" he asked suddenly.

"Just turned six o'clock, I reckon."

"So late? Well, you jest go in an' see to maw while I go to the depot. I ain't only jest barely time to meet granny," and he struck off down the road at a rapid pace.

Colorado Springs, Col.

I AM glad to think I am not bound to make the earth go right, but only to discover and to do, with cheerful heart, the work that God appoints.—Jean Ingelow.

The Rev. John Russell.

(Called the Father of the Prohibition Party.)

BY A PERSONAL FRIEND.

THE world is not so rich in noble characters that it can afford to neglect a single one. No nation has any wealth comparable to the fortune which it possesses in its pure, prophetic and self-sacrificing souls. Too often, however, the age in which men live is indifferent, if not blind, to their merits and their beneficent services. Too often a proper meed of honor is a post mortem affair. This ought not so to be. We should learn to mark the saints and "discern the prophets" who walk beside us. Let us speak some of our words of appreciation to the living and not save them all for their monuments. For is it not true that "an ounce of taffy is worth a pound of epitaphy"? So often it proves true that

The devils of our sires
Are the saints whom we adore.

John Russell was born in Genesee county, N. Y., September 20, 1822. His father and mother, Jesse and Catharine Russell, came to Michigan when John was a lad and settled a few miles west of Adrian. Here our hero grew to young manhood amid the severe simplicity of pioneer farm life. He also learned the cooper trade, at which he worked ad interim. Like most great and useful souls, the genesis of his real personal development and usefulness was the touch of spiritual truth and the living Christ with his soul. This occurred in about 1840, under the ministry of Rev. William C. Sprague, preacher in charge of the old Tecumseh circuit, of the Methodist Episcopal church. He felt called to the ministry at once, the call being instantly attested by marked revivals in the neighborhood where he lived.

His first ministerial service was rendered in teaching and shepherding these same converts in 1842. From that day until his retirement from the presiding eldership of Lake Superior district in 1883, he was a useful minister of his church Despite the fact that he has been out of the regular pastoral work so much in his special calling as an apostle of temperance and prohibition, it has never essentially depreciated his standing with the brethren nor his spiritual usefulness. He was twice chosen by his conference to represent them in the General Conference, and was presiding elder on two of the important districts of Detroit conference. He filled some of the first appointments of the state in his day, and Dr J. M. Arnold, editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate, said at the time of his retirement from the active ministry: "If John Russell's career had been one of unbroken devotion to the regular ministry, he would probably, if not certainly, have reached the episcopal chair."

His temperance work is so well known that it scarcely needs recital here except for the benefit of the younger readers. As a sequel to the Civil War and the destruction of slavery, the liquor curse was forced on his attention as never before. For years he had been interested in total abstinence and moral suasion work.

In the spring of '64, he began the publication of a temperance paper, The Peninsular Herald, at Romeo, Mich., which continued with marked success for eight years. But meantime Mr. Russell was getting his own eyes open. He was a true scholar in polities; he continued to take advanced and more radical ground, until one by one he forfeited, not the respect and high regard, but the practical support alike of his church, temperance and political friends. They came to the parting of the ways, and this man, like his Master, was left to "tread the wine-press alone." Meantime, the politicians grew fierce and malignant, and The Peninsular Herald, with pennant pushed to the topmast, was honorably suspended for lack of funds and support.

Mr. Russell held the office of Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the I. O. G. T. of Michigan for six years in succession, at two different periods, making twelve years of service. During this time the growth of the order was unprecedented. He was also elected twice to the head of the Right Grand Lodge of the I. O. G. T. Meanwhile, temperance sentiment was crystallizing into prohibition coin, and Mr. Russell still possesses the first papers, declaration of principles, etc., drafted by his own right hand, which looked to independent political action. The idea certainly incubated in his brain. He called the first conferences, was chairman of the first committees and wrote the first utterances on the now widely accepted doctrines and methods of the prohibition party. He issued the call for the first national convention, and was the animating spirit of the same. He was earnestly besought by the committee to take the nomination as the head of the ticket, but he modestly and persistently declined, at last consenting to accept the second place with his honored and revered friend, Hon. James Black, of Pennsylvania, at the head. No lapse of time, no growth of sentiment, no incidental changes of name or method, no glorious battles yet to be won by the noble men now in the field, will ever rob John Russell of his place as the author of this great movement, the undisputed "Father of the Prohibition Party."

During all these years he has been standing in his place taking and returning the shots and spears of the enemy. The campaign is long and hard, the conquests are slow, the fighting is more desperate, but the fate of the legalized saloon is already sealed like unto the doom of Manila and Santiago. And when that day comes, the renown and luster of the name of John Russell will be as much greater in the sight of heaven than the names of Dewey and Shafter, as the liquor curse is a mightier foe than the Spaniard, and a moral victory greater than a conquest of arms.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell live in a cozy cottage in New Haven, Mich , thirty miles north of Detroit, where he is spending a restful and sunshiny autumn. His youngest daughter, Mrs. F. A. Luttenbacher, lives just across the street and adds much joy to the little home. Mr. Russell preaches frequently, conducts numerous funerals, farms a little, is this year president of the village, and for a recreation prosecutes offending saloonkeepers for violations of the law. Mr. Russell has five sons and three daughters, thirteen grandchildren and an innumerable host of friends. He is now at work writing his rarely interesting autobiography and editing his special papers on the temperance question which will be given to the public in due time. He will reach his seventy-sixth birthday on September 20, and greetings from his friends and the friends of the cause would not be amiss. I besought him for a brief message to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union which I am glad to append:

Be of Good Cheer.

In my enforced retirement from the more active participation in the public contest with the nefarious liquor power, I look out upon the field and watch with most intense interest the different departments and movements of our steadily augmenting and advancing army of conquest.

Believing, as I do, that the Heavenly Father is governing this world in the ultimate interests of virtue and the welfare of humanity, the final issue of our conflict is never for a moment, to me, doubtful. The Almighty has no attribute to take part with the liquor traffic. Although some of our good friends are not contending on the precise line of battle which seems wisest to me, yet each detachment appears to be attacking deftly some one or more of the multiform intrenchments of the common foe. The dissensions among our forces are also gradually growing less the world over, and soon in solid phalanx we shall make a quick march to victory. With complete legal suppression of the traffic in intoxicating drinks as the duty of the state, and voluntary total abstinence as the law of personal duty, as our aim, all sincere friends of the temperance reform will, in due time, gather to our standard.

For these correct and noble sentiments the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has stood firmly from the beginning of the organization. It was my privilege to be in the field many years before it, and to cordially approve of that movement in its very inception. I saw the glow and red heat of the Crusade fire in which the W. C. T. U. was forged. Nor shall I ever forget the fervor of the songs, prayers and tears which mingled in the honest, godly effort to find out how to rescue the victims of the saloon. It has always been my conviction that God heard those devout souls, and caused them to "build better than they knew." The course of the organization may now be traced around the world, by a track of incandescent brightness. May its sun always stay in the heavens!

Doubtless it is quite as apparent to yourselves as to discerning people outside, that your organization is now passing through a crucial period of its history. Not many great social movements since the dawn of time have been blessed with such leaders as the promoted Frances E. Wiliard. Seek to find out the will of God and obey it cheerfully, and, "lo," He will be "with you alway." Repose the utmost confidence in those whom you select as leaders, work in harmony, hope firmly in God, and you "shall yet praise Him for the help of His countenance." "Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude (of liquor sellers and liquor drinkers) for the battle is not yours, but God's."

Tota! Abstinence.

[Extract from Miss Willard's last address before the World's W. C. T. U.]

THE novelist and poet make much of wine, but the "cup of cold water" has been hallowed by the words of lips divine, and sacrificed by David from a sentiment of loyalty to his brave comrades; by Alexander when he declined to drink lest his soldiers seeing him would grow more thirsty; by Randolph, of Hapsburg, who thrust the cup of blessing from his parched lips saying, "I thirst not for myself but for my whole army;" and by Sir Philip Sydney who gave the cup for which he longed to a poor soldier with the immortal words, "Thy need is yet greater than mine."

Cold water wins its widening way, without haste, without rest. The wineless dinner table is becoming cosmopolitan.

This is our position: That the crown of creation, so far as we know, is the domelike head carried on human shoulders; that this is the universe in miniature, and the dearest to God of anything of which we are aware; that forth from it has come all that makes the earth different from a den of beasts; that water is the brain's natural restorer and lubricant, and that any material sold or used which produces its deterioration beyond the degree that any other material does or can, shall not be made or sold under the guarantees or safeguards of the state.

The great battle is now against moderate drinking; drunkenness is outlawed save among the human sediment of parlor and purlieus. But the man who is on the way to this same degradation, as science steadily holds, will not believe it, this being the most painful part of his hallucination.

In this great fight for a clear brain some of our good friends counsel us to give up the word temperance; but it is a word too grand and far-reaching to be sacrificed. Let us all diligently teach that temperance is the moderate use of all things harmless and total abstinence from all things harmful. Some persons have the sanguine temperament, others the bilious, others the lymphatic, others the nervous, but now and then we come upon one who so combines all these that it may be said of him, he has the temperate temperament; he is made up of every creature's best. So it is with the temperance reform; all the best things of life are in it; no other word so fully represents that self-control which makes man great; none so combines conserving powers with progressive possibilities. A temperance man looks upon his body as the temple of the Holy Ghost. A temperance man is chaste, teetotal, anti-tobacco, anti-gambling; he is for home protection, the emancipation of women, the lifting of labor to every opportunity that life can yield; his eye is clear, his hand untrembling, and when you meet him you have met one of whom the Arabs would say in their beautiful phrase, "He is a brother of girls."

The supreme duty of the hour is to convince the moderate drinker that he is doing himself harm. If only this belief were general, men would soon become a law unto themselves to such a degree that statutory enactments would be but the outward expression of an inward grace. Upon the sullen fortress of moderate drinking the artillery of the temperance reform must concentrate in future years. It has been an incalculable gain to make drunkenness a disgrace instead of an amiable peculiarity, as it was a hundred years ago, or a pardonable peccadillo, as it was in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, or a necessary evil, as it was a generation back.

The forces that have worked to this end are precisely the same that must now be directed against so called "moderation." We must stoutly maintain the position that there is no moderation in the use of what is harmful. Happily, in taking this position we have great allies, of which the greatest is the dictum of the modern sciences. These declarations of standard authorities are now being taught to the children in the public schools, not only of America, but to a great extent throughout the English-speaking world; and their introduction is being urged in France, and has to some extent penetrated Japan. It is in the nature of poetic justice that Germany, the greatest beer-drinking country in the world, should have furnished the scholars who are perhaps doing most to undermine the fallacy that intoxicating liquors (i. e., poisonous liquors) taken in moderation, are either harmless or helpful in the physical economy of life.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

WHEN Jesus commanded the stormy waters, "Peace, be still," the disciples were awed and wondered, yet in these days even greater miracles are performed in His name. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you," and the lonely, broken-hearted mother comes humbly to the altar, with her uplifted hand, saying, "Pray that I may find my daughter; she has gone away into paths of sin, and I know not where to find her, and I want that peace for myself." With shining face and eyes she goes out into the world, not alone, for the Holy Comforter goes with her.

A mother asked prayers for her son in this city, and the next day came to thank God that our prayers had been answered. She had had a long talk with her boy and found his heart very tender about heavenly things.

A man deserted by his wife, without work, nearly beside himself with loneliness, drifted in to the meeting. At the altar he found forgiveness for sin and new courage to take up life.

The speaker said, "To be a Christian does not mean you will have no temptations. Sometimes they seem even more numerous than before, for your quickened conscience detects them more readily. But with Christ as your friend and the Holy Ghost to guide, you are able to overcome all evil and to conquer through Him who strengthens you." This statement men and women testify is the truth. They give up their work if it be such where God can not be honored and find that in different surroundings and by trying to help some fallen brother to know God, they keep and strengthen their own religious life.

A man under deep conviction said, "I want to be a Christian, but, oh, you do not know my circumstance. I can not be one." He tried to sign the pledge but his hand trembled so he could not write his name. God does pity such men—popular, educated, but tied up in the meshes of sin, and needing to give up their own will before God can bless them. As Frances Willard said, "If they are so strong with the will on the wrong side just think what a power for good they might be with the will on God's side."

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

An Interview with the Japanese Minister of Education.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In a former letter I think I told you that I was promised an interview with the Japanese minister of education. It came about in this way: One day in December when I was calling at the American Legation, I said to our honored Minister, "Would it be presuming in me to try to see Mr. Hamao?" who was then at the head of the department. "Not at all," he replied. "I'll manage it for you after the new year."

But unfortunately, with January came a change in the cabinet, and the time for broaching the subject of scientific temperance instruction in the public schools did not seem opportune.

Later, Dr. Joyama, president of the Imperial University, succeeded to the office. Knowing that he, too, was favorable to Western ideas and learning, being himself a graduate of the University of Michigan, we decided, upon my return from the south, to wait no longer, and upon the afternoon of June 22, accompanied by Mrs. E. Spencer-Large, who is to have our work here next year in charge, we repaired to the National Headquarters of this most important branch of the government's work.

The card of introduction read: "To His Excellency," etc., consequently we were prepared to humble ourselves in the dust, but when the inner door of his office opened, and this august personage stood before us, there was such unmistakable friendliness in his face that all formalities seemed out of place, and soon we found ourselves talking as familiarly as though he occupied the most ordinary chair in all the world.

He told us that he used neither liquor nor tobacco in any form, and declared that he did not believe any teacher had a right in the schoolroom who used them. He referred to the fact that in Japan the teachers, with scarcely an exception, smoked, and therefore, it would be very difficult to begin the work here. "I have been speaking my mind on this subject," he said, "and expect to continue to do so." He seemed much pleased to have a chance to examine the books used in the states, which, thanks to Mrs. Hunt, we were able to leave with him.

And now I want to give you a glimpse of this great man from another angle of vision. He has a good deal of humor, and reminded us, in a most clever way, that his country had obtained some of these abominations from us. Naturally, the Hispano-American war formed one topic of conversation, and so reference was made to the fact that, according to reports, ninety per cent of the cigaret using young men who had volunteered in the states were rejected as unfit to serve their country, while only ten per cent of non-users failed to pass the medical examinations. We had sent this startling intelligence out to the newspapers of the Empire a few days before, and Dr. Joyama was greatly impressed by it, but seeing in it a chance to "turn the tables" on us, he was not slow to embrace the opportunity. "If that is so," he said, "the American Indian is getting his revenge, isn't he? I do not know but that it is divine revenge," and then laughingly added: "It will be a bad thing to let this report get out, because, you see, all the boys who do not want to go to war will take to smoking cigarets at once, and the Quakers, too!" He said much more that would both amuse and encourage you, but there is not time for it now. Altogether, the visit was a most satisfactory one, and the next Monday morning we saw in the Gazette: "The educational department is seriously considering the matter of taking measures to prohibit the use of cigarets by school children."

Our hearts greatly rejoiced, but to tell you the whole story, I must say that almost simultaneously with this news came the announcement that the cabinet had fallen again, and Dr. Joyama had gone down with his party. It was a hard blow, but Japan is to be congratulated in having had at the head of the public schools of the land, for even a few weeks, a man so clean in his own personal life. Let us hope that his successor may be equally true, progressive and approachable. All periods are transition periods in a sense, but Japan is in very unusual throes these days, the cabinet just formed being the fourth in six months. We must surely have surcease from such volcanic eruptions, or disruptions soon, then we shall get in a grand stroke for scientific temperance instruction, for there is much sentiment in the country, and the W. C. T. U. knows no such word as fail.

Especially is there an awakening concerning the effects of cigarets, and it is high time, too, for everybody is using them. One day recently I traveled two hundred and fifty miles, and during that time there was only one person of all the hundreds who came into and left my car, who did not smoke (and that one was a man), and there was only one person who used a pipe. All smoked cigarets, and smoked them all the time. If only Mrs. Hunt could come! I am helping to "pave the way," but with so many "irons in the fire" I can not do the work of a specialist. With all my heart I believe the people are ready for this and for a Charlton Edholm, too. In this faith, and with much love,

Yours loyally,
Tokio, July 7, 1898. CLARA PARRISH.

Unexpected Victories in the Hispano-American War.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Judging from the size of the appropriations made for its celebration by the great cities, the last Fourth of July passed with more than usual din and smoke and waste. The charter of our liberties—our matchless Declaration of Independence—was read—and maudlin crowds cheered, and staggered off to salute the emblem of our blood-bought independence, "the star-spangled banner," floating over every saloon door—and the people, God help them! were not ashamed.

The newspapers recorded rather more than the usual number—in deference to the war, perhaps—of blinded, maimed and dead; and rather more than the usual number of hearts and homes are still struggling to adjust themselves to the lifelong scars and bereavements.

But there was an innovation in the observance of our last Independence Day. Not only a new thing happened, but "a great thing, a wise thing, a prophetic thing." It is true that the Christian Citizenship League, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and some of the churches had before sounded a reveille, and had read a proclamation for a more rational observance of the nation's birthday, for such an expression of our patriotism as could not be symbolized by beer and bluster and brutishness.

But this year, alongside municipal appropriations, the daily journals published vigorous protests from the people against such wastefulness and debauchery. Doubtless these protests were stimulated by a popular sense of vast war expenses, coupled with somewhat of a realization of the grave problems the American people now confront; wastefulness and recklessness outraged a freshly sensitized perception of the "fitness of things."

This flashlight of fine perception has even now proved prophetic of a higher public sentiment. The military parades of the past two weeks are already calling out serious expostulations from the sovereign people, while the unremedied blunders of our war department leave our disabled soldiers at Montauk Point, Chickamauga, and other camps without sufficient cots, pillows, blankets, cooking outfits, hospital stores and suitable food. If a great hotel in any city of the United States in an emergency wanted fifty thousand cots and bedding, it would have them within twenty-four hours. Yet our great government, that, challenging the admiration of the world, has in four months mobilized an army, collected a navy, fought a war and freed a people, has broken down in its household department; so those who spilled their blood and sickened before Spanish trenches and those who wait in camps to defend the nation's honor in garrison service in the tropics, perish with fevers, victims of the incompetence and delays of the national medical department, not in curing disease, but in preventing it.

The army medical board should be enlarged, rank for rank, from surgeon-general down, by Clara Barton and a staff of women physicians, for it is now clearly demonstrated that it fails for lack of the feminine instinct and experience that, out of "nothing" and chaos, can establish and keep moving, in permanency, or in the temporary camp or field home, a well organized house-keeping system. Neither in peace nor in war does the government prove itself able, by man alone, to take care of the home side of its responsibilities. Yet, in the midst of all these disabilities, there has been no lack of transportation or other facilities to hurry beer and whisky to the front and to establish the army canteen.

Never, however, has there been so wide or hopeful horizon for the cause of prohibition as this war has opened for it. Generals and army surgeons have united in saying, "We can maintain neither discipline nor health with the army canteen." So there is prohibition, by military order, for the American soldier in a degree hitherto unknown, and the armies of the civilized world will take note and hereafter begin to mark time to the step of a new idea.

A truth that has fought its way to the front never retreats. Science and government begin to fight side by side for a free brain and a free people. The government that "follows the gleam" in the cause of freedom and justice builds larger than it dreams, and in giving so much to release the oppressed, to right the wrong, is not "twice blessed," but a thousand times in its own enlarged vision and capabilities.

HARRIET B. KELLS.

Fayette, Miss.

The Temperance Pledge.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It was in the mountains of Kentucky, soon after the close of the civil war, that in a humble school room with white-washed walls, was gathered a motley group of men, women, and children, eagerly improving the opportunity of education so long denied them. Old people vied with little children in making advancement, and great was the delight of one old woman in particular, when, with spectacles thrown up on the top of her head, she could march triumphant to the head of her spelling class. Had she not earned her victory by walking three miles daily to school, and then devoting herself entirely to her books, that she might be able some day to teach those around her more ignorant than she, thus following in the footsteps of the Master, whom she loved so well?

Memory brings back to me to-day, very vividly, those patient, hungry faces—hungry for higher, better things. Prominent among them was an awkward, poorly-dressed lad, just merging into manhood. A pair of deep blue eyes and a mass of brown, wavy hair redeemed the otherwise homely face. An obstinate look had settled there, as though he had been driven all his life rather than led. He had no known relatives living, no one to care for him. Gradually that face began to soften and change under the influence of love and sympathy, until at times it seemed to me almost beautiful. There was a soul waking into life, and preparing to make use of the great opportunities before him. I felt that the ground upon which I was treading was holy ground, and often lifted my heart to God in prayer for wisdom to guide poor Jesse Robinson aright. His mind was slow in arriving at any definite conclusion about anything, but when he once decided the mountains among which he had been reared were not more immovable than he. One noon he came awkwardly up to my platform for the word of encouragement that he knew was awaiting him. It seemed to me that the time had come to introduce the subject of temperance, so after a little talk on that important theme, during which I drew from him the information that he was accustomed to take an occasional dram, I said: "Jesse, will you not sign the temperance pledge?" The old obstinate look came over his face as he replied:

"No, the pledge is no 'count." Seeing that further urging was useless, I said, "Take time to think the matter over carefully and prayerfully and you will surely sign it." In a few days he was again standing awkwardly before me, his right hand grasping his left wrist, a habit he had contracted from wearing a coat with sleeves much too short for the long arms. His face lighted up with a pleasant smile as he said, "I have been thinking about that temperance pledge right smart and have made up my mind to sign it." Then followed the laborious task of signing it in a manner becoming such an event, and another soldier had joined the ranks of those who are fighting King Alcohol. He had some fighting to do, as will soon be seen.

Not many days after, he came to me with a look of victory on his face, and in an animated manner related his experience with one of Satan's agents in that town. He said that while in a small store one day he was invited to take some whisky (liquor was not supposed to be sold in the town). On informing the man of his signing the pledge and intention to keep it, another man came forward, laid down a dollar bill and said, "You may have that money and I will furnish the whisky, if you will break the pledge." Jesse said, "Miss Peck, I wanted that money bad, I am so poor, but I didn't want it bad enough to break my pledge." All honor to the brave boy who thus put the tempter to flight! In the face of this and hundreds of similar incidents, who will say that the pledge is no safeguard for tempted young men?

ALICE E. PECK.

Alexander, N. Y.

The Election in New South Wales.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—If you receive cablegrams, daily, regarding Australia, as we do of America, you will know that New South Wales, the mother colony of Australia, has just been through the throes of a general election for members of our House of Assembly, which corresponds with your House of Representatives, and, my! what a time we have been having! The famous election at Eatanswill, as described by Dickens in his "Pickwick Papers," was not a "circumstance to it." There is hardly a sitting hen for hundreds of miles that has not been despoiled of her clutch; while surely hardly a doubtful egg can be left in one of our produce stores; and nearly the whole of a cargo of wheaten flour from Valparaiso must now be blowing over the streets, or being washed down our gutters, as a result of yesterday's elections.

The excitement was so great because of the various test questions at issue. One was local veto, called here local option, which aroused the brewery interest to frenzy point. Another was female franchise, which so exercised the mind and speech of many of our citizens of the "male persuasion" that the non-believers in woman's powers and duties endeavored to controvert their arguments with missiles of divers descriptions. Besides these two there were other questions of which the most important was "Federation with other Australian colonies, or non-federation."

A plebiscite or referendum was taken throughout Australia a few weeks ago, when the percentage in New South Wales in favor of federation was not sufficient to secure it, as many of our people considered the bill prepared was unfair for this colony, as it proposed to introduce one fiscal policy throughout Australia, and as this colony has open ports to all comers it had little to gain and everything to lose by adopting the tariff of the others, which by their high duties upon foreign goods have long rendered many luxuries, and even comforts, attainable here, prohibitive to them. But the federalists were undaunted, and again made it one of the test questions yesterday, which added to the fierceness of the struggle, and the extraordinary excitement at the contest, with the result that out of 126 members returned, 57 were for federation, 63 against, while 6 remained independent. A large majority of these are woman suffragists, but I regret to have to say that our local optionists are in the minority. We had meetings previous to the election and the members of our United Temperance Alliance pledged themselves to vote only for the candidates who declared themselves in favor of local option without compensation. And as "one man one vote" is the rule which obtains in Australia, this good resolution was the innocent means of many electors not using the franchise; for although many had landed interests in country constituencies, where temperance advocates were seeking seats, yet, as they could only vote where they actually lived, and did not approve of the candidates of those localities, their votes had to remain unrecorded.

Notwithstanding our deep interest in these great questions, so influential upon the future of our country, we white-ribboners, you may rest assured, have not been unmindful of the sad war between America and Spain, but have looked for the cablegrams daily, experienced deep sorrow at the awful messages which were often flashed along the wires, and prayed incessantly that peace with honor might soon be yours. We felt very grateful to the Spanish admiral for his leniency to Lieutenant Hobson, and then were more than proud of the American government for their noble and generous treatment of the admiral when he in his turn was taken prisoner. God bless America with peace, prosperity and righteousness is the earnest prayer of her admirer in many things,

AMELIA J. PEMELL,
World's Supt. of Flower Mission.

Newton, New South Wales.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

(Abraham) staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that, what He had promised, He was able to perform.

THE few days of rest beside the beautiful lake and the cool, shady forest have ended. Again I am amidst the activities of life, with a spirit full of hope and faith. I take up the work of raising the $300,000 to pay off the Temple Trust Bonds and carry to completion the last undertaking of our Saint Frances. Miss Susan Sturges, Mansfield, O., a noble white-ribboner who has already given several hundred dollars to the Temple, writes pledging $1,000 to be paid when the Temple roll of honor of one hundred persons—at $1,000 each—has been secured. We hope other elect women will follow Miss Sturges' noble example. Those who can not pledge $1,000 should join the list of one hundred persons who pledge $100 on the same conditions as the above.

✠

Among the plans suggested by the Temple Trustees for raising money for the Temple, is the appointment by each union of a committee of their most influential women to wait upon the superintendents of Sunday-schools and day schools and request a penny collection from the children on Miss Willard's birthday, Wednesday, September 28, and in the Sunday-schools on September 25, requesting that in the latter, as far as possible, the day might be observed by temperance exercises and a brief sketch of Miss Willard's life. All money raised in this way will be credited to the union that conducts the work. There should be no time lost in appointing committees and getting them to work. Many have written us, requesting that this plan be adopted, as it would bring in a large sum to the Temple and be of great benefit to the children.

✠

It will be a grief to all who love brave, gifted Eva Shontz, to learn that she has been confined to a dark room, and part of the time to her bed for the past two months, with inflammation of the eyes, which has finally culminated in the destruction of the optic nerve of the right eye; it is hoped the sight of the other may be preserved. Her sufferings have been intense, but through it all she has maintained the same sweet, patient, loving Christian spirit which has always characterized her. For several years her eyes have troubled her, and for the past two she has given herself with perfect abandon to the cause of the Temple and the formation of the Young People's Christian Temperance Union, of which she is president. This society is an organization of the young Christians of Chicago, of both sexes, who are banded together for aggressive work on the 6,000 saloons of Chicago, and also to aid their young president to raise money to pay for the Temple. Of the great meeting which they held in the Auditorium, in Chicago, June 28, the wonderful success of which was alluded to in THE UNION SIGNAL at the time, it is not necessary now for me to speak. Without doubt Eva Shontz' incessant labors for the society and the Temple was the cause of her losing her right eye, for she has been ill ever since the Auditorium meeting, when she thrilled the thousands there gathered with her eloquent address on Miss Willard.

✠

Mr. C. N. Pierce, of Philadelphia, Pa., called at our office this morning and wrote out a pledge for $2,000 in Temple Trust Bonds, for and in behalf of his wife, expressing their deep sympathy and earnest hope that the Temple may become Miss Willard's monument. Mrs. Celinda M. Bush, Austin, Ill., a devoted white-ribboner, called at the office two or three days ago to express her sympathy in the work and to say that while she could not pledge $1,000 to be paid at once, she wished me to know that she had placed in her will $1,000 for the benefit of the Temple.

✠

All money should be sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, and drafts should be made out in the name of Mr. G. B. Shaw, treasurer Temple Trustees.

Our Children.

When Mother sits Down by the Fire.

OH, the five o'clock chime brings the coziest time,
That is found in the whole of the day,
When Larry and Gus, and the others of us,
Come in from our study or play;
When we push the big chair to the hearth over there,
And pile the wood higher and higher,
And we make her a space in the very best place—
And mother sits down by the fire.

There's a great deal to say at the close of the day,
And so much to talk over with mother;
There's a comical sight or a horrible plight,
Or a ball game, or something or other.
And she'll laugh with Larry and sigh with Harry,
And smile to our heart's desire
At a triumph won or a task well done—
When sitting down there by the fire.

Then little she'll care for the clothes that we tear,
Or the havoc we make on her larder;
For the toil and the strife of our every day life
She will love us a little bit harder.
Then our lady is she, and her knights we would be,
And her trust doughty deeds will inspire;
For we long then anew to be generous and true—
When mother sits down by the fire.

—Martha Burr Banks, in Independent.

An Ideal Mother.

BY MARGUERITE HILTON

[Eighteen years old.]

ORATORS have said that mothers have Madonna faces. There is certainly something divine in the face of a mother with her baby in her arms, but it is almost impossible to define what this something is. Her eyes and smile are full of love and gentleness, and the very atmosphere about her seems to be radiant with these attributes.

An ideal mother is one who lives for her family, but who is not their slave. She is patient, too, but there is a limit to patience. It is perfectly exasperating, and it must be extremely hard for the mother to be patient when a crowd of children, her own and somebody else's, come trooping into the house with mud on their shoes an inch thick, and almost as much on their hands and faces. But the ideal mother does not scold; she simply takes a deep breath and quietly asks the young party to scrape their feet out of doors; and if she wants their shoes to be very clean, she will give the children a knife to do it with. Then the children want to come in and play fighting the Spaniards or the Indians with their blocks; or else they want to play emigrants with every chair in the house for a horse and the most elegant shawl they can find for a cover for the wagon. It is Saturday morning, too, and the baking must be done and the house put in order for Sunday. But what can the ideal mother do? If she sends them away, heaven only knows what sort of mischief they will do or what kind of company they will associate with. So outwardly calm, but with a very ruffled spirit within, she allows them to stay. And they play happily until noon. But during the morning about every fifteen minutes they pop into the kitchen to see if the cookies are not nearly done and if they may have "just one apiece."

An ideal mother is sympathetic and reliable. Two-year-old baby May, with the tears trickling down her fair little face, can go to "mamma" with her broken dolly, and there she will be comforted and consoled to her heart's content. And the great college fellow, who always wants advice but who is either afraid or too proud to ask for it, cannot help telling mother all about his trials and tribulations. He knows that she will neither scold nor laugh at him, and he starts off again with a light heart because there is one woman in the world who trusts and relies on him.

I know a mother who makes it a point to be around while the children are getting off to school. As each starts off she kisses him good-by, from the college student to the primary scholar, and her last words, "Good-luck to you, dear," rings in their ears all day long. Another thing she does is to mend gloves and mittens at the last moment, and in the greatest possible hurry.

Children, as well as adults, like to be praised and appreciated. When children have tried hard to be good, they like to have their mother tell them that she appreciates their efforts. And when the daughter tries not to use slang, because one of her special friends does not approve of it, she feels greatly rewarded when mother says that she is improving in that respect. The college boy, when in the depths of despair about his examinations, feels inspired to work harder than ever when mother says that she knows he can do anything he undertakes, because he is his father's son, and his father always carried everything before him.

These are a few of the characteristics of an ideal mother. Such a mother is an inspiration to the child to be as nearly like her as possible, for she is perfect in his eyes.

"I'll Pay You for That."

A HEN trod on a duck's foot. She did not mean to do it, and it did not hurt the duck much. But the duck said, "I'll pay you for that!"

So the duck flew at the hen, but as she did so, her wing struck an old goose who stood close by.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried the goose, and she flew at the duck, but as she did so her foot tore the fur of a cat, who was just then in the yard.

"I'll pay you for that!" said the cat, and she started for the goose, but as she did so her claw caught in the wool of a sheep.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried the sheep, and she ran at the cat, but as she did so her foot hit the foot of a dog who lay in the sun.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried he, and jumped at the sheep, but as he did so his leg struck an old cow who stood by the gate.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried she, and she ran at the dog, but as she did so her horn grazed the skin of a horse who stood by a tree.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried he, and he rushed at the cow.

What a noise there was! The horse flew at the cow, and the cow at the dog, the dog at the sheep, and the sheep at the cat, and the cat at the goose, and the goose at the duck, and the duck at the hen. What a fuss there was, and all because the hen accidentally stepped on the duck's toes.

"Hi, hi! What's all this?" cried the man who had the care of them. "I can not have all this. You may stay here," he said to the hen. But he drove the duck to the pond, the goose to the field, the cat to the barn, the sheep to her fold, the dog to his house, the cow to her yard, and the horse to his stall.

And so all their good times were over, because the duck would not overlook a little hurt which was not intended.

Little Miss Fret and Little Miss Laugh.

CRIES little Miss Fret, in a very great pet,
"I hate this warm weather; it's horrid to tan.
It scorches my nose and blisters my toes,
And wherever I go I must carry a fan."

Chirps little Miss Laugh, "Why I couldn't tell half
The fun I am having this bright summer day.
I sing through the hours, I cull pretty flowers,
And ride like a queen on the sweet smelling hay."

—Wide Awake Temperance Reciter.

A LITTLE girl who knew nothing about encores, found fault with the audience at a recent children's concert I,, know we. didn't make one mistake," she exclaimed, "and they made us come out and sing it all over again."

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—You will remember that we had a letter not very long ago, from a cousin in New South Wales, Australia! This week we have one from a little girl in New Zealand, and I am going to ask you, as I did before, to write a personal letter to her and give her a warm welcome to the Cozy Corner.

I am particularly glad to have these letters from foreign countries, for they show how far the influence of and interest in THE UNION SIGNAL extends, and make it seem as if the world were not such a very big place after all. When I was a little girl we did not have Cozy Corners in which to chat with friends who were scattered all over the country, and a letter from a foreign land was a novelty, indeed. I wonder if my boys and girls realize what a wonderful age this is, in which they live, especially as an "annihilator of space."

Lovingly yours,
AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am nine years old. Grandma is president of the W. C. T. U. We take THE UNION SIGNAL and I like to read the Children's page. I would like to join the Cozy Corner. Yours lovingly, Arvilla, N. D. ELLA F. MILLER.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little temperance girl nine years old. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and reads the little letters to me. My papa is a prohibitionist and mamma is a W. C. T. U. woman. Much love to all the cousins. IRMA FIX.
Fairfield, Cal.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—My school teacher takes THE UNION SIGNAL and reads the letters to us in school. We have Miss Willard's and Miss Ackermann's pictures on the wall in our school house. I have three sisters and no brothers. My teacher belongs to the W. C. T. U.
From your loving niece,
Shelton, Wash. EVA ROBINSON.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a girl ten years old and would like to join the Cozy Corner. I have no brothers or sisters. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL. I like to read the Children's page. I read the letters every time the paper comes. We have no L. T. L. My papa has gone to war. MARY MARTIN.
Grove City, Pa.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a member of the Christian church and so are my mother, father and oldest brother. My mamma has five children and we all belong to the Junior Christian Endeavor but the baby. Mamma is vice-president of the W. C. T. U. We have so many saloons here I could not count them.
Your loving niece,
Greenville, Tex. DAISY TEAGARDEN.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little girl ten years old, and I should like to join the Cozy Corner. My mother was the first president of the W. C. T. U. in Karapoi. We are all prohibitionists, and mean to carry local option next year. I belong to the Band of Hope and am a white-ribboner, the youngest in New Zealand.
With love, I am your niece,
ETHEL MAIR EVANS.
Willow Farm, Mill Road, Karapoi, Canterbury, N. Z.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I have often read the letters in THE UNION SIGNAL. Grandma has taken the paper for many years. She is the president of the W. C. T. U. of Reading, Pa., and loves her temperance work. I am going to be a temperance boy, so when I grow up to be a man I can do some good here in Robesonia, a small village near our farm, where they have three saloons to ruin young boys and men by selling strong drink. I live in New York city during the winter. I am going to join the L. T. L. so I can learn how to work in temperance so I can try and do some good when I come up here in the summer. JAMIE LIVINGOOD.
Annameade Farm, Robesonia, Pa.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.

36.

I am composed of 14 letters.
My 5, 9, 7 is a useful metal.
My 1, 6, 12 is a useful article of clothing.
My 3, 2 is a common expression.
My 4, 8, 11, 13, 14, 10 is a form of a verb expressing crime.
My whole is the name of a prominent city.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 1.

No. 35. Frances E. Willard.

Correct answers to Nos. 32 and 33 were sent by Marion Byles, Fredonia, Pa.

All communications for Children's Page should be sent to THE UNION SIGNAL office, The Temple, Chicago.

UNION SIGNAL

HAND WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON, MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Lord gave the word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host.—Psa. 68:11.

World-Wide Calls.

IT is no accident that a dozen or more countries are ready at this moment to receive the W. C. T. U. gospel; and young women, bright, eloquent, cultured and consecrated, are waiting ready to go. Shall we send them?

Mrs. Stoddard in Mexico, Miss Parrish in Japan, and Mrs. Barney all round the world, have sounded the Macedonian cry. The war with Spain has placed new duties upon us. Hawaii, Porto Rico and perhaps Cuba and the Philippines are to be our own territory. Each should have a resident worker. The papers are flooded with accounts of the resources of these islands, and we can not forget that the exports from two of these have been heretofore largely rum and tobacco. We welcome the manila hemp, the sugar, molasses, tropical fruits, rich woods and rare native manufactured articles, but we must fight the rum before it is distilled and the tobacco before it is planted. We have carried humanitarian ideas in our warships and by our land troops; our government has taken advanced ground as to the use of alcoholics by our soldiers in service or in hospital. A great temperance lesson was taught when General Shafter's army poured the captured wine into the gullies of Santiago, and allowed no saloons in the captured city. We must follow up these lessons with the "thus saith nature, science, God."

Burmah and Scandinavia are asking for special missionaries, and yet Misses Shaffner and Ericson, who were appointed to go out, are still in the schoolroom, because there are no funds available to send them. Mexico would welcome a resident worker, even more heartily than has Japan welcomed Miss Parrish. One year ago, governors of Mexican states, mayors of cities, by special permit and deep interest in temperance and purity, arranged for meetings in the state schools and opera houses. Professors offered their services in translating a series of text books for use in the free schools; eminent physicians and scientists proffered the help of their knowledge in making the physiologies accurate as to the effect of Mexican intoxicants (pulque, mescal, etc.) upon the system. Congressmen joined our society, signing the pledge and paying dues, all desirous that Mexico's children shall hear the latest voice of science.

Had we thought how close this question is coming to many of us? Our brothers and sons will be flocking to these new territories to enter business, to reside. Many of them, as in Mexico and elsewhere, will fall because of the customs of the country. We shall not be guiltless of their fall if we fail to make an effort to change these customs. In many of these lands, as in Japan and Mexico, the drink traffic is not licensed by the government, so there is only the traffic to fight, and not the law of the land. Although the Mexicans greatly admire the United States, and have taken our form of government as a model for their own, they yet have not made a legal or political league with the rum traffic.

A professor in one of the state normal schools, who received his English education in Columbia College, said: "When I was in New York I was told that the public officers were often chosen and elected by the saloon vote. I should think that would be very bad for your country." We want them to continue to think that such a style of politics is bad.

The "American Bar" is already in every city. Will it not try to entrench itself in the law? And will we be guiltless if it does? There is now every opportunity for us to get our righteous laws in first and by so doing, pre-empt the youth and the country for total abstinence. There is, indeed, set before us an open door.

Before Miss Willard went away the World's Officers issued an appeal for funds to send out these special missionaries. They made this simple request that every union in the country can comply with, viz., that a public or parlor meeting be held once a year by each local society, with a World's program, and a contribution for this work.

Such a meeting would be a blessing to every community, September 22 would be a good time, and if the contribution should reach only one dollar for each union, think what a sending of workers such a sum would vouchsafe. There seems to be a divine impulse brooding over the nations of the earth and the isles of the sea to subject themselves to new and loftier standards of civilization. Shall we enter the open door?

In her Toronto address Miss Willard said: "If we could send out half a dozen World's missionaries where we now send one and let them live in the countries to which they go, their effort in bringing to a focus the temperance work of that great band of Christian missionaries would within ten years result in such a movement for temperance, purity and peace as would dwarf all present achievement, and let in the daylight on the abominations of the world so completely that the world would put them away."

The Mighty Czar.

UNDER the young Czar, Nicholas II, Russia is shaking her vigorous loins and forging forward on the living issues of the day. She even has a "liquor question" like other folks, and has gotten around to about the same conclusions as the most progressive. She has tried the dispensary system under government officials, with profits turned over to the government, and declares it a failure so far as decreasing drunkenness. One of her leading journals swings gracefully around into prohibition water, and glides out upon it in this wise:

> But it is clear at all events that no sort of effort to promote temperance will do away with drunkenness. It may be possible to mitigate the grosser and more flagrant external evils of disgraceful consumption of liquor; but drunkenness will exist just so long as liquor will be sold. To abolish drunkenness is possible in but one way—by abolishing, through absolute prohibition, the manufacture and sale of liquor. We have spoken of this repeatedly before and no one should imagine that the total abolition of the consumption of liquor is an unrealizable dream. Liquor is far from being a necessary article of consumption or a condition of human existence, and consequently it can be stricken from the list without the slightest hesitation or apprehension regarding the future welfare of the masses and the government.

How is that from the steppes of Central Asia? America would better neglect her oratory and jingoism for a time and devote herself to this practical question before the kings of Africa and the czars of Russia send missionaries to our shores.

But just now the Czar of Russia must have been reading THE UNION SIGNAL and receiving documents from the W. C. T. U. department of peace, for he has taken a step toward answering the prayers of the women and others who believe in substituting arbitration for war, and we say, "Three cheers for the Czar!"

Nicholas II, through his minister, Count Muravieff, the foreign minister, August 24, handed to the foreign ministers at St. Petersburg a note, declaring that the maintenance of peace and the reduction of the excessive armaments now crushing all nations is the ideal for which all governments should strive, and he invites all the Powers to take part in an international conference as a means of bringing this about.

The document is a long one, and in it the Czar declares that the preservation of peace has been put forward as an object of international policy, and to that end great states have concluded among themselves powerful alliances and developed in proportions hitherto unprecedented their military forces, but that they have not with all their efforts been able to bring about the desired beneficent results—pacification. He shows this policy not only to fail in its object, but to be ruinous to the prosperity of the nations and fitted to bring about the very cataclysm it is desired to avert, "and the horrors whereof make every thinking being shudder in advance." "This conference," he says, "will be, by the help of God, the happy presage for the century which is about to open."

This is one of the most hopeful and significant events of the century. What the immediate results will be, it is too early to predict. But that it is a step, and a long one, toward the era of "peace on earth" we do not for one moment doubt. It is encouraging to note that the papers of other countries universally recognize the sincerity of the Czar, praise the object as a laudable one, and express the conviction that the nations will respond to the invitation favorably. That many of these papers look upon the scheme as an "iridescent dream," is only what was to be expected.

In short, the Czar's note seems much like an exposition of Benjamin Franklin's statement that war "abstracted from the inhumanity of it is wrong in point of human prudence," and fully justifies his confidence that "if statesmen had a little more arithmetic, or were more accustomed to calculation, wars would be much less frequent." All of this has long been very plain to us women, and it is matter for rejoicing on our part that the statesmen of the world begin to show signs of having attained our proficiency in arithmetic.

It is a matter, however, of curious interest that, while the Czar declares he is influenced by humanitarian considerations, a statement we do not in the least doubt, he seems to feel that the only arguments which will carry conviction are those based on commercial motives. It is not the inhumanity of war, but its vast expense, that he urges upon the thought of the nations. We know too well that the same holds true in all reform movements. It is of little use to show the crime of the licensing of the drink traffic, if we can not also prove that from a worldly and money point of view it actually does not pay.

But it also shows that humanity has not yet caught a glimpse of its rightful nobility. It is God's nobleman who asks only "Is it right?" never "Is it expedient?" But it is this ideal of nobility toward which the race is pressing. That glad day would have seen an earlier dawn had the half of humanity, which is universally acknowledged to be most the captives of conscience, had their rightful place and influence in the world of business and of government.

The Balance of Power.

TO maintain the balance of power among nations is one of the progressive ideas of modern times. Kings and queens thought themselves exceedingly clever when they grasped this idea and what it might be to the world. Time has established the maintenance of the balance of power as a policy of nations, and even the people have grown so smart in these latter times that they can employ diplomacy, trickery, flattery, or what not, equal to the old French kings, to the same end in a smaller way, viz., for the perpetuity of their own plans. A few years ago the abominable sick man of the East had to be coddled because if he died Russia would swallow more of Europe. Turkey never said he was sick; Russia never said "swallow" in plain English or Sclavonic, either, but Austria and France and Italy and even England shook, all the same, at the thought of Turkey's death.

There are three great organized powers in the United States to-day. The Republican, the Democratic and the saloon.

The saloon couldn't exist were there only one of the others, but while the saloon can pit the other two against each other it can live and thrive. Were it not for fear of the Democratic power, Republican power would turn down the saloon power quicker than "scat." Brother McKinley would overturn the canteens and drive out the money changers as suddenly as Napoleon's coup d'état lit down on the French people, but he "dassent." He doesn't say so, and the power doesn't say so, but the incubus is showing up heavier and heavier every year, and public opinion is murmuring audibly even though the people are stultified by the thought of the more beer the less tax (?) Public opinion is the fourth great power which is to come in soon and break up the tripartite compact which makes it possible for the great wrong against the commonwealth to exist.

But sometimes the saloon power has to speak out its warnings and exhortations lest perchance its followers rest at ease in Zion (Zion is used here in its original signification, "a hill"—the dung hill of iniquity called the saloon, the liquor interests, the trade, etc., as the case may be). To rest at ease in Zion would be to die, for to let the balance of power be broken would mean the destruction of the liquor oligarchy.

A late enunciation of a liquor organ of the great northwest says all of this in plain, unvarnished English in its liquor policy platform:

"The old parties are our friends, and for the last thirty years they have held the reins of government, and during all this time our business has prospered and increased beyond our most sanguine expectations. As long as they control we are safe. Depose one or both of them and we may as well hang our harps on the willow tree, for our vocation will be gone.

"Our duty is plain: Keep both parties in the field, divide the spoils of office between them; prevent the hopeless defeat ither. We have the power to do this. Let us use it with fear and trembling, for one blunder, one false step, may precipitate our ruin.

"Ah! but you ask, how shall we prevent the fanatics leaving the old parties? We answer, many will do it. A good high license to help pay their taxes will pacify their conscience—nothing else can."

A Statement Concerning Rest Cottage.

IN connection with the present discussion on the Temple question, many are asking whether Miss Willard's home, Rest Cottage, is to be counted towards the $300,000 necessary to purchase the Temple Trust Bonds.

We are sure that our constituency will rejoice in the knowledge that both the General Officers and Mrs. Carse desire that this home so hallowed by sacred memories, should be occupied by the legatees under Miss Willard's will, and should finally revert to the National W. C. T. U. for the purpose named in the will.

No one ever more really deserved that her home should be preserved as a strength and inspiration for coming generations than Miss Willard, and Rest Cottage will always remain a Mecca for white-ribbon hearts the world over.

It will be remembered that at the Buffalo Convention Miss Willard also pledged her birthday fund of $3,000, and a statement concerning this fund was sent by her to Miss Dow, in which it was arranged that the amount was to go toward retiring the Temple Trust Bonds. By a vote of the Buffalo Convention it was decided that no funds held by Miss Dow could be applied to the Temple Trust Bonds without the vote of the General Officers of the National W. C. T. U., and it is their judgment that this sum should not be so applied, a judgment in which Mrs. Carse heartily concurs.

It is but just to Miss Gordon to state that loyal in this as in every other wish expressed by Miss Willard, she has been ready since February last, as she was at the Buffalo meeting, to coincide with Miss Willard's wishes regarding this fund.

THE NATIONAL OFFICERS.

The B. I. A.

THE Boys' Industrial Association, chartered by the state of Pennsylvania, is a unique society. It certainly is a right step toward solving the problem of "How to Prevent the Development of the Tough." William Futhey Gibbons tells most interesting things about it under the above caption in the September Chautauquan. Forty newsboys, without a cigaret among them, who reply to the question, "What's the matter of you boys, anyhow?" "We're all right! We belong to the B. I. A.!" would go far to convince a Hottentot that there is something radically good in the organization. Prevention is the remedy the world seeks, and a prevention for toughs will be a prevention for debauchery and crime. The club was founded March 17, 1891, by Mrs. Ellen M. Palmer, wife of Hon. Henry W. Palmer, late attorney-general of Pennsylvania, in the rooms of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wilkes Barre. It now numbers about seven hundred members, recruited mainly from the slate pickers in the coal breakers; though newsboys, bootblacks, messenger boys and cash boys are also welcomed as members. Any boy who works for a living may join. Many of our readers will remember the pledge cards of this organization which Mrs. Palmer strung around her neck as she told a National W. C. T. U. Convention of this organization. The boys greatly appreciate the efforts of their founder and leader, and once at the end of a talk about the Queen's jewels, at the time of Queen Victoria's jubilee, they dubbed Mrs. Palmer "the queen," and ever since it has remained her name. The object of the B. I. A. is "to educate the boys in habits of industry, economy and morality and to provide for their training in trades and vocations."

The following compact is signed by all who are willing to do so, though they may become members without signing: "Realizing that the object of this society is for my benefit physically, mentally and morally, I, on my part, promise to refrain from all that will hinder and to do all that will help toward the attainment of that perfect manhood, the true type of which was given to the world in the character of Jesus Christ."

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, one of the literary women of New England, is an outspoken believer in women's rights. She is a thoroughly domestic woman, and this goes far to explain why she is thoroughly just in her views. One can be devoted to pies and cakes (which too often really means "pizen cakes") and not be a domestic woman in the best sense. The full meaning of the word includes that which belongs to the house or home, that which pertains to the place of residence and to the family, and even the nation considered as a family or a home. When a woman studies the family in its parts and in its relation as a whole to the nation, it involves the study of the rights of children and of women, and an intelligent, logical mind cannot escape a correct conclusion. The wrongs of women make converts to the rights of women. Mrs. Spofford says that conversion came to her when, many years ago, she was obliged to endure the sight of the poverty of a woman who, at her marriage, had brought to her husband what was a little fortune, and who, on his death, saw his property, which had been hers, go to his relatives. They were able to set up a carriage and to live in a good style, while she, poor thing, took in plain sewing.

Personal.

MISS BELLE KEARNEY was elected one of the vice-presidents of the C. L. S. C. class of 1902 at Chautauqua.

MRS. ADDIE NORTHAM-FIELDS and Mrs. Rush H. Palmer, of Minden, Neb., were welcome callers at Headquarters, on their way home from the Chautauqua Assembly. Mrs. Fields went on to Minnesota to attend the state convention.

MISS RUBY GILBERT, the efficient cashier of the W. T. P. A. from the first, has been taking her two weeks' vacation at Bay View, Mich. Miss Addie Austin, assistant cashier, well known to white-ribboners by having charge of the W. T. P. A. supplies at National and state conventions, has been in ill health for some time, was with Miss Gilbert, and as it was hoped both have returned refreshed and invigorated.

MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, National recording secretary, visited Headquarters for a few hours last week on her way East. She has been in the field every day since the first of May, having attended scores of teachers' institutes and addressed two thousand teachers. She has spoken at six Chautauquas in Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri, and has conducted two schools of methods. There are now ahead of her ten county conventions in Pennsylvania and prospective ones in other states, besides the state conventions of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania. If others have approximated this summer's work, we would like to hear from them.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

My Mother.

SOME one I love comes back to me
With every gentle face I see;
Beneath each wave of soft gray hair
I seem to see my mother there.
With every kindly glance and word,
It seems as if I must have heard
Her speak, and felt her tender gaze
With all the love of olden days.
And I am moved to take her hand
And tell her, now I understand
How tired she grew beneath the strain
Of feeling every loved one's pain.
No further burdens could she bear;
The promise of that land more fair
Alone could tempt her from her child,
And now if I could keep her here,
No sacrifice could be too dear,
No tempered winds for her too mild.

Then I would smooth and kiss her face,
And by her side take my old place,
And sob my years and cares away.
The tears I have so long repressed
Would lose their ache upon her breast;
I think if I could feel her touch
Once more, it would not matter much
How sunny or how dark the day.
I love each mother that I see
That brings my own so near to me;
For though I nevermore may frame
Upon my lips that hallowed name.
To any who will draw me near
And answer me with warm caress—
As long as there are mothers here,
No child can be quite motherless.

—The Woman's Column.

The Y Almanac for 1899.

THE last year of this century is celebrated by the Young Woman's Branch of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union in bringing out the finest calendar ever published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago, Ill. It contains three hundred and sixty-five sentiments from the writings of Frances E. Willard, who originated the World's Union, and who so graciously drew the "band of ribbon white" around all hearts. Her poems are included, and by these messages she will yet be speaking to her comrades on earth.

Lady Henry Somerset has written a tribute, and the National officers of the W. C. T. U. of the United States, and leading workers in other countries have selected texts for the months.

The almanac is adorned with pictures of people and places interesting to every one, the latest photograph of Miss Willard, a new one of Lady Henry Somerset in her Duxhurst costume, and one of Miss Willard and Miss Gordon, never before published in this country. There are excellent photographs of the National Officers, a beautiful outdoor picture of Miss Clara Parrish taken in Japan, and an interior view of the Japanese W. C. T. U. convention held in Yokohama.

Cummings Hall, of the Huguenot University, South Africa, which contains the Y headquarters, is also represented; and the World's Y delegates, Miss Lile and Miss Swankie-Cameron, Miss Alonso and Miss Johannsdottir, have kindly sent photographs and texts. There are pictures of St. Paul, Minn., the meeting place of the National Convention, November, 1898.

The village home of the World's Y secretary, where Miss Willard spent her last birthday, and the interior views of Willard Y Settlement, Boston, Mass., are also added to the illustrations. THE UNION SIGNAL page, the World's Petition and the moon's phases, complete the list of special attractions.

The Y Almanac for 1899 is now in the market. It is edited by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, World's Y secretary, and is to be sold for the benefit of the Clara Parrish missionary fund and the World's Y work.

Price, 25 cts. To be had of Mrs. Frances B. Yarnall, 1011 Park avenue, New York, N. Y.

Young Woman's Hour at the Japan National Convention.

BY CLARA PARRISH.

LET me draw a pen picture for you. Nearly two hundred Y's, representing seven different local unions, some of them coming a distance of more than four hundred miles, are occupying the front of Union church, Yokohama, and the choir loft is filled with girls on whose breasts our white badge is pinned. The program says from two to three is "Young Woman's Hour," and all are radiant in eager anticipation.

At last the moment arrives. The president, Mrs. Yajima, leaves the platform and calls the general secretary to the chair. As gracefully, and with as much self-possession as though she has always been accustomed to preside at great meetings, Miss Tami Mitani takes her place, bows very low, as is the Japanese custom, makes a few introductory remarks and calls for the first number upon the program, "Some Glad Day." This is followed by letters, papers and poems galore, by other songs from the White Ribbon Hymnal, and the report of the secretary, from which we learn that twelve schools are organized with a membership of more than six hundred girls. Monthly meetings have been held in nearly every place, flowers distributed, and classes canvassed for new recruits. "What hath God wrought." And what is it going to mean in the future to have six hundred young women go out to all parts of this empire and become the nucleus for temperance work? When that day comes, surely the W. C. T. U. will have a solid rock upon which to build. The hour's program closed with "White Ribbon Vibrations." The whole exercise was as rhythmical, as classical as the most beautiful dream, and older people sat rejoicing in "the day that is to be."—From the Y Almanac.

Notes.

THE Y's of Winnipeg, Canada, held an "Irish Fair" in July. The souvenirs were printed in green, and they had on sale some choice views of Irish scenery and photographs by W. Lawrence, photographer, Dublin, Ireland, and water color sketches by ladies in Dublin. These were donated to the department of literature work among settlers, which has been carried on by the society for some years, and has now grown to be an immense work.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the recent marriage of Miss Mary E. Campbell and Dr. William H. Wells, at the home of the bride's brother, in New Brunswick, N. J. Miss Campbell has been so well known among the National Y's, as the custodian of the Clara Parrish missionary fund, that many good wishes will be extended to her in her new home. She will still retain the custody of the fund, and in future all moneys and letters should be sent to Mrs. Mary Campbell-Wells, Erie, Ill.

AT the recent annual convention of the Provincial W. C. T. U., of Vancouver, B. C., the following recommendation was adopted:

WHEREAS, The Y's in different parts of this Province are now doing serious woman's work, often indentical with that of the older unions; and recognizing that they come long distances to the conventions and are desirous not only of conferring with one another but of hearing the mind of the convention on the spirit and nature of their work; and feeling that Y evenings, or hurried Y conferences held during convention, would not fill this want, Recommended, that in our Provincial conventions, a portion of a morning or afternoon session be devoted to the reading and discussion of papers on Y work.

Woman's Power.

YOUNG women possess great power over young men. This truth will hardly be denied by the young men, and the young women need hardly be told that they possess this power. Its possession imposes the responsibility of using it aright, and it is to the consideration of this obligation that we call the attention of young women.

Much might be said about the duty of using your power for the intellectual and social elevation of the young men. That is an important privilege you possess. But do you ever consider the possibility of using your influence in the direction of winning young men to Christ? Dr. David Gregg gives an instance of the tribute one woman paid to the power of her sex over man. It was a letter from a mother whose son was in Boston. She wrote: "My son is twenty-four years of age. I weary the throne of grace for him. I could fall down and kiss the feet of the man or woman who would lead him to Christ." And then she says, "He knows some young ladies at the Conservatory of Music; he might be reached through them." That mother recognized the power and opportunity of Christian womanhood. The Christian young woman whose consecration to Christ is complete can exert a mighty influence for Christ. Young women, that is what Christian mothers are expecting of you, and that is what the Christian church is expecting of you.

A Vain and Delusive Hope.

MR. D. L. MOODY points out one source of domestic infelicity and of divorces. The fact indicated by Mr. Moody is by no means one of recent discovery; nevertheless, the warning uttered by him needs to be given. He says:

"The most subtle and deceitful hope which ever existed, and one which wrecks the happiness of many a young girl's life, is the common delusion that a woman can best reform a man by marrying him. It is a mystery to me how people can be so blinded to the hundreds of cases in every community where tottering homes have fallen and innocent lives have been wrecked, because some young girl has persisted in marrying a scoundrel in the hope of saving him. I have never known such a union—and I have seen hundreds of them—result in anything but sadness and disaster. Let no young girl think that she may be able to accomplish what a loving mother or sympathetic sisters have been unable to do. Before there is any contract of marriage there should be convincing proof that there has been real and thorough regeneration."

World's W. C. T. U.

Suggestive Program.

For the use of Local Unions in Observing World's W. C. T. U. Thankoffering Day, September 22.

IF possible, have a public meeting in church or hall, enlisting the different pastors of the town, the leaders of Young People's Societies and of other representative temperance and philanthropic bodies. Let it be known that an opportunity for remembering the work of the W. C. T. U. in a freewill thankoffering will be given. If possible, distribute envelopes to the members of the W. C. T. U., the Y and the L. T. L. beforehand, that as much as possible may be raised and pledged in advance. Secure a representative choir, including singers from the different church choirs, and have the music rehearsed. Let the papers and addresses be short, spirited and by the best talent:

1. Hymn, "Blest be the Tie that Binds."
2. Scripture reading.
3. Prayer.
4. Song, "Christ for the World We Sing."
5. Introductory address, by presiding officer. Topic, "The World's W. C. T. U." Synopsis—When organized; by whom; purpose; number of countries auxiliary; general outline of work accomplished; possibilities for the future.
6. Brief sketches of a few of the leaders of the World's W. C. T. U., by a white-ribboner.
7. Song, "White-Ribbon Vibrations."
8. Paper, Round-the-World White-Ribbon Missionaries. 1. Who they are; 2. The countries visited. 3. Work accomplished and personal experiences.
9. Thankoffering.
10. Song, "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy."
11. Sentence gems from the sayings of Frances E. Willard, by ten white-ribboners spontaneously from different parts of the church.
12. Polyglot Petition:—1, Its history; 2, Description; 3, Its reception. (By President Cleveland for America, by Queen Victoria for England, by Sir Wilfrid Laurier for Canada;) journeyings yet to come.

13. Song, "Some Glad Day."

Benediction.

The subject matter for the talks and papers can be found in the book, "Do Everything," by Miss Willard; in recent numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL; in Responsive Readings of November, 1896, our "World's Work," by Jane A. Stewart, and of August, 1897, "A Talk About the World's W. C. T. U. Convention," by Agnes E. Slack; in National Leaflet, "World's W. C. T. U.," by Lady Henry Somerset. The songs are taken from the White Ribbon Hymnal. These helps can all be obtained of the W. T. P. A., The Temple, Chicago.

Queensland.

MRS. HARRISON LEE has been holding meetings at Townsville, Charters Towers and Mackay, which have all been most successful; large audiences at every place, and many pledges taken. At Charters Towers eighty pledges were taken on the first Sunday, and new members gained. At Ravenswood Rev. Thurlow preached on "Frances Willard, Great and Good." At the "Wedding Bells" lecture, given at Townsville, the bishop of Northern Queensland, who presided, spoke in high appreciation of Mrs. Lee's work, both at the meeting and since then, and the drawing room held at Mrs. Hodges' was a full meeting and thoroughly successful. Although Mrs. Lee has been ill all through her travels she has only missed one meeting. She gives praise to the untold good that Mrs. Payne has done everywhere, strengthening the hands of workers and encouraging them to go on.

When at Mount Morgan, Mrs. Payne, organizer, spoke at the meeting of the local union to women only, and at two public meetings in the Methodist churches, all being well attended. The franchise meeting was a great success, as it was in every place. A short, open-air meeting was held before. His Worship, the mayor, presided, and at the close a unanimous resolution was passed, "That in the opinion of this meeting the time has arrived in which the franchise should be extended to women." This was forwarded to the Premier, and to the Member of Parliament for the district. Many pledges were taken at these meetings, and only eternity can reveal the lasting good accomplished by Mrs. Payne's visit.

The Wide Bay district conference was held in Maryborough; there were twenty-two delegates from Gympie, Bundaberg and Maryborough. Mrs. Warry presided, and Mrs. Payne gave valuable advice throughout the conference. At the welcome social a prominent citizen was chairman; addresses of welcome were given by representatives of temperance societies. The district has an active membership of 161, an increase of forty for the year. The departments are flower mission, press, literature, hygiene, L. T. L., Sabbath observance, suffrage, Sunday-schools, purity, drawing-rooms, unfermented wine, Y unions, work among bus and cabmen, and each union held a booth at show time. Forty-two pledges have been taken.

Papers were read on "Miss Willard," "Secret of Happiness," "Standing," "Danger of Moderate Drinking" and "A Girl of the Period." A message of loyalty and sympathy was sent to Lady Henry Somerset and letters of sympathy to Mrs. Brentnall, Colonial president, and Mrs. F. B. Harris, whose husband's health has failed. Mrs. Payne presided over the question-box, and threw light on many subjects. At the Young People's entertainment, an honorary member was chairman; at the Willard memorial service Mrs. Payne gave an interesting sketch of the noble life of our late leader. A grand franchise meeting was held, and a purity meeting for women, Mrs. Payne presiding at both. Bouquets were presented to the re-elected president and to Mrs. Payne.

The South Brisbane District conference was pronounced as quite a success and a feast of good things. Twenty-seven delegates answered to the roll-call. Reports show much good work done in some departments, pledges taken and members gained. Greetings were received with enthusiasm from Mrs. Brentnall, Colonial president. Loving reference was made to Miss Willard, and a short sketch of her life read by Mrs. Britten, who also gave encouraging words to the smaller unions; her remarks upon work done and undone were like gleams of sunlight helpful and refreshing. In the evening she spoke on our mission being for better, brighter homes. A short conference allowed for each department brought forth hearty discussions and practical suggestions. Superintendents were appointed for fifteen departments. The Thompson Estate union was the hostess; the evening meeting held in Meir Hall was a very bright one. Mrs. Kingsford, chairman, gave an address on our motto, "For God, Home and Humanity;" other speeches, music and recitations were thoroughly enjoyed, and several pledges were taken.

The Corinda Y's joined the South Brisbane district in a public meeting at Corinda, when Mrs. Dilwar, an honored member, was in the chair, and Mrs. Britten gave the address of the evening. The annual report gave token of good work done. The Y members gave their honoraries a very pleasant river picnic.

At a recent meeting of the Brisbane Y's the superintendent, Mrs. Carvosso, spoke of her visit to the Maitland and Singleton Y unions, New South Wales bringing loving greetings from Mrs. Fairfax, one of our first Brisbane Y's, who is honorary superintendent of Maitland Y's. Both the unions were most kind in their attentions. They are enthusiastic workers, and Mrs. Carvosso thoroughly enjoyed the meetings under their auspices.

Some interesting meetings have recently been held in connection with the Central union, Brisbane. Mrs. Trundle, Colonial superintendent of franchise, gave a digest of our local option laws, when a most enthusiastic discussion followed. Another afternoon Mrs. Allanby, local superintendent of prison work, gave a most interesting account of her department, showing that although the work is sometimes depressing, it has a brighter side and is really necessary.

Mrs. Carvosso gave a bright account of her recent trip to New South Wales, and her pleasure in meeting white-ribboners at her various stopping places, and expressed gratitude for the loving way in which she had been entertained. At Sydney she visited Miss Pemell in her home, who invited New South Wales white-ribboners to meet our energetic little secretary, and when she attended the Newtown W. C. T. U. meeting, Miss Pemell presented her with an exquisite floral offering.

Our new headquarters are now open, and the committee have transformed the hall and cottage into a pretty "home" for white-ribboners to visit. There is a refreshment room, a hall, committee rooms and accommodation for boarders, also an office for our Colonial secretary, Mrs. Carvosso, whose labors of love for the W. C. T. U. are increasing, and the amount of work she accomplishes is wonderful. The Roma union held a very successful annual social which brought them a nice little sum. The attendance was large, program good, and six pledges were taken. They have also raised £24, 6s. for the Temple fund. The North Pine union has collected £1 for the same purpose.

F. EMILY HAM, Col. Cor.

Willard Hall, Wickham St., Valley, Queensland.

World's Wave Crests.

"WILLARD Union for Business Women" has just been organized in Montreal under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., to consolidate the interests of business women. They will have regular meetings, with discussions, to further physical culture, dress reform, woman suffrage and other good things.

MISS AGNES SLACK writes under date of August 10: "I am busy with a series of meetings in Norway. We are having large audiences, and are increasing our membership. This morning Mrs. Ole Bull Vaughan and Mrs. and Miss Shapleigh called to see me; it was so delightful seeing these American friends, and on Friday I drive out twenty miles from here and spend the day and night at the lovely island home of Mrs. Ole Bull. The mountains and endless succession of fjords and lakes here are just inexpressibly grand. We have thirty-three W. C. T. unions in Norway and the sturdiness and thoroughness of our white-ribboners here is altogether refreshing. I am glad I came."

News from the Field.

Tennessee.

AS usual, the heated term in our state has played sad havoc with the work of our unions in many places. So many of them, if not disbanded, at least do but little work of any importance. However, a few, in spite of summer suns and sultry weather and mosquitoes, keep steadily on at work, and do much good.

A letter from Mrs. L. W. Plummer, corresponding secretary of the Frances Willard W. C. T. U., of Memphis, reports that that union recently held its first public meeting. Mrs. Brinkerhoff, the president, greeted the audience with a cordial address of welcome. The program was interesting and varied, consisting of music, vocal and instrumental, of a high order, and recitations carefully selected, to direct attention to our lines of work. The rendition of "College Oil Cans," by Mr. Martin, was so lifelike and pathetic that it brought tears to many eyes, and left an impression in favor of temperance that cannot be forgotten. Light refreshments were served, and a pleasant social meeting followed. Several new members were added.

Through Mrs. Abernethy, our state treasurer and president of Memphis union No. 1, is reported a Christian citizenship rally in a grove about four miles out of the city on the electric car line, on July 4. The meeting was gotten up by the various unions of Memphis, and was a glorious success. Nearly a thousand people took part. Mrs. Abernethy presided. The speaking was in a little M. E. church near, and was "magnificent."

Lincoln, through Miss Maggie Wilsh, reports one new member, some work in the mercy department, and made a successful effort to induce the public school teachers to teach the effects of alcoholic liquors and narcotics in their schools.

Erin, through Miss Maggie Buquo, reports fifteen active and eight honorary members. Have five departments of work, and paid $6.50 into state treasury. Have tried to secure a speaker but have failed.

Pulaski, through Mrs. Ada Ezell, reports fifty active and thirty-five honorary members. They have done little work yet because of the hot weather and absence of so many members. Hope to be able to send a better report soon.

Chattanooga, through Mrs. S. P. Lowe, reports good work in several departments. They have entertained eight hundred soldiers at the "Soldiers' Rest." They visit the hospital every week, carrying all kinds of supplies, flowers, etc. Their "Rest" work among the soldiers has done untold good, and it has been a prosperous year for the W. C. T. U. and their work in many ways.

Jonesboro, through Mrs. Theo. F. Brown, reports twelve active members, and tells of good work in some departments. They meet regularly and do what they can, in a quiet way, to promote the work they love.

Central union at Nashville, in view of the fact that it is the only union in the state now that was organized by Frances Willard, has changed its name to the Frances Willard union. Mrs. L. P. Williams reports this, and some good work among the soldiers, though for the first time in its history this union has adjourned for the heated term. They hope to meet again early in September.

Our state convention meets at Jonesboro, October 11–14. We hope that all our unions will be represented there by one or more delegates. Reduced rates on the certificate plan have been secured over all the railroads. When buying tickets, one should secure from the ticket agent a certificate, stating that full fare was paid from the starting point, etc. Programs will be sent out early in September. Much work of importance will come before this convention, and it is earnestly hoped that a good number of delegates will be in attendance.

SILENA MOORE HOLMAN,
State Reporter, Fayetteville.

A SERIES of medal contests has been held in Mangum, Oklahoma, under the direction of Mr. Jones, county superintendent of public instruction. During the course seventy-seven contestants entered in different classes. Twenty-one received medals. Two gold medals were also won in spelling contests.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

Southern California.

THE Chautauqua circle had fed the minds, and the camp meetings of the Christian and Methodist churches the souls of the people when the seventh annual session of the W. C. T. U. school of methods opened at Long Beach, August 16-18, under the direction of Mrs. Lucy M. Hutton, state superintendent of that department. Some of the crowds had departed, yet long trains had brought those who were fleeing from the unusual heat of the inland to breathe the ocean air and "bide a wee."

State President Mrs. Mary A. Kenney opened the session, and Mrs. Anna B. Southwick, state evangelistic superintendent, led the praise service, with Mr. and Mrs. Simmons giving musical inspiration.

A special effort was made by many to be in attendance at the early Bible study hours, conducted daily by Mrs. Anna S. Averill, of Los Angeles, a teacher of vast experience. They were indeed times of feasting which created a lasting appetite for more. She recommended topical Bible study and memorizing of Scripture as having proved most beneficial to her.

Parliamentary drills, conducted daily by Mrs. Lucy D. More, state superintendent, were a morning feature. The paper on "Physical Culture," by Mrs. M. E. Bassett (who last year addressed the New Jersey school of methods), was truly a plea for the gospel of health, teaching us that health means holiness. Mrs. J. Kendall Holt continued the thought by illustrating the mode of expression in action, while the practical came in the indorsement of the short walking skirt.

Prof. J. H. Shults, of Los Angeles State Normal school, gave two very instructive illustrated lectures on the effects of alcohol and narcotics, which prompted much discussion.

"Health and Heredity" was carefully treated by Dr. and Mrs. Birney Hand, and an animated discussion followed.

Dr. F. E. Yoakum, of Los Angeles, gave a paper on "Alcoholics in Medicine," in which he supposed he was presenting ideas in advance of W. C. T. U. thought, regarding the injurious effects of tea, coffee, cocoa and chocolate, but hearty applause assured him that he was addressing those who "lead that way."

"The Housewife and the Canteen" were earnestly compared by Mrs. Hester T. Griffith, and the cause of the children pleaded by Mrs. E. T. Scott and Mrs. Celia H. Noll, state secretary L. T. L.

A model parlor meeting and reception, at which a welcome address was given by state president, Mrs. Kenney, filled the first evening's hours; an able address by Prof. C. C. Van Liew, of Los Angeles State Normal, on "The Coöperation of Home and School," occupied the second evening, and on the last a W. C. T. U. gold medal contest was held, conducted by Miss Nina C. Cuthbert. The contestants were Misses Maud Jordan, Maud Shaw, Ruth Messmore, Sadie Winslow and Eloise Kinman.

The judges awarded the prize to Miss Messmore, who recited, "One More," and the medal was presented by Mrs. Julia Kendall Holt, state superintendent of medal contests.

During the entire school the music was conducted by Mrs. Allie Simmons, of Riverside, state superintendent of music, who, heartily assisted by her husband, charmed and instructed the audience with their solos and duets and inspired them to enthusiastic chorus singing. At the close of the contest they gave in a realistic manner, "Samantha and Josiah" in costume, and were recalled.

At the state executive, which occurred on the 19th, Mrs. Mary G. Tongier and Mrs. E. T. Scott were engaged as state organizers for the W's and Y's, respectively; Mrs. E. M. McLeod and Mrs. Ada R. Hand were elected as delegates to the National Convention, and plans laid for aggressive work.

GABRELLA T. STICKNEY,
State Reporter, Los Angeles.

West Virginia.

THE school of methods at Moundsville was ably conducted this year and was most helpful to all who attended. The good women of that place are already planning for the next year's work. It is hoped that a school of methods may be conducted at Asbury Heights, Clay county, in connection with the Chautauqua and assembly next year.

Quite a number of unions held picnics or rallies on the Fourth of July, which were well attended and thoroughly enjoyed. Some very fine programs were rendered, which showed much time and forethought spent by the friends of temperance. Fairmont union obtained permission to keep barrels of ice water on the streets during the hot months. They also, and the prohibition club, held a most successful patriotic rally and social in Willard Hall of that place on July 4.

Sistersville union is a very bright and thriving one. They report a membership of forty-six, and a Loyal Temperance Legion of one hundred and eighty pledged members, who presented a fountain to their city on the Fourth of July. The presentation address was made by Mrs. Reynolds, one of the most gifted and pleasant ladies of that city, and was eloquent and stirring. A large sum of money has been raised by this union for their work.

County conventions are the order of the day now, and the reports from the ones that have just closed are very helpful and inspiring. Our state president, Mrs. N. R. C. Morrow, is attending as many as she can and she alone is an inspiration in any meeting.

The state convention will be held in Charleston, September 28, 29 and 30. Hon. John G. Woolley will speak on the night of the 29th.

V. E. MOHLER,
State Reporter, St. Albans.

PIMPLES

"My wife had pimples on her face, but she has been taking CASCARETS and they have all disappeared. I had been troubled with constipation for some time, but after taking the first Cascaret I have had no trouble with this ailment. We cannot speak too highly of Cascarets." FRED WARTMAN, 5708 Germantown Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.
... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...
Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 314

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

AT a successful medal contest in Oklahoma City, the contestants not winning the medal were each presented with a choice potted plant.

IN acknowledgment of the 103 Testaments sent to the soldiers by the W. C. T. U. of Albuquerque, New Mexico, each Testament containing a pledge card, forty-seven of the cards have been returned signed by the same number of soldiers.

THE president of Alhambra, Ill., W. C. T. U. presented the W. C. T. U. canteen petition to the Alton Baptist Association, and received a unanimous vote in its favor, and 180 signatures to the petition. A strong resolution was passed condemning the sale or use of liquor in Soldiers' Homes, the army and navy.

THE W. C. T. U. school of methods of the Tully, N. Y., Chautauqua, closed its work after a week's session of very interesting and helpful work, with three parliamentary drills under the direction of Mrs. Lilian Cole Bethel. The attendance was good. Much credit for the success of this year is due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Helen L. Bullock

A RECOMMENDATION was adopted unanimously by the state convention of Texas that each union in the state should hold one public or parlor meeting, during the year, with opportunity given for a free-will offering to be sent to the treasurer of the World's W. C. T. U. toward the fund for sending out more missionaries, the program of this meeting to be distinctively a World's program. December, our twenty-fifth anniversary month, is the month set apart for this special work in Texas.

"BABY DAY" is a part of the program of the union at North Harvey, Ill. All the mothers of babies are invited to bring them, refreshments are served and an appropriate program is given. August 24, Mrs. Miller addressed such a meeting on the subject of the mother's responsibility; ice cream and cake were served in the yard of the entertainer, Mrs. Skinner, ex-president of the union. A number of mothers took the covenant pledge, to read as many books as possible on child training, to endeavor to instill into her child the principles of total abstinence, and to this end that she would inform herself on the effects of narcotics and stimulants on the system. This union has sometimes had over thirty mothers take this covenant at one meeting. They need not, necessarily, become members of the union. The mother is given a card with the pledge on it, which she signs for herself and for her child. Upon succeeding baby days, all who have signed cards are specially invited.

W. C. T. U. News.

COL. C. J. HOLT is at work in Pennsylvania. He has organized two unions, and is attending county conventions. The Johnstown (Pa.) Democrat says of him: "He is a speaker of more than ordinary eloquence and power, and knows how to interest an audience."

MANY new members were added to the union at Albuquerque, New Mexico, as a result of Miss Jessie Ackermann's visit and lecture there. Parliamentary drills are an interesting part of their work. Soldiers and sailors and petition work has been prosecuted with vigor.

How to Get the Good of Wool Soap.

When you find that Wool Soap won't shrink woolens, don't use it alone on wool. Why be more careful of wool than you are of your face?

Wool Soap is made on purpose to cleanse woolens without shrinking or injuring. The same ingredients that make it best for this purpose make it best also for the human skin. No roughness or redness follows its use. That shows that it's pure.

MY MAMA USED WOOL SOAP. I WISH MINE HAD.

Wool Soap is always best wherever purity is necessary. Wool Soap is so pure that it is white—so pure that it swims. But some other soaps are that pure.

Wool Soap is the only soap so pure that it won't shrink wool. That's the supreme test, and only Wool Soap stands it.

WOOL SOAP
IT SWIMS.

All Grocers and Druggists sell it.

BABIES THRIVE ON IT. GAIL BORDEN EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK.

OUR ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ENTITLED "BABIES" SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOUSEHOLD. SENT ON APPLICATION.

NEW YORK CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

Treasurer's Corner.

Funds are still coming in for the soldiers: Marion, Ia., sends $39; Plainville, Conn., $15; Mrs. Stevens, Iowa, $20; Volga, N.D., $12.50; Chesaning, Mich., $1.75; Mrs. Bancroft, Montana, $2; Mrs. Boyd, Norris City, $22.40. This last was given for the Illinois boys, and the treasurer sent it to Mrs. Reiley, of Evanston, superintendent of soldiers' and sailors' work for the fourth district, to use at Fort Sheridan for the sick and convalescent that have recently been brought from the front, so it will every dollar be used to give delicacies and comforts to these brave but afflicted boys.

Dues have been received from North Dakota, Wisconsin, Ohio, New York, Illinois, Oregon, Minnesota, Maine, Connecticut and Tennessee.

A check for nearly $300 for wrappers has greatly helped out during these dry times. Do not forget that balances must soon be struck and that Convention draws nigh. May we all be vigilant and be able to make a good showing of which we shall all be proud.

The $2 pledges are being redeemed, and we trust ere the Convention all the old pledges will be cancelled.

Mrs. Hoffman dropped in upon us this week on her way to Pennsylvania and to New England, where she is to attend six or eight state conventions. She was cheery and hopeful and looked about ten years younger than when we saw her at the executive meeting in July. It evidently does her good to work, for she has been doing constant and, from reports, excellent work at many Chautauquas and summer assemblies.

We are looking forward to the return of Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Stevenson to Headquarters, with much pleasure. The treasurer will appreciate their coming especially, as she has stood alone for the last few weeks, and will welcome a division of responsibility. These will be busy days from now on to November 11.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Notice.

Superintendents of the department of purity in literature and art are requested to send to Mrs. Emilie D. Martin, National superintendent, Room 280, No. 1 Broadway, New York, for her new plan of work and the report questions which she wishes answered at an early date, to be incorporated in her yearly report to the National.

Where Our Speakers Are.

Mrs. C. C. Hoffman, National recording secretary, will be in Pennsylvania and near that state till September 19. For engagements to speak address her in care of Mrs. Rebecca Chambers, president Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., West Grove, Pa. From September 19 to October 6, address her in care of Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Me.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel:

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers.

We hasten to strike out the name of the Second Illinois regiment from the "Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen." The following letter, addressed to Mrs. Goodhue, president of the union at Jacksonville, Fla., in answer to one from her, gives a good and sufficient reason:

HEADQUARTERS 2ND INFANTRY,
ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.
CAMP CUBA LIBRE, July 26, 1898.

Mrs. Emily L. Goodhue, President W. C. T. U., Jacksonville, Fla.:

DEAR MADAM:—Answering your circular letter regarding canteens, I must respectfully refer you to the Adjutant General, U. S. A., at Washington, as being the proper office where your protest and arguments against canteens would receive attention.

Canteens are established under army regulations, and are administered with as much exactness as the post-offices of the country. In my humble judgment they promote temperance, because they encourage temperateness in the drinking habit, which cannot be estopped by legislation, though it may, and should be, controlled. Nothing but malt and so-called soft drinks are allowed to be sold in army canteens, and must be drunk on the premises, always under military supervision. This is a vast improvement on the old custom of sutlerships which always followed an army, and sold all kinds of intoxicating liquors in unlimited quantities. As long as you and I live there will always be drinking places accessible to the soldier; the canteen is least objectionable of any. Respectfully yours,

GEORGE M. MOULTON,
Col. Second Illinois Inft., U. S. A.

Official.

Important Notice About Resolutions.

First, that the by-law on resolutions (p. 514, National Report), states that the principles of our organization and its future policy shall be expressed in the resolutions.

Second, that resolutions relating to departments shall be offered by each superintendent, evangelist or organizer immediately after presenting her report (not through committee on resolutions).

Third, inasmuch as the resolutions should be considered by all members of the committee before we assemble at St. Paul, which will require much time, will those who wish resolutions presented there assist the committee by sending them as soon as possible to the chairman or secretary.

EMMA BOURNE, Chairman,
Newark, N. J.
SOPHIE F. GRUBB, Sec.,
Chanute, Kan.

Convention Calendar.

COLORADO, Denver, Sept. 21–23.

SOUTH DAKOTA, Mitchell, Sept. 21–23.

NORTH DAKOTA, Park River, Sept. 23-27.

WEST VIRGINIA, Charleston, Sept. 28–30.

KENTUCKY, Louisville, Sept. 30-Oct. 4.

NEW YORK, Johnstown, Fulton county, Oct. 4–7.

IOWA, Waterloo, Oct. 11-14.

Petition Against the Canteen Now.

WHITE-RIBBONERS, CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS, EPWORTH LEAGUERS, GOOD TEMPLARS, CHURCHES, PASTORS AND PEOPLE — EVERYBODY, CUT OUT THE APPENDED PETITION, SIGN IT, SECURE OTHER NAMES, AND SEND IT TO PRESIDENT MCKINLEY AT ONCE. OR, IF YOU PREFER, USE THE ONE WE PUBLISHED LAST WEEK, OR WRITE ONE YOURSELF, BUT SEND A PETITION TO DO AWAY WITH THE ARMY CANTEEN, AND DO IT NOW:

To the President of the United States:

We do hereby respectfully petition that you will, to the extent of your authority as Commander-in-Chief of the army, forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors at all post and camp exchanges, or elsewhere within the lines of the armies of the United States.

Temple Receipts.

Louisiana—Jeannette: W. C. T. U., $18.50; Lake Charles: L. T. L., 80 cts.; Columbia: Lily F. Blanks, $2; Grand Lake: Mrs. M. E. Kingsbury, $2; Greenwood: Mrs. Sallie Horton, $1; Oak Ridge: Mary E. Carr, $2; Centerville: Mrs. Isabella Scovel Barnett, $10. From cards, $3.

Maine—S. W. Harbor: Frances Willard union, $1; Casco: W. C. T. U., $5; Milbridge, $2; Waldsboro. $16.35, $3.36: Eastan: Mary J. Nichols, 50 cts.; Winthrop Centre; Mrs. Sarah B. Richmond, 50 cts.; Milo: Mrs. E. W. Tibleltz, $1.

Michigan—Blissfield: Y. W. C. T. U., $16.58; Byron Centre: W. C. T. U., $3; Calumet: $16.50; Detour. 50 cts.; Eaton Rapids: $45; Lawrence: $5; Lowell: 50 cts; Marquette: W. C. T. U., $10, $5; L. T. L. Anna Gordon Co. I, $5, $2; Y. W. C. T. U., $10.50; Menominee: $25; Norwood: $5; Shelby: $1; Sparta: $2.30; Tekonsha: $5; Big Prairie: Newaygo county union, $4.55, $9.25; Battle Creek: Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, $10; Centreville: Mrs. George Engle, $4; Climax: Mrs. Judith Hallock, $5; Hancock: Mrs. M. R. Sanderson, $4; Interlochen: Mrs. Mary Hopkins, $1; Jackson: Mrs. C. C. Lathrop, $100;

"The Brown Wick"
makes a steady, brilliant flame; will not clog; will not creep. It needs but little trimming or care and is odorless.
The Standard Oil Co. say: "We have made a number of careful and exhaustive tests of your Wick, and feel that we cannot speak too highly of its qualities."
Used by all the leading lamp, stove and heater manufacturers, and made for every kind of burner known.
For sale by good dealers everywhere. Send for free sample and a booklet which tells about it.
NEW JERSEY WICK CO., Newark, N. J.
[Patented in the U. S. and foreign countries.]

Dowling: Mrs. Elizabeth Garrett, $3; Pulaski: Mrs. C. Golden, $1; Saginaw: Lizzie Clark Ring, $2; South Lyon: Mrs. Mary Cushway, $5; St. John's: Mrs. G. O. Riley, 50 cts.; Quincy: Mrs. E. J. Sheldon, $1.50; Vernonville: Mrs. H. E. Viele, $2; From cards, $2.50.

Minnesota—Camden Place: W. C. T. U., $25; Cannon Falls: $5; Custer: $7; Princeton: $10; St. Paul Park: $5; Minneapolis: Lucy Hayes W. C. T. U., $7.30; Eva Dawson, $1, $2; Mrs. Julia A. Ellsworth, $6.60; Rev. E. S. Pilling, $2; L. W. Rohne, $4; Blue Earth: Mrs. M. C. Schuler, $5; Campbell: Mary B. Paxton, $5; Dover: Mrs. Mary Libby, $2.55; Fairbault: Mrs. M. M. Tripp, 40 cts; Harmony: Henrietta Carlon, $2; Hastings: Miss M. M. Countryman. $6.40; John H. Countryman, $1; Lake Burton: Harriet Carlisle, $1.20; Madelia: Mrs. E. Depue, $7.30; Montevideo: Mrs. A. L. Moyer, $4; Spring Valley: Mrs. E. M. Edwards, 50 cts.; St. Paul: George F. Wells, $4.02; West Duluth: Mrs. Emily Merritt, $2; Mrs. I. H. Bliss, 72 cts; Gertrude E. Merritt, $1. From cards, $6.50.

Missouri—Brashear: Second district, W. C. T. U., $10; Carthage: $4.35; Empire Prairie: $1; Fifth district, $5; Forestelle: Hickory Grove union, $6.20; Helena: $5; Kansas City: Hoffman union, $8; Lamar: Barton union, $5; Magnet: Fifth district W. C. T. U., $2.45, $6.25; Eliza Branstine, $20.50; Morehouse: W. C. T. U., $3.25; Pleasant Hill: $36.31; Raymore: $6.30, $26; Rocheport: $5.65; Miss Mary E. Wood, $1.25; Savannah: Kirkwood, $2.50; Mrs. Anna Sassen, $1.30; Shelbyville: $1.75; Sedalia: $27.35; Holden: $1.50; Freeman: $6.50; Springfield: North Side W. C. T. U., $1; St. Joseph: Morris union, $65; Tarkio: $7.50; Clarksville: Mrs. M. M. Roberts, $2; Hannibal: Mrs. Frank Lee, 50 cents; Kansas City: Mrs. Clara T. Beach, $5; St. Joseph: Mrs. Harnois, $4.10. From cards, $16; bricks, $1.25.

Mississippi—Bonnville: Mrs. E. D. Holt, $2; Mrs. L. A. Rugg, $2; Muldon: Mrs. W. J. Lenoir, $3.30; Moscos: Rev. Alex Newton, $1.

New Hampshire—Crawford: W. C. T. U., $70.10; Somersworth, $5; Angenette Stickney, 50 cts.; East Andover: Mrs. M. N. Stearns, $1; Miss Susan E. Cross, $1; Epping: Mrs. E. H. Pearsons, $5; West Epping: A friend, $1.30.

New Jersey—Ocean Grove: W. C. T. U., $2.80; Mrs. E. Waite, $2; Miss Maria Henika, $1; Mrs. H. Rich, $2.30; Jamesburg: Isaac S. and Alice G. Voorhees, $2; Lumberton: F. Betts, 50 cts.; Trenton: Mrs. Martha Keighley, $50, $10; Mrs. Chas. Keighley, $100; Bound Brook: W. C. T. U., $10; Orange: W. C. T. U., $15, $1.30; Beverly, $4; Keyport: L. T. L., $1.30.

SARA G. JOHNSON.
Financial Secretary.

To February 1, 1898.

The Home.

Intelligent Cooking.

"Good living is not high living in the ordinary sense," writes Ella Morris Kretschmar, in the course of an article on the "Art of Cookery" in September Woman's Home Companion. "The very acme of good living is the best presentation of good material in simple form, and in that sense it is the best and highest of living. The introduction of cookery as a branch of our public-school training will start the coming generations of housekeepers in the right direction, but the crying need of the present, next to a knowledge of materials, is for housekeepers to better understand the importance of the high art of simple cookery.

"Many a woman will take infinite pains in making a cake, who probably could not tell of the vegetables in common use, which should be put on to cook in hot water and which in cold, which should be salted at first and which later, and why; how each should be dressed for serving and the difference in dressing them when young and old. Among housekeepers there are more good pie makers than bread makers; twenty who make pretty desserts to one who is expert in cooking meats, and fifty who make fine cake to one who understands good soup making. Do not, because you have kept house ten, twenty or thirty years, feel your housewifely dignity would be compromised by beginning all over again in certain things, for that is being progressive. A narrow-minded woman would not do it, be sure of that. The really useful knowledge you already possess will count for its full value; your expertness in the non-essentials is very desirable—as a supplement to more important knowledge. Of course, you can cook a potato. But how? When you have really exhausted the 'fine art' of cooking potatoes, you have finished one fundamental branch of a splendid education. There are others of equal importance, and each alike necessary, if one would be an intelligent housekeeper."

Remember in cooking vegetables that most of them should be put on to cook in freshly boiling water.

That salt should be added when they are about two-thirds done.

That lying in very cold water for an hour or more will partially restore to wilted vegetables quality and freshness.

That every green vegetable should be cooked rapidly, and uncovered, to retain its color.

That if the water is very hard, a tiny bit of soda, not larger than a pea, added will make the vegetables cooked in it tenderer and of better color. Ordinary water does not require such addition.

That when soft water is used the salt must be in from the first, to prevent loss of flavor and substance.

That cooking a vegetable after it is done toughens, darkens it and detracts from its flavor.

That the best dressing for vegetables at their perfection is butter, pepper and salt—cauliflower and perhaps asparagus excepted.

That older or staler vegetables are improved by a cream or drawn-butter sauce—the basis for the latter the reduced liquor left when the cooking is finished.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Our Library Table.

The September ATLANTIC contains a clear and concise editorial review of the international situation and the new duties and responsibilities devolving upon the United States in consequence of the restoration of peace.

LOOKING UNTO JESUS, or Christ in Type and Antitype, by Uriah Smith, author of the commentary on "Daniel and the Revelation," and other works on Bible subjects. Price, $1. The Review and Herald Publishing Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The question of territorial expansion is discussed in the CENTURY for September by two publicists of differing views; one the Hon. Carl Schurz, formerly United States minister to Spain, in a paper entitled, "Thoughts on American Imperialism"; the other the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, formerly United States minister to France, etc., in a paper bearing the caption, "The Territory with which we are Threatened."

The important place which domestic science is coming to have in the female college curriculum has led Mrs. Charlotte S. Angstman to discuss at some length in APPLETON'S POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY for September the question of the proper relation of college women to this science, and incidentally to give a more or less connected history of the movement in this country during the past few years.

Many new stories regarding the late Prince Bismarck are added in the September REVIEW OF REVIEWS to the apparently inexhaustible fund of anecdotes furnished by the eventful life of the "Iron Chancellor." These are contributed by Mr. Stead, of the English Review of Reviews, and by Charles Lowe, who enjoys the distinction of being the English biographer of Bismarck and who had exceptional facilities for this purpose during a long residence at Berlin.

The September number of the FORUM contains at least four strong articles of timely interest: "The Balloon in Warfare," by Prof. H. Hergesell, president of the International Aeronautical Commission; "Isolation or Imperialism?" by Hon. John R. Procter, president of the Civil Service Commission; "Lessons of our War Loan," by Hon. Frank A. Vanderlip, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and "Our Interest in the Next Congress of the Powers," by Hon. Truxtun Beale, formerly United States Minister to Persia.

The war articles in the September SCRIBNER'S are led by Richard Harding Davis's account of "The Rough-Riders' Fight at Guasimas." There is no information at second hand in this article; Mr. Davis was in the thick of the fight and writes of what he saw. When he crushes, once for all, the story of a surprise, he does it with positive knowledge of the previous orders given and received by General Wheeler and Colonel Wood. The conversations he had with the men in the fight are vivid bits of dramatic dialogue. The whole article is the fullest as well as the most thrilling account of the Guasimas fight yet published, and will stand as the historical picture of that famous event. The illustrations give many of the best known men in the Rough Riders, and views of the country over which they fought. There are also drawings from life by the artist, H. C. Christy, who was there.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Obituaries.

[Obituaries of six lines or less are published free. Longer notices will be inserted at the rate of ten cents per line. Death notices should be sent direct to the editors, not included in letters that go to the business office, and name of town and state should always be given.]

Died, July 15, 1898, MRS. LAURA NEWELL AUGHENBAUGH. She was an earnest white-ribboner, was at Chautauqua in 1873, when the W. C. T. U. was organized, and was one of the seven original members of the W. C. T. U. of Sherman, N. Y.

***

Died, August 22, 1898, MRS. HENRIETTA KRAUTZ, 44 Evergreen Ave., Chicago, aged forty-six years. She was a devoted member and an earnest worker in the Northwestern University Settlement W. C. T. U., and an inspiration to her family and friends. Her loss is deeply felt by all who knew her.

Palmyra Springs Sanitarium.

The thoughts of worn, weary and sick people naturally turn to a quiet place where all things are conducive to health and rest. Such places are ideal but they exist. To find beautiful springs with healthgiving properties; a lake with arms stretching off between the green hillsides, and alcoves filled with water lilies: to find a sky of softest tints spread like a canopy over fields and flocks, hills and valleys; to find a commodious house with perfect sanitary conditions—light, airy, well-furnished, scrupulously clean, with walls tinted in oil, long, broad halls, wide verandas, gas, electric bells, elevator, etc., and wearing a homelike, hospitable air that makes one drop the traveling bag with a sigh of relief at having reached a place of comfort heretofore existing only in dreams—go to Palmyra, Wis.

One may seek this place simply to be built up by generous, healthful food and the best of water, to drive, to row, to fish, to take Turkish, Russian, vapor, salt, or electric baths with massage treatment; to exercise in the gymnasium and Swedish movement rooms; or one may go there any time of the year, for skillful medical attendance. The name of Dr. Lawrence H. Prince, as medical superintendent, with a large consulting staff, aided by trained nurses, promises to sick people, and those convalescing from illness or severe surgical operations, all that skill and devotion has to offer. For illustrated descriptive pamphlet write to the sanitarium, or to Charles A. Birney, 912 Venetian Building, Chicago, Ill.

New England Conservatory of Music

Unequalled advantages in all departments of Music and Elocution. The Conservatory home for young women provides every comfort and safeguard.
George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.
Pupils received at any time. For prospectus address
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Drinking Fountains

FOR

MAN and BEAST

Manufactured by

The J. L. Mott Iron Works

84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.
311-313 Wabash Av. CHICAGO

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright 1896, by the J. L. Mott Iron Works.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.

STOP SMOKING!

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

1898 High Grade BICYCLES

for Men, Women, Girls & Boys. Complete line. All brand new models.
$75 'Oakwood' for $32.50
$60 'Arlington' " $24.50
Others at $15, $17 and $20
Juveniles $7.00 to $12.50

No Money in Advance. WRITE TODAY for SPECIAL OFFER.
Shipped anywhere C.O.D. with privilege to examine. Buy direct from manufacturers, save agents & dealers profits
Large Illus. Catalogue Free. CASH BUYERS' UNION, 162 W. VanBuren Street, B. 80, Chicago, Ills.

SILVER TONES The famous Prohibition Song Book of the Silver Lake Quartet; revised and enlarged; latest and best; reduced from 35c. to 25c. for the campaign.
SONG JEWELS, by Hoffman & Williams, for S.S's. C. E.'s, E. L.'s, etc.; 88 pp.; manila, 7c.; boards, 14c.
Touching Incidents, 320 pp., $1. Sample copy, 40c.; agents get over 60 per cent. W. A. Williams, Warnock, O.

EVERY LADY SHOULD READ THIS

I will send free a positive cure for all female diseases, irregularities, etc. A simple private treatment, a common sense remedy that never fails. FREE with valuable advice. Mrs. L. HUDNUT, South Bend, Ind.

FRANKLIN COLLEGE NEW ATHENS, O. 74th year. Board, tuition, room and books $2.80 to $3 a week; $140 a year; books free: 8 courses; no saloons; catalog free, with plan to earn funds at home W. A. Williams, D.D., Pres.

MONTICELLO Opens the 61st year Sept. 29. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Prin., Godfrey, Ill.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

THE
UNION SIGNAL
Official Organ of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.
THE TEMPLE
CHICAGO

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, as second-class matter.

TERMS:

THE UNION SIGNAL

Is a weekly religious temperance paper of sixteen pages. Additional pages are frequently given without cost to the subscriber.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS

May commence at any time during the year.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Is $1 a year, payable strictly in advance. To pastors in the United States, Canada or Mexico, 50 cents a year, payable strictly in advance.

FOREIGN RATES

To all foreign countries included in the Universal Postal Union, the subscription price of THE UNION SIGNAL is $1.52 a year, postpaid.

REMITTANCES

Should be sent by check, draft, express order or postoffice money order, payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. Cash should be sent by registered letter. We cannot be responsible for loss if sent in any other way.

RECEIPTS

We do not send receipts for subscriptions, unless the request is accompanied with stamp. The change of date upon your address label will indicate within three weeks that the remittance was received.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

When a change of address is ordered, both the old and new address must be given

DISCONTINUANCES

Subscribers wishing THE UNION SIGNAL stopped at the expiration of their subscription must notify us to that effect; otherwise we shall consider it their wish to have it continued. All arrearages must be paid.

ALL QUESTIONS

concerning contributions or the policy of the paper should be addressed to the Managing Editor. All business matters referring to THE UNION SIGNAL should be addressed to the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
The Temple, Chicago...

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Official Organ of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

(EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY.)

An Illustrated Children's Temperance Paper.

TERMS.

One copy, per year . . . . . $ .25
In clubs of ten or more 20
In clubs of fifty or more, to one address . . .12
Sample packages for distribution, 100 to one address 1.00

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The regular issue of the paper contains, aside from illustrations, stories, poetry, etc., three departments, viz.: In Sunday School, Busy Workers' Corner and L. T. L. Letter Box.

QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON SUPPLEMENT.

Especially for the use of teachers in Sunday-school. Four pages containing temperance lesson helps, suggestions for observance of temperance Sundays, etc. This supplement can be secured without the CRUSADER at the rate of 65 cents per 100 copies, $2.75 per 500, $5.00 per 1,000. To regular subscribers the Supplement accompanies each paper free of charge.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Take Notice.

Miss Cornelia M. Dow, Portland, Me., custodian of the Willard fund for the payment of the Temple trust bonds, will receive all contributions offered by those who are interested in the effort being put forward by the National Woman's Christian Temperance union to help retire these bonds. Miss Dow is a woman of well-known financial ability and does this work gratuitously. As the daughter of Gen. Neal Dow, this loyal white-ribboner has the highest esteem and regard of all connected with the movement, and it was by cordial agreement with Mrs. Carse and at the request of Miss Willard that she accepted the foregoing trust.

Publisher's Notes.

"Your Mother is Loving You Yet."

The above beautiful and pathetic temperance song, words and music by Emmet G. Coleman, is fast becoming the favorite with the W. C. T. U's as is demonstrated by the many orders and kind words we are receiving daily from the white-ribboners. We are determined to place this song in every temperance home in the land, it makes no difference what the sacrifice on our part may be. "Your Mother is Loving You Yet," is a true history of a boy, eighteen years old, who killed a very old man. The cause of the crime was whisky. The boy was sentenced to death, and while awaiting his doom he received a message from his old mother, two thousand miles away. This was the message: "In spite of your crime, your old mother is loving you yet."

OUR OFFER.

Send us forty cents, stamps or postoffice order on Danville, Va., the latter preferred, also the name of your best W. C. T. U. friend, and we will mail you a copy of the song, and also mail a copy, with your compliments, to your friend, or if you prefer, both copies will be sent to you. We hope to receive an order from every white-ribboner who reads this notice.

The song is full sheet music size, on best music paper, and retails for forty cents per copy.

You get two pieces for the price of one. This offer is unlimited. Canadian stamps not accepted. Inclose five cents extra for "Marching Onward," a rousing temperance chorus by same author. Address,

THE TEMPERANCE MUSIC CO.,
Kentuck, Va.

[N. B.—White-ribboners should avail themselves of this kind offer.]

Our Memorial Ode.

"Press On and On," our Chieftain's orders, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, music by Mr. O. H. Hawley, is meeting with wide appreciation. The words are tender and effective, the music stirring and martial. It will be sung wherever the W. C. T. U. has voice. The Ode is printed in sheet form, with a beautiful half tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy; 60 cts. per dozen copies to state, county and local unions. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Personal.

If it is important to have your letters reach the business manager direct, kindly mark the envelope personal. The mail which does not bear this mark is opened in the business office, classified, sent to various departments, and faithful clerks employed to fill orders, ship publications, etc. Complaints should in all instances be sent direct to the business manager and marked personal. If you have special requests to make, please send these direct to business manager, marking envelope personal. Strict business letters should be addressed to Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Room 1110, The Temple, Chicago, not to the editors or National officers, as this frequently causes long delay in filling orders, etc.

It is seldom a letter reaches our desk which so fully shows the results of individual work on behalf of THE UNION SIGNAL, as the following, which we give in full, hoping to inspire others:

DEAR FRIENDS:—I have had it in my mind a good while to write and tell you what my UNION SIGNAL has done. Five years ago I had a new neighbor. By way of getting acquainted I took over the SIGNAL, which she returned saying her husband did not think it fit to read. I was quite crestfallen at the time, but ventured to take her a later copy saying that it contained a good story for the children, with this result, the children read the stories to the mother and many other things beside. This I continued for four years. Two years ago her oldest boy did some W. C. T. U. work for me, and I gave him a membership card for his mother, which she was glad to sign and the boy was proud and happy. Last year she commenced taking the SIGNAL and now the husband reads it too. My neighbor says had some one given her the SIGNAL when she was first married, how much better she and her husband might have been in the young and thoughtless days when she had not the benefit of the paper. She intends to send hers to some young couple just starting in life. Since this neighbor subscribed for the SIGNAL, I have sent mine to a friend in the country, whose husband has always believed in saloons, but since reading the SIGNAL he acknowledges he had little idea of the harm they are doing. Through the influence of our beloved paper, this friend has joined the union, although she lives seven miles in the country, and has three little children under five years of age and has little hope of attending the meetings more than two or three times a year. In my opinion no greater work can be done than this, to distribute THE UNION SIGNAL and follow it up with personal work. Look for the SIGNALS and the membership will take care of itself. Those who read "will belong," and our membership will be increased by thousands.

Yours sincerely,
L. C.

"A Wheel Within a Wheel, or How to Ride a Bicycle."

This is the season when not only the son and daughter enjoy a daily outing on the fascinating wheel, but often father and mother and entire families indulge in the fascinating exercise. Miss Willard's devotion to the "silent steed" was well known to all white-ribboners and she believed it to be a means of soul as well as physical development. Her reflections as she mastered her "Gladys" are given to the world in her own inimitable style in the little book, "A Wheel within a Wheel," and she was very desirous it should be in the home of every white-ribboner where the bicycle was admitted, and in every one where it had no welcome.

It contains a number of excellent pictures of Miss Willard which do not appear in any other book and as the price has been reduced to 40 cents postpaid, it should at this season of the year meet with a large sale. If you have no interest in the "wheel" you can not fail to be interested in the adroit and inimitable way in which she "draws a moral" even from so ordinary a matter as riding a bicycle. Price 40 cents postpaid, W. T. P. A., the Temple, Chicago.

The topic for the SEPTEMBER RESPONSIVE READING is "W. C. T. U. Literature," and is written by Miss Helen L. Hood, National superintendent of that department. We are told why the department is an important ally—or rather a necessary aid—to all other departments; how to push it; what helps are needed and where to procure them. Methods of circulating literature are given, also suggestions for furnishing the "wherewithal." Local superintendents of literature should see that this Reading is read and discussed by the unions generally.

BIBLE READING FOR SEPTEMBER. "Have Faith in God," by Mrs. Dora Webb, general secretary of the Reform Legislation branch of the purity department. The subject is treated under the following heads: (1) How can we obtain intelligent faith? (2) Saving faith; (3) Working faith; (4) A comprehensive faith; (5) An overcoming faith; (6) A steadfast faith. And the whole gospel of Christian faith is summed up in the words of the Master: "Believe that ye receive and ye shall have."

As the time for annual state conventions draws near, and those in charge of programs are selecting appropriate music, we have decided to offer our Convention Hymnals—which are an abridged form of The White Ribbon Hymnal—at 15 cents each, 25 copies $2.50, (no discount) These books contain a choice collection of music selected by Miss Marie Brehm. The cover is manila and sufficiently strong for convention purpose. For local unions no better investment could be made than in a number of these Convention Hymnals. Price single copies, 15 cents; 25 copies, $2.50.

We have added to the list of grateful subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL one from British Columbia, who sends to us $5, not only covering past dues, but extending her subscription to July, 1900. This is only one of many instances in which those to whom we have extended consideration, have indicated their appreciation by renewing their subscriptions one or two years in advance.

Will our friends please bear in mind that in many instances letters are unanswered because the name of the state is not given with the address? All important communications should be signed with the name of the person, the postoffice and the state.

Have you examined the little yellow label on your UNION SIGNAL? A subscriber from Milwaukee encourages us by sending not only the amount due to date, but renews the subscription to 1901.

We ask as a favor that those reading our leaflets, will forward to us their opinions of any particular one which has been especially helpful in their union, their neighborhood or to some friend. This will materially help others in selecting appropriate literature.

Our friends who order small amounts of literature, promising to remit by return mail, often stating they do not know the price, etc., can not understand the annoyance of carrying these small memorandum accounts or they would be more prompt in remitting.

Signal Notes.

IT is proposed to teach Spanish in the public schools of Chicago.

MOORE'S HILL, Ind., the seat of Moore's Hill College, has not had a saloon for forty-two years.

IT is stated that a world's fair will be held in Canada at the commencement of the twentieth century.

AND now we are told once more that Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, Minn., is to be made a cardinal.

WARM meals are supplied to all the pupils in the public schools of Paris. The cost of a meal is about one penny.

THREE new counties in Georgia have voted no-license with large majorities. They are, Newton, Randolph and Sumter, and no prohibition county has been lost this year.

THE act of the Canadian legislature which allows women to practice law in that province, provides that they must wear a black chess under a black gown with white collars and cuffs, and go bareheaded.

ABBAS II., the Khedive of Egypt, never disobeys the command of the Koran by tasting wines or spirits. He is also a total abstainer from tobacco, and this in a land where nearly everybody smokes cigarets from morning till night.

THE British war office has made arrangements to provide at each camping ground in the new maneuver district in Wiltshire, a "post exchange," mounted after our own "canteen," but with coffee and temperance drinks instead of alcoholic liquors. This means strictly temperance canteens for 60,000 British soldiers.

TAKING careful note of the example set by America and England, Germany is now experimenting with women in the postal service. It has appointed them to the smaller offices and is giving them a trial in the telegraph and telephone offices. Lengthy service will entitle them to salaries of $285 a year and allowances of $119 for house rent.

A SALOONKEEPER in England advertised his beer as liquid bread. A member of the English Parliament bought a quart and paid a chemist fifteen dollars to examine it. Two per cent, about a thimbleful, was really food. Five per cent was alcohol, and the remaining 93 per cent water. He was arrested under the food act.—From the Popular Science News, New York.

QUEEN LOUISE, of Denmark, is reported to have suffered a mental and physical collapse. She is eighty years old. Queen Louise has often been nicknamed the "mother-in-law of Europe," owing to the fact that she had married her children so splendidly to royal families, besides obtaining a throne for her second son, William, who rules as King George of Greece. She has been an astute politician.

A SENSATION has been caused among the licensed victuallers at Blackburn by the action of the temperance party in view of the forthcoming Brewster Sessions. Upwards of seventy notices of opposition to the renewal of the licenses to various inns and beerhouses have been served upon licensees, the objection in each case being that the house is not necessary to the requirements of the neighborhood.—The League Journal (Scottish).

LARKIN SOAPS

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample Soap if mention this magazine.
The Larkin Soap Mfg Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

The Temple, Chicago.

For Catalogue of our Publications apply Room 1110, The Temple.

BOOKS BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Glimpses of Fifty Years.
The eloquent story of Miss Willard's eventful life from childhood until the rounding of the half century, given by Miss Willard herself in her own graphic way. It is the record of a life of noble purpose inspired by the simplest but purest motive, combined with a breadth of ability and fervor of consecration rarely seen. This book should be in the hands of all the women of this and every other country.
Cloth $2.25
Half Morocco, gilt edge 3.00
Full Morocco, gilt edges 3.75

Woman and Temperance.
A book of inestimable value to all White-Ribboners, both as a book of reference and as a complete and accurate history of the movement from the days of the Woman's Temperance Crusade.
Cloth $2.00

A Young Woman Journalist.
A life sketch of Miss Julia A. Ames, a young woman of untiring energy, great faith, and devotion to the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. Designed to stimulate young women to noble achievement. This volume can not help but be an inspiration to all temperance workers, and in fact all Christian and philanthropic people anywhere.
Cloth . . . . . $ .75

Nineteen Beautiful Years.
The story of the life of Mary E. Willard, "my sister Mary," as she is tenderly called by the author.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 60

How to Win.
A book for girls.
Cloth $1 00

Woman in the Pulpit.
A strong presentation of the arguments in favor of the organization of women.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 50

A Classic Town.
History of Evanston, Ill. Profusely illustrated with views of "Rest Cottage," etc.
Full Gilt $1 00
Plain Cloth 75

A Great Mother.
The Biography of Madam Willard, written by her daughter, Miss Frances E. Willard, and her kinswoman, Mrs. Minerva B. Norton. No work of such value to mothers has appeared for years. It is both an incentive toward and an example of successful motherhood. White-ribbon mothers especially need to learn its open secret. Handsomely bound, elegantly illustrated.
Cloth $1.50

How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle.
This little book is not designed to teach the art of riding the bicycle, but is full of suggestions and thoughts which filled the mind of the writer as she mastered the silent steed. It is well named "A Wheel Within a Wheel." As fascinating as a novel, and an excellent book to place in the hands of lovers of this favorite pastime.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

Do Everything.
A handbook full of instructions and suggestions which make it of inestimable value to White-Ribboners.
Paper . . . . . $ .35

The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard.

Written by ANNA A. GORDON, for twenty-one years her private secretary, with an introduction by LADY HENRY SOMERSET. The book contains 416 pages, 8 inches wide by 10 inches long. Cloth, $2.00; half morocco, $2.75; full morocco, $3.75.

Miss Gordon says in her preface: "We believe this picture of her remarkable and winsome personality will bless and brighten every home that it enters, deepening in the hearts of its readers the desire to hold aloft her white banner of purity and peace, patriotism and prohibition, the protection of the home and the redemption of humanity.

Childhood: Its Care and Culture.
By MARY ALLEN WEST. Bound in cloth, marble edge, and full morocco gilt edge. Carefully written out of a large experience. In a letter to Miss West Madam Willard wrote: "If I could have but one book besides the Bible to help me in bringing up children, I would by all means choose to have this."
Cloth $3.00
Full morocco 4.25

The Temperance Movement; or, the Conflict Between Man and Alcohol.
By United States Senator H. W. BLAIR. The most valuable compilation of statistical information ever offered to the public.
Cloth $1.00

The Year's Bright Chain.
Compiled by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. A gift book of quotations from Miss Willard's works. Illustrated. For young people.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Thumb Nail Sketches of White-Ribbon Women.
Paper . . . . . $ .50
Cloth 1.00

Unanswered Prayer.
By S. M. I. HENRY.
Paper . . . . . Not in Stock.
Cloth . . . . . $ .30

Bright Eyes.
Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised so as to suggest to children by means of outline pictures the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother or elder sister or brother on a Sunday afternoon in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.
Cloth . . . . . $ .20

Columbus and What He Found.
By MARY H. HULL. This is a history of Columbus, told in a most interesting and instructive manner to the writer's own three children and ten of their companions. It is a charming book. It contains 260 pages. It is as entertaining as the world-renowned "Robinson Crusoe," yet every fact is one of history, and goes to improve and enrich the mind of every boy and girl who reads it.
Cloth $1.00

The Junior Partners.
By A. M. RAWSON. Illustrated. Octavo, 410 pages. This remarkable story is strongly written and shows how a generous husband and father may be degraded and crushed by yielding to the demoralizing influence of the appetite for strong drink. The story is well told throughout, manly in sentiment, not narrow in portrayal, scientific in interpretation of argument and facts. The book is illustrated with a number of full page engravings and vignette cuts.
Cloth $2.00

White Ribbon Birthday Book.
By ANNA A. GORDON.
A book of the sayings of over 200 of the wisest and wittiest of women. Useful as a gift book for birthdays, as a guest book, and for a daily memorandum.
Cloth $1.00

Around the World by the Fireside.
Containing 160 photographic views from every quarter of the globe. Size 11x13 inches
Cloth $2.00

Child's Christ Tales.
By ANDREA HOFER.
The sweetest story on earth, in all literature and for all time is the story of the infant Jesus, and His wonderful coming among men. Send for this little book and show it to your friends, for it solves the problem of teaching the Christ-life to children.
Cloth $1.00

Lady Gay and her Sister.
A charming book for children by a well known author.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Boys and Other Boys. Girls and Other Girls.
Two interesting books by Mrs. Lucy A. Scott, who wrote so charmingly for children. Just the books to give needed advice and help to boy or girl in the critical early teens. Not goody-goody, but clear, strong and faithful.
Cloth, each . . . . . $ .25

Bob Gripp's Trophy.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

GIFT BOOKS

Containing Scripture Texts, Daily Readings for the Year.

Northfield Year Book.
Price $1.25

Gift of Love.

Gift of Peace.
Bound in white, each $1.00

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.
Bound in white vellum . . $1.00

The Shepherd Psalm.
White and silver . . . . . $ .60
Blue and silver 50

One of God's Lilies.

Story of the Soul of a Child.
Bound in white, each . . . . . $ .30

VICI Leather Dressing

The best Shoe Dressing in the world
The genuine is made only by Robert H. Foerderer, Philadelphia, manufacturer of the famous

VICI KID

Ask your dealer for Vici Leather Dressing, and be sure the trademark with the name of the maker, is on each box or bottle. Imitations may ruin your shoes.

A book about buying, wearing and caring for shoes, mailed free. Address
ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philada., Pa.

"WHAT is your idea of a clever woman—a woman who can see the point of a joke?" "No; my idea of a clever woman is one who can laugh at a joke without seeing the point."

NICKEL PLATE EXCURSION TO BOSTON.

Tickets on sale for trains leaving Chicago September 16 to 18, inclusive, at rate of $19 for the round trip, and good returning until September 30. Also cheap rates to all points East. Vestibuled sleeping cars to Boston, and solid train to New York. Rates lower than via other lines. For further information call on or address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

THEY were two little children, and they were painting pictures in their school books. One youngster finished a cow in blue, and then remembered never to have seen a blue cow. "Never mind," encouragingly said the other, "we will say the cow is cold."

EXCURSION TO BOSTON.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell excursion tickets from Chicago to Boston and return for trains of September 16, 17 and 18 at rate of $19 for the round trip. Tickets will be valid returning until September 30, inclusive. On account of heavy travel at this particular time, those desiring sleeping-car accommodations should apply early to J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

THE word "smallpox" fell to Tommy to spell, but he floundered hopelessly. "Tommy," said the teacher, do you know what a little boy who fails on so simple a word as smallpox ought to get?" "Yes'm," replied Tommy, "he ought to get vaccinated."

MEETING SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE, I. O. O. F.

Boston, Mass., September 19-24, Inclusive

For this occasion the Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale September 16 to 18, inclusive, good returning until September 30, inclusive. For particulars, address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389

"I NOTICE," remarked the stranger, "that your town is well paved, for the most part, but the street where your saloons seem to be congregated has no pavements worth mentioning." "Well, yes," replied the resident, "that's paved, too—with good intentions."

Don't forget the excursion to Boston over the Nickel Plate Road, September 16 to 18, inclusive, at rate of $19 for the round trip. Good returning until September 30, 1898, inclusive. Telephone Main 3389.

A VISITOR at a school, during geography lesson, asked a bright boy, "What is the axis of the earth?" "An imaginary line passing from one pole to the other, on which the earth revolves," answered he, proudly. "Yes," said his examiner, well pleased, "and could you hang a bonnet on it?" "Yes, sir." "Indeed! And what sort of a bonnet?" "An imaginary bonnet, sir."

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 35. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, September 15, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
The Situation in Havana—The Illinois Christening—Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, Our Chieftain's Orders. By Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer 3
Poem, In Memoriam. By Rebecca Perley Reed 3
Her Narrow Life. By Inez E. Barr Cornish 3
What Woman's Work for Christian Temperance Means 3
His First Heaven. By Mrs. S. M. I. Henry 4
Willard Hall Echoes 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Our Boys at Washington, D. C 5
The Music of our Chieftain's Orders 5
The Temperance Movement in Denmark 5
Miss Willard's First Appearance in Nashville, Tenn . . 6
More Words About Vivisection 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, The Boy and the Sparrow 7
How Tom and Otto Helped the L. T. L. By M. Eugenia Daugherty 7
Little Bob Stood the Test 7
The Difference 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Official Call for National Convention 8
Power to Develop the Best in Others 8
A Character Sketch of Miss Willard 8
Words from White-Ribboners Suitable for the Birthday Meeting 9
Suggestions for a Public Meeting on Miss Willard's Birthday, September 28 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Late News From Miss Parrish 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Cape Colony—Norway—From the World's Secretary—Chili 10-12
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Missouri—North Dakota—Minnesota 12-14
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
A Call to Prayer for Canada—Schools of Methods and Parliamentary Usage 15
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 15
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 15
Convention Call—Where Our Speakers Are 15
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 16
W. C. T. U. NEWS 16

RED-LETTER DAYS.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DAY—SEPTEMBER 22.

The birthday of Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, first round-the-world missionary.

CHILDREN'S HARVEST HOME AND MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

The birthday of Frances E. Willard.

MEMBERSHIP WEEK—THE INTERVENING WEEK.

Chairmen of Nat'l Convention Committees.

Of General Committee of Arrangements, Mrs. C. S. Soule, 105 East Isabel street, St. Paul.

Of Entertainment Committee, Mrs. C. L. Webber, 1729 W. Minnehaha street, Hamline, St. Paul.

Of Finance Committee, Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, 37 East Tenth street, St. Paul, Minn.

The sale of reserved seats will commence September 15. Four hundred seats will be sold. Price $1 each. Orders should be sent early to the chairman of the finance committee.

Notes and Comments.

DURING the two days preceding the National W. C. T. U. Convention there will be, as is now customary, a Purity Conference. All purity workers of whatever organization are cordially invited to be present. Particulars concerning the program and other details will be given later by the National superintendent in our official columns.

THE selection from the writings of Miss Willard given in our Contributed columns is a quotation from her chapter entitled "The Summing Up," in the white-ribbon handbook, "Do Everything." These words will come to her "women beloved" with a tenderer interest and a deeper meaning, now that the loving heart and busy brain which prompted them are stilled forever to earthly life and labor. May we in these crucial days continue in unswerving loyalty to the "one steadfast aim" to which our sainted leader dedicated all her splendid powers of heart and intellect. May we realize as did she, the "sacred meaning" of our organization.

THE friends of Miss Anna Gordon—and what white-ribboner is not her friend?—will be grieved, we are sure, to learn of her recent illness in the home of Mrs. Stevens, our National president. Miss Gordon has been suffering from an acute attack of gastritis, and though very much better is still far from well. The physician says that the disease has been developing for months, and without doubt owes its origin to the shock and strain of those sad months last winter when Miss Gordon went down into the shadows with the one far dearer to her than life itself. We are sure that prayers will arise everywhere that she may entirely recover and be spared many years to our work. It is needless to say that all which sympathy and love can do is being done for her in Mrs. Stevens' home.

THE authority quoted by us in a recent issue stating that there were no colored saloonkeepers, is, we regret to learn, in error. A friend writes from Florida that our "authority is either not good or grossly ignorant, for there are lots of them in that state, and that it was in dives kept by blacks in Jacksonville where not long ago many of our soldiers disgraced themselves and the nation by drunken orgies." Similar testimony has also been received from states farther north. We truly regret that it is necessary to make such a correction as this, and explain that the source of our information was the reported statement of a colored minister at a temperance rally held under the auspices of a national religious assembly.

WE are indebted to a daily of this city for some interesting items concerning the temperance reform in the railroad business. It seems that the rules against railroad employés visiting saloons are being rigidly enforced, and with the best of results to everybody concerned. One high official on one of the biggest lines running out of Chicago says that the reform has done more for the railroads and the men than any other movement undertaken. The feeling is steadily growing that it is not safe to risk life and property by entrusting the heavy trains of to-day to men who drink. And the reform has not been confined to subordinates. Many of the higher officials have ceased to carry liquors on their private cars, because they feel that otherwise they cannot consistently demand total abstinence from the men under them. One official reports that four years ago he visited a saloon in Chicago which was patronized by railroad men and found that fifty-four employés of one road were running monthly accounts ranging from $5 to $15 per month. He recently visited the same saloon and found that only six railroad men had accounts there. Further investigation showed that the money which before went for drink was being invested in homes.

FROM all parts of the country inquiries are coming to the general officers of the National Union as to whether or not we have retreated from the position taken at the executive committee meeting on July 15. The fact that the Temple column still holds its place in THE UNION SIGNAL seems to cause this apprehension in the minds of many, especially as silence is maintained on our part. For the benefit of those who do not understand the situation, we desire to state that THE UNION SIGNAL is owned, published and controlled by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, an affiliated interest of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This interest is bound to us by the closest ties of good-will and a common purpose, but, in its management, is distinct and separate from the National organization. The W. T. P. A. is controlled by a Board of Directors elected at the annual meeting of the stockholders, which occurs in October. Some years ago by vote of this Board a column was given to the Temple; later another was given to the National Temperance Hospital, and a third and fourth have been given to the National corresponding secretary and treasurer. It will thus be readily seen that, unless different action be taken by the Board, these columns will be used in behalf of the interests designated, and that the National Union has no voice concerning the continuance or discontinuance of the Temple column. We trust this explanation is sufficiently clear. We have not felt it necessary to use our own official columns for the exploiting of our views or the action of the executive committee, but these views are not in the least changed and we stand by our former statement. Our purpose is still to retire, so far as possible, the Temple trust bonds, but we believe that any effort to own the building is as unwise as it will prove unavailing.

Signed,

THE GENERAL OFFICERS.

Current Events.

The Situation in Havana.

Red Cross Supplies are not Allowed to Land. Much Suffering Among the Poor.

DR. S. S. PARTELLO, Red Cross agent at Tampa, Fla., sends us a report of Miss Barton's latest efforts in behalf of the Cubans, before returning to the United States.

Miss Barton and her staff of assistants arrived in Havana on August 25. Notice of their coming had been cabled from Santiago, and after arrival the authorities were officially called upon for the purpose of securing their consent and cooperation in the work of relief. The Red Cross was informed that the government was abundantly able to take care of its people and that no assistance was required in Havana.

Although the Red Cross occupied a government transport which was loaded with supplies intended solely for relief, the custom house officials imposed a fine of five hundred dollars in gold in consequence of some technical irregularity of the ship's manifest of so unimportant a nature as to have escaped the notice of an old and experienced captain. They were also informed that the full custom duties must be paid. The custom duties at this time consist of the highest war tariff with several additional percentages, which frequently more than doubles the value of the article. The price of condensed milk in Havana has been one dollar per can; a half loaf of bread fifteen cents; meat, fifty to seventy-five cents a pound; rice, thirty-five cents a pound; Irish potatoes, twelve dollars per barrel, thus making it clear to every one that only persons of some means can obtain any food; the poor must go without.

Within the center and business part of the town there is less apparent suffering and death than when first visited before the blockade. Of the outskirts or the outlying villages, as Regla, Jesus del Monte and Guanabacoa, an estimate may be formed by the statement from the latter place that on one day last week fifty burials were made, which it was impossible to finish before night, and this was named as a usual number at the present time.

Appeals of the most urgent character came from Cienfuegos and Matanzas—hearing that the Red Cross had entered that part of the island—not only appeals from individuals, but officially made, which could not be doubted.

By this time, the Comal, laden with 1,600 tons of supplies sent under direction of the Secretary of War, but as an aid to the Red Cross, through its suggestion and in no way governmental in its purpose, had arrived. With the cargoes of two vessels lying in those waters and the terrible need of the entire island west of Santiago Province, it seemed at first impossible that any conditions could be made which would prevent the distribution of that food. Consequently, every effort was made, both by the Red Cross and the officers of the Comal, but to no purpose. There remained, then, but one thing to do. The Comal would await its instructions from the home government; the Red Cross, being free, on the afternoon of September 1, paid her fine of $500 in gold, met every possible contingency that could arise in any way, either as a distributor of food or as a representative of the International Red Cross, and sorrowfully drew anchor and sailed away for the United States. When her parting salute went out over the waters of Havana harbor, all knew that it was the knell of death to untold thousands of the doomed on that stricken island.

The Illinois Christening.

GOVERNOR TANNER has designated Miss Nancy Leiter, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter, of Chicago and Washington, to christen the battleship Illinois. The launching is to take place at Newport News, Va., October 4. In connection with this the National officers of the W. C. T. U. have sent an appeal to Miss Leiter to use water instead of wine as Miss Bradley did in christening the Kentucky. They have also sent the following letter to President McKinley:

On behalf of the three hundred thousand women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the United States, we respectfully call your attention to the many object lessons in temperance which the late war has brought forth, and we earnestly request that another signal one may be added to the list in the christening of the battleship Illinois.

We had already asked Miss Leiter to use water instead of wine before the fact was brought to our notice that under the war power, the federal government must decide how the battleships shall be christened.

We earnestly request you to give the weight of your honored name and power to this object lesson for temperance and righteousness.

Temperance.

THERE is an organized movement of the Independents, in Pittsburg, to support Dr. Swallow for governor.

PROSECUTION has been begun at Marquette, Mich., against twenty saloonkeepers charged with violating the Sunday law.

THE prohibition state convention of Connecticut met at Hartford, August 31. Charles A. Steele, of New Britain, was nominated for governor. An independent resolution introduced by Chairman Brown, giving the ladies the right to vote on all questions connected with the sale of liquor, was almost unanimously adopted after a spirited discussion.

REV. K. MIYAMA who has been a temperance evangelist the past year, associated with Miss Parrish, in Japan, has been reappointed to the same position with the consent and approval of the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. His work is undenominational. He will work in any locality and in connection with any church or temperance society that invites him.

A VERY significant resolution was adopted by the recent session of the Mississippi Baptist convention. In connection with another resolution taking strong grounds against the liquor traffic a resolution was adopted to memorialize the Congress of the United States to so amend the internal revenue law as to forbid the issuance of a revenue license in counties and municipalities in Mississippi that had already adopted prohibition.

About Women.

THE Idaho Republican Convention has nominated Miss Lucy Deane for state superintendent of public instruction.

MISS HELEN GOULD has given $5,000 to endow a free bed in perpetuity in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, Park Avenue and Forty-first Street, New York.

REV. LUCY E. DODGE has been pastor of the Free Baptist church at Long Branch, Neb., for five years. The church is prosperous, free from debt and in good repair. The church is one of the largest and best in the state..

MISS JESSIE SCHLEY, Admiral Schley's cousin, who went to Madrid on a peace mission last July as a delegate of the Women's International Peace Association, is now in Havana, Cuba, where she has gone in connection with relief work.

MISS MARGARET ASTOR CHANLER, of New York, who founded a hospital in Ponce and went to the Island of Porto Rico as a Red Cross nurse, is very ill in her own hospital. Miss Chanler is the great-great-granddaughter of the original John Jacob Astor and has an income of $30,000 a year.

THE highest honors at the commencement exercises of the Kansas City College of Pharmacy were conferred upon Miss Harriet Benton, of Odessa, Mo. She received a diploma and also a gold medal, which was the first prize for the highest grade in all the branches taught at the college.

Educational.

IN an oratorical contest at Idaho University for the Watkins medal, Jennie Hughes, the only colored student in the institution, was the winner.

GEORGE A. FOWLER, of Kansas City, has given $21,000 to rebuild the agricultural shops of the University of Kansas recently destroyed by fire.

THE Howard Payne College and Central College, two Southern Methodist institutions of Missouri, are to be consolidated and opened to both women and men.

A BRIGHT Apache Indian girl, just graduated from Teller Institute, Grand Junction, Col., will have a regular deaconess training and medical instruction, to fit her to return as a missionary to her own people.

MLLE. JEANNE CHAUVIN, the young woman who applied for admission to the bar in Paris last November and was refused, has given courses of free lectures on law to public classes. In the five principal young girls' lycées of Paris, she has instituted a course in law which at present no other woman in France is capable of teaching.

MISS MARY HARRIOTT NORRIS, prominent in the East as an educator and author, has accepted the position of dean of the Woman's Hall and assistant professor in the English department at Northwestern University. She was selected by the executive committee of the board of trustees to succeed Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, who resigned from the chair in June, after having been at the head of the hall for seven years.

At Home.

JUSTICE WHITE has decided that he can not serve as a member of the peace commission, and Senator George Gray, of Delaware, has been appointed in his place.

CHICAGO has given a royal welcome to her returning heroes during the past week. Every conceivable comfort has been provided for the sick, and the big city resolved itself into committees who vied with each other in doing honor to the soldiers.

THE second annual session of the civic-philanthropic conference will be held at Battle Creek, Mich, October 18 to 23. Philanthropists, educators and ministers of all denominations will participate in the conference to consider economic, hygienic, sanitary, philanthropic and patriotic questions.

THE commission sent to the Sandwich Islands will recommend to congress that the new colony be called "The Territory of Hawaii." The form of government will be modeled on that of existing territories; there will be no further departures from this than local conditions and national political considerations make necessary.

THE Grand Army of the Republic met in annual encampment at Cincinnati, Ohio, during the past week. Col. James A. Sexton, of Chicago, was elected Commander-in-Chief for the ensuing year, and the Woman's Relief Corps chose Mrs. Flo Jamieson Miller, of Monticello, Ill., as its next president. The encampment of 1899 will be held at Philadelphia, Pa.

REAR-ADMIRAL SAMPSON, Maj.-Gen. James F. Wade, Maj.-Gen. M. C. Butler and Lieut.-Col. John W. Clous, members of the Cuban commission, left New York, September 6, for Cuba. Each commissioner had a number of aids and secretaries. Admiral Schley and the other members of the Porto Rico commission are already at their posts of duty.

Abroad.

THE Turkish government has prohibited foreign Jews from entering Palestine.

LATEST reports from Paris are to the effect that a new trial is urged for Captain Dreyfus.

LI HUNG CHANG has been dismissed from the Chinese foreign office, supposedly at the request of Sir Claude McDonald, British minister in Peking.

GENERAL SIR HERBERT KITCHENER achieved a brilliant victory at Omdurman, by which the power of the dervishes has been utterly demolished and the rule of the Madhists forever ended in the Soudan, and the lamented Gordon is at last avenged. British power and British authority, though exercised in the name of Egypt, are now firmly established in Omdurman and Khartoum, which dominate the whole Soudan, eastern and western, from Dongola to the Equatorial Provinces, and from the Red Sea to Lake Tchad.

Contributed.

Our Chieftain's Orders.

BY MRS. S. L. OBERHOLTZER.

[Set to music by Mr. O. H. Hawley.]

"BEAUTIFUL with God," she said,
Our Chieftain brave and true,
And passed an open gateway,
From whence the light shines through.
Still, from the height supernal,
Obscured from mortal view,
She sends us marching orders,
"Press on and on and on,
Till the blights of human homes
Are all dissolved and gone."

The myths of heaven and distance
Have faded quite away.
Our Chieftain gone, though present,
Is with us day by day,
Cheering us on to service
And prompting our delay.
We hear the marching orders,
"Press on and on and on,
Till the blights of human homes
Are all dissolved and gone."

Drilled by a length of service
We needs must understand
Our wise and gracious Chieftain,
And feel the memory wand
That strengthens feeble effort,
And gives us faith to stand
And heed the marching orders,
"Press on and on and on,
Till the blights of human homes
Are all dissolved and gone."

She sends us marching orders,
We follow them from choice.
We hear the marching orders,
We know the sweet, sweet voice.
We heed the marching orders,
Go forward and rejoice.
We're under marching orders,
"Press on and on and on,
Till the blights of human homes
Are all dissolved and gone."

1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

In Memoriam.

BY REBECCA PERLEY REED.

WHAT, with clear, lengthening vision did she see,
As heaven's glad morning broke through cloud of pain!
She hath not whispered of her joy, but we,
Knowing her woman's heart, may count her gain.

One aged face, now bright with heavenly youth,
First met her own, I think, as passed her breath;
Mother and daughter kept their tryst in truth,
As all their lives, so now, in faithful death!

Glad household eyes—smiles, known in years long fled,
Welcome of kindred, made her waking blest—
Perchance, sad secrets, long to silence wed,
Changed suddenly to joy within her breast.

Slowly, as she could bear th' ecstatic sight,
Beyond, above, around her, human bliss;
Enrapt and satisfied, she felt the light
Of her Lord's presence, and she did not miss

His heavenly whisper, "Inasmuch, to those,
My wretched children, manacled of sin,
Thou gavest brain and hand and heart, nor chose
Except for them, life's fairest fruits to win;

Since, that they stand God's freemen, thou didst dare
Wage to the death, war 'gainst their bitterest foe,
Eschewing compromise with wrong, to share
With God, the inviolate splendor of His 'No;'

Therefore, O daughter of the faithful heart,
Thou woman, dauntless in thy power to love,
See, as the curtains of the future part,
The vast procession of the centuries move.

It shall be thine to see the sturdy youth
Of the reform to which thy life was given,
Stand as a giant in the cause of Truth,
Helping yet unborn myriads up to Heaven!"

. . . . . .

So, while with varying needs of time or place,
New help will serve the world, in deed and thought,
With radiant smile upon her upturned face,
She shall behold the work her hand hath wrought!

Milwaukee, Wis.

Her Narrow Life.

BY INEZ E. BARR CORNISH.

THE wind upon the prairie in western Iowa is very businesslike in its methods. It is, indeed, so very thorough and practical in its chosen vocation of shaping and shifting snowbanks or throwing clouds of dust into the air, that all travelers, when possible, give it unquestioned right of way by seeking shelter from its rude blasts.

During one of its recent furies young Mrs. Nellie Brown, while awaiting her husband's return to dinner, drew her chair near the comfortable heater, and, taking a paper from a stand near by, read with deep interest a sketch from the pen of a gifted writer, who pictured the grandeur of old ocean, as witnessed by her in a late visit to its shore. The paper dropped from Nellie's hands. She leaned her head wearily against the chair-back, while tears sprang to her eyes. Her life seemed so narrow—this homely, everyday life.

"If I could but have money and leisure to travel and see some of the wonders of nature and art; to witness with my own eyes God's handiwork in mountain, valley and sea; to stand on the very ground where He stood in the Holy Land, I feel that I could then spend my life in profitable service for Him—work that counts for Christ." Thus she thought, discontentedly.

"It is hard to be so poor," she remarked, half audibly, smiling at the absurdity of the thought, "that one can scarce maintain herself a true Christian. I could not give a subscription to the missionary cause this winter unless I denied myself a new cloak, and it seems as if people snub me for looking shabby. This has made me angry and resentful."

Nellie's naturally cheerful countenance resembled an April day as her wounded pride found vent in tears, although there was the suspicion of a sunny smile in the appearance of the usual dimples around her mouth, as a sense of the ludicrous got the better of her.

A loud knock at the door caused her to hastily wipe traces of emotion from her face. Responding to the rap, a young foreigner, a peddler, stood panting for breath as he put his heavy pack inside the door, and, seating himself on the nearest chair, said briefly: "Bad wind. Tired."

"Yes," assented Nellie, pleasantly. "It must be hard traveling on foot to-day." Then noticing how wearied he was and that his dreamy, brown eyes were sad, added, "It is just noon; will you have dinner with us?"

A look of surprise and gratitude flitted over his swarthy face as he replied, "Yes, thanks; very kind."

"Where are you from?" asked Mr. Brown, who had entered shortly after the stranger.

"Damascus, in Syria," was the prompt reply; "came when I was sixteen."

Nellie was lifting vegetables from the stove. "From the old world of the Bible," she said with surprise, looking upon her guest with augmented interest. "Tell me about your home," she continued. "I long so much to see those interesting places."

The peddler raised his dark, intelligent eyes to the fair face of his hostess.

"I vill try, ma'am, though I not much speak your language." Then he told, in his quaint, broken way of the fruits and scenes of Damascus; of Bethlehem and the manger—claimed by the monks of the convent located there, to be on the very spot where Christ was born. He then spoke of the political situation and the school system of that land, making comments favorable to our own country in contrast with it.

"What is your religious belief?" was asked, as he finished speaking.

"Greek Cat'olic," was the reply. "We not believe like t'e Cat'olics here. No pope; and t'e priests marry."

The meal ended, all returned to the sitting-room, when he asked, "Vat vill I pays you? Shall I pays you in towels or somet'ing?"

Nellie paused a moment. She was thinking of language so simple that this stranger in a strange land should readily comprehend it. Then she said quietly:

"We do not want pay for your dinner. We believe in the same Jesus, whose manger cradle you say you have seen. This makes you our brother. When you were tired and hungry we were glad to give you rest and food for His sake."

The young man's face actually turned pale with emotion. He seated himself on the couch as if overcome.

"Do you know," he said brokenly, "I am here ten year, all alone. No one before this did said to me, 'Jesus,' or take my hand to said 'broder.' Lady, I t'ank you T'is country to me vill seem so tifferent now. Ven I sit by t'e roadside to rest, I vill t'ink, In t'is new vorld I am not alone, for one did said to me 'Jesus' and 'broder.'"

The statement seemed almost incredible to Nellie. "Where," she asked herself, "is Christian America's proud boast now, with her multitude of churches and myriads of Christian workers, that a mere boy of sixteen years should seek her hospitality and wander through her streets and on her country roads for ten years with not a soul to extend the hand of fellowship, or comfort the homesick heart by pointing him to our common Saviour? Surely, there is a wide field of missionary work at the very door of the most humble worker!"

Her guest moved toward the door, then turned with a hesitating, yet deferential manner.

"Vill t'e lady tells me her church?"

Nellie spoke the name of her church, adding, "All protestant churches do work for Christ."

His answer was very earnest: "Ven I stops over Sunday in a town, I goes to your church, 'cause you did said 'Jesus' to me. Sometimes," he added—and there were manly tears in his eyes—"I t'inks I dies for kind word—for some one to have interest in me."

Nellie was awed at the intensity of his feelings. She thought of how she had longed to stand on holy ground; surely, this was holy ground upon which she now stood, for it seemed that God had chosen her, weak and unworthy as she was, to be instrumental in leading this poor wanderer, this homesick soul, into a haven of rest.

The young people's meeting of the next Sunday evening was spoken of by many as "so very interesting." It was Nellie's turn to lead, but her shabby cloak did not have any place in her thoughts as she commented earnestly on the text, "Let your light shine," urging her young friends never to lose an opportunity to speak for Christ, or do a kind deed unto the least of them "In His Name."

Correctionville, Ia.

What Woman's Work for Christian Temperance Means.

[From Miss Willard's writings.]

THERE are two indirect results of the organized work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. First: It is a very strong nationalizing influence. Its method and spirit differ very little whether you study them in Boston or Bombay. In South Africa and South Carolina white-ribbon women speak the same vernacular; tell of their gospel meetings and petitions; discuss THE UNION SIGNAL editorials, and wonder "what will be the action of our next convention." Almost all other groups of women workers who dot the continent are circumscribed by denominational lines and act largely under the advice of ecclesiastical leaders. The W. C. T. U. feels no such limitations.

Second: Our W. C. T. U. is a school. Not founded in that thought, or for that purpose, but sure to fit us for the duties of patriots in the realm that lies beyond the horizon of the coming century. Here we try our wings that yonder our flight may be strong and steady. Here we prove our capacity for great deeds; there we shall perform them. Here we make our experience and pass our novitiate that yonder we may calmly take our places and prove to the world that what it needed most was "two heads in council" as well as "two beside the hearth." When that day comes the nation shall no longer miss as now the influence of half its wisdom, more than half its purity, and nearly all of its gentleness, in courts of justice and halls of legislation. Then shall one code of morals—and that the highest—govern both men and women; then shall the Sabbath be respected, the rights of the poor be recognized, the liquor traffic banished, and the home protected from all its foes.

Born of such a visitation of God's spirit as the world has not known since tongues of fire sat upon the wondering group at Pentecost, cradled in a faith high as the hope of a saint, and deep as the depths of a drunkard's despair, and baptized in the beauty of holiness, the Crusade determined the ultimate goal of its teachable child, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which has one steadfast aim, and that none other than the regnancy of Christ, not in form, but in fact; not in substance, but in essence; not ecclesiastically, but truly in the hearts of men. To this end its methods are varied, changing, manifold, but its unwavering faith these words express: "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

When I consider the work already accomplished by the white-ribboners, the sacred meaning of our society is a thought well-nigh overwhelming. Your kind hands that I fain would clasp, have been placed on the heads of little children, of whom we have half a million in our Loyal Temperance Legions; they have given out total abstinence pledges to a million tempted men; they have pinned the ribbon white as the talisman of purity above the hearts of ten thousand tempted prodigals; they have carried bread to the hungry, and broken the bread of life to those who were most hungry of all for that, although they knew it not. These hands have carried petitions for the protection of the home, for the preservation of the Sabbath, for the purification of the law, and during twenty-one years of such honest, hard work, as was almost never equaled, they have gathered not fewer than twenty million names to these petitions. Your friendly faces have bent over the bedsides of the dying, for whose souls no one seemed to care; they have illumined, with the light that never shone on sea or shore, many a dark tenement house in attic and cellar; they have gleamed like stars of hope in the darkest slums of our great cities. Your voices have sung songs of deliverance to the prisoners in ten thousand jails and almshouses; they have brought a breath of cheer into police courts, bridewells and houses of detention all round the world.

Your willing feet are more familiar with rough than with smooth pavements. You know the byways better than the highways. If all your errands could be set in order, they would read like the litany of God's deliverance to those bound in the chains of temptation, sorrow and sin. Some touch of all that you have seen and done chastens each forehead and hallows every face. God has helped you to build better than you knew. If white-ribbon women had their way (and they intend to have it), the taint of alcohol and nicotine would not be on any lip, or in any atmosphere of city, town or village on this globe. If they had their way (and they intend to have it), no gambler could with impunity pursue his vile vocation. If they could have their way, the haunts of shame that are the zero mark of degradation would be crusaded out of existence before sundown, and the industrial status of women would be so independent that these recruiting officers of perdition would seek in vain for victims. If you could have your way, the keeper of the dramshop would become in every state and nation as, thank God, he is already in so many, a legal outcast, a political Ishmaelite, a social pariah on the face of the earth, for you do not seek the regulation of the traffic, nor its prohibition even, but its annihilation.

Among the reflex influences by which this temperance work has broadened my own outlook and enriched my hopes, I must speak of the sweet and tender lesson of white-ribbon homes to me. I have learned how such solemn vicissitudes as come into lives of women only help to confirm your faith in the world invisible. The breath of eternity falls on your foreheads like baptismal dews in those hours of pain and danger when a little child is born into your home. Your steps lie along the borderland of this closely curtained world.

"And palpitates the veil between
With breathings almost heard."

Into your eyes fall the first mystic glances of innocent and trusting souls. Tender little hands folded in prayer, and winsome voices saying,

"Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,
Look upon a little child," have done more than all traditional restraints to keep your hearts loving and unworldly. Always this will be so; always from manhood's more exterior view of life's significance you are separated by the deepest and most sacred experiences which human hearts may know. That anchor holds. But God has given the mother-heart for purposes of wider blessing to humanity than it has dreamed as yet. Let us go gently forward until that loving, faithful heart shall be enthroned in the places of power; until the queens of home are queens indeed.

And, best of all, the hand of Him whose gospel has lifted us up into the heavenly places in Christ Jesus; of Him who was a brother to the Marys, and who, in His hour of mortal agony did not forget His mother—that pierced hand points the way.

His First Heaven.

BY MRS. S. M. I. HENRY.

THE babe had slept all his little life thus far, only occasionally blinking, and at intervals more or less regularly opening instinctively the bud of a mouth for food. But at last he began to waken; he stretched his funny little legs and arms, made up his lips as if to whistle his first matin song, and then widened it into a yawn, thus throwing wide open the gates for a consignment of oxygen which had been ordered by the brain, and by which his thinking apparatus was to be set in motion. By a process which we can not understand, he discovered his eyelids as movable shades; and quickly lifted them out of the way; and from his two little windows looked directly up into his first heaven.

We have read of a heaven of heavens, which great as it is cannot contain all the glory of that love that is called God. We have heard of heavenly places into which that essence of the Divine Being overflows; and we know that as the greater must always include the less, so the fraction must be in its constituent qualities identical with the whole. "The heaven begun below" has been the fruitful theme of many a rapturous song; and as the firmament mirrored in the depths answers to that which spans the heights, so, if it be at all a heaven, must this one into which the baby looks reflect some changeless features of the upper world after which it is named.

"Heaven lies about us in our infancy," said Wordsworth. It is our motherland. At its beginning every life is given a taste and glimpse, however fleeting, of those delights that at the end of its mortality in "sweet fields of living green" shall burst into immortal bloom; and that first glimpse the baby always finds in the face that bends above his own. It is marvelous how quickly, in his first waking, he recognizes his inheritance in his mother's eyes. Who can doubt that it is a recognition? If you have eyes to see, and a heart to comprehend, you can trace its movement by many little unmistakable signs of dawning intelligence which all tend thither as instinctively as a newly fledged bird tends toward the upper air. Steadfastly gazing upward he drinks his fill of song, of light, of speech that drops like dew into the small cup of his first little moment of conscious existence.

"And God said let there be light in the firmament . . . and God made two lights" to rule the day and night, for He would have no darkness in His heavens. "In Him is no darkness at all," and this little section of His holy habitation must be like the one where He has set His throne. It is by the radiance of the less that the glory of the greater is to be revealed to the little astronomer who has just discovered, and who is so absorbed in trying to make out his first constellation. Be careful of the lights, for if they become darkness, how great shall be that darkness! The true mother is in her own being only another heaven of heavens. Her face serene and lighted up with the joy of her motherhood, her cheeks which much smiling ought to keep in dimples, her lips distilling sweet songs and tender words, are heavens, which having received Christ, in every opening of them returns Him again in some new form of blessed truth, by which the little life is fed and nourished into the likeness of the heavenly.

If the light becomes darkness in these heavens of the child's universe, if angry lightnings rend them and thunderings break through their peaceful depths, so that they are astonished and afraid, and all their singing birds have fled, what then shall the little mariner on a strange and stormy sea do? When the light of joy has given place to clouds upon his mother's face, for him the sun and moon are darkened, and the heavens are rolled together as a scroll, and the end of all things is at hand. O Love "bow thy heavens and come down; be glad" that this little clod of earth that lies so open to thine influence may rejoice, and so have power to grow. Garnished by the spirit of all light and beauty, shine, O heavens, with the glory that has been revealed in the face of Jesus Christ.

Battle Creek, Mich.

Willard Hall Echoes.

A SPEAKER said: "God magnifies your personality by putting Himself into you. Of yourself you can do nothing, and you may realize your incompetency, but when God has come into your heart you dishonor Him if you keep on saying, 'I can not do this work;' it is His power in you which makes it possible to do all things through Him who strengtheneth you. You have no right to lock up this power in your own heart and be silent or useless."

. . . . . .

Through the mail comes thanks for prayer offered last week and answered. A mother gave thanks for her boy who was convicted and saved in answer to prayer offered yesterday. Prayer was offered for three brothers, and again a dear sister asks that her two brothers might be prayed for. A father presents his son, a mother her lost girl, and a brother, who has struggled for several days with conviction, asks that he may have a knowledge of sins forgiven.

. . . . . .

A brother tells thus of his life four years ago: "Taught to be an atheist, degraded by sin and poisoned with impurity, convicted of sin, but unable in my own strength to overcome the obstacles, I walked down by the lake, and as I looked over the tossing waters I realized there must be a great overruling power, and in my frenzy I cried out, 'O God, if there be a God, come into my life and take the evil out of it.' And God came and has kept me ever since." Blessed be our God!

A man came into the hall on purpose to sign the pledge. He is wealthy, therefore sought out by others for his money. He had fallen until almost discouraged. Through prayer he began to feel that God would help him again, that there might be hope even for such a wreck. Pray for him, that the new lease of life and hope may grow in his heart; that his life may yet be a blessing to his family.

. . . . . .

During one of the testimony meetings when "Thankfulness" was the topic, three different fathers thanked God that their boys, who belong to the First Illinois volunteers, were coming home well; and prayer was asked for one father and mother who last heard from their son in a Cuban hospital, and were now waiting on the eastern shore for the transports, hoping that their boy might be among the arrivals. Joy and sorrow are so intermingled in our lives. Well is it for those who can turn to God in their extremity!

. . . . . .

An old man said: "I am a son of the living God, and I am on my way home." "I am free politically, and vote as I pray," said another. "Sweetly kept," murmured a dear sister. "There's a glory in my soul," called out a lad. Twenty-one testimonies in five minutes shows that men and women alike are thankful for God's gift of the Holy Spirit.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

Our Boys at Wasnington, D. C.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—On June 21, the soldiers, sailors and mariners' department of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U. opened its free lunch for the army boys visiting Washington. Our call for help through the city papers brought a ready and cheerful response in donations of provisions, money and helpers. In two months and a half our register bears the names of 6,100 soldiers, together with a few sailors and marines who have come to us, partaken of our lunch, which is always a good, substantial meal, and have learned to know the W. C. T. U. as it has never been known before. They have found earnest, motherly friends, have spent an hour in pleasant chat, rested, written letters home, and have gone away thanking us and saying that in each visit to Washington they would come to us and that they would never forget the W. C. T. U. We have a most efficient corps of workers. One lady is in charge each day with her own friends to assist, and each vies with the other in cordially welcoming and ministering to the wants of our brave boys. Several companies of the Signal Service have been stationed here, and as they have gone from our midst we have provided them with a bountiful traveling lunch.

Many letters have been received by different ladies in the work, from the boys and also from members of their families. The following will show that our efforts have not been in vain, and will go far in filling up our ranks and increasing the army arrayed against the saloon.

The following quotations are from a letter from one of the Signal Corps boys, who with his company, were provided with lunch as they left us, written from Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.:

". . . Of the particulars of the trip the one that deserves special mention is the eating of the luncheon given us by the W. C. T. U. That luncheon, which cannot be praised too highly for its sensible simplicity and the amount of nourishing food provided in it, went further to keep the men in good humor and good health than any thing else could have done. . . . The treatment we received at the hands of the members of the W. C. T. U. was such that it has left its influence for good on every man. To prove this I need only to cite the fact that the start from our state was remarkable for the few men on board the train who were not drunk. The trip from Washington was remarkable for having only one man on board the train under the influence of liquor. Therefore, I say with the other members of my corps, long live the W. C. T. U., and the noble and loyal ladies who made the first few weeks of our soldier life bearable. A canteen was our heritage when we came here, but our captain refused to allow it in our camp, and the men heartily seconded him. Thanking you for your kindness to me, and hoping you may ever let your light shine in the interest of humanity, I am ever your servant in the cause of the W. C. T. U."

A letter from the father and mother of one of our soldier boys reads thus:

"Dear Ladies of the W. C. T. U., Washington:

"Our son, a member of the Third New York Infantry, was so pleased with your cordial and generous entertainment of the soldier boys at your rooms, where he said 'it seemed just like home, and the ladies just like mothers,' that we take great pleasure in writing you and thanking you for ourselves and all the mothers and fathers of the dear boys in the army, for your good work in making them welcome when so far from home and mother influence. Your home comforts will do a great deal to make the boys love you and your society, and they will be kindly disposed in the future to help along the cause when they return home and have a chance. They now see the practical workings of the W. C. T. U. and the home you make for them in Washington will not be forgotten when they return to their respective cities and see your familiar sign. It will have a new meaning to them and many a returned soldier may be expected to drop into the W. C. T. U. rooms who never went there before. He spoke of your visits to Camp Alger and the good things you took them. As our son is generally very reticent we were doubly pleased to hear him speak so loudly in praise of your work for the soldiers. He is the war correspondent for the Elmira Gazette, and has written full descriptions of your efforts and kindness in his regular letters to the paper, which have been duly published. Yours most cordially."

Camp Alger is being rapidly vacated, although there are at least 10,000 soldiers there at the present time. Possibly, in another week they will be gone. At Fort Washington and Sheridan's Point, a few miles down the Potomac River, the Fifteenth Pennsylvania Regiment is stationed; at Washington Barracks, in our midst, are to be found some 300 convalescents, cared for in a field hospital, and at Fort Myer are about 700 very very sick boys, some, of course, gradually recovering, while others are languishing on beds with fever and other diseases, watched over by trained nurses, who are ever faithful to their duties. These nurses when off duty a short time come to see us. Appeals have recently been received telling of the great need just now of help for the sick at Camp Alger, and last Saturday (29th inst.) Mrs. Platt, District president, and Mrs. Edson, treasurer of this department, visited the camp, carrying all kinds of delicacies for the sick, which they personally distributed to those in need, taking to each with these things words of cheer and comfort.

We desire to acknowledge at this time the generous supplies sent us by W. C. T. Unions in Bloomsburg, Pa., Cincinnatus, N. Y., Chillicothe, O., Frederick, S. D., Hammondsport, N. Y., Lincoln, Va., Mill Hall, Pa., Morrisonville, N. Y., Nassau, Del., Northville, L. I. (N. Y.), Plattsburg, N. Y., South Haven, Mich., and Webster, N. Y., and also from the American Tract Society of New York of jellies, fruit juices and many other delicacies for the sick, comfort bags, well filled, towels, nightshirts, rolled bandages, sheets, pillows and pillow cases, soap, wash cloths, handkerchiefs, literature and money. These things have been judiciously distributed, and we are so thankful that we have had them to enable us the better to minister to the sick and those in need of other than camp fare and of other things for their comfort.

Our department has sent through its own efforts sixteen boxes of delicacies and comforts to hospital ships and army hospitals at the front, as well as aiding the sick near by. We were happy through the kind offices of the medical referee of the pension office—Dr. Raub, who is the husband of one of our superintendents—who solicited help from the clerks of the pension office to supply the hospital at Fort Myer with two hundred yards of rubber sheeting, which was very much needed.

The soldiers, sailors and marines' department of the W. C. T. U. in Washington is separated into divisions composed of twenty local superintendents. They have all proved themselves equal to the emergency during this war, and although peace once more dawns upon us, we will continue the free lunch, and also the work among the sick as long as there is need of such work. It will doubtless be some months yet before the soldiers have all left here, except, of course, those of the regular army who are always stationed here, and no fear but that we will care for them. As soon as our labors are somewhat lightened, we shall make an effort to establish a W. C. T. U. home for our "boys in blue," and trust that we will meet with the same success which has attended us in caring for them during the war. But for these grand, God-given women, who are banded together in this department, this work could not have been accomplished. I wish each name could be written here, but we know they are all "written there." They have done the work and deserve all the praise.

LAVINIA H. CHASE,
Supt. Soldiers' and Sailors' Dept.
W. C. T. U. District of Columbia.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 1, 1898.

The Music of our Chieftain's Orders.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—What a glorious thing it is to be signal people in a great cause, to keep the beckoning light of truth ever out, to signal both those who are watching for the beacon and those who, though not watching, still see it and are warned away from danger. I send you the words of "Our Chieftain's Orders," for publication. Some of your readers who have not yet had the ode set to music wish to read the words.

The music was composed by Mr. Oscar Hatch Hawley, of Buffalo, N. Y., and I will tell you the incident relating to it. When I was attending our National Convention in Buffalo last November, Mr. Hawley, a member of the editorial staff of the Buffalo Courier, then a perfect stranger to me, recognizing me as a song writer, asked if I would not give him words of mine to set to music. We had some pleasant conversation which ended in my taking his address and saying that when I had something wanting voice I would remember him. When I wrote "Our Chieftain's Orders," his request occurred to me, and I forwarded him a copy to Buffalo. He was a member of the Ninth Infantry band and had been called into the government service, and the answer came from Madison barracks, N. Y., that he was delighted with the words; that they had inspired him at once and that the music was already partly written. Next he wrote me a few weeks later from Tampa, Florida, saying he had been sadly ill from exposure, but had just finished the music, while yet very weak; that on the field with martial music and scenes on every side the words of the marching chorus gave him an inspiration that was irresistible. And so he sent it with his Godspeed to me and the W. C. T. U. while he went on with the forces to Cuba. While he has been at the front doing musical and hospital service I have had the ode—his ode and mine, published. Since the music of this Frances Willard tribute came to us when its composer was under marching orders for his country, it has an added sacredness, and as some of its reviewers say, seems like a national anthem.

I think he will forgive the liberty I take if I quote you from the last letter I had from him, dated Santiago de Cuba, July 24, which, on account of the delay mails are subjected to to be disinfected, was three weeks in reaching me: "When I wrote you last I said I was something of a peaceful patriot, and did not dream of being in battle, yet on the first of July I was in the thick of that terrible fight, when the San Juan block house was stormed, and for the next two days was under heavy fire. It would take a very long letter to tell you all about it, and so I will only say that while screaming shells were flying through the air, shrapnels bursting on every side, minie balls whistling around my head like hail, I was calmly binding the wounds of the maimed and easing the last moments of the dying. Mrs. Oberholtzer, you may read of battles, and think of them, but you can never, never imagine how terrible they are. I was never afraid of death in the battles of July 1, 2, 3, 10, 11 and 12, but my heart was wrung with anguish as I saw the noble men cut down on every side while fighting for their country. Ah, battle is a terrible, a barbarous thing, a relic of mediæval times, and should be relegated to the rear in Christian nations like ours.

"I am glad our hymn is being published. The music was written at the front under martial inspiration, and I hope to have good news of 'Our Chieftain's Orders.'"

Now with this little introduction to Mr. Hawley, the composer of the music to our memorial ode, and the words printed in this issue, I trust, dear friends, you will make its further acquaintance, and sing it at your conventions, at your meetings and in your homes.

Very lovingly yours to "press on and on and on," (MRS.) S. L. OBERHOLTZER.
1905 Tioga Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Temperance Movement in Denmark.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—The Denmark Temperance Society held its annual meeting in Nyhjabing on Morso, July, 1898. Between five hundred and six hundred delegates were present, according to Dansk Afholdsblad. The meeting was opened with public worship in the church. The Rev. Mr. Heiberg preached. The president, Mr. Cl. Johannsen, stated that the society had made steady progress from year to year. In 1892 it had 23,000 members; in 1895, 33,752 members; in 1897, 46,000 members, and in 1898, it had 51,153 members. Mr. Cl. Johannsen was re-elected as president with all but two or four of the votes cast. This large vote shows how highly he is esteemed and how much his faithful work is appreciated by the Danish temperance people. Editor Wm. Carlsen was also re-elected manager. Mr. Nelsen-Gron, M. P., and Mr. Kishegaard were also elected managers.

A number of questions of local interest were discussed by the delegates. A society is organized among the teachers, who are members of the Denmark Temperance Society, called The Denmark Temperance Society Teachers' League, with about one hundred and thirty members. The object of this League is to introduce as far as possible voluntary scientific alcohol instruction in the Danish public schools, to give lectures in the seminaries where the teachers are educated and at teachers' meetings, so as to make as many teachers as possible acquainted with the object of this League. The Danish government seems to be favorably disposed to this movement, and it has recommended that a suitable school book giving information regarding the bad effects of alcohol on the human organism, should be introduced in the public schools where scientific alcohol instruction was desired. The leading spirit in this far-reaching movement is the staunch and enthusiastic Danish temperance reformer, Mr. C. Wagener. Mr. Yde Kirk and others are also doing valuable work in connection with this movement. We congratulate our Danish temperance friends that they have inaugurated scientific alcohol instruction in the public schools wherever practicable. Alcohol instruction in the schools is doing wonders in the United States. There is good reason to believe that the decrease per capita in the consumption of distilled drinks in this country is, to a great extent, due to the influence of scientific temperance instruction in the public schools. If alcohol instruction can bear such golden fruits in America, there is good reason to believe that it also will be fruitful in Danish soil. It is hoped that the work which these Danish temperance reformers are endeavoring to introduce in the public schools of that country may be received with favor by the teachers and the community at large. The Danish temperance movement is progressing finely under the wise directions of its efficient and zealous leaders.

(REV.) CARL F. ELTZHOLTZ.

Milwaukee, Wis., 458 7th Ave.

Miss Willard's First Appearance in Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—Doctor Byrd, pastor of the Central M. E. Church South, where Miss Willard had often lectured, gives the following reminiscences of his first acquaintance with her as a public speaker.

It had been announced that Miss Willard would speak in McKendree church, a startling innovation on Southern customs, where home was considered woman's sphere, and her appearance on a public platform was an unheard of occurrence.

Dr. Byrd, then a student at Vanderbilt University, had heard one Methodist pastor say to another, "Let us go to McKendree and help Brother ——, for he has a woman on his hands." It seemed to him that this would be an opportunity not only for amusement, but plenty of fun, and a lively theme of conversation at the breakfast table the next morning. Dr. Byrd describes the result of his decision to hear Miss Willard in this wise:

"It was the last year of my student life at Vanderbilt. My roommate and classmate was the most brilliant and interesting young man it was ever my good fortune to meet. In social life his manner was so hearty and winning that my heart was drawn out to him in love like that of David for Jonathan. In intellect he soared far above his fellows. His morals were irreproachable, though not grounded on religion, and his lax views in regard to revelation and an unworldly life came near turning me aside from the profession to which I had felt called by a voice divine.

"In his companionship, intent on anything but intellectual enjoyment, I entered McKendree church. When Miss Willard stepped on the platform, in the maturity of beautiful womanhood, her first sentence appealed so powerfully to our reason and higher nature that all thoughts of mirth or criticism were dissipated, and we listened with rapt attention. I glanced at my friend when she had reached a pathetic part of her lecture, and saw tears glistening in his eyes, while my own were suffused with sympathetic drops.

"At the close of the service, in accordance with Miss Willard's usual custom, the pledge was circulated. My mind was fully made up, and without hesitation I affixed my signature, though up to that time, as since, I have never tasted intoxicating drinks. My friend hesitated and finally braced himself up and refused the proffered pledge with the exclamation, 'I am man enough to control my appetites. I will not sign away my liberty.'

"The term closed, and we parted each to follow his chosen pursuit in life; and though regretting his tendencies to self-indulgence my admiration for J. was unabated. 'I shall vote for you for President of the United States to whatever party you may belong,' were my parting words, as I felt that office only was commensurate with his rare abilities.

"Two years afterward he married one of Nashville's fairest daughters, and the wedding was as brilliant as wealth and the highest social position could make it.

"Two years later, and the Nashville American, in startling headlines, announced the suicide of its most brilliant and popular lawyer. Dissipation had resulted in defalcation, and in the presence of his young wife, a pistol shot by his own hand put an end to a life no longer endurable."

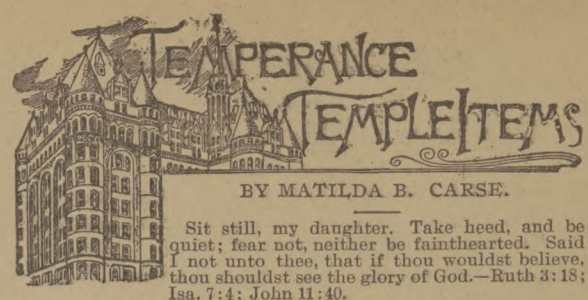
A FRIEND.

More Words About Vivisection.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—An article against vivisection in your paper suggests a few more words on the subject.

Why is it that so many of us believe that we are in all ways more civilized than our forefathers? It seems impossible to realize that in the past (even then not too remote) when our ancestors lighted their fires with flint and steel, and made their journeys on horseback, they were no less intelligent on some subjects than we, and had, in truth, many ideas worth having.

If, indeed, the past were bright with thought and intelligence, what shall we say of the present? Is it not darkened into midnight shades by some of our modern scientific crudities? Did our forefathers allow vivisection in the public schools? Did they ever dream of such unutterable intellectual darkness as that shown forth by a teacher of physiology, who cut up a living cat before a class of young students?



The dying poet asked for "more light"; and we all ask for it in our hearts, and many of us put the request into words. How is this increasing brilliancy to come to us? Shall we seek it by gaining mere abstract facts, at any and every cost? Does education mean to cram as many isolated facts as possible into the plastic young brain, without regard to the utility of those facts, with (in truth) an utter disregard of the rights of all sentient creatures—those rights which, first of all, exempt them from the willful infliction of torture and misery?

It is an old-fashioned idea, one frowned down by modern heresy and skepticism, that we are going on toward the "perfect day"; but like some other old-fashioned notions it is a safe and reliable theory to follow. Were it taken as the rule of life by all those who teach our children, we should not be constantly told that progress consists in those things which must of necessity harden and brutalize all who witness them, but we should find that to progress, means to look into life and its secrets indeed, but to do so lovingly, in such ways and by such means as shall make us tender to the defenseless beasts, rather than look upon them solely as material for our scientific amusement. Yours respectfully,

A. MORRIS.

79 Van Courtlandt Park Ave., Yonkers, N. Y.

THE setting of a great hope is like the setting of the sun. The brightness of our life is gone. Shadows of evening fall around us, and the world seems but a dim reflection,—itself a broader shadow; we look forward into the coming lonely night. The soul withdraws into itself. Then stars arise, and the night is holy.—H. W. Longfellow, "Hyperion."

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Sit still, my daughter. Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, neither be fainthearted. Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God.—Ruth 3:18; Isa. 7:4; John 11:40.

THE Minnesota state W. C. T. U. convention was held at Glencoe, August 23–26. It passed a resolution to stand by the Temple. At the Johnson county, Neb., W. C. T. U. convention, held August 30, they voted to raise $100 to place the name of Johnson county on the Nebraska tablet in Willard Hall. At the sixth district W. C. T. U. convention of Nebraska, held September 1, 2, a very strong resolution indorsing the Temple was passed. The closing paragraph is as follows: "Resolved, As societies and individuals, we will uphold the Temple enterprise with our gifts of money and by our influence, and by affirming our loyalty to the undertaking and our confidence in its success." "At the W. C. T. U. district convention, held at Oskaloosa, Ia.," Mrs. A. A. Drummond writes, "a resolution to stand by the Temple was passed without a dissenting voice." Lorain county, O., W. C. T. U. and Monroe county, N. Y., W. C. T. U. send resolutions of sympathy and loyalty to the Temple. The twenty-fifth district Ohio W. C. T. U., which includes Cleveland, passed a strong resolution in favor of the Temple a day or two ago.

✠

"When we received the Temple Trustees' letter," writes Mrs. Drummond, president of the Richland, Iowa, W. C. T. U., "it was read to the members of the union with heaving breast and tearful eyes, and it so appealed to all our hearts that we decided to give our fears to the winds and go on collecting the money we had started to raise for the Temple." Mrs. Lucia H. Additon, Portland, Ore., writes that the four W. C. T. unions of that city held a meeting a few days ago and were addressed by Rev. J. Q. A. Henry and Rev. Bradford, both of Chicago. They spoke in behalf of the Temple, and all the members of the unions stood solidly for it.

✠

"I have sent $100," writes Mrs. Anna E. Halvorson, DesMoines, Ia., "not only to help the Temple, but as a memorial to my little boy who died about a year ago—Alfred Chr. Halvorson. I wish to have his name inscribed on the Iowa tablet in Willard Hall. He was a temperance boy and had signed the triple pledge."

The Pittsfield, Ill., W. C. T. U. has completed its $100 pledge. The Raymond, Mo., W. C. T. U. has also completed its pledge of $100. So also has the Clyde W. C. T. U. of New York. The Beaver Dam, Wis., union has paid its last installment on its $100 pledge. "The fourteenth district Iowa W. C. T. U. sends a check for $100 to place the name of their loved district president, Lora A. Bennett, on the Iowa tablet in Willard Hall," writes Mrs. Maggie E. Haworth.

✠

Mrs. Evalyn Graham, Newark, O., is one of the most devoted and unselfish workers in our white-ribbon army. Her work for the Temple has been heroic. A cultured woman possessed of every grace to shine in society of high position (her husband being superintendent of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad) yet she foregoes a life of ease and works in season and out for all for which our society stands. A statement lies before me of her personal work for the Temple of late. It includes addressing members of churches, clubs and unions—a collection being taken at each gathering—for which she encloses $57.82. This noble woman has earned in this way almost $1,000 for the Temple, of which $200 was her own personal gift.

✠

Our beautiful picture of Frances Willard is greatly admired by all, and is proving easy to sell. Grace R. Kleespie, of Conrad, Iowa, writes: "I was out to canvass yesterday afternoon for a few hours—made five calls and sold three pictures. I took my outfit over to the W. C. T. U. this afternoon and sold one picture. Mamma also took one, making in all five pictures, with just a few hours work."

Our Children.

The Boy and the Sparrow.

ONCE a sweet boy sat and swung on a limb,
On the ground stood a sparrow-bird looking at him.
Now, the boy he was good, but the sparrow was bad,
So he shied a big stone at the head of the lad,
And it killed the poor boy and the sparrow was glad.

Then the little boy's mother flew over the tree—
"Tell me, where is my little boy, sparrow-bird, please?"
"He is safe in my pocket," the sparrow-bird said,
And another stone shied at the fond mother's head,
And she fell at the feet of the wicked bird, dead.

You imagine, no doubt, that the tale I have mixed
But it wasn't by me that the story was fixed;
'Twas a dream a boy had after killing a bird.
And he dreamed it so loud that I heard every word,
And I jotted it down as it really occurred.

How Tom and Otto Helped the L. T. L.

A True Story.

BY M. EUGENIA DAUGHERTY.

TOM and Otto entered the hall where the Loyal Temperance Legion held their regular weekly meetings just as Miss Maud Ritter was trying to impress upon the minds of the little girls and boys before her the importance of the pledge, "endeavor by all honorable means to help the cause of temperance." The lesson for the day was "cigarets," and Tom and Otto listened intently to all that was said.

After the close of the meeting they walked home together in earnest conversation. They were neighbors and "chums," and could be seen together at all times and places. As they neared Tom's gate Otto was heard to say, "I know what it is to endeavor by all honorable means to help our cause. I have already asked mamma not to send me for the beer (Otto's people were German, and could see no harm in beer), so you see I can help that way."

"What can I do?" exclaimed Tom. "We never have anything like that about the house."

"Oh, I don't know," carelessly answered Otto, as he bounded across the street to his own home.

Tom stood just where Otto left him for some time in deep study, but think as he would, he could see no way by which he could help even a little, and unless he was helping he did not consider that he was keeping his pledge. Presently he went around the house and began to do his evening chores, whistling softly to himself all the time. After all was done and supper over, he at once went to bed, only to toss and tumble in a very restless manner for some time, but suddenly he laughed aloud at his thoughts, which must have been very satisfactory, for in a few moments he was sound asleep.

The next morning he was up bright and early, eagerly waiting and watching for his friend, and while at the breakfast table he heard Otto's signal, a low, shrill whistle; he at once answered it, and after getting his cap and bidding his mamma goodby, he and Otto started off down the street talking in low and earnest tones, and soon disappeared around the corner. Mamma wondered as she watched them through the window, where they were going for their morning's sport.

Nothing more was seen of the boys until dinner time, when they came "pell mell" into the dining room, declaring they were as hungry as bears. Otto had gained permission to stay to dinner, and mamma noticed many mysterious glances at the table. Tom said they had decided to play in the back yard all afternoon, so as soon as the meal was over they both bounded out the door.

After a while mamma saw smoke near the kitchen door and went out to see what it meant. She found two very happy looking boys dancing around a small fire, chuckling with delight. Of course mamma was anxious to know what it all meant, and Tom explained to her all about the pledge and how he could not think of any thing he could do to help others to do right until he went to bed and thought of some boys he had seen smoking discarded cigars and cigarets. He made up his mind then and there to gather them up himself and burn them, and that would keep the boys from smoking them, and he could help the L. T. L.

That was where he and Otto had been all the morning. Mamma praised them both, for although their way of helping was different from any she had ever heard of, still the spirit was there, and mamma was very proud of them.

Little Bob Stood the Test.

THE "Blue Line" street car stopped at the corner, and an anxious looking young woman put a small boy inside.

"Now, Bob," she said, as she hurried out to the platform again, "don't lose that note I gave you. Don't take it out of your pocket at all."

"No'm," said the little man, looking wistfully after his mother, as the conductor pulled the strap, the driver unscrewed his brake, and the horses, shaking their bells, trotted off with the car.

"What's your name, bub?" asked a mischievous-looking young man sitting beside him.

"Robert Cullen Deems," he answered.

"Where are you going?"

"To my grandpa's."

"Let me see that note in your pocket."

The look of innocent surprise in the round face ought to have shamed the baby's tormentor; but he only said again, "Let me see it."

"I tan't," said Robert Cullen Deems.

"See here; if you don't, I'll scare the horses, and make them run away."

The little boy cast an apprehensive look at the belled horses, but shook his head.

"Here, bub, I'll give you this peach, if you'll pull that note half way out of your pocket."

The boy did not reply, but some of the older people looked angry.

"I say, chum, I'll give you this whole bag of peaches if you will just show me the corner of your note," said the tempter. The child turned away, as if he did not wish to hear any more, but the young man opened the bag and held it just where he could see and smell the luscious fruit.

A look of distress came into the sweet little face. I believe Bob was afraid to trust himself; and when a man left his seat on the other side to get off the car, the little boy slid quickly down, left the temptation behind, and climbed into the vacant place.

A pair of prettily gloved hands began almost unconsciously to clap; and then everybody clapped and applauded, until it might have alarmed Bob if a young lady sitting by had not slipped her arm around him, and said, with a sweet glow on her face,

"Tell your mamma that we all congratulate her upon having a little man strong enough to resist temptation and wise enough to run away from it."

I doubt if that long, hard message ever reached Bob's mother, but no matter; the note got to his grandmother without ever coming out of his pocket.—Youth's Companion.

The Difference.

TWO little girls were sitting near a brook in the woods.

"Listen to that noisy brook," said one; "it scolds and scolds. I wish it would keep quiet."

"Why, sister, it is not scolding; it is singing," said the other.

"The leaves are falling from the tree. How bare and ugly they look," cried the first speaker.

"Oh, but it is so pleasant to gather the leaves," was the reply; "then we see more of the blue sky, and the sun shines on us better."

The other frowned angrily and said: "Your ears and eyes must be made differently from mine."

Ah! children, the difference was not in the ears and the eyes, but in the heart. If the heart is right, the brook will sing, not scold; the sky will look blue, and through the bare branches God's love will shine.—Selected.

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—One of the cousins wants to know if I don't think your little letters are all sweet and pretty, and I can answer very heartily that I most certainly do. You can hardly understand what a pleasure it is to get so many letters from little friends in different places, each one expressing a loving thought for me and an interest in our little circle. Emely Drayer asks if she is welcome to the Cozy Corner, and I think I can speak for you all and tell her that she is very welcome indeed. She wants some of my girls to write her, and I am sure she will make a pleasant correspondent. I have in mind a niece named Bessie Simpson, who has written me several charming letters, and I think she is about Emely's age. I don't remember her address, but perhaps she will see this and consider herself properly introduced to the new cousin. How are the Cozy Corner Clubs coming on? Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little boy ten years old and I want to join the Cozy Corner. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL. I have a baby brother eleven months old, his name is Willard Dow.

WALTER M. BRINK.

Emerson, Neb.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little boy eight years old and live in Philadelphia, but mamma sent me to a beautiful farm near Chestertown, Md., named White Hall, for my vacation. All of the family are white-ribboners and take THE UNION SIGNAL, and when I go home I am going to join the L. T. L. and work for temperance.

Your nephew, HARRY E. WILDER.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little girl nine years old and I live at Niagara Falls. I am visiting my Grandma Prudden who takes THE UNION SIGNAL, and I like to read the Cozy Corner. Grandma has a sister, Bessie L. Scovell. She is state president of the W. C. T. U. of Minnesota. Your loving niece, SUSIE J. ALLEN.

Millville, N. Y.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I think the letters your little children have been writing are very sweet and pretty, don't you? My mamma and I belong to the Central W. C. T. U. here in Kansas City. I am nine years old and I would like to join the Cozy Corner.

Yours lovingly, LUCY QUEAL.

Kansas City, Mo.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I have a little brother named Douglas, and a darling baby sister named Constance. My mamma belongs to the W. C. T. U., and Douglas and I wear the white ribbon. We heard Miss Willard lecture in Buffalo. She kissed both Douglas and me. Douglas and I are both going to be temperance workers like papa and mamma. Your loving niece, Benzonia, Mich. THEODORA A. RODGER.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a temperance girl, as I think all the Cozy Cornerers are, or at least ought to be. My father is a temperance man, mamma is a W. C. T. U. woman and both of my grandmas are W. C. T. U. women, so you see we are a temperance family. I have three brothers and no sisters, so I would like to have some of the nieces correspond with me. Some girl of about my own age, thirteen years. We used to have an L. T. L. in our town but have none now. I only wish we had. I am a member of the Christian Endeavor Society, of which I am secretary. I'll close by asking the question, "Am I welcome to the Cozy Corner?"

Ostrander, O. EMELY DRAYER.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

37.

A CHARADE.

My first is always for.
My second is never low.
My third is always busy.
My fourth with saloons we do.
My whole is the nation's need.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 8.

No. 36. Constantinople.

Correct answer to No. 34 was sent by Willa Myrlyn Bordwell, Stillwater, Minn.; to No. 35, by H. Lela B. Johnson, Waltonville, Ill., and Lucy M. Dean, North Ferrisburg, Vt.

All communications for Children's Page should be sent to THE UNION SIGNAL office, The Temple, Chicago.

UNION SIGNAL

HAND WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON, MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Lord gave the word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host.—Psa. 68:11.

Official Call for National Convention.

THE twenty-fifth annual Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet in the People's church, St. Paul, Minn., November 11 to 16, 1898.

The basis of representation to this Convention is as follows: The General Officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, together with the four General Officers of each state and the state V secretaries, the boards of National superintendents, organizers and evangelists, chairmen of standing committees, presidents of affiliated interests, editors and publisher of the official organ of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and editors of state W. C. T. U. papers, are ex-officio members of the Convention. In addition there may be one delegate-at-large from each state and territorial union and one additional delegate for each five hundred paid up members, also one delegate for each fifty dollars which shall have been paid into the National treasury from the Loyal Temperance Legion.

It is earnestly hoped that this year the attendance may be full and representative. Since the number of delegates elected depends so largely upon the promptness with which the dues shall be paid and the proportionate amount forwarded to the National treasurer, it is urged upon each member of every local union to see to it that she be not in arrears and also upon each county, district and state officer to urge promptness, not upon the local union alone, but upon their respective treasurers in forwarding the dues.

The sending out of this official call is a sadder event this year than ever before. Since the clans were summoned last year we have passed through the deep waters of a sorrow such as, from the very nature of her whom we mourn, could have come to but few organizations. She whom we so loved, and who for so many years so grandly led our hosts, has passed beyond our sight. For a season we are separated. Our faith claims that she has not left the work nor lost interest in it, and yet the human heart will claim the visible presence of the loved one; we cannot fail to "sigh for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still." Therefore, our coming together at St. Paul will be fraught with far more of pain than of gladness, and yet, because the work still remains, because of our very love for her, let us come together in the strength of numbers, and above all in the strength of the Lord our Leader to do the work for which she gave her life and to which she calls us with a renewed consecration.

This will not be alone a Memorial Convention. It will be the twenty-fifth Convention since the Crusade. The sacred memories of our God-inspired origin will be about us even more closely than in former years. We shall hope that as many as possible of that brave band of heroic women who counted not life dear unto themselves so that they might save the home, will be with us at St. Paul. There will be, we trust, a Crusade atmosphere about us through all those days, hallowing our grief, strengthening our faith, uplifting our spirits, leading us as our Crusade mothers were led, to "give to the winds our fears," to go forward to a new quarter of a century of conflict, of devotion to great principles and of faith in a God of righteousness. There will be sore perplexities before us in this Convention. A record of twenty-five years makes that inevitable. Let us believe that the God who called us into being has an open door through all difficulties if only we keep our eyes fixed singly upon Him and follow where He leads.

Dear sisters, the motto which your General Officers chose at the beginning of the year has come to mean more and more to us as the months have gone by—"I will trust and not be afraid." The God of our Crusade mothers is our God to-day. Surely He has other, greater work remaining for us if we will but measure up to that work. Shall we not each one, in the secret of her own heart, resolve that whatever one individual can contribute of consecration, of love, of the charity that thinketh no evil, of the hope that never faileth, that believeth all things and endures as "seeing Him who is invisible," that much we will give to swell the sum total of power which shall make this Convention the most notable in our history, even while the saddest, and that shall send us forth, chastened yet triumphant, to a new year of work for God and Home and Native Land.

Signed, on behalf of the National W. C. T. U.,
LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS,
Acting President.
KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON,
Corresponding Secretary.

Power to Develop the Best in Others.

IF we were asked to give Miss Willard's most striking characteristic, we should say that it lay in her estimate of others; the keen but appreciative judgment of their gifts, the faith in the nobility of their motives. It was this which made her such an exceptionally successful leader and at the same time gave her, her remarkable and helpful influence over all with whom she came in contact.

As an executive she accomplished a marvelous amount of work in many directions and she did it chiefly through her power of discerning and putting to use the talents of others. She was remarkably quick to discover the kind of work for which one was peculiarly fitted, quicker often than the person was, and she surrounded herself with the most efficient helpers who relieved her of all work that any besides herself could do. But not only did she discern the best mechanical and intellectual gifts of those about her, but she seemed also to look into their inmost souls and see, under all the weaknesses and shortcomings which conceal from common observers the noblest self, "the angel that each might be." To this angel of one's best self, Miss Willard always appealed. She treated every one as though she fully expected that this best self alone would have a voice in deciding his conduct. Miss Willard's friends realized keenly that she expected from them always and only their best, and there was not one of them who did not feel that to have her deeply and grievously disappointed in him or her was one of the severest of punishments, for every one regarded her approval as highest reward.

Not many years ago a graduate of the Northwestern University and of Garrett Biblical Institute related to us with evident gratification that on one occasion when Miss Willard visited his city and found him among the leaders of the temperance movement she said to him, "This is just where I would have expected to find you." This was the strong bond which held "her girls" in her teaching days to a sense of personal responsibility which they had rarely, if ever, experienced before. And it never entirely left them. The sense that Miss Willard expected them always to measure up to their highest possibilities of endowment and light followed them, as it did her other friends, throughout their lives, though separated, it might be, from her by many hundreds of miles and many years of time. To many such an one the thought of Miss Willard's faith in, and expectation for him, has been the inspiration which aroused him to his best effort, and held him to those high ideals of which she herself always seemed the embodiment.

A Character Sketch of Miss Willard.

MRS. BRAMWELL BOOTH, of London, has furnished us with one of the most appreciative and incisive sketches of Miss Willard's religious character that we have had the privilege of reading. We are particularly glad to print it in the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL, because the wish that this side of her life might be emphasized more particularly than has been done heretofore has been expressed, and because it is specially appropriate to read at the meetings upon her birthday, and we have long held it in reserve for this purpose. Mrs. Booth says:

"Frances Willard was of the family of the eternals. I loved her for her large heart, her high conception of human responsibility, her intenseness and her union with the spirit of righteousness. It seems to me that she was to be congratulated on three prominent facts in her life. First, I would name her faith. She was a daughter of love, a believer in labor, a disciple of freedom, a devotee of purity, but before all she was a believer. She was a Christian. She was a follower of the Nazarene. She says so. Nothing can be more beautifully clear on that point than this from her own pen: 'I dedicated myself anew . . . that day (a special festival in 1888 at her old home) to Christ and to His gospel, vowing that by His grace I would be a woman—in this and in every world where I might live—a woman whom the Lord could trust.' And again in 1894 she says: 'Wonderful uplifts come to me as I pass on, clearer views of the life of God in my soul. Indeed, it is the only life, and all my being sets toward it as the rivers to the sea. Celestial things grow dearer to me; the love of God is steadfast in my soul; the habitudes of a disciple sit more easily upon me; "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," is the deepest voice out of my soul. Receive it every instant, voluntarily given back to Thyself, and receive it in the hour when I drop this earthly mantle that I wear to-day and pass onward to the world invisible but doubtless not far off.' She reached this by a choice. When she was twenty years of age she made her public declaration of the choice of Christ as her Saviour and Master, or, as we Salvationists should describe it, she went to the penitent form. It was in the chapel she attended, together with other students of the Ladies' College, at an ordinary evening service, at the close of which the pastor gave an invitation to those who wished to join the church to come forward. A moment's pause, and a young woman moved out into the main aisle and with a firm step approached the altar. All eyes converged on her. It was Miss Willard. The effect on the congregation was electrical; for a few moments the solemnity of the occasion held all other feelings in check; but soon hundreds of faces turned to hundreds of others, filled with surprise and joy, and many an eye was moist with tears.

"Here was the originating force of her life and the cornerstone of her character. Her faith may not always have been, was not always equally vigorous. She suffered; she had dark passages; there were deserts and solitary places in her life; but her faith in God carried her on. Her work was the outcome of it. By faith, we may say, Frances Willard subdued kingdoms of prejudice, appetite and lust, wrought purity into the lives of multitudes and obtained promises which will last forever. And by faith, like Abel, she being dead, yet speaketh. Many women of fashion, beauty, wealth, intellect, genius, have been contemporary with her, but fifty years hence they will be of the forgotten dead. Their great gains or learned words will not enable them to speak to the world from the tomb. But our friend has obtained a better report than they, and offered a more excellent sacrifice, God testifying of her gifts, and by faith, she, being dead, yet speaketh.

"And her friends! Who were they? The good. What a thought of strength for all workers in God's name, for God's poor world, that the best in it are their friends. Even if for a time it does not quite appear because of ignorance and prejudice, yet it is true, and Miss Willard's friends were the good everywhere. The good who fight. She was not a flabby soul. The comforts of Christ's salvation involved in her mind the claims of His service. She was a woman of action. 'Let us make,' was the divine word ever on her lips. Hence she was one with the Salvation Army. We loved her because we felt she loved fighting for fighting's sake. I believe she greatly admired our dear people, because she saw in them those who could attack. The good who hope loved her. She had hopes of the world. Were they a little sanguine? Yes, so much the better. Did she think that the pure would soon see God and the meek very soon inherit the earth? Well, I am glad, I like it. The doubters are so many, and the shouters are so few, the people who see 'no sign of the rains of God' are so great in number. Such a vast host of cynics and vilifiers and critics lie all along the valleys, that when a Deborah arises who says the Lord shall sell Sisera into the hands of a woman, or cries, 'Arise, for the Lord hath delivered into your hand the host,' I praise God. I count it an honor that she counted me her friend.

"Her foes. How fortunate the Salvation Army has been in its enemies! How fortunate Miss Willard was! The saloon men! the impure! the defenders of lust! the pleaders for iniquity! the oppressors of the weak! the lovers of war! These were her foes. When I know a man's foes, then I will tell you what his heart is, and what his life is, and what his reward will be, and Frances Willard's life speaks to us by her foes. Their bitter words and angry sarcasms must often have deeply wounded her sensitive soul, but they never turned her aside or abated one iota the vigor with which she pressed forward her crusade. The devil can not afford to leave actively good people alone, and perhaps the greatest compliment one could pay to Miss Willard is to say that she kept him busy.

. . . . . .

"Her absence from our midst is a call to every woman to rise up and fill, if in ever so small a degree, the vacant place left by her promotion to glory."

Words from White-Ribboners Suitable for the Birthday Meeting.

WHEN the temperance reform shall emerge from the twilight valleys of unpopularity and assumed impracticability to the sunlit hilltops of assured victory—and this hour will come—then, bright and glorious among all who have dared and achieved for humanity, in golden letters of light, will stand the name of Frances Willard—our beloved Frances.—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman.

For the Christian Church to live one year on the plane Frances E. Willard lived on, would mean the conversion of the world.—Mrs. Frances Beauchamp.

We shall never see her like again, but may God in His infinite mercy grant that we may be truer and nobler because we have loved her.—Lady Henry Somerset.

Do we lack courage? Let us pray that some of the indomitable courage which she possessed may be ours. Are we inclined to criticise? Let us have her spirit of charity and love. In all my acquaintance with her, I think I never heard a disparaging word spoken of any worker that our beloved did not find some word of excuse for that one. . . . Let us in this divine presence, pledge to her, pledge to God, pledge to each other that we will be more loving, more faithful, more self-sacrificing, more devoted, and that we will honor her by honoring the God she loved and the work to which she gave her life and which she has left to us.—Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

Faith was as truly a ruling characteristic of her friendship as of her religious nature. She believed in God; He was the most real fact in the universe to her, but she also believed in men and women as sons and daughters of God, and because she believed in them, because she always saw the possible shining through the apparent, she raised them to a plane of belief in themselves. —Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson.

It mattered not how far away she wandered, nor under what flag she found temporary protection, she always returned to her native land and to the flag she loved above all others, with renewed feelings of loyalty and patriotism. The Stars and Stripes were to her an emblem of broader freedom than other countries knew, and thus indicated her own great and grand spirit. How painfully sad it is that the flag which is displayed from the platform—this flag which she loved so much to have draped in convention halls where she presided—how unspeakably sad that this flag should to-day wave over and protect the licensed liquor system! He only is a true patriot who is true to the highest and noblest instincts of his native land. . . We will cherish her parting message, "Tell the women not to forget their patriotism. And we will not give up the conflict until the Stars and Stripes shall cease to float over a legalized saloon."—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds.

There have never been such women as our white-ribboners; so large-minded, so generous, such patriots, such Christians. We have had a great, beautiful past, and the people don't know it; they think we are fanatics. It has been a great fight, and they'll never know what we have been through. Oh, how I want our women to have a new concept of religion; the religion of the world is the religion of love; it is a home religion; it is a religion of peace; and tell them—tell them not to forget it is a religion of patriotism. We have set up to be patriots, we white-ribboners, and we have fought amidst much ostracism. Tell our white-ribboners to study the New Testament; I love the New Testament. No human being has ever conceived as he should what the New Testament means by loyalty to Christ.—Miss Willard's words her last Sunday afternoon on earth, February 13.

Suggestions for a Public Meeting on Miss Willard's Birthday, September 28.

MEMBERSHIP week is crowned by the birthday of Frances E. Willard. If unions can have a public meeting on the Sabbath previous to the 28th or on the one following, the opportunity for doing good will be greatly enlarged. If it is not possible to have a public meeting either on a Sabbath or on Wednesday, the pastor may be willing to give a part of the prayer meeting hour on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Booth's characterization of Miss Willard's religious life in this issue would be an appropriate reading for such an occasion. It is hoped, however, that large numbers of the unions will secure time for an entire public service. It is not designed to make the day funereal, but to make it one which will tell for the temperance work and for the enlarging of our membership. The ten minutes' appeal for members should be packed full of information and should come red hot from the heart. It will then be strong, terse, full of intense feeling and religious fervor.

It would be well to reserve seats for the W. C. T. U., the Y's and the L. T. L's. They should march in with banners singing a marching song. If the L. T. L's have not had a Harvest Home meeting it would be impressive and pretty for all to place flowers before a picture of Miss Willard, and at the close of the meeting these could be sent to the sick.

Abundant material for an interesting meeting can be found in this issue of THE UNION SIGNAL and in the Memorial Number of THE UNION SIGNAL of March 10, and in "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."

SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM.

Singing, "There is a land of Pure Delight."

Prayer.

Anthem, by the choir, or "Rock of Ages, Cleft for me," by the audience.

Scripture, 90th Psalm.

Singing by the L. T. L's.

Readings, Mrs. Booth's sketch, page 8 of this issue of THE UNION SIGNAL.

A Sketch by Miss Mary H. Lathbury in "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard," page 372.

Singing, "Gently Lead, oh, Gently Lead Us."

Tribute by Bishop John P. Newman, "The Beautiful Life," page 382.

Selections from Miss Willard's writings, see page 3 of this issue.

Singing, by the L. T. L's.

Selections from the words of white-ribboners. See page 9 of this issue.

Ten minutes' appeal for members based on what the W. C. T. U. has done, is doing, and ought to do.

Singing, by the choir, "Our Chieftain's Orders." For music, send to Mrs. Oberholtzer, see page 3 of this issue.

Solicit new members while the L. T. L. sing.

Close with "Blest be the Tie" and benediction.

In preparing the program it is essential to avoid making the exercises too long, hence discretion must be exercised in making selections from our suggestive program.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Late News From Miss Parrish.

THE Y column in THE UNION SIGNAL of September 1 contained a notice of the reported accidental death of Miss Belle Allen in the harbor of Yokohama, Japan, and a reference to her work for the W. C. T. U., as noted in a letter from Clara Parrish. Later news by mail is to the effect that our Y missionary was one of the party on the launch when the accident occurred. Miss Maud Simons was instantly killed, and Miss Allen very seriously injured. Miss Parrish's account of the accident is as follows:

"We were on the company's steam launch. As we left for the shore the captain was ordered to swing round into the best position for seeing the magnificent Empress and to give us a good chance to wave a final farewell to the friends. In doing this we ran alongside the Victoria, another large steamer that was also about ready to sail. Now, on the other side of this great vessel the junk, or sailboat, was moving, and both ships endeavored to round the stern of the Victoria at the same time. Five young ladies were standing on the deck on the side next the junk, and the junk's prow struck the two. All the girls were special friends of mine, and it would have been so natural for me to be with them, but when we left the Empress I said to them that I was too tired and a little seasick, so I would go inside and sit down. It was a terrible affair. If Miss Allen lives, she loses some of her senses and some of her members, the doctors very much fear."

Miss Parrish also sends the following item of interest: "The Y leaders in other countries will be glad to hear that because of the interest of her father, Miss Tami Mitani may be able to go abroad in the not very distant future, and also be permitted to give her whole life to our work. Mr. Mitani is a silk manufacturer who lost a fortune a few years ago, but he seems to be retrieving it now, and the sky looks very rosy for the daughter. An uncle, too, who is a member of Parliament, holds very progressive views and favors the plan. My joy is scarcely second to hers."

World's W. C. T. U.

Cape Colony.

THE ninth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony was held in Graham's Town, July 14 to 18, 1898. Miss T. M. Campbell, the Colonial president, met her executive at 9:30 on Thursday morning, and at 10:30 seventy-seven delegates were assembled in the Town Hall, which resounded with the happy greetings of friends, to many of whom, severed by long distances, the opportunities of meeting are rare.

Devotions were conducted by Mrs. McAndrew, of Port Elizabeth, the superintendent of evangelistic work. Miss Campbell opened the convention with a glad greeting to those assembled, and gave a short address as to the purpose of the convention. After the election of committees, the general report was read and adopted. There are now twenty-two unions in the colony, with a combined membership of 594; twenty Y unions, with 443 members and 180 honoraries.

The afternoon session opened with devotions. The minutes having been read and the roll called, the president gave her annual address to the convention, which was full of helpful thoughts.

She also gave the following statistics of progress during the five years of her presidency: "Numerically, we have not grown as we would have liked. There were then 349 members, there are now 594, which means that we have not quite doubled our membership. We have sustained losses through members leaving the Colony, and also through some unions growing discouraged and disbanding. In the latter case, however, I believe that most of those who were members continue to keep their pledge, but as they do not pay any fees, or report themselves in any way, we are unable to count them in. Five years ago we had eleven departments of work, we now have nineteen; I might really say twenty, as one department, that of the flower mission, is being vigorously prosecuted, although we have no superintendent for it. The Y's then numbered 287, they now number 443, the largest union being that of the Huguenot Seminary, Wellington, which shows what an enthusiastic teacher can do in a school. Would that more would go and do likewise!

"Our growth though slow has been steady, and there is a steadily growing sentiment spreading through the Colony in favor of total abstinence. While we would have been glad to have seen our numbers increasing so fast that we might have been within speaking distance of the World's banner, yet we are glad to see that which indicates a growth of principle in the hearts of those who join us, and we believe the time is coming when the Colony will be in the van in temperance politics in South Africa."

Miss Campbell expressed her thanksgiving for the retraction of Lady Henry Somerset on the purity question and showed the propriety of her being the leader of the World's Union, expressing also her desire that the W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony should be loyal to her.

A most hearty vote of thanks was given to Miss Campbell for her helpful address. Mrs. Brown was then introduced as a fraternal delegate from the Lancashire county union of the B. W. T. A. and received a hearty welcome. She spoke of the pleasure with which, on returning to her native land after twenty-three years' absence, she had responded to the request that she should bring the greetings of the Lancashire county union to the women of the Cape Colony who were engaged in the same great work.

Mrs. Denholm, of Woodstock, was next introduced as a fraternal delegate from the Women's Temperance Association of Woodstock, this association desiring to affiliate with the W. C. T. U. The Rev. and Mrs. Oates, of Somerset East, were introduced as visitors to the convention. The Rev. Oates, in expressing his sympathy with the work in which we are engaged spoke of woman's influence having grown beyond the family circle, and wished us Godspeed. The Rev. S. Helm was introduced as the bearer of the welcome and good wishes of the Congregational union and clergy of Grahams Town, and expressed his appreciation of the work to which we have put our energies. A telegram of good wishes was received from the Rev. Davies, of Queenstown.

Business was then resumed and the treasurer's report was read. The total receipts for the year had been £167, 3s, 11½d; the expenditure £123, 14s, 6d, leaving a balance of £43, 9s, 5½d. The report of young women's work, read by Mrs. Mason, was adopted, and need was realized of increased effort among the young. The report on native work was then read by Mrs. Dower and was followed by prayer for the native work, conducted by Miss Campbell. After a short address by Mrs. Gedye, Lesseyton, on the difficulties of native work, and the abundance of God's help, the convention was adjourned.

The evening public meeting was most ably presided over by the mayor of Graham's Town, who welcomed the convention on behalf of the town, and in his speech referred especially to the help which the different branches of the W. C. T. U. were giving to the cause of temperance. Mrs. Helm, vice-president-at-large, welcomed the convention on behalf of the Graham's Town union, in a graceful speech, and the meeting was also addressed by the Hon. A. Wilmot, M. L. C. (who is ever ready to aid the W. C. T. U. in the Legislative Council), and the Revs. Cross, Stormont, Letcher and Helm. A collection was taken up by the Y's, and the meeting was then addressed by Mrs. Brown. She spoke of the British Women's Temperance Association, and of the work of its president, Lady Henry Somerset. The B. W. T. A. numbers in its ranks to-day women of all ranks and classes in society, banded together to oppose "the only enemy that Britain has to fear!" Besides other temperance bands for the young, there are to-day three million children in the Band of Hope. Miss Campbell returned thanks for the hearty welcomes which had been accorded to the convention, and spoke with much force of logic on home protection and prohibition.

An interesting item in this meeting was the presentation of the white-ribbon banner to the representative of the Queen's Town union. This banner was made and given by Miss Alice Palmer while she was in South Africa, to be presented each year to the union which had had the largest increase during the year in its subscribers to the White Ribbon of South Africa, which is the official organ of the Colonial W. C. T. U.

The convention was called to order on Friday morning at 9:30. Devotions were conducted by Mrs. McFarlane, of East London. After the reading of minutes and roll-call, the morning was occupied in the reading of the reports on press work (where there is great room for more activity). Our publications (on which there was a lengthened discussion relating to the White Ribbon for South Africa), the result of which was a resolution that the paper be continued on its former lines and that a financial editor be appointed to relieve Miss Campbell. As a further result of this discussion it is hoped that there will not only be a considerably increased circulation of our Colonial organs, but also of THE UNION SIGNAL and the White Ribbon of England. The reports on literature, fairs and expositions and on evangelistic work were cheering and stimulating to greater efforts.

After noontide prayer, the convention adjourned, and reassembled at 2:30 for the memorial service, which was conducted by Miss Campbell. Six members have been called home during the year, of whom Mrs. Ruzey, the former president of East London union, was the best known. After reference had been made to each by the representative of her union, Miss Campbell referred to our forerunner, Miss Willard. "She being dead, yet speaketh." "Let us be up and doing, for the night soon cometh."

After this service the Y's repaired to Shaw Hall, which enabled both sections to discuss questions relating to each respectively. Mrs. Murray not being present, the report on purity work was read by Miss Geard, of Port Elizabeth.

The W's resolved that an expression of loyalty be sent to the World's union from the W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony. About four o'clock the combined meeting again met in the Town Hall, and the reports on scientific instruction, juvenile work, and Bands of Mercy were read and adopted. Mrs. McKintosh, of Port Elizabeth, made an appeal for subscriptions for "The Children's Home" which is being built at Port Elizabeth, for it was not to be for Port Elizabeth only, but a home which would be available for homeless and destitute children from any part of the Colony. The convention then adjourned.

On Friday evening the Town Hall was filled with a most appreciative audience for the Y's evening meeting, at which Miss Anna Cummings presided. She opened the meeting with a short, but most inspiring address, on the meaning of the letters, Y. W. C. T. U., which were seen on so many of the banners on the platform.

The chief point of interest in this meeting was the Demorest gold medal contest for which there were three competitors. The Misses Laing, Nash and Slater, all of whom hold the silver medal from previous contests. The medal was awarded to Miss Slater, and Mrs. Brown, the distinguished visitor of the convention, was asked to present it, which she did in an appropriate address.

Five years ago Miss Cummings, of Wellington, presented the Colonial Y's with a banner bearing as its emblem the Arum lily. Since that time it has been to several parts of the Colony, as each year it is given into the keeping of the union which shows the largest increase of members during the year. Last year Uitenhage gained it. This year it has been won by the Huguenot Seminary Y's of Wellington, the members of that union having increased from twenty-nine to 116 since last convention. Miss McLennan, the president of the Uitenhage Y's, with gracious words kindly spoken, presented the banner to Miss Callahan, the president of the successful union, who clearly and modestly expressed her pleasure and thanks.

The pleasure of the meeting was enhanced by the rendering of songs and instrumental items during the evening by Y's and honoraries. A short recitation on "Collections," was given by Miss H. Geard, and a collection taken up by the

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

Y's in baskets decorated with white ribbon. The battle song of the Y's followed, and the doxology and benediction closed the meeting.

The convention was again called to order on Saturday at 9:30 A. M. After the usual preliminary business a nomination committee was appointed to receive the nominations for the general officers for the coming year. Miss Campbell conveyed to the convention a message from Mrs. Harvie stating that she could not consent to be nominated for the office of corresponding secretary for another year.

After the reading of the report on Demorest contests, of which seven had been held during the year, Mrs. McKintosh was called upon to report on the progress of the new book of recitations, of which she had had the superintendence during the year. She thought before being printed it should be augmented by further contributions, and all members were asked to send any they thought suitable either for Demorest contests, Bands of Hope or Crusaders.

The report on legislation and petition was followed by that on Y fellowship, both of which were adopted. The reports on franchise and periodicals were omitted. Miss Fredgold volunteered as financial editor of the White Ribbon for South Africa and was elected by acclamation.

A report was read from Johannesberg union and greetings were received from the Wynberg union and from Sister Amelia. A report was also read from Pretoria, with greetings. Pretoria would be glad to unite on Australian confederation lines.

An "at home" was held in the Town Hall on Saturday afternoon. The premier of the Cape Colony, Sir Gordon Sprigg, arrived in Graham's Town on that afternoon and visited the "at home," which was also largely attended by the leading citizens and friends, and musical selections were rendered by some of the Y's during the afternoon. The cakes at this function were remarkably beautiful and good, and were all made by the colored congregation of the Rev. S. Helm. The annual sermon was preached on Sunday afternoon, July 17, by Mrs. Brown. The Town Hall was filled, several young gentlemen going into the gallery to make sitting room for ladies.

In the evening a memorial service for Miss Willard was held, at which the Rev. S. Letcher gave an address, taking as a text Isa. 39:4, "What have they seen in thy house?" Mr. Letcher's address was an earnest appeal to all to use their personal influence on the side of temperance. Mrs. Brown and Miss Campbell each gave her personal recollections of Miss Willard. These were appropriately followed by "I know that my Redeemer liveth," most feelingly rendered by Mrs. Mitchell. Mrs. Helm closed the service with prayer.

On Monday morning the convention opened with a consecration service led by Mrs. Dower. During the service the names of the unions were called, each representative rising as her union was called, and giving a text or quotation which should serve as her union's motto through the coming year.

After roll-call and minutes the following officers were elected by ballot for the coming year: President, Miss Campbell; vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Helm; corresponding secretary, Miss Solomon; recording secretary, Miss Geard; treasurer, Miss Fisk.

Superintendents of departments were also elected. The officers then accepted their election, Miss Campbell saying she was glad of her re-election, because she hopes as president to represent the W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention.

Telegrams of greeting and congratulation were received from Mr. John Geard, and Mr. D. M. White, of Port Elizabeth, and from Mr. Blackburn, secretary of the South African Temperance Alliance. During the morning the convention was honored by the presence of Lady Sprigg for a few minutes. In a few words she said that though not formally identified with the organization she was a total abstainer, and had been heartily interested in the work of the W. C. T. U. all her life. The business of the morning consisted in the reading of the reports on organization, seamen and soldiers' mission and prison work, and the adoption of resolutions.

In the afternoon, after the usual devotion and preliminary business it was unanimously resolved that this convention accord a vote of thanks to all those who had so generously assisted in making it a success.

After singing "God be with you till we meet again," prayer was offered by Miss Campbell and the doxology sung. The ninth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony was then declared adjourned.

M. ABBOTT,
Hon. Sec. of Mowbray W. C. T. U.

Norway.

IT was with great pleasure that we welcomed Miss Agnes Slack to our beautiful Bergen, on Thursday, August 4. The pleasure that began in the anticipation of her visit was doubled when we saw her, and she has increased it for us daily by her charming personality, her wonderful enthusiasm for the W. W. C. T. U., and her sweet sympathy for us in our work here. Although she has been with us such a short time there is already much to tell of what she has done for us.

On Friday morning she went with me to our workhouse and the district prison. In the afternoon of the same day a drawing-room meeting was held at the national secretary's (Mrs. Elizabeth Espenak); there were about twenty ladies present, all white-ribbon workers in Bergen, as well as the national president, Miss Martine Johannessen, and the national treasurer, Miss Elisabeth Eckhoff. Miss Slack made us all feel, infinitely more than ever before, what a privilege it is to belong to the W. W. C. T. U. She was listened to with breathless attention by all present, as she in earnest and loving words explained to us how to work on departmental lines, and gave us an insight into the "do-everything" policy. The result of this educational meeting, it is hoped, will soon make itself evident in the adoption of departments by our branches. On Saturday evening Miss Slack gave an address on "The Religious Aspect of the Temperance Question," to an audience of between three and four hundred. She was listened to with great interest by both women and men, and it was easy to see that sympathy for the cause was aroused, and that hearts were reached. Several new members were enrolled.

On Sunday the various temperance societies had arranged a "Demonstration Day," on which to protest en masse against the drink traffic. A procession consisting of several thousand of men and women, in which Miss Agnes Slack and three hundred white ribbon women took part; public speeches in one of the big squares, and a monster meeting in the evening formed some of the features of the day. The streets were thronged with spectators all along the line of route, which was through the principal streets of the city. There were over forty beautiful banners carried in the procession, many of them bearing, in addition to the names and mottoes of their respective societies, strong sentences of disapproval of the drink traffic, some denouncing the samlag (Norwegian form of the Gothenberg system).

On Monday, the 8th, Miss Slack spoke for an hour on "Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools." There were several hundred teachers in the audience which numbered 1,500. Men as well as women were moved to tears by her eloquent and heart-stirring appeals. An address in English without an interpreter, was given by our indefatigable World's secretary on Tuesday evening, August 9. On Thursday evening the four branch societies in Bergen of the National W. C. T. U. invited Miss Slack to a "fest" (a kind of "at home") given in her honor. The National president heartily thanked Miss Slack for coming to Norway and for all she had done in Bergen. She asked her to greet all the white-ribbon sisters in England and America and wherever she might go, telling them that the Norwegian white-ribboners felt stimulated and encouraged by her visit to increased energy and zeal in the white ribbon work. Miss Martine Johannessen concluded by commending Miss Slack in earnest, loving words to God to bless and keep her. A member (Herr Lauritz Johannessen) of the International Supreme Lodge, I. O. G. T., made a speech in Miss Slack's honor. Other speeches were made, Miss Slack's replies calling forth much enthusiasm. A very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the presentation to Miss Slack of a floral bouquet from the "fest" committee.

On Saturday evening, the 13th, Miss Slack spoke to a most attentive audience. The subject of her address was "Some Objections to Total Abstinence Answered."

During part of Miss Slack's visit she was the guest of Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan, daughter of Norway's famous and beloved violinist, Ole Bull. Mrs. Vaughan was spending the summer at the family seat at Lysörn, twenty miles from Bergen.

New members were enrolled at the close of all the meetings. During next week Miss Slack addresses meetings in two towns south of Bergen, Egersund and Flekkefjord, and later she will go to Aalesund, Trondhjim and Kristiania, where meetings are arranged for her. She speaks on the 29th at Gothenburg and will be back in England a few days later.

ELIZABETH ESPENAK,
Hon. Nat. Sec. Norwegian W. C. T. U.

"A PERFECT FOOD—as Wholesome as it is Delicious."

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
BREAKFAST COCOA
"Has stood the test of more than 100 years' use among all classes, and for purity and honest worth is unequalled."
—Medical and Surgical Journal.
Costs less than ONE CENT a Cup.
Trade-Mark on Every Package.
WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.,
TRADE-MARK. Established 1780. DORCHESTER, MASS.

From the World's Secretary.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL COMRADES:—I know now as I never did before the great tie which must bind together "the English-speaking race." For the first time I am in a country whose language I can not understand. This is all the more trying as the Norwegians are so attractive; they are true and sturdy as their great rocks and mighty mountains. It was such a great pleasure last week to see Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan and Mrs. and Miss Shapleigh here. They drove me out to the beautiful country seat, quite a perfect little Moorish mansion, which Ole Bull built on his picturesque island, Lysörn, twenty miles from Bergen. The old boatman (who has been in the service of the family for thirty years) and his bright boy, Karl, were waiting for us on the shore and we quickly stepped into the boat and were rowed across the half mile of fjord. All the time I looked ahead at the rocky island home, with its background of rocks and trees, the Norwegian flag proudly waving a welcome to us from the flag post.

As we sat in the music room with the pianos, pictures, wreaths and so many national and international tributes all around given to Ole Bull, I remembered how Norway loved him as the man who did such an enormous work in bringing the art of Norway before the world—for he was more than a great musician, he was a great personality, a great national force in Norway as well as a world wide leader in the musical world.

Mr. Bull made twenty miles of garden paths on the island, and during the afternoon we wandered about, and I said, "what a haven of rest this would have been to Miss Willard." In the calm of the setting sunlight we rowed on the fjord, not a sound to be heard beyond the dipping of the oars, and I felt the peace of this beautiful Norwegian "Island of Light." Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan is simply charming, and I believe she will become a power in our work. I left the island home and its delightful occupants with regret but with a beautiful memory which can not leave me.

I am busily at work. Our national officers here are three most capable women. Miss Johannessen, the president (in place of the Countess Wedel-Jarlsberg), is a strong, quiet, far-seeing woman, sterling and clever. Mrs. Espenak, the secretary, is English; she speaks Norwegian like a native and is one of the quickest, readiest, most capable secretaries I ever met. Miss Ekhoff, the treasurer, is "pure gold." Every member in Norway (wherever I have been) wears her white-ribbon badge. Our work is growing here most beautifully; the meetings everywhere have been very large. I am starting the departmental system which will doubtless not only attract many new members, but it will also create workers and bring in wider interests, wider sympathies. Please, all World's superintendents and others, note the address of the National president is Froken Johannessen, Nordahl Brunsgade 5, Bergen, Norway.

Your affectionate comrade,
AGNES E. SLACK.

Chili.

A MOST beautiful and impressive memorial service was held in May in Concepcion, Chili, in honor of our departed and fearless leader, Miss Willard. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. The windows were banked with flowers, a solid white floral pillow encircled with ivy and with the initials F. E. W. of ivy was placed in front of the pulpit. Miss Willard's picture occupied a prominent place. The church was well filled. Beautiful tributes to her memory were given. The music chosen was her favorite hymns. We, in common with the rest of our sisters, mourn our loss, but wish to prosecute more vigorously the work she has left in our hands. Our union has sent two dollars to the Temple this year, held one parlor social, at which a charming description was given of the World's Convention at Toronto by our delegate, Miss Marion Milks. At the last meeting of the W. C. T. U. large aquarelle pictures of Miss Willard were presented by the president to the boys' and girls' colleges.

Yours for the World's W. C. T. U.,
ADDA G. BURCH,
Pres. Chili W. C. T. U.
Concepcion College, Casilla 250.

News From the Field.

[State reporters are earnestly requested to send no news over two months old. Brief and frequent reports are preferable.—THE EDITORS.]

Missouri.

THE work that Rev. R. F. Kilgore has done for the W. C. T. U. in Missouri deserves recognition. He is known as the Alabama evangelist. He held a meeting for two weeks at Chilhower, and at its close preached a temperance sermon for the W. C. T. U., and as a result one hundred and one members were added to the union. After a meeting held at Blairstown, Henry County, more than fifty were added to the union. Of the Chilhower members, fifty were honoraries; twenty-eight of them paid their dues at this meeting.

The Johnson county convention was held in Holden. Every union in the county was represented. Good reports of work done were read and discussions had of plans of work that were helpful and instructive. For the first time since its organization eleven years ago, a memorial service for promoted comrades was held. The Holden union has lost two of its oldest members, Mrs. Maria T. Lawrence, aged nearly eighty-three, who was the mother of Mrs. M. E. Golladay, president of thirteenth district, and Mrs. Elizabeth Still, nearly seventy-three years of age. Warrensburg union mourns the loss of Mrs. Effie Hale Houts, one of their brightest and most capable women. The evening session was given up to a Willard memorial contest. Each contestant recited a selection of Miss Willard's writing. The proceeds were sent to the Temple.

Miss Maude Shepherd, press superintendent of the Eldon union, sends me the following report: "Mrs. Clara Hoffman visited our town in July and met with the W. C. T. U. in a parlor meeting in the afternoon, and gave the ladies a very interesting and instructive talk. She impressed upon them the necessity of taking THE UNION SIGNAL and state paper in order to keep in touch with the work, and secured a number of new subscribers. At night she spoke to a crowded house, her subject being what the W. C. T. U. had accomplished and its present situation. After the service a number of new members were added to the union, and all felt greatly helped by having had her with us."

Cainsville L. T. L. held a most successful contest July 26, which was a very enjoyable affair. Messrs. Neill, of Goshen, assisted them very much with some fine music with the violin and organ accompaniment, and the singing by the children's choir was exceptionally good. Miss Avis Woodward won the silver medal, and Master Stephen Lincoln the second prize, an elegant book. Mrs. Annie Severe is the superintendent of contest work, and was much encouraged over the success of this one.

L. Addie Lutes, of the Berlin union, sends in the following report: "We are young, organized January of this year, but have enjoyed some rare treats. July 30, we had an ice cream supper and entertainment; had nice flag drill, recitations, speeches, good music, etc.; collected $17.65. Mrs. Nelle Burger spoke for us August 4 and 5 on temperance and purity. The seed she sowed was first-class, and we pray for a grand harvest."

Blue Ridge union is making preparations for a county convention or picnic on September 24. A good program will be given, and the county president, Mrs. Jennie Fair, will do her part to make it a grand success.

Bethany union had a very enjoyable picnic on August 11. The crowd was addressed by Hon. J. H. Burrows, of Cainsville, and Rev. E. J. Adams told of his visit to Chickamauga and of the evil effects of the army canteen as he saw it, and afterwards asked those present to sign the petition against the canteen that was published a few weeks ago in the Ram's Horn. This union also held an ice cream social, August 27, in the courthouse yard.

The Poplar Bluff union has made arrangements with a daily in that city to send three issues of the paper for ten cents, giving full report of state convention to be held in their town. We know the white-ribboners all over the state will want it, so send your subscriptions to Mrs. J. T. Davison, Poplar Bluff.

Our state W. C. T. U. received quite an uplift in the work at the Chautauqua at Cameron. The Chautauqua board asked Mrs. Callie Hoover Howe to take charge of a W. C. T. U. hour each day which she did and of course her untiring energy is the secret of its success. She secured Mrs. Rounds of Illinois for two lectures and she just won the hearts of the people. Mrs. Rounds is, indeed, one of our strongest National speakers and is a great favorite with the Missouri people. Mrs. Nelle Burger and Miss Lillian Wood gave two lectures each, and made many friends for the cause. Mrs. Howe also lectured twice and received, as she always does, compliments on every side. A grand gold medal contest was held, the contestants all being from the sixth district. The contest delighted everybody and was the means of spreading more temperance doctrine. The Cameron Chautauqua Association paid all expenses for the W. C. T. U. work, speakers and all. In speaking of the kindness of the association, Mrs. Howe said she never asked one thing of them that they did not grant.

The sixth district convention closed August 31, with a gold medal contest. The convention was very successful. Mrs. Callie Howe was re-elected president. The district has doubled its membership the past year.

The W. C. T. U. hour at the Maysville Chautauqua, under the care of Mrs. Lura Hyden Boleyn, was also a success. The best speakers of the state assisted her. Sam Jones and John G. Woolley gave four temperance sermons. A gold medal contest was held. Miss Olive Callaway, of Bethany, won the medal.

The August number of the Counselor was called a franchise number, under the management of that excellent state superintendent, Mrs. Elizabeth Allen Roberts, of Bethany. The September number will be printed in the interest of the L. T. L.

The sixth annual convention of the second district met at the M. E. church in Gibbs, August 17 and 18, under the leadership of the president, Mrs. Sue Page. Miss Carrie Lee Carter gave one lecture and held a memorial service. A reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs, and afterwards came the department parade which was greatly enjoyed by all. A silver medal contest was held in Gibbs, August 16. The medal was given to Miss Pearl Malone.

The district press reporter, Miss Hattie McVay, has been doing good work in her line. She reports Canton with a column in the papers and Bradshear, La Belle, Knox City and Edina as publishing all notices of meetings and lectures. Let the good work go on.

(MRS.) ALICE BLACKBURN,
State Reporter, Bethany.

North Dakota.

THE county and district unions have reported conventions of unusual interest and helpfulness. Inspired by the ceaseless activities of our state president and moved by the underlying thought that she who had filled our organization with her life must still live in our efforts, each has done her best. Tender and loving memorial services have been held at all the meetings; Miss Preston's matchless address on the beautiful life of Miss Willard impresses all who hear it with desire to follow on in the way she led.

The many uses to which Ivory Soap is applicable, make it an economical as well as a valuable soap. Spots on clothing are quickly and easily removed by an application of the foamy lather of Ivory Soap with a dampened cloth and a brisk rubbing. Ivory Soap cuts the grease and leaves the surface rubbed perfectly clean. Be sure you use Ivory Soap, or the remedy may be worse than the grease spot.

IVORY SOAP IS 99 44/100 PER CENT. PURE.

Copyright, 1898, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

A temper-wrecker

—wash-day with soap. Standing on feet, hard work in the midst of soiled clothes and fetid steam, aching back, wear and tear to things washed—enough to make any one grumpy. Fine occupation for a civilized woman!

A temper-soother—wash-day with Pearline—wash-day with the unpleasant features left out. Easier, quicker, better, healthier. No woman can find fault with it. Soaking, boiling, rinsing, instead of rubbing on a washboard. 569

Millions NOW USE Pearline

The first district, under the leadership of Mrs. Louise C. McKinney, held at Cando a two days' convention, full of good reports and discussions, which put in training the faithful unions which form the army of occupation for temperance in those counties of Rolette, Towner and Ramsey. The six new boys up that way seem to have excited the mothers to new zeal in sowing beside all waters, that the land be well tilled when they "grow up."

Mrs. M. A. Garry is to be congratulated on the fine meeting the second district held at Leeds. The children had a "patriotic hour," and they will not forget the addresses, especially that of Mr. B. Page, who told them that the soldiers marked 100 per cent rarely used tobacco or whisky. Their resolutions were an urgent petition against liquor in the camps, a determination to do all they could for "the boys," but still to pray for peace. The third district, with faithful Miss Carey as president, working through their unions, of Bottincan, Rugby, Minot, Kenmare and Willow City, tries to keep out the smuggled liquor on that borderland, and are ever doing valiant work with the Home Protection League.

"What a beautiful convention!" was repeated to each other at the close of the Sargent county meeting in those perfect days of June, at Cogswell, in the pretty new church. The delegates ate the delicious dinners and suppers all together in the hall, and enjoyed the social time, as well as the feast of reason in good papers and reports. The L. T. L. hour, led by their dear superintendent, Mrs. Bolles, and the Y hour by Mrs. Lizzie Peters, was most attractive. The pastor, Rev. W. A. Pringle, being called away, sent a charming welcome address.

The matrons' gold medal contest, the first held in the state, called out a large audience. It was indeed fine, as well as the music which made the interlude of speaking so pleasant. The convention presented to their president "The Beautiful Life of Miss Willard."

The eleventh annual convention of Pembina county was held in Kittson Hall, Pembina, June 22, 23 and 24. Notwithstanding very inclement weather, thirty-three delegates were in attendance, and the sessions were full of pleasure and profit. The president, Mrs. L. M. Wylie, was absent for the first time in ten years, and the vice-president, Mrs. G. W. Ryan, presided. Reports of unions and superintendents showed advancement all along the line. Number of active members 403, honoraries 216; money raised $1,286.46; sixty new members were gained, and an effort is to be made before state convention to reach the 500 mark, so Pembina county can choose its own delegate to the National. The county offers a prize to the union distributing the most literature the coming year. The presence of the state president, Miss Preston, added greatly to the success of the convention. Wednesday evening she gave an excellent address on "Glimpses of the Toronto Convention." A charming welcome song was sung by the L. T. L. with waving banners and flags. Welcomes were extended by the Pembina W and Y, music by the Short orchestra and the state Y song by the Y's concluded a very interesting session. The second matrons' gold medal contest given in the state, occupied Thursday evening. The program throughout was excellent. Special music, a military drill and a Brownie chorus were interspersed between the selections given by the contestants. Over thirty-six dollars were added to the treasury. Mrs. Florence Baldwin was awarded the medal. A helpful feature of the convention was the evangelistic hour conducted by Mrs. May Wells Love, in a very strong, tender way. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags, bunting, white ribbon and rare flowers, and the pictured face of our "Saint Frances" on a white-draped easel, occupied a position of honor. Loving greetings were sent Mrs. Wylie with the notice of her re-election as president. Mrs. Ryan was re-elected vice-president; Miss J. C. Morrison, corresponding secretary; Miss Bena Halerow, recording secretary; Mrs. M. E. Musselman, treasurer.

Kidder county reports the most successful convention ever held, at Dawson. Richland county met at Hankinson. They report a gain of twenty per cent in membership and much good work done in petitions, signing of pledges and distribution of literature. Their new president, Mrs. Ida Sparks Clark, gave a stirring address on "The Needs of the Work." Mrs. G. B. Barnes, of Wahpeton, and Mrs. Merrifield, of Hankinson, each read fine papers. Their plan of work includes advice for women to use their one right to vote at school elections, to practice non-alcoholic medication, take THE UNION SIGNAL and Western Womanhood, make a specialty of mothers' meetings and that members promptly answer all business letters in a business way, and give their official signature.

The report of the tenth annual convention of Walsh county contains so many good things it is difficult to condense. The reports were excellent, the Milton union being pronounced a model. They had done good work, and the work was reported in a model way. Miss Preston's "Glimpses of the Toronto Convention" was well received, and her parliamentary drill never loses its good effect. Physical culture had place, and the newly elected president, Mrs. Titus, gave an amusing drill on the annual leaflet. Milton led in the organization of Cavalier county W. C. T. U., which, with Mrs. Anna Prom as president, we welcome to larger fields of usefulness. They also had a matrons' contest, in which Mrs. Prom gained the medal.

Incidentally I have heard that Grand Forks county had a fine convention (no report has reached me), with fine papers and an excellent address by the president, Mrs. Flora Naylor.

Cass county has such magnificent proportions, containing 1,764 square miles, that some of the delegates drove fifty miles to attend the convention at Page. Reports from fourteen unions were most encouraging, membership doubled and excellent work done in all the departments. Mrs. Meacham's address was full of good thought and suggestions for the coming year. Mrs. Bartlett of Casselton held a model mothers' meeting in which papers were read on "Declaration of Children's Independence," "Our Training," "What God Hath Called Pure." Mrs. Chaffee took the negative of "Resolved, that it is best for a mother with small children to engage in some philanthropic work." Each paper was followed by an animated discussion. Mrs. Davis, county superintendent of schools, read a paper on "The Effect of Immigration on Prohibition." Mrs. Muir spoke on "How to Influence the Coming Elections." The witty address of welcome by Hon. L. B. Hanna, had adequate response from Mrs. Clark of Fargo, and the closing resolutions were all that could be desired. Cass county, as well as Pembina and Grand Forks, expect to have each a membership of five hundred before the state convention and elect their own delegate to the National Convention.

The Ransom county convention, at Lisbon, had a very unusual interruption of their regular work. Miss Preston received a telegram announcing the death of Mrs. Palmer, in Minneapolis (she had formerly been president of Lisbon union), and her husband requested Miss Preston to take charge of the funeral services. The white-ribboners in a body accompanied the cortege from the train to the cemetery, and there, around the flower-covered casket, Miss Preston made some beautiful remarks. There was a prayer, and softly singing "God be with you till we meet again," each sister cast into the grave a bouquet of white pansies, and came away rejoicing that we have a hope in the resurrection.

Mrs. Adair read an exceptionally good paper on, "How we may influence the coming elections." There was an eloquent exposition of "The most important work of the W. C. T. U.," by Mrs. Mott, Mrs. Grover and Mrs. McIlvaine, and their dear president, Mrs. L. B. Chamberlin, must have been encouraged by the new spirit of self-consecration, and promised allegiance to herself in the unanimous re-election.

Through a common sorrow we have been drawn closer together and we may expect to work more effectively for the common good, and for a happier future. It is a wonderful privilege to carry out Miss Willard's plans, to work with God in carrying out His plans.

EMMA F. VAIL,
State Reporter, Towanda.

MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON has been appointed World's Superintendent of the department of Christian citizenship.

One thousand styles and sizes.
For cooking and heating.
Price from $5 to $70.

GARLAND STOVES AND RANGES
The World's Best

Often imitated. Never equalled.

Best Cookers. Strongest Heaters.
Last Longest. Use Least Fuel.
Made only by
The Michigan Stove Company
Largest Makers of Stoves and Ranges in the world.
Sold Everywhere.

Minnesota.

MINNESOTA Woman's Christian Temperance Union has attained its majority and celebrated its coming of age in the twenty-second annual convention, held at Glencoe, August 23–26.

All of the officers, with the exception of the vice-president-at-large, and over one hundred delegates were present. The number would have been much larger but for the fact that many desire to improve the rare and valued opportunity of attending the National gathering which convenes at St. Paul in November.

The convention was addressed by Rev. J. W. Todd, who voiced the hearty welcome of the clergy, and Rev. J. H. Cudlipp who, representing the mayor, extended greetings in behalf of the city, but the genuine pleasure of our entertainers, expressed by the thoughtful preparation everywhere in evidence, was felt by each guest.

In the Methodist church, where most of the meetings were held, soft white draperies, asparagus, potted plants, flags, quantities of sweet peas, and a beautiful picture of Frances Willard, draped with white ribbon, combined to produce a most beautiful effect. The graceful festoons of the state Sunday-school pledge chain, composed of hundreds of red, white and blue cards, completed the decorations.

During the anniversary exercises of the first meeting the three original crusaders present were introduced. They were: Mrs. H. M. Benton, Anoka, Mrs. Julia B. Nelson, Red Wing, and Mrs. Frances Neal, Minneapolis. Greetings were read from four others who reside in the state. Mrs. H. M. Benton spoke of "The Spirit of Seventy-three," and Mrs. Frances Neal gave an interesting résumé of twenty-one years of work in Minnesota. Mrs. Neal noted that the attitude of temperance workers has

BAD BREATH

"I have been using CASCARETS and as a mild and effective laxative they are simply wonderful. My daughter and I were bothered with sick stomach and our breath was very bad. After taking a few doses of Cascarets we have improved wonderfully. They are a great help in the family."
WILHELMINA NAGEL,
1137 Rittenhouse St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.
... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...
Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 315

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

changed from passive to aggressive and that where the reclaiming of the drunkard was once pre-eminent, with little thought of the removal of the cause of his misery, the women are now educating the children and engaging in all departments of preventive work.

The first evening was designated "District Benefit Night," the program to be furnished largely by districts having gained one hundred or more members who had paid annual dues in full. The presidents of two districts reported such gain and were called upon to sing, recite, or speak upon their favorite department of work.

Mrs. F. Inez Randall, of Mankato, president of the fourth district, sang "Will it Pay?" and then gave her report, showing a gain of 143 members. She declared St. Peter entitled to honors, and Mankato High School Somerset Y the banner Y of the state, having over forty active and eighteen honorary members. Le Sueur also deserved special mention. Numerous public meetings, parlor meetings and a reading-room were also credited to this district.

Mrs. Amelia G. Watson, of Marshall, president of the fifth district, spoke briefly on "Press Work." She then reported a gain of 132 members in her district, and further stated that Lyon county, under the presidency of Mrs. Maude M. Sanders, of Balaton, had been especially active, furnishing over 100 of the 132 members gained; also that Lyon county had sent $200 to the Temple, placing the names of Dr. Louise F. Ferro and Mrs. M. M. Sanders on Minnesota tablet. Many public meetings and much good work was reported for the district.

The first annual address of the president, Mrs. Bessie Laythe Scovell, of Minneapolis, displayed marked ability, faith and enthusiasm on the part of the author. She discussed conditions and opportunities as presented to the white-ribbon host "at the meeting of the centuries," and urged the faithful performance of every duty.

The reports of the corresponding secretary and the treasurer were full of interest. In these the state is credited with seventy new unions, "alive and well," a net gain of 385 members, making a total of 3,096. (The net gain would have been nearly 1,000 if all dues had been paid.) Honorary members, 450. Money raised for temperance work, $6,400, while $58.35 is reported sent to National Temperance Hospital and $1,462.97 to the Temple. Secretary of Young Woman's Branch, Miss Louise Hollister, reported twenty new Y's, of which Mankato Somerset is banner Y for membership, and Balaton Y for finances. Miss Hollister reported the existence of thirty-one Loyal Temperance Legions. The organizers, Mrs. B. Laythe Scovell, Miss Hollister and Mrs. Josephine Princell, have served faithfully, Mrs. Scovell and Miss Hollister having spent the major part of the year in the field, aiding and encouraging the workers wherever they have gone.

Reports of superintendents showed praiseworthy activity in nearly all of the forty departments. In medal contests, Mrs. Mary C. Green, of Windom, reported Minnesota at the head of the list of states, having held 104 contests, net receipts averaging over seven dollars. She recommended a subscription to "Our Dumb Animals" for a second prize.

Mrs. A. C. McCurdy, Minneapolis, superintendent of penal and reformatory department, requested hearty support for three bills to be presented at our next legislature, viz.: bill providing for a woman's industrial prison, to be managed entirely by women; for detention hospital for the insane, and to create office of probation officer whose duties shall be to have a care for boys and girls under arrest and during suspension of sentence. She also urged that we secure a curfew ordinance in every town and city. Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, St. Paul, state and National superintendent of Sunday-school department, pleaded for work among the children.

After discussion of the Temple, motion prevailed unanimously "That Minnesota women stand by the Temple, and that money contributed pass through state treasurer's hands to Cornelia Dow." It was recommended that each member contribute ten cents to the National Temperance Hospital, also that district and county presidents assist superintendent of lecture bureau. Provision for state funds was made by the adoption of a recommendation which provides that each union, W and Y, shall this year contribute ten cents per member to state work, and endeavor to secure one or more sustaining members. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Cynthia J. Woodbury, of St. Paul, for her efficient work as editor of the state paper, Minnesota White-Ribboner. The paper will be continued as last year.

Among the resolutions adopted, attention was called to the importance of evangelistic work, communion circles, Bible study and sermons against fermented wine at the Lord's table; the observance of universal temperance Sunday was urged; sympathy was expressed for Lady Henry Somerset, World's president, and loyalty to the World's Union pledged; urged that all educational departments be pushed by use of medal contests; the enforcement of our excellent anti-cigaret law and forming of Anti-tobacco Leagues was made prominent, while a protest was registered against the employment of superintendent of schools, teachers and ministers indulging in tobacco: also a protest against the army canteen.

The election of officers resulted in retaining the women who have served so faithfully the past year: President, Mrs. B. Laythe Scovell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Anna C. McCurdy; recording secretary, Mrs. Ella F. Hendrix, all of Minneapolis; treasurer, Mrs. C. S. Soule, St. Paul; vice-president-at-large, Rev. Alice Ruth Palmer, Wayzata. The vice-president is delegate at large to National Convention; her alternate, Mrs. Allene C. Bayrell, Argyle. The six elected delegates are: Mrs. Belle S. Deuel, Glencoe; Ruth M. Barnes, Granite Falls; Mrs. Fannie Norton, Elmore; Mrs. F. Inez Randall, Mankato; Mrs. Maude M. Sanders, Balaton; Mrs. L. C. Chadderdon, Redwood Falls. Alternates: Mrs. Belle B. Morris, Winona; Mrs. M. Holiday, Dodge Center; Mrs. S. B. Root, St. Paul; Mrs. Kate Kercher, St. Cloud; Mrs. H. M. Benton, Anoka; Mrs. A. A. Cressy, Wheaton.

A model L. T. L. meeting was an interesting and instructive feature of one afternoon. This closed with a brief address by Mrs. Addie Northam Fields, a National L. T. L. worker.

The memorial hour called forth eloquent tributes to our Chieftain, Frances E. Willard, our President Emeritus, Mrs. H. A. Hobart, and the many promoted comrades of our state.

On the afternoon given especially to home topics, Mrs. A. G. Watson, of Marshall, drew a beautiful pen picture of the "Ideal Home," so restful, so helpful, that each resolved to strive for the "ideal" in the real. Mrs. Mary C. Engstrom, of Cannon Falls, warned us of "Our National Ailment—Dyspepsia," suggesting causes and cures. Profitable discussion followed these papers.

One evening was devoted to a diamond medal contest arranged by Mrs. M. C. Green, state superintendent. Miss Dixie Smith, the well known reader of Minneapolis, was the successful contestant, and to her, Mrs. J. A. Clifford, of Northfield, presented the beautiful medal.

The third evening Mrs. Addie Northam Fields, of Illinois, a National organizer, delivered an eloquent address, her subject being "Children's Rights." Fortunately Mrs. Fields is to remain in the state for some time and it is hoped many unions may secure the services of this talented and successful worker. Worthy of mention is the fact that at these large evening meetings every hat was removed in compliance with request sent to the platform. The music was unusually fine and a debt of gratitude is due Mr. Oscar Frankenstein, of Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Violet, of Benson, and Misses Cora Reed, Maude Deuel and others of Glencoe, for this delightful feature. Miss Martha Scott Anderson, a staff correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal, rendered valuable aid in the excellent report sent her paper. When introduced Miss Anderson emphasized the importance of press work and suggested that the women make better use of the daily papers, so willing to print the news. Editor Peterson of the Glencoe Register was introduced and stated that copies of his paper containing convention report would be sent every registered delegate. Mr. Peterson received hearty thanks.

The convention closed at noon and all joined hands singing with feeling, "God be with you till we meet again." In the afternoon Mrs. A. N. Fields addressed all interested in L. T. L. work, answering questions and giving practical suggestions.

The example of the Glencoe union which claims a membership of only ten, with an actual working force of but five, should be an inspiration to all small unions. The zeal and faithfulness of Mmes. Belle Deuel, J. J. Greaves, M. L. Child, F. R. Allen and W. E. Talboy, of Glencoe, are well worthy of emulation. They are even now reaping a reward in the impetus given the temperance cause in their city.

All felt that the convention had been eminently successful, and turned homeward singing praises for the abundant fruit of past efforts and the glorious opportunities of the future in our work "for others."

MAUDE MCILVAIN SANDERS,
Convention Reporter, Balaton.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati O.

"Sanitas" Means Health.

How to have thoroughly sanitary surroundings is told in a pamphlet by Kingzett, the eminent English chemist. Price 10 cents. Every household should contain this little help to comfortable living. It will be sent free to subscribers of this paper.

THE SANITAS CO. (Ltd.),
636 to 642 West 55th Street, New York City.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN AND BEAST
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS
84-90 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK 311-313 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright, 1893, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.
STOP SMOKING!
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF
OUR WAR WITH SPAIN
ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

SILVER TONES The famous Prohibition Song Book of the Silver Lake Quartet; revised and enlarged; latest and best; reduced from 35c. to 25c. for the campaign.
SONG JEWELS, by Hoffman & Williams, for S.S's. C. E.'s, E. L.'s, etc.; 88 pp.; manila, 7c.; boards, 14c.
Touching Incidents, 320 pp., $1. Sample copy, 40c.; agents get over 60 per cent. W. A. Williams, Warnock, O.

MONTICELLO Opens the 61st year Sept. 29. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Prin., Godfrey, Ill.

FRANKLIN COLLEGE NEW ATHENS, O. 74th year. Board, tuition, room and books, $2.80 to $3 a week; $140 a year; books free: 8 courses; no saloons; catalog free, with plan to earn funds at home W. A. Williams, D.D., Pres.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

Official.

A Call to Prayer for Canada.

On September 29, in the Dominion of Canada, the government will submit to the people a plebiscite on the question of prohibition. The anti-prohibitionists are relying upon the moneyed interests behind them. The prohibitionists are holding meetings all over the land, and nearly all the Protestant churches have adopted strong resolutions in favor of the complete suppression of the liquor traffic, and have entered upon an aggressive campaign. Forces of good and evil stand face to face. The battle is at hand.

In this crisis, it seems fitting that the entire white-ribbon host should turn to God. We are one body; we suffer and rejoice together in a tie which binds "our hearts in Christian love." Especially should the United States feel the deepest interest in this struggle just across the border, for we are neighbors in sweet fellowship.

Therefore, as evangelistic superintendent for the World's Union and for the W. C. T. U. of the United States, I hereby summon white-ribboners everywhere to set apart Wednesday, September 21, from 2 to 5 P. M., one week before the plebiscite, for special waiting upon the God of nations, for the success of the right and the suppression of the liquor traffic. Let our local unions, generally, gather at this time for united prayer, remembering the sacred promise, "All things are possible to him that believeth."

ELIZABETH W. GREENWOOD,
World's and Nat. Evan. Supt.

We heartily concur in the above call.

LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS,
Acting Pres. N. W. C. T. U.
KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON,
Cor. Sec.

Schools of Methods and Parliamentary Usage.

DEAR COMRADES:—The summer Schools of Methods could be much better reported now than later, especially those held in connection with Chautauqua or other Assemblies. Please do not leave me to compile my report from back numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL, or other newspapers, but fill out the question blanks, that we may have greater uniformity. If any one has failed to receive the "blanks" I should be most happy to supply her at once. Do not forget to make special record (using the reverse side of the page) of any new or novel feature. It is not fair to expect a National superintendent to constantly suggest something new. Her duty is to devise plans and methods, but unique features may be introduced by the conductor, or the program committee of any school, and all such should be passed along.

Please do not fail to make clear the statement of any financial plan, and do not forget to say whether there is a school union with a special fee. This in itself provides a fund, and from such a union, if desired, may be created an executive committee that in some cases could render most effective aid in the management of the school.

All parliamentary work should be reported up to October 1, but I most earnestly request that not a report be sent later than October 10.

Yours for promptitude,
(MRS.) A. S. BENJAMIN,
Nat. Supt.
Portland, Mich.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

The silence of your National Corresponding Secretary for the past month by no means indicates that she has been idle. It is true my work has been away from Headquarters and that a part of the time I have been trying to take a vacation, but a vacation in which the larger part of nearly every day is spent with pen in hand can hardly be called absolute leisure. The change of air and glimpse of home and loved ones have, however, been of great benefit and I am back at my desk with renewed strength and enthusiasm. My work at Chautauqua has already been chronicled in THE UNION SIGNAL. Three weeks have been spent in my home, with the exception of part of a week which was given to the National president for conferences concerning our coming Convention and various other matters of vital importance. I found Mrs. Stevens well and standing bravely at her post. One who does not know her life of ceaseless activity can hardly realize the consecrated force she is in our National work. "Without haste, without rest" would be her most appropriate motto and she proves hourly the truth of the promise, "As thy day so shall thy strength be."

Our plans for the National Convention will very soon be given to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL. The official call appears in this week's issue. I want to emphasize the appeal made in that call that each individual member of the organization shall contribute all the strength of her own personality to making this Convention one of power for our work. The twenty-fifth anniversary since the Crusade should not fail to be one in which we shall pause to consider the way by which we have been led and renew the vows which we took upon ourselves in the beginning. If the work for the next twenty-five years is in any way to approximate the work of the past there must be a new baptism from on high which shall send us forth to conquer all difficulties, and in the name of the Lord of Hosts set up our banners of righteousness in the individual life and righteousness in the nation.

The days of the state conventions are already upon us; the advance items that come to us from the various states are full of encouragement. We believe that, despite the war and despite all other hindrances, this will prove to have been a good year in our annals. I want to urge upon the secretaries and treasurers of the local unions as I have already urged upon the state corresponding secretaries that there be increased carefulness in compiling reports this year; not that we may make a large showing to the world but that we may take courage from finding our exact status. We have always labored at a disadvantage in that our whole work has not been reported. If each local union will but do its best this year we shall be able to stand before the world in a different light than ever before and take corresponding heart of hope through learning our real strength. Do not think it does not matter if your own report is delayed. Remember that, although you are but one of nearly ten thousand, yet each one is necessary to complete the report for the year, and remember, also, that if every other one of that ten thousand should feel that its report did not matter, our showing would be lamentably weak.

I am very glad to report that the Misses Vincent and Cummins, the two Australian organizers who impressed us so favorably at the World's Convention, and who have done such faithful work in Canada since that time, are to be with us at our National Convention, and are planning now to give the winter to work in the United States, if engagements can be made for them. Their terms are very reasonable, and I am sure we shall extend a right hearty welcome to our sisters from so far away. Will any of the state presidents who would like to avail themselves of their services kindly write to me at once in order that plans may be made at as early a date as possible? I have press notices which I will send to any who may desire to know of the former work of our sisters.

Mrs. L. B. Byles, of Manchester, England, who visited us some two years ago, and who is so pleasantly remembered by those who made her acquaintance, is planning to come to this country in the fall, and will be glad to make engagements between New York city and Omaha. Mrs. Byles may be addressed at Manchester, England, or better still, letters may be sent to her in my care at the Temple.

The next two months will be filled to overflowing with hard work. May God give to us all strength and wisdom and above all, His own spirit of love, in order that that work may be done to His glory!

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—The annual meeting of the Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association was held September 5, in the pleasant parlors of the institution; it was well attended by board, physicians and visitors. An amount of interest was shown which approached nearly to the point of genuine enthusiasm. The Lord has so prospered the work this year that our debt of $3,000 for current expenses, which had been accumulating for three years, has been paid up, our rooms are well filled and steps are being taken to fit up the parlors into a ward which will hold eight beds; the ward will be ready to occupy this week if possible. This addition will make our capacity thirty-one beds. We are badly in need of a larger building, with better facilities for caring for fever patients; such cases are better proof of the benefits of non-alcoholic treatment than are cases simply treated after operations. Reports from all departments were very encouraging; a liberal supply for the housekeeping department has been donated from the unions, also bed linen and old cotton, which is found very useful in the operating room.

There are eleven nurses at present in the class, of which the physicians spoke in the highest terms. A fine picture of Miss Willard was hung on the wall for the first time—a gift from a Chicago artist. A new committee from the board was appointed to confer with the physicians on important matters of mutual interest, said committee being Mrs. Rastall and Mrs. Greenlee.

The same officers were unanimously chosen for another year. Perfect harmony prevails in every department, which is in accordance with the principles of our W. C. T. U. organization. We hope the yearly reports will be ready for circulation in October.

The yearly holiday sale will be held the first week in December. We trust that our constituency will remember to send in such articles as will be salable at that time. Last year our sale was the first start we had toward getting out of debt. This year it will, we hope, help toward a new hospital. Thus the way is opened before us one step at a time. Let us trust Him day by day.

Yours for total abstinence,
(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.
1610 Grace St.

Convention Call.

MISSOURI.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Missouri will be held at Poplar Bluff, October 21-25, 1898. Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, of Kentucky, will be with us, and give an address Sunday at 3 P. M.

CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Pres.
ELLEN D. MORRIS, Cor. Sec.

VERMONT.

The annual convention of the Vermont W. C. T. U. will be held at Manchester Center, September 27-29. Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman is the speaker Thursday evening.

(MRS.) L. F. WILBUR,
State Reporter.

CONNECTICUT.

Connecticut W. C. T. C. annual convention will be held at Torrington, October 12-14. Speakers, Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt and Mr. John G. Woolley.

(MRS.) C. B. FORBES, Pres.
MARY M. ANDREWS, Cor. Sec.

VIRGINIA.

The annual convention of the Virginia state W. C. T. U. will be held at Richmond, Oct. 4-7.

(MRS.) R. H. JONES, Pres.
(MRS.) HOWARD M. HOGE,
Rec. Sec.

ILLINOIS.

The annual convention of the Illinois W. C. T. U. will be held at Elgin, October 4-7. Delegates will notice the change of place. Owing to sickness Pontiac felt obliged to recall its invitation, and Elgin very kindly came to the rescue.

(MRS.) LOUISE S. ROUNDS,
Pres.
(MRS.) JESSIE B. HILTON,
Rec. Sec.

OHIO.

The twenty-fifth annual state convention of Ohio W. C. T. U. will be held at Columbus, Oct. 5-7.

ANNIE W. CLARK, Pres.

OKLAHOMA.

The annual convention of the Oklahoma W. C. T. U. will be held at Okarche, September 27-30.

(MRS.) W. H. JACKSON, Pres.
(MRS.) R. E. WOODROW, Cor. Sec.

W. C. T. U. News.

MRS. S. M. PERKINS, of Cleveland, O., has been appointed delegate from the seventy-fifth district to the National Convention at St. Paul.

SEPTEMBER 5 was W. C. T. U. Day at Green Acre, Me., which has become a famous place. Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens spoke for an hour and made a most helpful, inspiring address.

A PROGRAM given at a mothers' meeting at Cainville, Mo., is worthy of copying in its entirety. "One Standard," "A Sensible Mother," "Plain Talk to Thoughtless Husbands," "Continual Threats" were among the interesting topics that received masterly handling.

SCIENTIFIC tests of alcohol were made by physicians and chemists at the request of the W. C. T. U. of Kansas City, Mo., before a gathering of the city unions. A paper on "Alcohol and its Relation Medicinally to the Human Family" was read by Dr. E. Leora Norris.

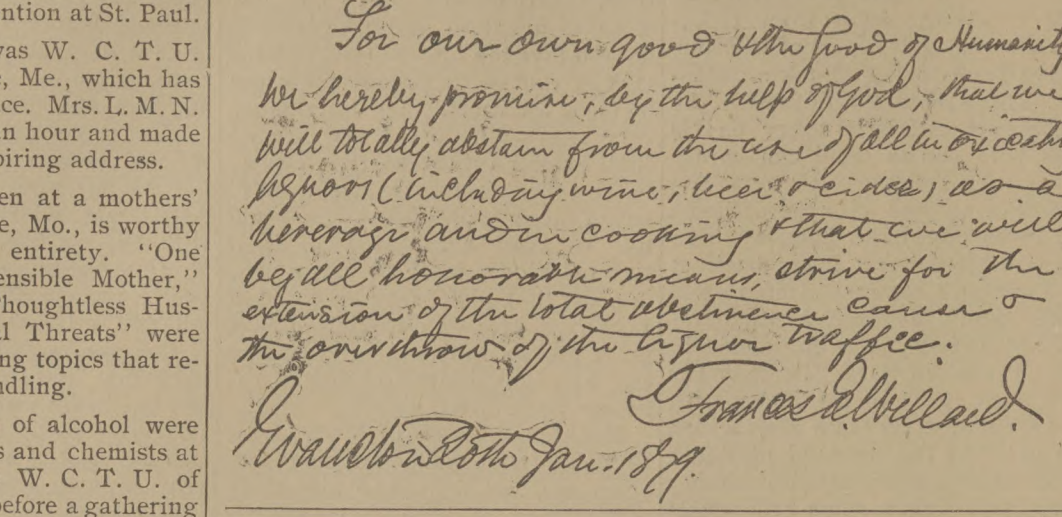
Two sixty gallon ice-water tanks have been purchased by the W. C. T. U. of Beaumont, Texas. They have both been placed in the most public positions on the main street of the town for the free use of a thirsty public. Three barrels of water and 200 pounds of ice have been drank daily.

WEST END union, of Washington, D. C., gave a very interesting "Tourists' Evening." Several young ladies who have just returned from a European trip entertained the company with an account of their experiences abroad. National airs and ballads were sung and "National Emblems" discussed.

FRANKLIN COUNTY, O., at their recent convention mapped out an interesting plan of work for the coming year. Special agitation in the anti-narcotic department was recommended. Membership contests and parlor meetings were considered excellent methods of increasing the membership. Sunday marketing, the people who patronize and the merchants who offer it, was condemned.

THE Central union of Chicago have voted to present a handsome picture of Miss Willard to the public school which has been named for her in Chicago. The school is situated at 47th street and Langley avenue, has twenty-two rooms and is one of the new ones, built at a cost of eighty thousand dollars. The Central Union is also planning for a meeting to take place October 18, at Willard Hall, during the Peace Jubilee to be observed that day in Chicago.

THE first W. C. T. U. medal contest held in a prison of which we have any knowledge, occurred recently in a prison mine at Birmingham, Ala., through the efforts of Mrs. Lida C. Isgrigg, flower mission superintendent for Missouri. Mrs. Isgrigg is in Alabama temporarily assisting her husband in teaching the prisoners at Pratt Mine, No. 2; here the contest was held, the class being composed of colored young men prisoners. Ed Forney was the successful orator.



Where Our Speakers Are.

MISS LILLIAN M. PHELPS can take a few dates en route to the Iowa state W. C. T. U. convention, dates free from Sept. 20 to Oct. 10. Apply to Lillian M. Phelps, St. Catharine's, Ont.

COMMEMORATIVE PLEDGE CARDS.

The following pledge card, written by Miss Willard in the autograph album of Miss Anna Gordon, January, 1879, has by her permission been issued by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, as a commemorative pledge card. It has been brought out in tasteful form with a half tone picture of Miss Willard and is now ready for distribution on her birthday, September 28, 1898.

Price, 25 for 50c; $1.00 per 100; $7.00 per 1,000.

LARKIN SOAPS

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY

The Larkin idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample Soap if mention this magazine.

The Larkin Soap Mfg Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Publisher's Notes.

"Your Mother is Loving You Yet."

The above beautiful and pathetic temperance song, words and music by Emmet G. Coleman, is fast becoming the favorite with the W. C. T. U's as is demonstrated by the many orders and kind words we are receiving daily from the white-ribboners. We are determined to place this song in every temperance home in the land, it makes no difference what the sacrifice on our part may be. "Your Mother is Loving You Yet," is a true history of a boy, eighteen years old, who killed a very old man. The cause of the crime was whisky. The boy was sentenced to death, and while awaiting his doom he received a message from his old mother, two thousand miles away. This was the message: "In spite of your crime, your old mother is loving you yet."

OUR OFFER.

Send us forty cents, stamps or post-office order on Danville, Va., the latter preferred, also the name of your best W. C. T. U. friend, and we will mail you a copy of the song, and also mail a copy, with your compliments, to your friend, or if you prefer, both copies will be sent to you. We hope to receive an order from every white-ribboner who reads this notice.

The song is full sheet music size, on best music paper, and retails for forty cents per copy.

You get two pieces for the price of one. This offer is unlimited. Canadian stamps not accepted. Inclose five cents extra for "Marching Onward," a rousing temperance chorus by same author. Address,

THE TEMPERANCE MUSIC CO.,
Kentuck, Va.

[N. B.—White-ribboners should avail themselves of this kind offer.]

Again we must remind our readers to write the name of the state at the heading of all letters. Envelopes are often mislaid or destroyed, and frequently we can obtain no clue to the writer of a letter, who is naturally offended because her requests do not receive prompt attention. Please, dear friends, put the name of the state always in your letters, as there are many towns of the same name in different states.

Our Memorial Ode.

"Press On and On," our Chieftain's orders, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, music by Mr. O. H. Hawley, is meeting with wide appreciation. The words are tender and effective, the music stirring and martial. It will be sung wherever the W. C. T. U. has voice. The Ode is printed in sheet form, with a beautiful half tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy; 60 cts. per dozen copies to state, county and local unions. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The topic for the SEPTEMBER RESPONSIVE READING is "W. C. T. U. Literature," and is written by Miss Helen L. Hood, National superintendent of that department. We are told why the department is an important ally—or rather a necessary aid—to all other departments; how to push it; what helps are needed and where to procure them. Methods of circulating literature are given, also suggestions for furnishing the "wherewithal." Local superintendents of literature should see that this Reading is read and discussed by the unions generally.

BIBLE READING FOR SEPTEMBER. "Have Faith in God," by Mrs. Dora Webb, general secretary of the Reform Legislation branch of the purity department. The subject is treated under the following heads: (1) How can we obtain intelligent faith? (2) Saving faith; (3) Working faith; (4) A comprehensive faith; (5) An overcoming faith; (6) A steadfast faith. And the whole gospel of Christian faith is summed up in the words of the Master: "Believe that ye receive and ye shall have."

As the time for annual state conventions draws near, and those in charge of programs are selecting appropriate music, we have decided to offer our Convention Hymnals—which are an abridged form of The White Ribbon Hymnal—at 15 cents each, 25 copies $2.50, (no discount) These books contain a choice collection of music selected by Miss Marie Brehm. The cover is manila and sufficiently strong for convention purpose. For local unions no better investment could be made than in a number of these Convention Hymnals. Price single copies, 15 cents; 25 copies, $2.50.

FREE TO KIDNEY SUFFERERS.

Dr. Worst has made a New Vegetable discovery for kidney, Liver, Stomach trouble, Sick Headache and Rheumatism.

He will mail a week's treatment free to all readers naming the Union Signal.

SPECIAL OFFER.

If you request it, I will mail a regular $1.00 box: 8 weeks' treatment with the sample.

After using the sample if you are satisfied with results, send me $1.00, and keep the box of medicine, if not, kindly return it.

Order today, as now is the time to use it.

Address,

Dr. E. J. Worst, Dept. 5, Ashland, O.

POET—"Poets, sir, are born, not made." Publisher—"That's right; lay the blame on your poor father and mother."

MEETING SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE, I. O. O. F.

Boston, Mass., September 19-24, Inclusive.

For this occasion the Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale September 16 to 18, inclusive, good returning until September 30, inclusive. For particulars, address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

VISITOR—You oughtn't to keep the pig so near the house. Countryman—Why? Visitor—It isn't healthy. Countryman — That's where you're wrong; them pigs ain't never had a day's illness.

NICKEL PLATE EXCURSION TO BOSTON.

Tickets on sale for trains leaving Chicago September 16 to 18, inclusive, at rate of $19 for the round trip, and good returning until September 30. Also cheap rates to all points East. Vestibuled sleeping cars to Boston, and solid train to New York. Rates lower than via other lines. For further information call on or address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

"GOOD-BY, professor," said the sweet girl graduate, "I shall always remember you kindly, for to you I am indebted for all I know." "Say no more," replied the professor, "say no more. Such a trifle is not worthy of thought, I assure you."

Don't forget the excursion to Boston over the Nickel Plate Road, September 16 to 18, inclusive, at rate of $19 for the round trip. Good returning until September 30, 1898, inclusive. Telephone Main 3389.

"OH, dear!" sighed a little girl. "I'm so tired of lessons. I know what I'll do when I grow up." "What?" "I'll be a teacher." "But teachers have to study, too." "I know that. But it's so much easier to learn the questions than it is to learn the answers."

EXCURSION TO BOSTON.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell excursion tickets from Chicago to Boston and return for trains of September 16, 17 and 18 at rate of $19 for the round trip. Tickets will be valid returning until September 30, inclusive. On account of heavy travel at this particular time, those desiring sleeping-car accommodations should apply early to J. Y. Calahan, General Agent. 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389.

"LAWD! Lawd!" exclaimed a pious negro, "but ain't de Bible comin' true ev'ry day? Ain't we got a Sampson fightin' fer us? An' ain't de word come cl'ar cross de oshun dat de Nunited States flag waves ober de Philistines?"

ANOTHER REDUCTION IN RATES TO OMAHA.

Tourist tickets via the North-Western Line, the pioneer line west and northwest of Chicago, will be sold during September and October at very low rates. Apply to agents for full particulars.

THE minister, with his little son, Charles, was calling on an old parishioner, who poured her troubles into his sympathizing ear, ending with the remark: "I've had my nose held to the grindstone for thirty years." Charlie, who had been looking intently at the old lady, instantly remarked: "Well, it hasn't worn the mole on the end of it off yet."

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 36. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, September 22, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Military Notes—Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, The Coming Woman. By Meta E. B. Thorne . . 3
One Girl. By Edith S. Davis 3
An Analogy. By Helen M. Stoddard 4
Willard Hall Echoes 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
More About Japanese Women and Work 5
Miss Agnes Slack on the Gothenburg System 5
Wear Your White Ribbons!! 6
The Third Nebraska 6
LOCAL UNION: 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Minnie's Pa. By Thomas Alexander 7
Uncle John's Talks 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Woman's Christian Temperance Union—The Breadth of its Work 8
Miss Willard's Christian Experience 8
Twentieth Century Temperance 9
Prayer for the Canadian Plebiscite 9
How Like Men! 9
The Call to Prayer for the National Convention 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Ready! The New Y Almanac for 1899 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Sweden—World's Wave Crests 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
California—Connecticut—Wisconsin—Pennsylvania . . 10, 11
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
ORGANIZERS' CORNER 12
W. C. T. U. NEWS 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Coins and Curios for the Field 13
Convention Call—Convention Calendar—Regimental Roll of Honor—Petition Against the Canteen Now . . 13
THE HOME 14
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 14
Announcement 14
Temple Receipts—Take Notice 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 16

RED-LETTER DAYS.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DAY—SEPTEMBER 22.

The birthday of Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, first round-the-world missionary.

CHILDREN'S HARVEST HOME AND MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

The birthday of Frances E. Willard.

MEMBERSHIP WEEK—THE INTERVENING WEEK.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, St. Paul, Minn., November 11–16.

Notes and Comments.

THE Union Reform party of Ohio has secured enough names on its petition to place its state ticket on the official ballot. Among the principles which this party stands for are prohibition of the liquor traffic and equal suffrage, and it favors direct legislation as the method by which all reforms can be earlier secured.

DELAWARE Prohibitionists evidently regard a broad platform as safer to stand upon than one having but a single plank. At their state convention, September 8, they adopted a platform embodying, besides prohibition, woman suffrage and other issues.

CONCERNING the work of the Christian Commission in the military camps, Mr. Moody reports that "not less than 5,000 men have made public confession of faith in Christ, upwards of 50,000 Testaments and as many hymn books have been distributed, and over 50,000 good, helpful books have been put into the hands of the soldiers and sailors, over twenty vessels of the navy having had their share." These "soldiers of the Cross," Mr. Moody and his noble coadjutors, whose mission is one of life and peace and consolation, are worthy as enthusiastic a reception upon their return home as is accorded to the soldiers of the republic whose work, undertaken in the name of freedom though it be, means death and desolation in thousands of homes.

EVANGELIST DAVID says that when the gospel gets inside, temperance naturally follows. He is opposed to saloons but is sure they will be closed only when men's hearts are right with God. Yes, but Brother David, is it not easier to put the gospel in after the liquor is put out? Shall we not prepare the way of the Lord by banishing the drink demon? When Jesus found His Father's house being made a house of merchandise, did He say, "This is only a branch of evil, we must begin the work of destruction at the root; when these people's hearts get right with God a proper reverence for the temple will naturally follow"? Nay, verily. He made a scourge and drove out the evil doers. And while we labor unceasingly to lead men to God, recognizing the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ as the root of all reform, let us, in the spirit of the Master, and with the same holy zeal, drive out the despoilers of the human temple.

STANDING on the curbstone the other morning waiting to see the First Regiment Illinois volunteers go by, and noting that in the solid masses of humanity which packed the sidewalks and crowded at the windows on either side of the street there was a marked preponderance of the "ever feminine," our thoughts ran somewhat on this wise: These women have waited patiently from 8:30 until noon for a sight of Chicago's "crack regiment," fresh from the "perilous edge of battle" at Santiago de Cuba, as, amid the cheers and tears of the populace, it marches—what is left of it—from the railway station to the Armory on Michigan avenue. There has been wholesale neglecting of domestic duties this Saturday morning. Dishes have been left unwashed and beds unmade; the Saturday's baking and boiling and sweeping have been left undone; babies have been consigned to the care of others or brought along—all this, and more, yet we shall not hear a protest from pulpit or press or platform! These wives and mothers and sweethearts are simply "patriotic." How would it be if these same women citizens should spend an hour on election morning or afternoon, in going to the polls to vote?

THE St. Louis Post Dispatch is not a temperance paper, but it advocates the use of water instead of wine in the christening of warships. The use of the latter, it avers, is out of date and not in keeping with America's character. It makes a good point when it says that "pure water is the best symbol of national purity of purpose and a good conscience, which the navy is supposed to represent and make good." In olden time when the launching of a ship was accompanied by a libation to Neptune, wine was not an unfitting symbol, but in these days and in this country, we, having a better knowledge of the God of the sea than had the ancients, can but regard its use upon such occasions (if we consider the subject without prejudice, "temperance" or otherwise) as an absurd anachronism. The very word christen (Christ-en) implies a Christian ceremony, and plain, everyday, common sense would suggest that the baptismal fluid symbolize life and purity, not danger and death.

THE editor of the Interior (Presbyterian) writes rather dolefully of the temperance situation. There are more saloons, and greatly more attractive ones, he says, in proportion to the population than there were fifty years ago. As to the attitude of the church, the action of the last General Assembly in the Princeton matter "was pretty nearly an open confession that all the protestations of the church on the subject are empty pretense, without a bracing principle in them," and the hour "professedly given to temperance, and cut off by the impious trick of time-consuming prayers, marked the lowest point to which temperance sentiment can ever descend among a God-fearing and honest people." Pretty severe this, and we would rather the Interior said it than THE UNION SIGNAL. But cheer up, Brother Gray! Because the saloon power under the high license system grows stronger and the backbone of the church (or perhaps it would be juster to say that of the General Assembly) weaker, it does not necessarily follow that "the present outlook is depressing." If there are more saloons there are also more total abstainers and more foes of the traffic than there were when you "entered enthusiastically and hopefully into the working temperance ranks." And while there is doubtless a large amount of Pecksniffian temperance talk, "windy and empty in proportion as it is loud and extreme," there is each year an increasing number of really, truly temperance Christians—men who vote as they talk and pray. Just wait until the public schools of this nation have had half a century of scientific temperance instruction and then see! Oh yes, we temperance workers have abundant reason to thank God and take courage.

Current Events.

Military Notes.

GENERAL SHAFTER will be assigned to the command of the department of the East with headquarters at Governor's Island.

IT is now understood that the Oregon and Iowa are to be at once sent to the Pacific. Captain Evans has been relieved of command of the Iowa, at his own request, and been assigned to duty as a member of the Naval Inspection Board.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT is said to have given out the formal statement that he will accept the nomination for governor of New York if given him by the Republican state convention. It is not believed that he will accept an independent nomination.

THIRTY-THREE nurses, who were privates detailed from the various regiments for duty in the division hospital at Lexington, Ky., deserted and returned to their regiments. They were put under arrest as deserters, and will be tried by court-martial.

THE mustering out of Roosevelt's Rough Riders was marked by the presentation to Colonel Roosevelt of a bronze replica of Frederick Remington's "Bucking Bronco," the gift of his men, who wished to express their devotion to their intrepid leader.

FIVE steamers are being prepared by the Spanish government to take from Cuba the remainder of the army, the civil staff and material. It is expected that the evacuation of the island will occupy four months and that it will cost the government 80,000,000 pesetas.

CONTRACTS for the construction of the new eighteen-knot battleships, to be known as Maine, Ohio and Missouri, have been granted by the navy department to William Cramp & Sons, Philadelphia, Union Iron Works, of San Francisco, and Newport News Shipbuilding Company, Newport News, Va., respetcively.

THE cruiser New York, Admiral Sampson's flagship, is to be stationed in Havana harbor. M. Jules Cambon, French ambassador at Washington, has given assurance that Havana harbor has been completely cleared of Spanish mines and torpedoes, and it may now be entered by an American ship of war without danger of sharing the fate of the Maine.

GENERAL WOOD, in command at Santiago de Cuba, has adopted vigorous measures for the sanitary improvement of the city. Santiago has been divided into five divisions, each under a responsible physician, and each having its corps of inspectors of sewers, streets, houses and dispensaries, with a hundred street cleaners. The daily death rate has been reduced from seventy to twenty.

THE work of the Young Men's Christian Association in the army and navy has proved to be of such practical benefit that it will be continued in the national camps and with the troops sent to Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines. Nearly $50,000 has been expended in the work, and there is need of more. Checks and orders should be made payable to F. B. Schenck, 3 West 29th street, New York city.

THE United States peace commissioners sailed from New York for Paris on September 16. They are instructed to insist upon retention of the island of Luzon by this country and are empowered, if they deem it advisable, to take all the Philippines under American rule. If Luzon alone be retained Spain must pledge herself to good government on the other islands and guarantee to Americans commercial rights in the Philippines fully as favorable as those given to her own citizens.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has secured seven members of the commission which is to inquire into the conduct of the commissary, quartermaster and medical departments of the army during the war. They are Gen. John M. Schofield, Charles Denby, late Minister to China; Col. James A. Sexton, of Chicago; Capt. E. P. Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution; President Daniel C. Gilman, of Johns Hopkins University, Gen. Granville M. Dodge, of New York, and Dr. W. W. Keen, of Philadelphia.

Temperance.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made to organize a National Temperance Alliance in Japan. A provisional constitution has been presented to the various temperance societies for their approval. There will soon be issued a call for a national convention to be held early in October next.

THE Young People's Christian Temperance Union, of Chicago, will coöperate with Bishop Fallows in creating popular sympathy with the anti-canteen movement. A grand rally will be held in the near future with Bishop Fallows and Rev. Father Cleary, of Minneapolis, as speakers.

THE Right Rev. Michael Tierney, Bishop of Hartford, who was elected national president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union at the recent convention in Boston, has adopted a practice of asking all the children he confirms in his diocese to make a promise of total abstinence during the years of their minority. He has, also, by word and example, done strenuous work for total abstinence.

THE attention of the police department of New York has been called to the fact that there is a statute of the state which prohibits the selling of tobacco in any form to persons under sixteen years of age. That law is quoted from section 290 Penal Code and reads thus:

A person who sells, pays for, or furnishes any cigar, cigaret or tobacco in any of its forms to any child actually or apparently under the age of sixteen years, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

No child actually or apparently under sixteen years of age shall smoke or in any way use any cigar, cigaret or tobacco in any form whatsoever in any public street, place or resort. A violation of this subdivision shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding ten dollars and not less than two dollars for each offence.

THE Methodist General Conference of Canada, recently in session at Toronto, passed the following resolution:

WHEREAS, The Methodist church should more fully meet her responsibility for religious and moral reform by making social ethics more distinctly a department of her church work; and whereas, the prohibition of the liquor traffic, the observance of the Christian Sabbath, and the promotion of social purity, are reforms that largely stand or fall together. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That this General Conference appoint a standing committee on religious reform, with a secretary, who, under the said committee shall give the whole of his time to this work, and be it further

Resolved, That said committee shall supersede the existing standing committee on temperance.

The report of the temperance committee was as follows:

"We find the various provinces to be well organized. The situation in Quebec is especially interesting and hopeful. It is the duty of Christian electors in this crisis hour of our history to establish prohibition as the policy which must be adopted by government of Canada after 29th of this month by giving such an overwhelming vote in favor of prohibition that all succeeding governments during the coming twentieth century will not dare, or even attempt, to change it. Your committee strongly protest against sale of any intoxicating liquors at any canteen or barracks, and would recommend this conference to appoint a deputation to government to ask for prohibition of such sales."

The newly elected secretary is Rev. J. S. Ross, D. D., pastor of a church in Guelph and author of "The Trials and Triumphs of Prohibition," "An Appeal for the Immediate Suppression of the Liquor Traffic," and the "First Hundred Years of Modern Missions."

About Women.

MRS. BISHOP CRANSTON was elected president of the fifteenth session of the woman's annual conference in Japan.

THE city council of New York has passed appropriate resolutions in appreciation of the patriotic and charitable acts of Miss Helen Gould, since the war broke out.

THE Woman's Athletic Club is a newly incorporated organization in Chicago. An elegant club house will contain all the latest appliances for physical culture, including a swimming tank, and will serve as a social resort for members. The articles of incorporation state that "the sale of alcoholic liquors and card playing will be strictly prohibited."

THE National Woman's Relief Corps presented the G. A. R., through Commander-in-Chief Sexton, a check for $2,000, at the annual national encampment at Cincinnati.

MISS ISABELLA THOBURN, missionary to India, has inaugurated a new venture—a "teachers' institute"—for the teachers in the girls' schools. It was held in Lucknow, June 24–29.

MISS FLORA VAN CUYLENBURG, a native of Ceylon, and at present a student at the London Medical School, has received a studentship of £75 a year for three years and one term that she may be trained as a medical missionary and obtain a full qualification to go abroad.

Educational.

SMITH College, Northampton, Mass., is to have a new chemical laboratory ready for occupancy by October 1, 1899. It will be a memorial to the class of 1895, which raised $25,000 towards it.

SEWING and cooking are now taught in Chicago's public schools. The teachers will be paid $600 for the first year and allowed an increase of $50 for each year's service until the maximum of $1,000 is reached.

THE school board of Grand Rapids, Mich., has announced that no married woman shall be eligible for appointment as teacher in the public schools of that city, and that the marriage of any woman teacher while in the employ of the board shall constitute a resignation.

MISS CORA JANE FLOOD, only daughter of the dead millionaire, has tendered as a gift to the University of California, the fine Flood mansion at Menlo Park, with its large grounds, consisting of 540 acres. The house is very beautiful and spacious and the whole place is worth a quarter of a million dollars. The letter of gift provides that the residence and grounds are to be preserved intact and the income to be used for some branch of commercial education.

IN connection with the opening of the public schools in the city of Santiago, it is interesting to note what a meager school system has hitherto prevailed there. In the whole province of Santiago, the latest figures show that out of a population of 270,000, there were but 6,000 public and 1,800 private school pupils, while the total public school expenditure for a year was only $16,000. In the whole of Cuba there were but 13,000 children in the public schools. This is about three and one-half per cent of the population. Fifty-three out of every one hundred persons in Havana can neither read nor write.

At Home.

A MASS convention of all interested in the work of the Illinois Christian Citizenship League is called to meet in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium at Peoria, on Saturday, October 8.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has decided to enforce the payment of the claims of Americans for property destroyed in Armenia against the Turkish government, the Sultan having declined to consider them. If necessary, warships will be ordered into the Bosphorus.

THE International Silver Company, a combine of the leading silver manufacturers of the East, has been formed under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $15,000,000 preferred and $15,000,000 common stock. The concerns included manufacture about seventy-five per cent of the silverware used in the United States.

Abroad.

PRESIDENT FAURE, of France, holds out against a revision of the Dreyfus case.

AN international compact against Anarchists is being considered by the European powers.

A HIGH Russian official states that the famine in the Volga district will necessitate the importation by Russia of 80,000,000 bushels of wheat this year.

THE Empress Elizabeth of Austria was assassinated on September 10, at Geneva, Switzerland, by an Italian anarchist named Luigini. The Empress was highly esteemed by all Europe, and her violent death is greatly deplored.

IVORY SOAP: 99 44/100 Per cent PURE:

FROM A WATER COLOR
BY IRVING R. WILES.

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST.

There is a "comfortable feeling" that comes after a bath with Ivory Soap, which is conducive to a good night's rest.

IVORY SOAP is pure, cleansing and refreshing, and leaves the tenderest skin with a delicious sense of restful comfort.

Any person wishing a copy of this picture, may mail to us 10 Ivory Soap Wrappers, on receipt of which we will send a copy (without printing) on enamel plate paper, 14 x 17 inches, a suitable size for framing.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.
CINCINNATI.

IT FLOATS.

Copyright, 1898, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

Contributed.

The Coming Woman.

BY META E. B. THORNE.

COMING across the eastern hills,
Apace with hastening morn,
In garments stainless as the light
And radiant as the dawn,
With steadfast gaze, majestic mien,
And brow where wisdom sits serene.

Before her evil flies to hide
In darkness far away,
As flees the gloom of night before
The swift approach of day,
For heaven is in her shining eyes
As in the deeps of cloudless skies.

Sovereign of home's dear realm is she,
And fairer 'tis to-day
Because she rules within, yet far
Beyond extends her sway,
For all the world shall better be
And holier for her ministry.

The little children round her throng
And listen for her voice,
Whose sweet-toned cadences their hearts
Encourage and rejoice;
Her swift, light footsteps to and fro
On missions of sweet mercy go.

She lays her tender hand in love
Upon the lone and sad,
And hearts unused to joy look up,
And looking are made glad;
Her very feet are shod with peace,
Before which wars and tumults cease.

The star that gems her crown of love
Is herald of the day
When Christ shall claim His own again,
And sin be swept away.
Oh, royal handmaid, thou shalt bring
Sooner "the coming of the King!"

Libertyville, Ill.

One Girl.

BY EDITH S. DAVIS.

THE great lumbering stage gave one more lurch and they were there. For hours it had gone on creaking and jerking. The poor, starved looking horses which were doing their best to pull it were covered with foam. It was one of the hottest of all hot days in July; the corn with its long, silken tassels was withered, and the squash vines had succumbed entirely and looked like bands of withered leaves.

"It'll surely rain to-night," said Hesper Jessup, as she stood in the doorway shading her eyes to see if she could detect any appearance of the slow coming stage. She was a round-faced, good-natured looking woman of forty—fat, rosy and healthy. Time had dealt kinldly with her. There were no anxious wrinkles on her face. Her nervous strength had never been taxed beyond endurance. Indeed, she never knew whether she had nerves or not.

But under the old grapevine arbor was another woman, one to whom Hesper addressed her remarks. A face wholly unlike Hesper's peered forth from a neat, black lace cap, and yet, even a stranger could see that they were mother and daughter. There were the same blue eyes and fair complexion; there had been the same pale, brown hair, but time had changed the brown of the mother's into a silvery whiteness; there was the same placid sweetness of expression, and that was all the resemblance. The mother's face was scarred and wrinkled. There were deep lines of strength about the mouth, and the forehead had little furrows plowed into it, showing that here, at least, was a woman who had known what it was to be tried and had learned the great lesson of endurance.

It was a beautiful scene that spread out before the eyes of Hesper Jessup. The Wisconsin river wound in and out for miles and miles. She could see great cliffs covered with the deep green of the pine blending with the softer shades of the maple. Between these cliffs stretched fields of waving corn and over all there brooded an infinite peace.

"I do believe, mother," said Hesper at last, "I do believe it's coming, and I do so hope it is, for she'll be hungry enough by this time after coming all that distance."

The individual referred to was a young girl whom they were expecting to spend a few weeks with them in the old country farmhouse. They had never seen her; she was a clerk or something, they knew, in one of the big city stores, and she needed rest. Hesper had written to the friends of the "fresh air movement," saying that they would take any young seamstress or tired clerk, and had received an answer saying that one would come by stage on the following Thursday. How long and earnestly Hesper and her mother had discussed the stranger. They wondered what she would be like, if she would take to their simple mode of life, or if she would be uppish and criticising and artificial and make life a burden to them.

"Any way it'll do her good to get rested," said the mother placidly, "and it won't hurt us to be put to a little extra trouble."

But both looked anxiously at the little, girlish figure that descended from the stage. "Here, miss, here's your baggage," said the stage driver, dropping in the dusty road the worn, old satchel that had evidently seen its best days. The girl picked it up and advanced timidly toward the path that was so thickly bordered by rose bushes in all stages of growth.

Hesper also advanced a few steps holding out her hand and saying kindly, "And this is our guest, is it? Welcome to our quiet home."

The girl placed a slender hand within the large, plump hand of her hostess and said in a low, timid voice that had in it the very essence of weariness, "Thank you; yes, I have come because you invited somebody."

Hesper felt the hot tears come into her eyes as she looked at the face before her. White as marble it was, with big, black eyes that had such a hunted, frightened look in them. It was a young face, and yet it was not young, for the lines of suffering were far more marked in this face than in Hesper's own. Little struggling curls were about the low white forehead, but the hair was drawn back in a severely simple style. She was dressed in a plain gray dress, and not one single bow of ribbon or ornament of any kind was visible about her.

"She doesn't look one bit as if she cared for style," said Hesper to her mother an hour later as they washed and wiped the dinner dishes. "She's just tired out, and I made her put on my old white wrapper and lie down on the big lounge and take a nap. I do wonder, though, what makes her look so scared. Mother, did you notice it?"

"Yes, Hesper, I did, and it's no ordinary trouble that has brought such a look into such a young face."

"I do wonder what her life has been," said Hesper again. "Anyway, mother, I'm glad she's here with us for a little quiet and rest."

This gladness increased as the days went by, and they saw more and more of their young guest. Very little trouble she was to them, for early in the morning saw her with a big hat on going across the fields, and only when Hesper blew the big dinner horn did she return with her arms filled with ferns and beautiful summer flowers. But the look of fright, almost of terror, never left her face, and it grew thinner and whiter while she seemed to shrink from everybody, even the simple country neighbors who came in for a half-hour's chat with Hesper and her mother.

"I don't see the reason," said Hesper again and again. "I can't get the least bit acquainted with her, and yet, sometimes she looks at me so longingly with those big, black eyes that I'd give the world to help her. Do you know, mother," Hesper's voice was full of awe as she said it, "do you know, mother, I really believe she's set against religion."

"Why, Hesper, what makes you think so?"

"Well, the other night when we had such a wondrously beautiful sunset, I was reading the description of the New Jerusalem, and I said to her, 'Miss Guinn, it's just like this, isn't it?' She glanced at the open Bible in my lap, and her lips were set as she answered, 'I know of nothing in that book that compares with this.' And haven't you noticed how she sits during church service with such a perfectly cold and indifferent look on her face? oh, it ain't natural, mother, there is something dreadfully the matter."

But what was the matter neither could discover, for Lucy Guinn was not one to speak of her own life's troubles and heartaches. Very sweet and gentle she was in her manners, very patient and uncomplaining, but her face never once softened into forgetfulness, never once lost its look of terror. One night as the three sat under the arbor and watched the shadows gathering and darkening adown the river, Lucy Guinn said, "I shall have to go back soon and it has been so pleasant here."

"Do not hurry back, child," said Mrs. Jessup, laying a kind, motherly hand on the girl's shoulder; "stay just as long as you can be happy here."

"Happy! Oh, yes; you mean not miserable," said the girl with a sigh. "I never was happy in my life, I think; not really happy. I cannot conceive of what it is to be happy unless the grave might make me so, for that would be the end, and I could forget."

"'Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions,'" murmured Mrs. Jessup, softly.

"But I don't believe in God," said the girl bitterly.

"Poor child, poor child. You do not know what you are saying. Life has been harder for you than it ought to have been. Men and women have destroyed your faith in them, but surely to-night as you see this beautiful world about us you can not say that you do not believe in the infinite love of a Heavenly Father!"

"Oh, I don't know," said the girl wearily, "if there is a God how could He let things be as they are? How could He make it so easy for some and so hard for others? How could He give everything to some and take everything in the world from others?"

"Not all," said Mrs. Jessup; "many have the things of this world, but all may have the great joys of the next."

The girl shook her head despairingly. "No, I don't believe it. I can't have the joys of heaven any more than the blessings of earth. I can't, it isn't possible."

"My child, why is it impossible?"

For a moment Lucy Guinn hesitated, then a look of resolution came into her white face and she said in a low voice, "I don't know that I can tell you. They told me not to speak of it when I came, but you have been so good to me and you don't know why I am so miserable. I want you to know my life even if you do then hate and despise me, but, oh, it is so dreadful to tell!" The voice faltered a little. Mrs. Jessup gently stroked the bowed head.

"Let me tell you about my childhood first. I can't remember my mother at all, she died when I was a baby. My father's sister came to live with us then and she did the best she could, but there were six of us children and my father received only the wages of a common laborer. But we managed some way, and all of us went to school until I was fourteen, then father died of a sunstroke. Of course there could be no more school for me, or for any of us. Aunt Grey got me a place as a cash girl in a drygoods store. The new life seemed pretty hard at first, but I gradually got used to it, and my earnings, small as they were, helped along. But as I grew older I began to long for some of the things that other girls wore. I saw them coming into the store in their pretty, dainty dresses and they would toss over the goods and select the very prettiest, and then go home to have them made into something prettier and daintier than they had before.

"At last, when I was seventeen, I got a position as clerk at the lace counter. That spring my oldest brother died of typhoid fever, and things were harder than ever with us. My sister Bess was crippled and could do nothing, and Jane was married to a good-for-nothing fellow who was drunk most of the time, and Jim was as wild as wild could be, and poor Harry was all we could depend upon. He worked constantly, but his wages were small and it was all we could do to live. He had a friend, a young man, who began coming to our house, and who seemed to like to be with us all, and yet I knew that he came especially to see me and, girl-like, I was glad and began to dream little dreams of my own. I said I did not know what it was to be happy. I think I almost knew then, but it wasn't for long.

"One night Joe asked me to go to a concert with him the next evening, and I said I would, for I passionately loved music and I liked to be with him too. Then I wondered what I should wear. I hadn't a decent hat in the world, nothing but an old black chip, and I did so long for one of those dainty lace ones that everybody wore. I told you that I was clerk at the lace counter. Well, the next morning as I was looking over the boxes I came upon a remnant of lace, and quick as a flash came the thought that it would be just enough for a hat. All the morning that thought was with me. I could see the hat made, and how becoming it was with the cluster of roses I had just enough money to buy. But how could I get the lace? It was a remnant, and not expensive, but I had nothing to get it with, and the rule of the establishment was that there should be no trust to clerks. At last the thought came to me, why couldn't I just borrow the lace? I'd go without the coffee I had for lunch for a month or so and perhaps I could save a little in other ways and then I could pay for it. After that thought came it was easy enough to make it seem all right, and my little change was invested in a hat-frame and roses before I went home, and when Joe came for me that night the hat was all ready and I knew that I looked well in it.

"But I didn't enjoy the music or the walk with Joe or anything. I felt that it wasn't just right and I inwardly resolved that I'd never put the hat on again until it was paid for, every penny of it. So I put it away in a box, feeling better after that resolve had been made. But things went all wrong the next day, customers were more exacting than usual. I went without my coffee for lunch and felt weak and faint in consequence, for my luncheon was little enough at the best of times.

"At last there came into the store a little old fussy woman, enormously rich and a great friend of one of the proprietors. Seeing her he came over to speak to her and accompanied her over to my counter. She wished to match some lace, and I thought I should faint when I saw the piece in her hand, for it was the exact pattern of the remnant that was in my hat box at home. I knew that there was not another bit like it in the store, and there was Mr. Stafford chatting affably with her and evidently more than interested in her getting what she desired. I helplessly tossed over the boxes, growing hot and cold and sick and faint. What should I do? I would have given anything could I have died there. At last the little old woman give an impatient sigh, and Mr. Stafford said sharply, 'Can't you match it?' 'No, sir,' I said, as steadily as I could; 'we haven't another bit like it.' 'Oh, that can not be,' said the customer, 'I got it here only the first of this week and there were several yards left over.' Mr. Stafford looked annoyed. 'You must have overlooked it. Go over the laces again and be careful.' In despair I went over box after box, but of course there was no such lace there. 'No, we haven't a bit,' said I at last. Mr. Stafford looked greatly vexed and then inquired if she could not wait until he could get it matched, but no, she was in a great hurry and must have it at once. She would try to get it elsewhere.

"After that the hours dragged wearily on, I feeling all the time as if something dreadful was about to happen, but at last six o'clock came and I went home. All that night I tossed restlessly upon my bed. Sleep I could not, and in the morning, faint and weary, I went again to my work. It might have been perhaps ten o'clock in the morning when Mr. Stafford approached my counter together with the junior partner of the firm. I felt myself grow white and I knew that I trembled like a leaf.

" 'Miss Guinn,' said he, sternly, 'it is unnecessary for me to tell you that you are a thief. We have examined the sales, and find that the lace you represented as sold has not been sold. You alone know what has become of it.' "

The girl's voice choked here, and for a moment she could not go on. Very softly and gently Mrs. Jessup stroked the bowed head. At last her voice rang out in such an agony of grief, "Oh, I can't tell you the rest! I confessed everything, told them what I had meant to do, but it all sounded false and foolish then, and I didn't wonder that they would not believe my story. At last they decided upon sending me to the police station, when I fell upon my knees and begged them, for God's sake, to spare me that. I would do anything, anything. The junior partner hesitated, but Mr. Stafford was inexorable. At last he devised a plan which he deemed fitting for the occasion. I should restore the lace and stand for two hours in the front of the store, where everybody could see me, wearing the placard, 'I stole lace.'

The girl's voice was faint and despairing now. "How I ever lived through it I do not know. People came and went. Some looked pityingly at me, others passed scornfully by. Some of the more unfeeling of the girls giggled, but for the most part I knew they pitied and were sorry for me. One kind-hearted lady begged to see the proprietor, and asked that I be not punished so severely; but Mr. Stafford said it was not the value of the lace alone, but it was needed for the example. By and by everything became confused. I could see great crowds of people surging about me. The news had spread like wildfire, and everybody came to look upon the thief. Oh!" said the girl, clenching her slender hands together, "I can never forget it. 'I stole lace,' was ringing in my ears; it was written in fire on my heart; it was stamped upon my face. People were reading it; everybody saw it. Great balls of fire danced before my eyes. I felt faint but I could not fall. I must stand there and endure it. I must—I must or there would be the patrol wagon and the police station, and what after that I knew not. I was lost to all sense of feeling only those words were ringing over and over again in my brain. I do not know the last. I think I stood there until the time was up, but when I realized anything I was at home and all was quiet, and I could catch the sound of suppressed voices. Instantly my hand touched my breast to see if the placard was still there. No, it was gone. At least I could not feel it, but it was written there, it was written there forever!" The girl's voice died away into a kind of moan. "The days and weeks that followed were full of an unspeakable agony. There were those who tried to be kind to me, but every strange voice filled me with terror. I would start up from my sleep shrieking; day and night brought me no rest until I came here, and here I have rested, because you did not know I was a thief."

"You poor child, you poor child," said Hesper throwing her arms about her. "No wonder you look afraid of everything and everybody. No wonder you question even your Heavenly Father's love."

Mrs. Jessup did not speak but gently drew the slender form to her breast and held her close.

"Oh, it is all so dark to me about things," continued the girl. "I can't see why God put all those longings into my heart for beautiful things and then put me just where I couldn't have one of them. I can't see why some girls should just throw away what would be wealth to others. I can't understand why a few should fairly revel in luxury and others starve for the bare necessities of life. If there is a God, things couldn't be so; there couldn't be such sorrow and suffering."

"My dear," said Mrs. Jessup, "did you ever think of our Saviour, a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief? You have suffered greatly for your wrongdoing, you have suffered much that was manifestly unjust, but Christ said even on the cross, 'Father, forgive them, they know not what they do.' "

The girl's hands were clasped nervously together. "Let me go," she said brokenly. "I must be alone to think about it."

"Good-night," said Mrs. Jessup, "and may God bless you and make it plain unto you."

Her mother's words came back to Hester as she stood a few weeks later by the casket in which had been placed the girl's wasted form. A great flood of sunshine streamed in at the east window and it seemed a flood of divine light sent from heaven to earth. It filled the whole room with a kind of glory. Hesper glanced at the open Bible which lay upon the table. The page upon which the tired head had rested as the soul went out to be with God, was rumpled and torn, but the words which Hesper read were, she knew, the words upon which the young life leaned as it went out into that other larger, richer life, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

"It is all plain to her now," said Hesper.

"Yes," said Mrs. Jessup, softly, "the look of terror has all gone. God's peace is on her face. Poor child, she has gone where life's problems are all solved in the full light of divine love."

Appleton, Wis.

An Analogy.

BY HELEN M. STODDARD.

WE stand ready for the train in a quaint, tile-roofed, one story, Mexican city, at the foot of the glorious mountain, Orizaba. Around us lie the coffee fields and banana orchards fruited deep. The tree trunks of the deep shadowed Alameda are veiled with fairy ferns wherever a decaying leaf may give them sustenance. Shepherds are leading their flocks of sheep and goats up the steep mountain sides. Above the Alameda, above the shepherds, above the cross-capped lower mountains, Orizaba lifts her graceful form, with a snowy reboza across her beautiful shoulders, grandest of Mexican mountains, highest peak on the North American continent.

Midway between us and that snowy peak lies the marvelous elevated plain, that under a tropical sun, gives the balmy climate of spring throughout the year, richest and most to be desired of any plain upon the round earth.

We would leave this lower plain, with its heavy, and, perchance, fever-laden air, its microbes, its swiftly growing and speedily decaying vegetation, for that heaven-blessed central plain above us. The train moves in, drawn by a heavy double engine—Anglo Saxon thought expressed in power—an engine built to pull heavy loads, built for climbing; no light, flippant, holiday engine can make the mighty climb before us. We can see our destination high above us, a mile as a bird flies. There is a rugged path, leading from this city in the valley up to that town clinging on the heights, and those who are equipped for mountain climbing and have learned to spring from rock to higher steep, can ascend that height, reaching the higher town, and wait for the long, laboring train to pull up the more circuitous route. Those who climb the shorter, steeper path must climb unburdened, but this track for the heavy train was built for a purpose—to carry the travel and traffic of a great nation.

We start off at right angles to our destination, but soon we swing back toward the city we just left, but leaving it below us. Around us is the vegetation of the tropics; glossy orchids peep from the granite walls, or wave us a hasty recognition from their thrones on the branches of broad-leaved trees. As we ascend, the vegetation of two zones mingles in a bewildering maze; the dark, thick-leaved evergreen of the hot countries hobnobs with the pine of the temperate zone; brilliant-hued tropical flowers, set out with gaudy frills and fringes, bow and wave to the paler sister flowers of a cooler clime. As we whirl around rugged mountain juts, fertile valleys suddenly open before us with white-clad peons busily at work in fields of corn. We dash across deep ravines, whose snow-fed mountain streams are so far below us we cannot hear their song and shout as they hurry to the sea. We vanish into dark, smoky, dripping tunnels, but to emerge again into glorious sunlight with a wider view from a loftier vantage ground. Cool breezes come down from the eternal snows above. Our strong double engine is pulling grandly, with never a moment of hesitation or a backward slide.

For two never-to-be-forgotten hours we ascend in this most wonderful manner; swinging around mighty curves; retracing, but ever on a higher plane; back and forth, in and out, but ever and always up, up, up! The engineering skill elicits exclamations of praise. We admire the mighty engine as if it were alive. At the end of twelve miles of track and over two hours of time we reach the town that hangs on the edge of the wonderful elevated plain, and exchange our magnificent engine for a simple, light-running one, since little strength is needed now; the train will almost run itself along the beautiful undulations that mark the route to the city of Mexico.

To me this is a type of the temperance movement. We stand in the microbe laden valley of universal drinking; our destination, prohibition, up yonder in the heights. It is only a mile away, but that mile is up—up nearer the snowy heights of God. We who have caught the heavenly vision and are shod for the climbing, possessing heads that dizzy not and hearts that fail not nor palpitate, can easily ascend the height by the shorter, steeper path. But the great mass of humanity is not equipped for mountain climbing. It must be dragged up, and it takes lifting forces to do it. The powerful double engine of education and agitation; public sentiment and the equal ballot; the Christ love yoked to human endeavor, pulling to the last ounce, round the mountain sides, over marvelous bridges uniting differences of opinion, leading into dark dripping tunnels of discouragement, to flash out upon a higher plane marvelous with the vistas above and below, and inspirited by fresh impulses wafted down from the glittering heights above.

It may be a long way, but it is a most wonderful way. Similar feats of engineering are repeated again and again, as new chasms must be bridged, invincible granite mountains must be tunneled. If you can not go around nor go over, you must go through. This is as true in reform as in engineering.

The pull is at last ended, the steep is climbed, our destination reached—prohibition for the state, protection for the home, that higher plane of purity and the Golden Rule, where God wants His people to be.

Dallas, Texas.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

"THERE are many things the Spirit has still to teach us, and I know well the man that follows Christ will never lose his way in any thicket." The dear Scotchwoman was right. There is no path so dark the dear Lord cannot find His way through. Only be sure to walk in His footsteps and with His guidance.

The sorrowing mother who last week could not find her daughter has returned rejoicing, for "the lost is found," and she says, with tears of joy streaming down her face, "Oh, God has been such a comfort to me since I gave myself to Him; I knew He would help me find my girl. Where I worked I had beer all around me, and it sickened me so, and the people said, 'Drink some of it,' and I said, 'No, I have sworn a mighty oath to God, and I will never put it in my mouth.' God is so good to me."

. . . . . .

Prayer is asked for the son of Christian parents whose feet are in a dangerous path, and that his parents may speak words of wisdom in their efforts to lead him to Christ. Three ladies and an old man came forward to be prayed with. And again two men came to the front determined not to leave until God answered. The answer came so quickly they were overjoyed.

. . . . . .

A young man from Tokyo, Japan, gave his Christian experience, and while he talked we prayed in our hearts that a man who had come in while intoxicated might become sober enough to hear God's message. After a little he did begin to arouse, and after the meeting Christian workers talked with him, and he went out under deep conviction, followed by the prayers of many.

. . . . . .

One day a dear, superannuated minister and his son, also a clergyman, together helped in the service, and brought before us most forcibly the fact that boys will follow the steady, conscientious example of a Christian father. These were always companions. A mother cried to us in her agony from a distant state, asking that God hear our prayer and help her find her boy who had left home. "He is not a Christian, although a good boy. Where is he to-night? Pray that God will save his soul." We have done so, for we do so deeply sympathize with these broken-hearted mothers.

. . . . . .

A sister in the far east sends a contribution to carry on the Willard Hall meetings. "My prayers have been for this grand work for a long time. I am trusting and praying that the many prayers may be answered and souls saved and that your own self be blessed and sustained." Sisters, you cannot measure the amount of good such a letter brings. Faith and works, hand in hand, lift a heavy load off our hearts and hands.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

More About Japanese Women and Work.

DEAR EDITOR SIGNAL:—When the National temperance workers of Japan met at the seashore at Kamakura in August of last year, they decided to try to establish a permanent Chautauqua there, and since this year's session—from July 25 to 29, inclusive—has been so successful, the wisdom of the plan is no longer questioned and the leaders will at once put forth larger efforts for 1899. Isn't it beautiful to see how a thought becomes an organized fact, sometimes?

The thing that impressed me most at this meeting was the growth of the women. They are actually coming to believe that they have an individuality of their own. You know all their training has been such as to discourage them and prevent them giving expression to opinions, but they are breaking the bonds now and are going to try their wings one of these days. Of course, mistakes will be made, but how are they to learn to work until they try? Immediately following the conference, Mrs. Yajima and Mrs. Ushioda, National superintendent of the evangelistic work, accompanied by the former's daughter as secretary, set out on a journey of several hundred miles, and will visit a number of unions, as well as some unorganized parts. There is no parallel to this in the history of woman's work in Japan, and their movements will be carefully, and in some circles, very critically watched.

Perhaps the most definite work of the conference was the arranging of a complete program for all local unions for the next eight months, that is, till the next annual convention. These will be printed and put into the hands of every white-ribboner in the land. Doubtless, in some places it will be necessary to modify it somewhat, but all will study the same topic at the same time. Could not many of those countries where our work is in a more advanced stage, profit by a similar course?

Many incidents have reached me concerning the receptions accorded our bonny Y girls when they went to their homes a few weeks ago for the summer vacation, the most interesting of which is the experience of Miss Tami Mitani, Y secretary. She did not go home last year, so this was the first opportunity she had had for a heart-to-heart talk with her father—of whom she is exceedingly fond—about her work. To her great delight she found him eager to hear and most sympathetic. Let me tell you how truly appreciative he is. A few days ago he went to a banquet of business men, and when the wine was passed he refused it, saying to his host: "My daughter is engaged in the temperance work and through respect for her I can not drink." I wish you might have seen her radiant face as she told me this. Dear young women of America, do you not feel that this one victory alone is worth every sacrifice you have made for Japan? Unless you fully understood the drinking customs of the country, and woman's position here, you can not realize what it means to have a father manifest such courage and speak thus of his daughter in the presence of his associates. It points to a "new time," altogether, and you have had a part in bringing it about.

Before Buddhism came to Japan woman occupied a much higher place than she does to-day, but Christ is elevating her and surely there can be no second Buddha to drag her down. Not long ago I had an interview with Count Okuma, who is Prime Minister again. He is much interested in the higher education of the mother-sex, and attributes America's greatness to the fact that she has given such unusual privileges to her young women. He told me that he would like to see all limitations removed and the girl given an equal chance with her brother in every way. It is reported that he has promised to stand financially behind the plan for a woman's university in the near future. With such a champion there can be no fear of defeat. I had intended to give you the full interview sometime, but this is the cream of what he said, and there are so many things to tell, that much of importance must always be left out.

The temperance work in Japan sustained a very heavy loss last week in the death of Miss Maude Simons, superintendent of the L. T. L. in the foreign W. C. T. U. You have already been told on the Y page how it occurred. Miss Simons was killed almost instantly, and Miss Allen, superintendent of the evangelistic work, was seriously hurt. The former I never saw without her white ribbon, and so we put a tiny bow upon her shroud. Both were so loyal to our work and methods, and have been my devoted friends from the beginning. It would require pages to tell you of all it has meant to me to have their help and confidence. These young women were Ohio girls, and as winsome as they are strong. We believe Miss Allen will live. Pray that it may be so and that our Father may continue to keep, Yours ever faithfully,

CLARA PARRISH.

Tokio, Japan.

Miss Agnes Slack on the Gothenburg System.

EDITORS THE UNION SIGNAL:—For the last few weeks I have been addressing meetings in various towns under the auspices of our National W. C. T. U. in Norway. During my stay in Bergen I had the pleasure of meeting Herr Sven Aarestad, one of the leaders of the Norwegian Temperance Society. I had a long talk with him about the Gothenburg system. He said, "As far as Norway is concerned there can be no doubt that the Gothenburg system has done good; it has put a stop to the sale of brandy and spirits by the very large number of tradesmen who had the right to distill and sell before the law of 1871. Previous to 1837 every farmer was allowed to use his corn for making brandy, which he had the right to sell. Between 1837 and 1848 laws were constantly passed to limit these rights. In two-thirds of the country districts of Norway there is absolute prohibition, as the result of the law of 1845, which gave the herredstyre, a body of men chosen by the people (the Norwegian equivalent for the county council), power to refuse licenses and the sale of intoxicants. This is an instance of the sale of liquor being directly controlled by the voice of the people. To the disgrace of English and other tourists, it should be noted that in some of the above mentioned districts they have granted permission for the sale of intoxicants during the summer season, to meet the requirements of the foreign visitors to the country."

In reply to my question as to the position taken by total abstainers, on the whole, towards the Gothenburg system, Herr Aarestad said: "Total abstainers in Norway gave no assistance to the starting of the system, and they are doing all they can to vote it down, since the law of 1894 has made it possible for them to do so, because they are all agreed that the final aim of all temperance work is, not merely to limit, but to abolish the drink traffic. The Gothenburg system is not a temperance agitation, and teetotallers wish to abolish it, both because they are working for total prohibition and because the municipal authorities in many towns have shown such great avidity with regard to the profits arising from the sale of brandy and spirits by the samlag (Norwegian term for the Gothenburg system); the shareholders are not allowed to have more than five per cent of the profits, and nearly all the rest is given to the municipal authorities to be used on town improvements.

Temperance workers welcome with much pleasure a clause in the law of 1894 which comes into force in 1899 (introduced by Sven Aarestad) which provides that, after paying 5 per cent to the shareholders, only 35 per cent of the profits be given to the municipal authorities and the rest to the state. It is believed that this is another step toward prohibition, for as the people find that less profit is in their hands they will be more willing to vote down the system, a right (local option) which they now have once in five years. I asked Herr Aarestad if he would advise the introduction of the Gothenburg system into other countries? He replied, "There was very great danger in doing so, because the very large profits resulting from the trade would be an inducement to its continuance, and because the richer classes would be the gainers in a money sense, as they would necessarily be the shareholders and would always have a guaranteed 5 per cent on their investment."

When I was at Egersund, a little town of 3,000 inhabitants, I was told that when the vote was being taken there, the non-teetotallers used as an argument the fact that the town would gain so much by retaining the samlag, especially so as the railway was to be extended, and all the profits which would be made by the dram drinking of the navvies would benefit the town!"

I was told that during the fishing season kr.2,000 (about £110) are spent by the fishermen alone on brandy and spirits in Egersund. (This, too, for the benefit of the town.) As a result of my own observations in other towns also, I am more than ever convinced of the great danger and inadvisability of introducing a system into any country which must first impoverish large numbers of the community in order to "benefit the town." I write this from Aalesund where our white-ribbon society did a great work in helping to vote down the samlag. Drunkenness in the town has been considerably lessened, and little effort will ever be made to reinstate the system here. The opinions expressed by temperance workers in Norway in my conversations with them may be summed up by saying that we should all have as our aim the total prohibition of the drink traffic (not only of brandy and spirits as is the case with the Gothenburg system) and every step which tends in that direction is eagerly welcomed.

Faithfully yours,

AGNES E. SLACK,
Hon. Sec. World's W. C. T. U.
Aalesund, Norway, Aug. 22, 1898.

Wear Your White Ribbons!!

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—As a National brother helper of the W. C. T. U. I feel constrained to offer a few words of earnest exhortation to our most esteemed sisters of the white ribbon.

Within the last three years I have given nearly six hundred illustrated lectures in New York and in adjacent states, which has necessitated a great deal of travel. In every lecture I have hit the liquor traffic by word and on canvas, with all my might, and as a brother helper, have done the National and local W. C. T. U's all the good I could. In a great many other free addresses not illustrated, I have spoken at length and most earnestly in their behalf, and in all of these audiences I have carefully noted the number of white ribbons visible, and have compared them with the number of W. C. T. U. members present (ascertained by inquiry), and I am sure that I am within the limits of truth when I assert that I have found less than twenty-five per cent of them wearing the white ribbon!! It is disheartening.

Sisters, if you can not do all that you would like to do for the protection of our country and of our homes, do all that you can do. Surely there are none who can not wear the white ribbon all the time and everywhere, thereby helping to create public sentiment, and preaching silently but eloquently, life-long sermons for temperance. I have known of tempted and tried ones being strengthened and helped over hard places just by the sight of a white ribbon "such as mother or sister used to wear."

I beg of you to do as many earnest workers have done, viz., buy white ribbon and make up a lot of bows and sew them on every wrapper, dress and outer garment you have, so that every one who sees you may know that you are enrolled in the army of noble women whose purpose it is to annihilate the liquor curse, protect the home and establish purity and godliness throughout the land! HENRY P. VAN LIEW.
Wayland, N. Y.

The Third Nebraska.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In the Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen, I see no mention of the Third Nebraska, commanded by Col. W. J. Bryan, now stationed at Panama Park, Jacksonville, Fla.

My son, a former L. T. L. member, now in the Third Nebraska regimental band, writes me that Colonel Bryan allows neither liquor nor beer on his camp ground, and that he is very particular to insist that a plentiful supply of ice and ice-water are always on hand for the use of his men. As a consequence this regiment occupies a high position in point of morals among the troops now in the South. (MRS.) A. M. HENDERSON.
Superior, Neb.

Local Union.

THE following questions have been sent to Mrs. Benjamin, our National superintendent of parliamentary usage, with the request that they be immediately answered in THE UNION SIGNAL. We therefore gladly accord them space in the Local Union column:

QUESTION.—Is it the duty of the corresponding secretary to notify all superintendents of their appointment or election?

ANSWER.—It is the duty of the recording secretary.

Q.—Does a recording secretary make a minute of motions lost or only of those carried?

A.—Both.

Q.—When should a motion be recorded?

A.—As soon as stated by the Chair.

Q.—When the "previous question" is limited to amendments how should the motion be made?

A.—"I move the previous question on the amendments."

Q.—Is it true that some motions are debatable some times and not other times?

A.—It is "true."

Q.—Can a woman hold office in a county, or district, or state in which she does not reside?

A.—She can not.

Q.—Suppose a president dies, or resigns her office, how is the office to be filled?

A.—It depends entirely on the constitution by which the organization is governed.

A. S. BENJAMIN.

Q.—Can one be a consistent wearer of the white ribbon and pick hops?

A.—The conditions of membership in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are the signing of the total abstinence pledge and the payment of the annual membership fee. It is inevitable that questions of policy and principle should arise from time to time, such as the one indicated here. I believe in every case the settling of such questions must be left to the conscience of the individual white-ribbon woman. No one can arrogate to herself authority to control these minor points. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has never said that alcohol must not be used as a medicine by its members, though it constantly seeks to set forth the true scientific reasons for believing that such use is unnecessary, but the individual member must, in the last analysis, settle the question for herself. It seems to me the same is true in this particular case. If one is in a community where the ethical significance of the picking of hops becomes a vital question, allied closely with the cause of temperance, the presumptive argument would be that the safest course is to avoid an avocation which could possibly bring reproach upon one's temperance principles; and yet there may be cases where other reasoning would seem to prevail. Paul's rule is an excellent one for doubtful questions, and the "weaker brother," now as then, must be considered. At the same time one must not make one's self a slave to the caprice of those who may set up their own standard of righteousness and demand that all shall be measured by that standard. Sanctified common sense is as good a thing in temperance work as it is in everything else.

Q.—Can one be a consistent white-ribboner and at the same time hold membership in another society which is, in many points, diametrically opposed to the principles for which the white ribbon stands?

A.—That question seems on its face to be a paradox. One can hardly conceive how any one would desire to be a white-ribboner and at the same time hold membership in another society opposed to the principles of the white ribbon. It is almost like asking: Can one be a Fenian and an Orangeman at the same time, a Democrat and a Republican; a High Churchman and a Wesleyan? One would certainly have an exceedingly difficult task in attempting to adjust one's self to such differing conditions. Each organization is doubtless good in its place, but the woman who joins one should have a sufficiently strong reason back of the joining to make it practically impossible for her to join the other. One is tempted to wonder how real an interest that woman can have in the principles of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union who would ally herself to another organization which stands opposed to even a part of those principles.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

If God be for us, who can be against us? Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us, and he will deliver us.—Rom. 8:31: Dan. 3:17.

THE first district, Illinois, W. C. T. U. held its annual convention in Chicago, September 9 and 10. It passed a resolution to stand by the Temple. The Englewood W. C. T. U., Chicago, at its last meeting passed a resolution of which the following is a part: "The Englewood union extends heartfelt sympathy . . . and pledges their support to the Temple as a memorial to Frances E. Willard, and like her have determined to stand by it." At the fourth district, Nebraska W. C. T. U. convention just held, they passed a strong resolution to stand by the Temple.

✠

A big-hearted Chicago citizen has just presented us with $1,750 in Temple Trust Bonds. Another bondholder in Virginia has given us $2,500. The names of these parties are to be engraved on the beautiful tablet by the side of the platform, where appear only the names of those who give large sums to the Temple. A check has just been received from Mrs. E. M. Cobb, the treasurer of Nebraska, for $189.38. Of this amount $100 is to place the name of Mrs. Cobb on the Nebraska tablet, it is a gift from her devoted friends in the state; $50 is for Mrs. Ferguson's tablet, and $37.38 is for the purpose of placing the name of the honored president of Nebraska, Mrs. F. M. Walker, on the state tablets, and $2 is towards a tablet for Mrs. Nettie Doty.

✠

Our space of late has been so occupied with other matters we have not had room to speak of large and generous gifts sent us by individuals and unions. This must be our excuse to our friends, as we assure them we have deeply appreciated their aid in our struggle to secure the $300,000 to pay off the Temple Trust Bonds before the first of the year. Among those generous donors are the following: Mrs. A. M. Small, Baldwinville, Mass., $100, with a promise of more later. From Mrs. H. M. Stoddard, Coral, Ill., we have received the following letter: "Enclosed find a draft for $50 to apply on the debt of the Temperance Temple. This is from my mother, a widow, in her eighty-third year, who desires to do this much for the temperance cause before she goes over the river. She is a faithful W. C. T. U. member, attending all meetings she is able to reach. She is getting feeble now and is not likely to work with us much longer for the temperance cause. Her prayers go with the gift."

Miss Clara C. Pierce, Reading, Mass., sends the following letter: "My mother, Sarah L. Pierce, who is nearly eighty years old, and is very much interested in the temperance cause, wishes to give $100 to the 'Willard Memorial,' hoping that the beautiful building may be used for the furtherance of temperance work, and a fitting memorial of the life of that wonderful woman, Frances Willard. I inclose check for $100."

✠

The Gonic, N. H., union has sent a check for $100; so also has the Philadelphia, Pa., W. C. T. U., to place the name of Miss Barbara H. Millard of that city on their state tablet in Willard Hall. The Grafton, N. D., union has sent a check for $60 as a first installment on a pledge of $100. The Toronto, O., W. C. T. U. sends a check for $60, which completes the payment of their hundred dollar pledge. The Somerset Y's of Wellesley College have done nobly. They have sent a check of $115, and Wellesley College Y's will go down to posterity on the Massachusetts state tablet in Willard Hall. Essex county, Mass., W. C. T. U., through its treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Underhill, sends a hundred dollar check to have its name placed on the state tablet. This noble woman gives and has been giving right along a dollar a month to the Temple fund.

✠

All money should be sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, and drafts should be made out in the name of Mr. G. B. Shaw, treasurer Temple Trustees.

Our Children.

Minnie's Pa.

BY THOMAS ALEXANDER.

I'M not very big, and mamma says I don't know so very much, but I'm going to tell you somefing, somefing I do know. Papa don't drink, no, you bet he don't, 'cause if he did my mamma would just—I don't know zactly what she'd do, but I don't know what she wouldn't do! That wasn't what I was going to tell you, though.

I was going to tell you about Minnie Grant's pa. He just drinks awful! I mean he drinks an awful lots of whisky. And he's the meanest, worsest, ugliest man in town. My aunt Amandy says it's the whisky that makes him like that. Like what I said he was—I don't like to say it again, 'cause he might be around some place—and his little girl Minnie and Jimmie (that's his little boy) are the ragidest, worstest little boy and girl in school. They don't never go to Sunday-school. Guess they haven't any clothes to wear, or else their pa has made them so mean that they don't never want to go. An' Jimmie, I heard him swear the other day, and my aunt Amandy says that people that swear don't go to heaven. I didn't ask her where they did go—wish I had 'cause I'd like to know. But Jimmie says he heard his pa say that, and so he s'poses it's all right.

Isn't it funny that boys think everything their pas do is all right, and want to do just what they do? Well, I guess I don't know so very much, 'cause I can't see why, when pas know that their little boys will do just what they do, they keep on doing such awful mean fings. And not so very long ago I saw Jimmie coming right out of the door of the saloon! Yes, sir! and I says, "Why, Jimmie Grant! What would your ma say?" And he just whistled a kind of shame whistle (if you know what kind that is) and said his ma had 'nough to do to keep his pa straight—didn't have no time to go to church nor nowhere—and 'sides he guessed he could go where his pa went. Well, maybe I don't know everyfing; but you bet you, if I drank whisky what made me as mean and ugly as Jimmie Grant's pa, and I knew that my little boy would do just what I did, I'd quit drinking whisky, that's what I'd do.

I was sitting on our porch one day, when it was just about getting dark. I was shutting my eyes real tight, and then opening them up wide to see how much darker it had got since I'd shut them. And when I opened my eyes, what do you think I saw? Why, coming right round the corner was Minnie Grant dragging her pa along by the coat sleeve. She was a tuggin' with all her might, and tryin' to hurry him along, and lookin' 'round to see if anybody was coming. But I just shut my eyes and 'tended not to see them, 'cause she looked so 'shamed of her pa. He didn't though—I wonder why? I know I'd feel awful 'shamed if I looked like he did. But I guess Minnie must have seen me looking out of the corner of my eye, 'cause she never came over for the longest time. And when I went to see her she hung her head and didn't say anyfing 'till I said somfing funny, and then I guess she forgot all about her pa. One day I heard mamma tell Aunt Amandy (she thought I was out playing, but I wasn't, I was sitting on our porch close by the door where they couldn't see me) and mamma said that old Mr. Grant was meaner than sin to his wife, and that he was lying and cheating everybody; and that he gambled. I don't know what gambled is; but I know it must be somfing awful, 'cause the way mamma said it. And that he swore at his wife, and made her do just what he wanted her to—just like she was a fool or a wax figger with a clock inside of it, and his swearing kept winding it up—and if he kept on that way much longer he'd—it's an awful fing to say, but I guess I can say what my mamma does—kill himself, and go to the devil. Well, I 'spose it's all right; but I don't believe I do know so very much either, for I don't see why, 'cause he drinks whisky what makes him mean and ugly, and lies and cheats and gambles, and the devil gets him, why he has to drag his little boy along, and maybe, his little girl and their ma.

Uncle John's Talks.

KEEP WARM.

HELLO, chicks! I'm not your mother, exactly, but I want to tell you something about dressing; something that is suggested by the coming cool weather. If I were to give you my text without the sermon, it would be, keep warm. I mean, keep comfortably warm. Yes, I know some of you do, but some do not. And some who have the care of the dear little lambkins do not understand. I have seen people who thought it best to go without warm clothing as long as possible in order that it might do the more good when it was put on. That is, if one becomes accustomed to it in the early autumn, it will not be warm enough for winter. This idea is pernicious, fatal. The very opposite course is the proper one. And here my rule is, put on all the clothes you can bear. A couple of thinks will show the reason: the skin is relaxed by the warm weather and free perspiration, and is therefore sensitive, just as it is at night during sleep. Do not attempt to "harden" it by exposure. That process will come along gradually and without any special assistance from you. To chill the skin is as bad when the thermometer is at 60, as when it says 30 or 10. The temperature cuts no figure at all as far as physiology is concerned. Just imagine a piece of water-hose bent like a hairpin, and a pump forcing water into the middle. It would fill both ends, equally, of course. Now, if one end is pinched, the other gets too much. Well, the heart pumps blood into the blood-hose, one part of which goes to the outer skin and one to the inner skin. Pinch one end by chilling the skin and the other end gets too much. Call it congestion of the mucous membrane if you want bigger words. As the nose and throat are sensitive they suffer first. Then the lungs and other parts. Some people have hoarseness and cough in warm weather more than in cold, simply because they do not protect the skin from chilliness.

Here is a rule which covers the whole ground; Dress so as to keep the hands and feet warm. In other words, when the stove (heart) is at the center of a room, keep the corners warm and you needn't worry about the rest.

This brings me to my particular point for today, namely, corner-warmers. You don't want an undershirt without sleeves, but sleeves without an undershirt. Yes, that's just what I mean. They must be large enough to go over the white shirt or nightgown and slip on and off easily. Take the sleeves from a garment worn by some one much larger than yourself. Sometimes the legs of old drawers will do as well. Pull one on, and then cut around so as to leave a part to cover the back, as much as will lie smooth when held by one button at the center. Cut the other by this one. Put button on the right one, and buttonhole in left, for they must always go on the same way. Wear them whenever the arms are chilly, even if it is all the time.

It is a prevailing fault with much of our dressing, that the trunk is covered, and the arms and legs more or less exposed. It gives me a soul-shudder to see a little child whose arms are half bare, and whose ankles have only a thin stocking, led by a man in an overcoat, with all the accompanying underwear, and his feet and legs fully protected from the air. In this way the little ones get catarrh; and other things follow—or, you might say the catarrh extends—until some "mysterious Providence" takes the angel home. To my mind there is neither mystery nor Providence in it.

And then the hoofs, that is, feet. Keep them warm. Honestly, if you can, but keep them warm. First, get shoes too large. Use inner soles to make them right. In cold weather—or when the feet are cold, no matter what the weather is—take out the soles, and wear more stockings. And right here comes a plan worth its weight in gold. With most people the instep and toes suffer most. Ergo, dress the instep and toes. Cut off a stocking foot so that it will cover the instep. Slant the bottom a couple of inches shorter. These tips are prize-takers. If wool makes the feet damp, wear a cotton stocking and a woolen tip. Or a cotton tip next to the skin, and a woolen stocking. Get at these sleeves and tips before you are a day older.

Now be off!

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—By this time you are all settled down to another year of hard work in school, and I am sure that each one of you is planning to do his very best. It means so much to you now when you are young and strong and can absorb knowledge just as a sponge takes in water, but in order to keep well you must cultivate your physical as well as your mental "understanding."

I am very glad to give you this week a talk from our good "Uncle John," who has the welfare of all my boys and girls very much at heart and the ability to enlighten them on some of the points necessary to good health. Read what he says very carefully, and then remember not to run out without a jacket these first chilly days, not even for "just a minute." Perhaps you don't know that I have a dear little girl of my very own, and while she is a fairly good little girl on the whole, she don't like to put on flannels, or rubbers or a jacket, and thinks that mamma is "fussy." So you see I have lots of sympathy for all the other mammas who want to keep their boys and girls from taking cold when the weather is so variable, and we will all be grateful to "Uncle John" for adding to our authority the weight of his opinion as a doctor. Heed well what he says, and you will all be "healthy, wealthy and wise," for health is wealth, and it takes wisdom to acquire and keep it.

Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little girl eleven years old, and would like to join the Cozy Corner. My papa is an Evangelical preacher and votes the prohibition ticket. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and I always like to read the letters. I have belonged to the L. T. L. since I was five years old. My mamma is president of the W. C. T. U. and my sister is president of the L. T. L. Lovingly yours,

MABEL SECHRIST.

Howard, Pa.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I have never seen any letters from Garnett, so I thought I would write and ask to be one of your nieces. Is there room for one more? Before we came to Kansas we lived in northeastern Iowa. We moved here on account of mamma's health. It was quite a long journey, but we stopped and made visits on the way, so it didn't seem quite so long, after all. We have lots of fruit trees on our place. I never saw a peach tree till I came here. Papa is a prohibitionist. Mamma is a W. C. T. U. woman, and I belong to the L. T. L. Our peaches and grapes nearly all rotted, but we have lots of fine tomatoes. I earn money helping papa gather and market them, and I always give the tenth.

Your loving niece,

FLORENCE O. STICKEL.

Garnett, Kan.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

38.

TRANSPOSED LETTERS.

I ikle ltteli suspy,
Erh cato si os wrma,
Adn fi I dotn rhut hre,
Hslle od em on mhra.

Os lil nto ulpl rhe ital,
Nro diver ehr yawa,
Utb pysus nad I
Eyrv gleynt wlil ylpa.

PERRY E. CAMMACK.

Whittier, Cal.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 15.

37. First.—Pro (pro). Second.—high (hi). Third.—bee (bi). Fourth.—shun (tion).—Prohibition.

All communications for Children's Page should be sent to THE UNION SIGNAL office, The Temple, Chicago.

UNION SIGNAL
AND WHITE RIBBON
WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON, MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Lord gave the word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host.—Psa. 68:11.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union---The Breadth of its Work.

"IF we had dreamed what the work would develop into, we would never have dared to undertake it." These were the words of a Christian woman who, following the divine guidance, had, at great personal sacrifice, entered upon a needed but lowly work. In a very few years that work had grown from its small beginnings into one of such magnitude and importance as to be known and praised over all the land and to astonish all who beheld it. Her experience is but the experience of all God-led lives. One need only to study the lives of the world's great leaders to see that their work grew upon their hands beyond all that they dreamed and often took on a character even antagonistic to that which the worker himself had planned. Peter contended with his Lord, even when He spoke from heaven, that he never could eat anything common or unclean for the convincing reason that he never had done so. But it was Peter, not Paul, who was the first to baptize uncircumcised Gentiles.

Our great organization has had a similar history. It was called into existence by the abominations of the saloon and was at first an army of mothers banded in desperate conflict with the enemy of their homes. But it was inevitable that this army of women should speedily become something more than a mere temperance society. One need only read over the various departments to be convinced that the W. C. T. U. does not confine its work to the drink evil alone, but brings influence and sentiment to bear upon every great problem confronting society, and evildoers of whatever description have long ago learned to count white-ribbon women among their foes.

Many and various have been the objections urged against this expansion of the work of the W. C. T. U. Those who make them have small understanding of how great movements grow. Still less do they discern the signs of the times, or properly estimate the real significance of the organization. The world had long been ringing the changes upon the power of woman's influence, while the truth was that women as a class had very little influence upon the world's thought and progress because they had no means of acting in unison. There was fair room to question what womanly sentiment upon any given question was. The W. C. T. U. was the first important attempt to unite women into an organization where womanly influence could make itself felt. It was inevitable that such a society should not long confine itself to one line of action. "Mother love" once organized was bound to attack not the liquor traffic alone, but every destroyer of the home. It was inevitable also that women thus brought together in consultation should discover their own limitations and needs, that they should find how very small a factor womanhood was in the evolution of society and should begin to devise means for exerting their rightful influence. And, as in every other great movement, God raised up a leader equal to the great work laid upon her. No other woman saw, as Frances Willard did, the possibilities wrapped up in the new movement. To her it was always chiefly a great woman movement, and she gave to it her best powers of heart and brain. Under her magnetic leadership the W. C. T. U. rapidly developed from a weak and inefficient organization, which had not yet discovered its possibilities, into the powerful organization of to-day, which, on the testimony of its enemies, is the most efficient temperance society in existence.

But it is much more than what has been set forth. It is a great woman's organization, circling the whole world and uniting the women of every nation. It is and has been the greatest educational institution for women. In it they have learned and developed their powers. By it they are being fitted for the larger part they are to take in the world's work. It affords the women of the world their one great opportunity to formulate their sentiments and make their united influence a power in the molding of world-wide Christian civilization. No Christian woman ought to be outside its ranks.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is not selfish in its purposes. It was not to win fame and honor that the women of the land went forth to pray and plead in the saloons. It is not for fame or honor or position that the women of the W. C. T. U. toil on. It was not love of publicity that sent our women out to speak and to preach. It was the message laid upon their hearts by God to a people debauching its youth with strong drink. The members seek their "rights," but it is that they may thereby have power to protect home and native land from the manifold evils which threaten their life.

The possibilities which lie before this organization of women can be measured only by measuring the possibilities of woman's influence.

Miss Willard's Christian Experience.

IN a sketch by Mrs. Bramwell Booth in our issue of last week the beginnings of Miss Willard's actively religious life were brought to mind. Mrs. Jennie Fowler Willing, a long-time friend of Miss Willard, and the president of the first National W. C. T. U. Convention, sends the following account of Miss Willard's later religious experience. We pass it on as particularly timely in view of the near approach of the day when Frances E. Willard was born into the natural world:

Shakespeare asks, "What meat doth this our Cæsar feed upon that he has grown so great?"

Here was a woman who had grown so great that she was more honored by English-speaking people in her departure than any woman of whom we have record, except Catharine Booth. She had no husband, or sons, or daughters, to be hands and feet, nerve and voice for her large brain and larger heart. She was without the literary helps that surrounded Margaret Fuller, the genius of Madame de Stael, the poetic power and fine culture of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, the scholarship of Mary Somerville, and the political opportunity of the Empress Josephine; yet she was an uncrowned queen of women, and the mourners in her funeral train were numbered by the hundred thousand.

What element of character gave Frances Willard her grip on the public heart? From a long and thorough acquaintance with her, I believe it safe to affirm it was her godliness, her clear, decided, continuous Christian experience.

In a book entitled "Forty Witnesses," she gives an outline of that experience which it may be helpful for us to glance over, to learn the secret of her power, that we also may have strength to do others good.

She was nineteen when she first said "Yes," to God. From the moment of her decision to become His child, she used all means of grace carefully and conscientiously, till she became a happily saved Christian. Seven years later she was intimately associated with Mrs. Bishop Hamline, whom she calls the "modern Mrs. Fletcher," and who was well worthy the name. That lady gave her the biographies of a number of holy people, which she read with an increasing desire to be like them. The next winter Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, of New York, came to Evanston, Miss Willard's home, to hold meetings. One evening after an address by Mrs. Palmer, Miss Willard went to the altar for prayer. She says, "Kneeling in utter self-abandonment, I consecrated myself anew to God. My chief besetments were a speculative mind, a hasty temper, a too ready tongue and a purpose to be a celebrated person." After speaking of some items of her surrender, she adds, "Great peace came to my soul. I can not describe the deep welling up of joy that gradually possessed me. I was utterly free from care. I was blithe as a bird that is good for nothing except to sing. I did not ask myself, 'Is this my duty?' but just intuitively knew what I was called upon to do. The conscious, emotional presence of Christ through the Holy Spirit held me. I ran about upon His errands 'just for love.' Life was a halcyon day. All my friends knew and noticed the change, and I would not like to write down the lovely things some of them said to me; but they did me no harm, for I was shut in with the Lord."

From the well meant, but mistaken advice of some most excellent Christian men, to "keep still" about this wonderful grace, because some fanatical people made sad work of its profession, she says she kept still till she found she had nothing in particular to keep still about. We were much together in those early years, and no memory is clearer than that of the eagerness of her inquiry after the old paths, that she might regain her blitheness and freedom in the Lord. She was always fearless in her loyalty to principle, but it was long before she had again the simple trust that believes in its own Spirit-helped honesty of surrender, and in Christ's readiness to give Himself wholly to the soul that gives all to Him.

In one of those talks she said, "Come, let's go to the Biblical Institute and take a theological course. You know we are as certainly called of God to preach as our brothers are. Why not get a good ready, and go at it? I'll do it if you will." If she had kept the sweet, birdlike experience of her first years, and if the friend to whom she appealed had been less timid and conservative in regard to a woman's "sphere," perhaps the result upon the world's salvation would have been far more to Christ's mind than it has been.

If we could hear her gentle, strong, persuasive voice once more, after her few months face to face with our Lord, I am sure she would urge every one to the self-abandonment and complete trust of those lovely, early days, and to perfect obedience to the divine "call," friends or no friends.

After the death of her brother, she and her sister-in-law, Mary Bannister Willard, tried to complete the work that had fallen from his hands. In a long talk that I had with Mrs. Willard, she said of the future, "Frank says if she could only know the Lord's will, she would jump to do it as a hungry dog would jump at a bone." A little later she came to know that He who had wrought in her the earnest wish to do His will, would also work in her to "will and to do of His good pleasure," and He would lead her by a way that she knew not.

Her self-denial in her early temperance work laid the base of the pedestal that was to lift her up before the nations as a woman who saved her life by losing it and who gained all by giving all.

God's great causes usually come to our door in beggar's garb, but if they are hospitably welcomed, they take their friends in a chariot to a magnificent palace.

In all the successes of her later years, Miss Willard never lost the childlikeness of that first, deep, sweet, Christian experience. It was evident to all that it was Christ's gentleness that made her great.

Twentieth Century Temperance.

THE present century nears the close with every evidence that the twentieth century will witness the fruition of this present germinating period of public opinion in regard to drink. The foundations for total abstinence by the individual and prohibition for the state are well laid. They become all the stronger, all the more impregnable year by year. The most discouraging condition in this country is the extensive practice of beer drinking. The amount consumed warrants the use of the epithet, "beer guzzlers," to Americans as well as to Germans. But the world is fast learning that beer is an intoxicant just in proportion to the amount of alcohol it contains and the amount drank. Our army canteens must have convinced thousands that men can get fighting and murdering drunk on beer. Science has long taught this same truth, and such an object lesson as we have had on a great scale ought to convince "a wayfaring man though a fool."

On the other hand it is no longer polite to show the effects of liquor—it is disgraceful. The use of alcohol at social pleasures is now well-nigh discarded except by the two great extremes of wealth and poverty.

The medical profession will abolish alcohol from its pharmacopæia, in the oncoming century, or at least exclude it as a dietetic. Modern schools of medicine are all tending that way, and the London Temperance Hospital, and several in this country are demonstrating the fact that they secure better results than other hospitals. Scientists declare that it is not a food nor a requisite. Life insurance companies bring positive proof that the healthiest and longest lived are those who are total abstainers. British and American, and even barbarian armies have proved conclusively that the best fighters in the world are those who are perfectly sober, and that men can endure more exposure, more hardships, longer marches and repel disease more readily without alcohol. The movements of armies in battle and otherwise, are fast being reduced to a degree of scientific accuracy which precludes anything except the use of man's best intellectual powers at their best, and this is diametrically opposed to both dull sluggishness and wild frenzy.

The people's object lessons in regard to the waste of the beer habit (eighty-six million dollars a year, for beer alone, in Chicago), the refusal of great companies and corporations to employ tipplers, the spectacle of armies utterly demoralized and crazed by drink, the shameless arrogance and tyranny of the trade in municipal, state and national affairs—all these object lessons before the eyes of a reading, intelligent people, are fast making the voice of science to be the voice of the people.

Canada is likely, upon the 29th day of September, to give the world the spectacle of a popular national vote in favor of the prohibition of the manufacture and use of intoxicating liquors. But whether it carries or not (and all hell is moved against it) it will indicate what will come to pass in the twentieth century, when the voice of the people shall have become the voice of God to the government.

Prayer for the Canadian Plebiscite.

WE are glad to voice a suggestion sent to THE UNION SIGNAL by the Ministerial Association of Grove City, Pa., with regard to the Canadian plebiscite, in which all friends of temperance—and, of course, the friends of the liquor traffic also—are just now so deeply interested. The suggestion is to the following effect: "That as the agitation occurs at a time when there are no meetings of the highest church courts, the W. C. T. U., through its official organ, call the attention of the Christian people of our land to the fact that the government of Canada has set September 29 as the day on which the people of the Dominion have opportunity to vote for the suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks within its boundaries, and that it mention the propriety and duty of making public supplication, on the Sabbath previous, to the God of battles, who has brought to such a happy issue our contest by arms in a great moral cause, that He will be pleased to grant the same success to that no less important contest for right by more peaceable means."

Request is also made by the association that religious papers copy in their next issues. We rejoice that the churches are taking up the matter and take occasion in this connection to remind white-ribboners of the call issued by the World's and National W. C. T. U. superintendent of evangelistic work, for September 21, to be observed by the unions as a special day of prayer for a victory for right through the Canadian plebiscite. The call was published on page 15 of our last issue.

In seconding the suggestion of our ministerial brothers we would urge white-ribboners not only to observe the 21st as their own especial time of prayer for that cause, but that they speak to their pastors and ask them to make supplications in their several congregations for the triumph of this great and righteous cause.

How Like Men!

THE monkeys in Africa are extremely fond of beer brewed by the natives. According to one of our exchanges the negroes capture them in this wise: They place quantities of the liquor within easy reach and wait until they are thoroughly befuddled. In this state they are unable to recognize the difference between negro and ape. When the negro takes the hand of one of them to lead him off, a second monkey takes the hand of the first, a third that of the second, and so on. A single negro may sometimes be seen carrying off a string of staggering monkeys. Fresh doses of beer in decreasing quantities are administered to the captives, so that they may only gradually awaken to the results of their spree. How like mankind!

The Call to Prayer for the National Convention.

[It was not possible to have this ready to print with the National Call, as has been customary.—THE EDITORS.]

THE Annual Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at St. Paul, Minn., November 11–16, 1898.

This Convention will be especially notable for two reasons. First, as a Memorial Convention for our great and loved Chieftain, Frances E. Willard. Again, as the twenty-fifth Convention following the Crusade.

Matters of grave importance will come before us. These facts make it very desirable that a baptism of love and harmony be realized; that the Crusade spirit descend upon us afresh, and the hand of our God be manifested in special guidance. Our hope is in Him.

Therefore, as evangelistic superintendent, I summon our local unions throughout the nation to set apart Wednesday, October 26, 1898, from 11 A. M. to 4 P. M., as a day of prayer for a blessing upon our Convention and upon our work everywhere.

That the spirit, courage, example and leadership of Christ, our Master, may comfort and help us, I select topics for the day from His Life. Let us, as a white-ribbon army, rally about our great Captain.

Program for Local Unions.

FIRST DIVISION.—11 TO 12 A. M.

Topic.—Christ Our Friend.

Scripture Lesson.—John 15: 9 to 20.

Thought Outline.—The Nature of Friendship, Love, Unselfish, Changeless, Unlimited. Its privilege of communion. "There are those who walk and talk with Him, and know Him better than any other friend; these are they who have found the secret of existence, and keep alive the faith of mankind, in the reality of the life of Christ."

Hymns.—"What a Friend we have in Jesus," "I've Found a Friend, oh! such a Friend," "In the Secret of His Presence."

SECOND DIVISION—12 TO 1 P. M.

Social and lunch hour.

THIRD DIVISION—1 TO 2:30 P. M.

Topic.—Christ as a Man of Prayer.

Scriptures.—Matthew 14:23; Matthew 23: 36-46; John 17: 1-6.

Thought Outline.—Christ's Habit of Prayer. Before each event and crisis of His life. After each such event and crisis. Prayer alone in mountain and solitary place.

Prayer Outline.—For our Convention at St. Paul. For grace and guidance. For comfort in universal sadness. For a baptism of courage. For our leaders, our work, our white-ribboners everywhere. For deliverance from jealousy, envy, self-seeking, self-love, pride and prejudice. For the overthrow of intemperance, impurity and oppression, and the reign of purity and peace. Praise for blessings upon our work, and for the return of peace to our nation.

FOURTH DIVISION—2:30 TO 4 P. M.

Topic.—Christ as a Laborer.

Scriptures.—Matt. 9:35; Matt. 11: 1, 7; Matt. 25: 14–30; John 9: 4.

Thought Outline.—The Carpenter's Son; born in a manger. Making and mending the playthings of the children of Nazareth, and the furniture of its homes. The Man of Sorrows, journeying, preaching, suffering; ever about His Father's business. Our call to labor—need of consecrated service.

Hymns.—"I am Thine, O Lord," "To The Work," "When Jesus Comes to Reward His Servants.

Temperance Doxology and Benediction.

ELIZABETH W. GREENWOOD,
World's and Nat. Evangelistic Supt.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shoutz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Ready! The New Y Almanac for 1899.

BEAUTIFUL, attractive, helpful! Far surpassing any year's calendar yet edited by our World's Y superintendent, and being a memorial to our dear departed Chieftain, Frances E. Willard, is replete with her inspiring sentiments. Order at once for your state conventions. In sending postoffice order please have directed to Station K, New York city. Please do not send foreign coins, stamps or bills.

(MRS.) FRANCES B. YARNALL.
1011 Park Ave., New York City.

World's W. C. T. U.

Sweden.

GOTHENBURG was visited recently by Miss Agnes Slack, honorary secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., who addressed a public meeting of men and women. She came here to stir up the women of Sweden to join the great army of workers all over the world in the struggle against intemperance.

In spite of the weather being highly unfavorable the hall was well filled. It is no easy matter to keep up the interest of an audience when speaking through an interpreter; Miss Slack succeeded, however, in keeping the attention of her hearers from beginning to end.

Miss Slack had arrived the previous day from Norway, where she had been addressing meetings in the leading towns, including Bergen, Trondhjim and Kristiania, sixty-two new members having been added to the roll on the evening before at Kristiania.

The active president of Gothenburg I. O. G. T., Mr. W. Strömberg, had undertaken the arrangements for the meeting, and the first person at the meeting to take the white ribbon was the well-known Good Templar lecturer, Miss Lindquist. The British consul, Mr. Duff, who had received Miss Slack with great kindness and given her most valuable assistance, and had invited her to his home, attended the meeting. It gave a humorous touch to the proceedings, when Miss Slack seeing him arrive, broke off her address to say she felt now more at home when her country and its interests were being represented by the consul. As a practical result of the meeting thirty members were enrolled, and a World's W. C. T. Union organized with the following officers: President, Miss Virginia Duff, sister of the consul; secretary, Miss Sandberg; treasurer, Miss Kunze.

Miss Slack gave most helpful and pointed advice as to working the union on departmental lines. By so doing the members will all feel they each have some work to do, and also the responsibility for strengthening and furthering the work in their part of the world.

LOTTEN LAGERSTEDT,
Late Supt. of Gothenburg Training School of Cookery.
Gothenburg, Aug. 31, 1898.

World's Wave Crests.

NETTIE WILBUR, recording secretary of the W. C. T. U. at Concepcion, Chile, writes that the severest earthquake which has visited Chile since the destruction of Concepcion some years ago, visited it on the night of July 23. The tremblings have been continuous since then and several less severe shocks have come at intervals.

THE following note of interest is gleaned from a report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in Chin Kiang, China: "Miss Willard's memorial service closed the noteworthy events of the year. A native artist reproduced on a large scale the home where she was born, the schoolhouse where she first studied, and the Northwestern University where she taught. A leaf from the floral decorations of her funeral in the Evanston church, was made very conspicuous by being pasted on white, and overarched with Chinese characters, telling where it came from. The story of her life was given by a half dozen girls of the school, members of the W. C. T. U. At the close of the meeting remarkable testimonies were offered by two Chinese literary gentlemen who were greatly impressed by this wonderful character, and that, a woman. Their remarks were to the effect that only Christianity could evolve such a beautiful, useful life, and the hope was feelingly expressed that China would see her need of it and accept it."

MRS. ALICE B. REEDE, provincial superintendent of Ontario, Canada, writes as follows concerning the work of Miss Vincent and Miss Cummins, World's W. C. T. U. missionaries: "Bruce county, Ontario, has again been favored with the opportunity of hearing these devoted workers for God and humanity. Their tour through the county in March and April was productive of much good and on their return to this vicinity to spend their summer rest, invitations came from many places for lectures and gospel talks. The earnest, persuasive entreaties of Miss Cummins and the burning eloquence of Miss Vincent thrill the soul. Their gospel talks are certainly the outcome of the Spirit's work in their own hearts. Their labors in Canada during the past year, will, we are sure, by the blessing of God, bring forth much fruit. To the land whence went forth the first World's W. C. T. U. missionaries do they soon propose to go. As Paul earnestly desired to see Jerusalem before he went to Rome, so do these brave, Christian women wish to see and associate with the noble Christian women of the National W. C. T. U. before they go to consecrated labors for God and home and every land in the distant parts of the earth. To our American sisters we cordially commend these valiant co-workers and pray that God may open to them a wide and effectual door and make them instrumental in doing much towards advancing His kingdom among men."

LADY HENRY SOMERSET, acting president of the W. W. C. T. U., makes it a point to commemorate her birthday, August 3, by some especially helpful deed of kindness. This year she went to South Wales and spent the day among the families of the miners there, who are suffering for the barest necessaries of life. In writing to the Westminster Gazette of the conditions she found there, Lady Henry says: "Fully one hundred thousand men connected with the collieries alone are out of work, and nearly double that number of men in the iron and steel plate and other works are standing idle through no fault of their own. The desperate straits to which many of the colliers' wives are reduced are manifest by the way that the women work to earn a few coppers to buy bread for themselves and their starving children. They can be seen going to the quarries and river beds, and with infinite labor breaking off the sandstones and pounding them to sell the fine sand from door to door. In the tropical heat they stand on the Tips picking coals and carrying their heavy burdens for miles upon their heads and selling them to tradespeople and others for the small sum they can get. Crowds of the women and the children walk miles on the mountains gathering whinberries, a small fruit growing close to the ground and very arduous to pick. They find for these a sale in the neighboring villages and towns, but even here their tedious labor has been taken a commercial advantage of, and whinberries, which never before sold for less than 6*d.* per quart, are now selling for 3*d.* in the shops at Abergavenny. With all their efforts, however, they have failed to push starvation from their doors, for hunger is eating into the heart and life of the people. Absolute want has compelled them to appeal to the guardians for assistance. All acquainted with the respectable Welsh industrial class will know that this is the last resource, and that no mean pressure would compel such a step. No mother had the courage to go singly to proffer her request, but the women formed a procession, and thus in the solidarity of their misery they besought aid. It is truly pitiful to know how the more industrious have spent the last of their little savings, and in some cases where these savings have been invested in the cottage in which they live, they have been compelled to forfeit their freehold."

News from the Field.

California.

THE school of methods this year was most satisfactory. The session opened on Monday evening with an able lecture by Rev. Dr. J. A. B. Wilson on the "Basic Facts in Temperance Reform," beginning with a scientific analysis of alcohol, following with the financial, political and moral aspect of the question.

The evangelistic always leads in our department work, and in the hands of Mesdames Churchill, Everts, Greene and Teats, was made very interesting and instructive.

Mrs. Gove, superintendent of prison work, gave a most suggestive hour on that department. Some of her figures were startling. The fact that this state has over two thousand men in the state prisons, and eighteen women, gives an answer of its own to the question as to what would happen if bad women voted. No one seems to worry about bad men's votes.

Mrs. Jamison, superintendent of mothers' meetings, demonstrated the practical methods of getting her work done.

Mrs. Vaslit, superintendent of drawing-room work, gave a beautiful object lesson in her department, by a reception at the El Carmelo hotel, to which a general invitation had been extended, and demonstrated the power of the social element in reform.

In the evening Jessie Ackermann gave a strong and eloquent presentation of the relation of Christian nations to heathen lands through the handling of the liquor and opium traffic.

Mrs. M. E. Teats, superintendent of purity, incited workers in her department to greater and better efforts by her clear exposition of methods and the aid of her charts. Mrs. Dickson, superintendent of systematic giving, had a very effective and helpful program in her hour. Mrs. E. G. Greene, state evangelist, gave a Bible reading on the "Burning Bush." Mrs. Bailey, superintendent of song, kept her department in evidence, to the great help and pleasure of all the rest, throughout the whole week.

Perhaps no afternoon had more general interest than that when the World's W. C. T. U. was under consideration. Miss Ada Murcutt, of Australia, told of the work in that far-away land, and incidentally something of it in Canada. Miss Ackermann gave a most interesting account of it in Japan, and Mrs. Skelton told of the advance in America.

Miss Murcutt gave in the evening a most entertaining lecture on the gold fields of Australia. Miss Ackermann gave the next night, her Iceland lecture. Both were illustrated with the stereopticon and served to relieve the high pressure of our daily work.

Parlor meetings, medal contests and the state paper all had their share of time and study. Mrs. Mary Case Lord gave a beautiful and appropriate Bible reading in memory of Miss Willard. Dr. Mary B. Mallory, superintendent of Christian citizenship, took the preamble of the Declaration of Independence for the basis of her instruction. Scientific temperance instruction was ably presented. Miss Severance had a class in "Civil Rights," as a means of illustrating the importance of the franchise department. The department of Sabbath observance brought out clear thought and lively discussion. So did the press as well as hygiene and heredity.

In all the department work there was much profitable discussion, as well as thoroughly digested preparation by a great number of speakers, each superintendent having invited other specialists to assist in her share of the work.

Dr. Maria White told one night of medical missions in India, and was followed by Mrs. Mary Frank Browne in an address that showed up the heathenism in our own land.

The county conventions are mostly over. Some few are yet to be held. Reports from them show a steadiness of purpose that speaks well for the future. Considerable has been done in petition work, notably the anti-canteen petition.

In San Francisco and around the bay the military camps have had much attention. Great amounts of good literature have gone to the men in camp, some of our women having worked very systematically among them. Mrs. Frank French, county superintendent of evangelistic work, reports many conversions among the boys

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

It is gratifying to see the appreciation indicated by the presentation of a testimonial to her by a Tennessee regiment.

Our hearts have been grieved by temptations in the way of saloons near the camps, and we have protested without avail to the authorities; and while we protest, the killing goes on by drink, though the promise of peace seems so near.

DORCAS J. SPENCER,
State Reporter, San Francisco.

Connecticut.

IT is inspiring to read that the extreme warm weather of July and August has not prevented the Pawcatuck W. C. T. U. from working. Besides the regular weekly meetings of the union and of the L. T. L., they have held monthly business meetings, planned and executed a picnic for the L. T. L. and two delightful sails to Norwich for the union. Among the items of good work done is included the sending of twenty-five dollars to the Red Cross Society.

At each weekly meeting the president has given a subject which has been responded to by texts of Scripture and remarks. This has been enjoyable and profitable. I am not informed, but suppose that the subject is given out for the following Sunday like this: "September 4. Subject for September 11, My Responsibility."

Abington, since the last report, has held all regular meetings, and the freewill offering meeting, which had been necessarily postponed. A pleasing program was presented, and the union much encouraged. Nearly half the members were able to attend the county convention at Putnam, and gained a fresh impulse to work from the many helpful papers presented there.

A "program committee" is a new departure in this union, and the readings, music, etc., arranged for by it add much to the interest of the meetings. The Loyal Temperance Legion has held regular meetings with a good degree of interest. The most cordial relations exist between the Legion and the W. C. T. U., and the Juniors showed their appreciation by inviting the Seniors to a picnic, July 16. The union reciprocated by furnishing cake and ice cream.

Milford union has won the county banner for increase in membership, and has eight departments in running order. Fifty-five children have signed the pledge, and their names are enrolled on the red, white and blue pledge cards. July 7, a grand rally was held in the First Congregational church. The program provided by the W. C. T. U. was very interesting and well executed, the decorations were beautiful, and the whole affair showed that attention to details that insures success.

EVELYN P. BURCH,
State Reporter, New London.

Wisconsin.

THE eighth state convention of the L. T. L. was held at Stoughton, June 30 and July 1. Although the heat was intense a goodly number of delegates answered to roll call, the different companies responding with their local rallying cries which were full of vim and enthusiasm. In the absence of the president, J. R. Chase, in Spokane, Wash., W. T. Casterton, of Racine, was elected president pro tem. Besides the usual reports and necessary business the first afternoon, a model meeting of the Band of Mercy was held as arranged by Mrs. Black, which was very entertaining. The first evening a gold medal contest served to bring out a good audience, while seven young women and one young man did their best to win the prize; fine music interspersed the exercises to the pleasure of all. The gold medal is now worn by Miss Connie Cooper, of Lake Mills. This contest was such a success that it was recommended that each branch of the state Legion hold a contest during the coming year, and from the winners of these contests choice shall be made of those who may compete for a medal at the next state convention.

Letters were read from the absent president, Mr. J. R. Chase, Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Bradbury and others, all expressing interest in the Legion and its work. Among the subjects receiving special attention were "Our Responsibility as Legions and Legioners," and "Anti-Cigaret Work in Our State." Racine won the state banner given for the largest number of graduates. The new officers elected are: President, W. J. Casterton, Racine; first vice-president, Lottie Trane, LaCrosse; second vice-president, Edwin Blass, Portage; corresponding secretary, Mary Money, Milwaukee; recording secretary, Jennie Taylor, Sun Prairie; treasurer, Leonard Porter, Ft. Atkinson.

On the second evening memorial services were held for Neal Dow and Frances E. Willard, Mrs. Vie Campbell speaking of the former and Mrs. W. A. Lawson of the latter; the president's address, with the conferring of diplomas, completed the evening's program.

An invitation from Sun Prairie Legion to entertain the next convention was presented and accepted by the convention. By invitation of the local Legion the convention enjoyed a ride to the banks of the beautiful Lake Kegonsa with supper on the green, and those delightful hours will ever stand out among the "pleasant memories" of Stoughton.

Miss Marie C. Brehm, of Chicago, conducted the school of methods at the Monona Lake Assembly, July 19 to 29, and the resolutions adopted at its close gave no uncertain testimony concerning her ability and acceptability. The W. C. T. U. is on a higher level and a broader gauge in the minds and hearts of all who were privileged to hear Miss Brehm, and we rejoice that Wisconsin is to have two months more of just such work from this efficient, all-around woman. We had the delightful presence and assistance of our beloved state president for two days, and were sorry that her time was, on account of illness in her family, so limited, for it is a joy to have her with us, bringing good cheer and sunshine to all hearts. Our genial state treasurer, Mrs. Ida M. Cook, of Green Bay, was also with us for one week, and she so "added" to our pleasures and "subtracted" from our fears that we will ever more be of the opinion that she is the woman who knows how to "count" and make herself "count" for the good of all about her.

Plans are maturing for a W. C. T. U. cottage to be built on the Assembly grounds during the coming year, where all our workers will be comfortably cared for; then we can sing when the winds blow and the rains descend, "And not a wave of trouble rolls across my peaceful breast," a state of mind we have not enjoyed "in the tent" on the grounds for some years.

The State Federation of Woman's Clubs held an all-day meeting during the celebration of the semi-centennial of the admission of Wisconsin into the Union. Every woman's organization in the state was invited to send a representative, who was allowed ten minutes in which to speak of her society, its objects and methods. The Wisconsin W. C. T. U. had its place on the program, and while our gracious Mrs. Upham was too ill to be present, others supplied the place the best they could, knowing that the speech our president was to have given will find its proper place in the historical records of this meeting.

Our unions have not been very active during the heated term, but now there are conventions and rumors of conventions, and we believe the work will be better done because of the short respite taken. Platteville union has presented a drinking fountain to their city; they support a reading-room for boys the year round, also have just published in souvenir form a history of their twenty-one years work, with sketches of the workers, which is replete with interest, especially for those who know of Platteville or its people. These little booklets sell at fifty cents each, and the union hopes to gain financially from this investment. Lodi union has also given a drinking fountain to their little city, and are now engaged in raising money to purchase a fountain, to be placed in Market street for the benefit of horses and other animals.

A new union was organized last spring at Delton, a small country town, and it was successful in keeping a brewery from being built right in the midst of their homes, with its black shadow ever a menace to their children. All honor to the new union. Such faith demonstrated by such works cannot fail to commend itself and us to the general public.

Yours to "keep pegging away,"
(MRS.) W. A. LAWSON,
Baraboo, State Reporter.

Pennsylvania.

ALL over the state we are preparing for the Harvest Home; every county is on the alert to have the best "returns," for our annual state convention. It will be held in Reading, October 13–18. Extensive preparations are being made for this jubilee of the year, the committees planning to have all things ready in "the most approved fashion."

The summer meetings through the state were filled with interest and profit. The inter-county conference held at Mount Gretna, our Chautauqua, gave great satisfaction and will be a permanent feature hereafter. Mrs. Rebecca Chambers, state president, and Mrs. Frances Graham, of New York, National musical director, contributed greatly to the interest of the sessions.

Our flower mission superintendent has been "in the field" doing good work as her report will show: Fifty women enlisted in Clarion county, donated sixteen dollars for state work; Jefferson county is preparing for a series of meetings; Mifflin county just closed a most successful convention; Mrs. Elder, whose husband is a colonel, is deeply interested in the Honor Roll; Huntingdon union sent large contribution to their soldier

Saves Faces, Too.

A soap that won't shrink wool is best for faces, too. It's a pure soap.

Wool Soap is the one soap that is absolutely pure. That's why it is the only soap that won't shrink wool.

Most soaps eat the skin—redden it—roughen it—harm the complexion. All soaps save Wool Soap have enough impurity to shrink a woolen garment.

WOOL SOAP

is simply pure soap. Use it on woolens, because you must use it. Use it for toilet and bath because of its luxury.

There are plenty of other soaps that are half pure. Wool Soap is all pure.

IT SWIMS.

All Grocers and Druggists sell it.

MY MAMA USED WOOL SOAP. I WISH MINE HAD.

boys; Cassville union held a delightful parlor meeting at Mrs. S. V. Heaton's, recitations, songs and impromptu speeches made a pleasing program. Juniata county is preparing to win new recruits for our peaceful war.

Mrs. Elma Preston, the energetic state secretary of Loyal Temperance Legion, has been in Lawrence, Butler, Beaver and other counties, organizing unions and L. T. L's. Mrs. Chambers has encouraged and helped by her presence at several county conventions. Miss A. Elizabeth Thomas, busy in Y work, has cheered and lent a hand in different counties. "Your humble servant," here and there with pen and prayer, has been greeting the workers and unions. Spent two days in Northampton county (September 7 and 8), at Pen Argyl and Bangor, the county convention being held at Bangor. Found the workers willing and ready, good reports and better resolves for coming year. The press superintendents have been faithful in sending items of interest. From Lancaster county I have the following report:

"The most interesting event of the past year in this county has been the organization of Columbia W. C. T. U. No. 2, among the colored people of that borough. These people, long neglected by their more fortunate neighbors, are rousing themselves and many take a deep interest in the work. The union now has nearly thirty-five members, regular and honorary. As organizer, I have received valuable assistance from Rev. T. W. Thurston, pastor of the A. M. E. church, of Columbia, a born leader and devoted friend of his people.

"The department of press work is receiving more and more attention in this county as the years go on. The county superintendent reports 83½ columns of matter published this year, as against 71⅓ columns last year."

From Armstrong county comes a note worthy of commendation: "Soldiers' and sailors' work has been claiming the attention of our unions the past months, making hospital suits, comfort bags, etc., providing literature and not forgetting to petition against the canteen system. We have received from Headquarters grateful acknowledgment and 'God bless the W. C. T. U.' Have also made special efforts to raise funds for the Temple."

"In Union (county) there is strength" of purpose to go forward in every good word and work. The new county president, Miss Sue Stapleton, writes: "The convention at Lewisburg, although small, seems to have been of inestimable value as an aggressive factor. The unions had no summer vacation, but are doing excellent work. We purpose organizing several unions soon."

From Clintondale, Clinton county, I gather a cheery clipping: "You will be glad to know that in the three and one-half months since our union was re-organized we have secured twenty-five paying members, sent twenty-six comfort bags, 400 magazines and papers, fruit and jellies to our sailor boys; with these twenty-five pledge cards, fifty Testaments, 1,500 pages temperance literature, circulated petitions against canteens, take four Bulletins and nine UNION SIGNALS, sold thirty memorial UNION SIGNALS." I think this a fine record for a three and a-half months' old union; don't you?"

Forest county has not been behind time in making history that will tell in coming years:

"Seven unions have held twenty-six mothers' meetings besides parlor meetings, and all have held one public meeting, have observed all the memorial days, have distributed thousands of pages of literature, particularly in the lumber camps; all railroad stations are kept well supplied. Our papers publish items for us. This year we have had five columns, three of them original. Our superintendent of prison work has been very vigilant and deserves a great deal of credit for her good work.

"A year ago an anti-saloon league was organized in Tionesta and for some reason has been lying dormant until recently; has had an awakening in a lecture by Rev. Dinwiddie which we hope will result in great good. Our anti-cigaret league is still in existence, holding its own. September 7 and 8 we held our annual convention with Endeavor union, which was a great success. Our principal lecture was delivered by Mme. Layah Barakat, which was listened to with profound attention throughout, and every word told."

Delaware county women met once during the summer, at Darby, where a meeting of much interest was held. Papers were read on Peace and Arbitration, Anti-Intoxication, Mothers' Progress, Non-alcoholic Medication and Foreign Work. The discussion following each paper was interesting and profitable.

As reports of the year's work come in from the local press superintendents, encouragement is felt that good work is being done in some localities. Chester reports that three dailies take items, including about sixty-three columns, seven-eighths of which was original matter. Valuing this at ten cents per line, we have received as a donation from the press of that city, $1,103.10.

But I halt, regretting there must be, as always, several "left overs." From our abundance we try to crowd in all we can to cheer, as we are encouraged from what we read in other state reports.

H. FRANCES JONES,
State Reporter, Philadelphia.

ONE of the city schools in Syracuse, N. Y., has been named the Frances E. Willard. A very fine etching of Miss Willard has been procured, framed in carved oak, and will be presented to the school by the Willard union of that city.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

The Y Almanac is at hand and is an exceedingly dainty volume. The plan of placing opposite the Scripture passages, selections from the writings of Miss Willard, is an excellent one and will appeal to the hearts of all white-ribboners, I am sure. I hope the sale may be better this year than last, when it netted a goodly sum for dear Clara Parrish's work. Mrs. Barnes and her coadjutors deserve great praise and the little volume should be in every white-ribbon home.

If our correspondents would only be more careful to place the name of the state in which they live at the head of every letter, we should be able to insure more prompt replies. There has been upon my desk for some weeks a letter dated, "Monroe," but with no mark to indicate from what state it came. I should be exceedingly glad to answer it, but Monroes are many and I must, therefore, wait for further information before answering, even at the risk of having my unknown correspondent consider me most culpably careless.

I am sure our readers will be grieved to know of the illness of Mrs. Calkins, one of our National organizers. She has been very ill for some months and is still unable to resume her work. Many hearts will go out in earnest prayer that she may speedily recover.

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock has kindly consented to serve at the next Convention in the capacity of chairman of the committee for pulpit supplies, dear Mrs. Hammer being unable to attend. Mrs. Bullock may be addressed at her home, 1105 Davis St., Elmira, N. Y., though she will be in the field a great part of the time from now on till the coming Convention. Of course she will communicate with the local committee, but would like the names of those who are willing to take pulpits on Convention Sunday. Doubtless there will be a communication from Mrs. Bullock soon in these columns, but I am taking time by the forelock and helping her a little, knowing how arduous her duties are.

The English address of Mrs. Byles is 33 Demesne Road, Manchester, England. I do not know when she intends to reach this country, but am expecting to hear from her soon again. It is possible, however, that she will not come for some months, in which case any desiring to secure her services can write to her at Manchester.

Letters are now going out from National Headquarters to the various state headquarters' secretaries, urging promptness in the sending of reports. I am more and more convinced, however, of the absolute impossibility of their doing anything without the coöperation of the local unions. Will each secretary of a local union please take this to heart, and see that her own report be sent promptly?

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Organizers' Corner.

DEAR COMRADES:—Shortly after writing you last spring, I attended and assisted in the annual convention of the ninth district W. C. T. U. of my own state. I found that the number of delegates had almost doubled since previous convention, and everything indicated growth and energy in the organization. I came away rejoicing in having been of assistance to the brave women who hold the fort in that district.

My next appointment was in Holt county, where I spoke for the New Point union, after which I spent one week in the twenty-first district visiting teachers' institutes. There was a large enrollment of teachers, and from the expressions of interest and appreciation, I am hoping many of them will devote more time to scientific temperance teaching in the schools than ever before.

In Henry county one hundred and thirty teachers were present, besides visitors, and the entire afternoon was given to the subject of temperance teaching.

I found the teachers of St. Clair county in sympathy with our work, and went on to Hickory county, arriving at the nearest railroad station at 4:10 in the afternoon. Through the kindness of a white-ribboner a conveyance was waiting, and I made the trip of twenty-four miles in less than four hours, speaking at eight o'clock to a large audience, composed principally of teachers. I spoke again on the Sabbath, and led a meeting for young women in the afternoon.

In August I delivered two addresses at the Cameron Chautauqua. The management very courteously gave one hour each day to the W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Howe having charge of that hour had arranged for speakers for each day's program.

Returning home I stopped over in South St. Joseph, and spoke for the St. George union. I am now busily at work preparing for our own district convention. What I have done this summer has been largely "piece work," owing to the fact that I could not be long absent from home.

With kindest wishes for each member of the board,

Your co-worker,
LILLIAN WOOD.

INSOMNIA

"I have been using CASCARETS for Insomnia, with which I have been afflicted for over twenty years, and I can say that Cascarets have given me more relief than any other remedy I have ever tried. I shall certainly recommend them to my friends as being all they are represented." THOS. GILLARD, Elgin, Ill.

CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.
... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...
Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 316

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

W. C. T. U. News.

NORTH CAROLINA is favored by having two state W. C. T. U's, and each has an official state paper. The White Ribbon is the organ of the original state union, while the W. C. T. U. Tidings is edited at Salisbury by Miss Victoria Richardson in the interest of the Thurman union.

MRS. KATE X. ROACH, president of North Carolina W. C. T. U., has just returned from an organizing trip in her state. She visited sixteen places, organized ten unions, addressed public assemblies, mothers' meetings and spoke to the children. She found plenty of temperance sentiment in the state, and did much toward crystallizing it into practical work.

A Perfect Infant Food

Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk

A PERFECT SUBSTITUTE FOR MOTHERS MILK. FOR 40 YEARS THE LEADING BRAND.

"INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE.

N.Y. CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

MRS. MINNIE KIRTLAND, corresponding secretary of Texas W. C. T. U., is a little woman, but she has had charge of the ticket office and depot in Laurence for fourteen years. She has enlisted most of the Texas & Pacific employés in temperance work. Many of them wear temperance buttons because of her. The local union meets in her room in the depot.

THE response to the addresses of welcome at the Maine convention will be given by Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt, Mrs. Stevens' only daughter. Mrs. Leavitt was present as a little child when the Maine W. C. T. U. was organized at Old Orchard in 1874. She is very popular with the Maine women; her sweet face and beautiful spirit captured all hearts at the Belfast convention.

THE W. C. T. U. of Tompkins county, N. Y., has erected a Rest Cottage upon the fair grounds at Ithaca, which was dedicated September 8. It has two rooms, one of which will be given up for the use of the Agricultural Society in case of accident or sickness requiring medical or surgical care. A supply of remedies is kept on hand, also bandages, absorbent cotton, adhesive plaster, etc. Ample porches about the building invite to rest and comfort.

THE L. T. L., of Fort Madison, Iowa, consisting of forty-five active members and ninety who have signed the pledge, have held this last year forty-four meetings, ground to powder with their feet 10,061 stubs of cigars and cigarets, thus removing temptation from the boys on the street. They have sent 136 bouquets with Scripture texts on each to the sick, furnished one floral design for a funeral, filled five Temple Wheels, paid for five copies of Mrs. Hunt's Physiology Journal for the principals of the city schools, and have raised during the year, $63.15.

MRS. L. E. BAILEY has just closed a seven weeks' work in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., where she organized four new unions and added seventy new members. At Arcade, Wyoming Co., she organized a union with fifty-two members, thirty-eight active, fourteen honorary. All paid dues down, and sent four delegates to the county convention, held the same week. Mrs. Bailey has organized seventeen new unions since the National Convention at Buffalo, and added over 500 members to local unions. She has been constantly in the field service.

UNDER the management of the Malaga union, a gold medal contest has just been held, August 25, which called forth the interest of the public. One of the contestants came from El Paso, Tex. This Malaga union gave another silver medal contest, August 31. As one might well suppose, the contest work in that section of New Mexico is very popular. Eddy county has held in all fourteen silver and one gold medal contests in the past four years. Miss May Tucker, territorial corresponding secretary, gave an address to the Christian young people of Santa Fe, August 28, and was quite well appreciated by all.

AT a banquet given in honor of the new Oklahoma territorial officials, dancing was on the cards of invitation. Wine was on the menu. Mrs. Jenkins attended with her husband, Hon. Wm. Jenkins. Their position on these questions was understood, and out of deference to them, wine was not served and no dancing was indulged in. Mrs. Jenkins is a minister in the Friends' church, and has filled the pulpit in several of Guthrie's churches. Whenever it is announced that she is to preach, the house is packed with an audience eager to hear this gifted woman. Her husband is a scholarly gentleman, pure in his life, and seconds his wife in her efforts to make the world better.

Official.

Coins and Curios for the Field.

DEAR WHITE-RIBBONERS: — My three previous letters to you about the coin and curio collection have met with a response sufficiently encouraging to warrant the belief that if the matter were presented by personal letters to the unions, in one year the coin collection would become a fact. At present, I have on hand quite an interesting assortment of books, curios and coins, and am certain that if you will go about in a systematic way to gather up these coins, we shall ere long have a collection that will bring one hundred thousand dollars or more. Remember, the value of a coin is not in itself alone, but in its relation to some other coin. In fact, in order to be valuable there must be no missing date in this collection, I wish, dear women, that you would send me a bushel of gold and silver coins before the annual Convention, and send them quick.

Three years ago was started the two dollar plan; that is, each union was asked to send two dollars a year for field work. The return for the first year was beyond our expectation. The receipts for the second year were small, but this year Mrs. Barker tells me that the answers to her call are good. Our departed chieftain saw what such a yearly offering would mean, and I promised that so far as possible I would not lose sight of it. I little guessed that she would die before its importance would be welded upon our hearts. Do you know that an annual offering of two dollars from each union would mean twenty thousand dollars for field work? Do you know that twenty thousand dollars a year would mean that twenty of our very best and brightest women would be kept steadily at work, and that with such a force moving west and south under orders we would win victory upon victory?

This trip west has brought me in close contact with the women of Colorado and Utah, and now I am in the great and promising state of Washington. Utah is one of the very best fields for work in all this land, and there are thousands of grand Gentile women there, and grand Mormon women, too, and with the ballot in their hands and the Mormon and Gentile women linked in white-ribbon societies, it would be possible for them to shape the history of the state in a wondrous way. I would that some man or woman who has money and happens to read this article, would be troubled for want of sleep until he or she should send $1,000 to be used in keeping Mrs. Lulu Shepard, of Salt Lake City, out in the organizing work. During my recent visit in Salt Lake City, I called upon President Woodruff and President Smith, leaders in the church of the Latter Day Saints. They received me gladly, manifested much interest in the coin and curio collection, and promised to furnish some coins and relics of their early history.

At the coming convention at St. Paul, I shall submit a plan to the general officers for the gathering up of funds for the field work, and feel sure that its simplicity will commend it. I shall also offer a resolution that from this time forth, between the first and the last of January every year, each union shall be asked by the National treasurer to send $2 for the field fund, and that this fund be held a perpetual loving tax in the name of Frances Willard.

I have not raised much money by personal solicitation this year because I have not been well enough to pursue that plan; but this I foresee—that with the $2 plan fixed and perpetual, the coin collection perfected and the plan above referred to adopted, there should be no lack of money for our missionary work.

CAUTION: Send coins and curios to no one but me. Send always by registered package or express prepaid, with postage stamp for reply. Send express to Harvey, Ill., and letters and registered packages to North Harvey, Ill.

Thine in love,
MARION B. BAXTER,
Financial Agent.
North Harvey, Ill.

Convention Call.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The annual state W. C. T. U. convention of New Hampshire will be held in Portsmouth, Oct. 5-7.

(MISS) C. R. WENDELL, Pres.
(MISS) C. N. BROWN, Cor. Sec.

OREGON.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon will be held in Eugene, Oct. 5-7 inclusive. The convention will open promptly at 9 : A. M. Wednesday morning. A meeting of the state executive committee will be held Tuesday evening, Oct. 4, at 7 P. M. sharp. In addition to the regular delegates from all local Woman's Christian Temperance Unions we cordially invite all other societies in harmony and sympathy with any department of our work to send a fraternal delegate to this convention. Entertainment free.

NARCISSA W. KINNEY, Pres.
SUSAN E. FOSTER, Cor. Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The annual convention of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. will be held in Boston, Oct. 12-14.

(MRS.) SUSAN S. FESSENDEN, Pres.
(MRS.) RUTH B. BAKER, Cor. Sec.

DONT BLAME THE LAMP

when the wick is the culprit. "The Brown Wick" does not clog or creep, needs little trimming or care. Send your name for a free sample.

"Marshall Process" WICK

is wick perfection; insuring a steady brilliant flame. Used by the leading lamp, stove and heater manufacturers, and made for every kind of burner known. For sale by dealers everywhere.

NEW JERSEY WICK CO., Newark, N. J.

Convention Calendar.

COLORADO, Denver, Sept. 21–23.
SOUTH DAKOTA, Mitchell, Sept. 21–23.
NORTH DAKOTA, Park River, Sept. 23-27.
VERMONT, Manchester Center, Sept. 27-29.
OKLAHOMA, Okarche, Sept. 27-30.
WEST VIRGINIA, Charleston, Sept. 28–30.
KENTUCKY, Louisville, Sept. 30-Oct. 4.
NEW YORK, Johnstown, Fulton county, Oct. 4–7.
VIRGINIA, Richmond, Oct. 4-7.
ILLINOIS, Elgin, Oct. 4-7.
OHIO, Columbus, Oct. 5-7.
IOWA, Waterloo, Oct. 11-14.
CONNECTICUT, Torrington, Oct. 12-14.
KANSAS, Horton, Oct. 19–21.
MISSOURI, Poplar Bluff, Oct. 21-25.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel.

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers; Third Nebraska, Col. W. J. Bryan; First Texas, Col. W. H. Mabry.

Petition Against the Canteen Now.

WHITE-RIBBONERS, CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS, EPWORTH LEAGUERS, GOOD TEMPLARS, CHURCHES, PASTORS AND PEOPLE — EVERYBODY, CUT OUT THE APPENDED PETITION, SIGN IT, SECURE OTHER NAMES, AND SEND IT TO PRESIDENT MCKINLEY AT ONCE. OR, IF YOU PREFER, USE THE ONE WE PUBLISHED LAST WEEK, OR WRITE ONE YOURSELF, BUT SEND A PETITION TO DO AWAY WITH THE ARMY CANTEEN, AND DO IT NOW:

To the President of the United States:

We do hereby respectfully petition that you will, to the extent of your authority as Commander-in Chief of the army, forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors at all post and camp exchanges, or elsewhere within the lines of the armies of the United States.

The Home.

As His Mother Used to Do.

HE criticised her puddings and he found fault with her cake;
He wished she'd make such biscuit as his mother used to make;
She didn't wash the dishes and she didn't make a stew,
Nor even mend his stockings, as his mother used to do.

His mother had six children, but by night her work was done;
His wife seemed drudging always, yet she only had the one.
His mother always was well dressed, his wife would be so, too,
If only she would manage as his mother used to do.

Ah, well! She was not perfect, though she tried to do her best,
Until at length she thought her time had come to have a rest;
So when one day he went the same old rigmarole all through,
She turned and boxed his ears, just as his mother used to do.

—Chicago Times.

Don't "Show off" the Baby.

One of the most important rules is that which demands perfect quiet for baby during the first months of its existence.

Babies are fussed over, talked to, and handled into a state which is sure to leave the nerves of the child in a thoroughly wrought-up condition.

The less notice outside its physical needs given the tiny one during the first year of its sojourn here below the better.

Allow the little frame to become accustomed to the strain upon it so necessary when making the acquaintance of this restless, rioting world of ours.

It is wise to continue this wholesome neglect through childhood, though very many mothers imagine that a child is rendered shy if it is not pushed ahead a little each day while it is in the nursery.

Baby is compelled to make friends with every stranger who appears.

It is kissed when it wants to be let alone.

If it has a cunning trick it is coaxed and teased into exhibiting it.

As baby grows older the same methods are pursued; the poor child is marshaled into the dining-room to be put through its paces; play is interrupted, and the little one fretted into a state of nervousness that brings too often a punishment that is undeserved.

When your smiling friend asks in dulcet tones to "see the baby," do not hesitate to say "No," especially if she is merely a chance caller, one of many who think it necessary to make the request out of politeness. There is always some good excuse for refusing to put the baby through a succession of "shows," and unless she is a special friend the chances are that your visitor will simply look upon the refusal as sparing her an infliction, and the baby will be all the better for his comparative seclusion.

TRUTH.

They love her best who to themselves are true,
And what they dare to dream of dare to do.

—Selected.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Our Library Table.

The September number of SUCCESS is full to overflowing of timely articles and fine illustrations. The subjects are so numerous and all so well handled that a personal perusal is necessary to a proper estimation of them. The Success Company, Cooper Union, New York.

THE PREACHER'S MAGAZINE for September contains sermons, sketches and suggestive material for teachers and preachers in great variety. This MAGAZINE has won its way to fame, so that few preachers care to be without it. Single copy 15 cents; $1.50 per year. Wilbur B. Ketcham, publisher, 7 and 9 West Eighteenth street, New York city.

BEST LINCOLN STORIES, TERSELY TOLD, is the title of an interesting little book issued by J. E. Gallaher. It is a collection of one hundred stories about Abraham Lincoln, jokes attributed to him, etc., many of which have never before appeared in print. The book is a valuable souvenir of the great war president. For price, etc., address James E. Gallaher, 184 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

THE September number of THE HOMILETIC REVIEW turns the preacher's attention toward the opening of a new campaign of Christian activity. The editorial section is especially timely, embracing among its topics, "The Twentieth Century's Call," "No Time for Culture," "The Coming of Peace," "The Army Canteen," "Gladstone and Bismarck," etc.

A COMMON LOT, by Mrs. Kate Speake Penny, is one of the strongest novels of the year. Its interest, as a well told story, is equal to its truthfulness in the moral it points, the fate of a beautiful, cultured woman, who marries a drunkard to reform him. Her lot may be a common one, but it is none the less sad, and Mrs. Penny's book is true to life. It should be put in the hands of every girl. The Editor Publishing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A representative of THE CRITIC spent two days in the State Department at Washington recently, and the result is seen in the September number of that magazine, where twelve pages are filled with Mr. James Russell Lowell's dispatches describing the state of affairs in Spain during the period of his ministry, some twenty years ago. This one feature would of itself make the second monthly number of THE CRITIC notable; but it is only one of half a dozen or more special articles, most of which are illustrated.

The price of SELF CULTURE Magazine, published at Akron, O., has been reduced from $2 to $1 a year. Single copies, ten cents. At the same time its size and scope have been materially increased, and illustrations have been added. Each number will hereafter have 128 pages of text, and it should, in every respect, be worth vastly more than ever before to all thoughtful readers. The thirty-two pages added to the September and subsequent issues will be devoted to a higher class of articles, such as have heretofore appeared only in such magazines as The Forum and North American Review, while the remaining pages will be given up to more popular subjects of a literary, historical and instructive character, treated in a less formal and more entertaining manner.

Where Our Speakers Are.

AFTER attending the Montana state convention, and a short trip in that state, Mrs. Unruh goes to Nebraska for October, and will be available for dates in that state and Iowa until National Convention, and immediately following. For Nebraska dates address Mrs. M. M. Claflin, Ord, Neb.; and for Iowa write Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh, Ord, Neb., care Mrs. Claflin.

Announcement.

A conference of the board of National organizers will be held at a place to be announced later, on November 10, beginning at 9 A. M. We hope to have this conference full of practical work for organizers, and trust that every member of the board who can possibly plan to do so will be present at the opening hour. Should organizers not know the place of meeting before reaching St. Paul, they may learn definitely by inquiring at W. C. T. U. headquarters in that city. We are assured that entertainment will be furnished for this conference.

ADA WALLACE UNRUH,
President Board of Organizers.
ADDIE N. FIELDS,
Secretary.

I STOOD at the gate of the navy yard the other afternoon, when a barefoot boy about ten years old came in, leading by the hand a sailor with an Iowa ribbon on his hat, who was very drunk. "Get in wid you," said the corporal of marines who was in charge of the guard at the gate, and he shoved the jacky roughly into a waiting room, where were other sailors in a similar condition.

"Do many of them come in that way?" I asked.

"Half o' thim that goes out sober comes back loaded," was his reply.

"That is too bad."

"How kin they help it?" he exclaimed. "Drinks is free to all th' boys who were down in Cuby, an' wherever they goes people teases them to take somethin', an' a man who's been at sea six months gits a terrible thirst on 'im."

"What do you do with them?"

"I keeps 'em in there till I gits a bunch of thim, an' thin w'in a sober one comes along he takes charge of 'em and sneaks 'em aboard the ship, so that the officer of the deck won't see that they are full."—William E. Curtis in Chicago Record.

Have you examined the little yellow label on your UNION SIGNAL? A subscriber from Milwaukee encourages us by sending not only the amount due to date, but renews the subscription to 1901.

Drinking Fountains
FOR
MAN and BEAST
Manufactured by
The J. L. Mott Iron Works
84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.
311-313 Wabash Av. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
Copyright 1896, by the J. L. Mott Iron Works.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

OXALIS, GRAND DUCHESS. New; offered now for the first time, and the grandest sort known, as well as the most exquisite winter-blooming bulb. Blossoms immense, 3 inches across, borne well above the foliage, and of a lovely pink color. A most persistent bloomer from Nov. to June, and an exquisite pot flower.

Fine large bulbs for blooming at once, by mail, postpaid, 10c. each; 3 for 20c.—or for only 30c. we will mail 5 Oxalis, mixed; 5 Freesias; 5 Giant Ranunculus; 5 Other Bulbs, (20 in all), and THE MAYFLOWER Monthly Magazine for a year—(devoted to flowers and Gardening, with colored plate each month).

Our Beautiful Colored Plate Catalogue of Fall Bulbs, Hyacinths, Tulips, Narcissus, etc., Winter Blooming Plants and Rare New Fruits sent FREE.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N.Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF
OUR WAR WITH SPAIN
ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance. for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.
STOP SMOKING!
NO-TO-BAC from
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

MONTICELLO Opens the 61st year Sept. 29. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Prin., Godfrey, Ill.

FRANKLIN COLLEGE NEW ATHENS, O. 74th year. Board, tuition, room and books, $2.80 to $3 a week; $140 a year; books free: 8 courses; no saloons; catalog free, with plan to earn funds at home W. A. Williams, D.D., Pres.

MATERIAL furnished for Talks, Papers and Speeches. Any subject. Advice free. Confidential. Address, Secretary, 257 W. 42d St., N. Y. City.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

Temple Receipts.

New Mexico—Roswell: W. C. T. U., $3.75; LaLuz: Mrs. H. T. Findley, $1.

Montana—Billings: Isabella M. Lovett, $1; Livingston: Ella V. Carter, $10; Miles City: W. C. T. U., $7.85.

Nebraska—Auburn: W. C. T. U., $2; Aurora, $5; Fairfield, $10; Gering, $5; Hebron: W. C. T. U., $7.12; Mrs. Maggie L. Kirby, 50 cts.; Carlton, $1.05; Jamestown, $23.50; Jamestown Union Sunday-school, $7.85; Kearney, $10; Surprise, $3.90; Neligh, $7.50; Sutton, $2.75; Mrs. Chas. Moore, 50 cts., 50 cts.; St. Paul: W. C. T. U., $13; Valparaiso, $2; Wahoo, $7; Wayland, $1.25; Brownville: Mrs. E. D. Muir, $5; Canton: Mrs. Laura L. Wright, $15; Fairmont: Horace G. Bliss, 50 cts.; Filley: Ida J. Lewellen, 50 cts.; Kenesaw: Mrs. E. D. Harn, 50 cts.; Lincoln: Sam'l Lichty, $2; Mrs. Honor, per Mrs. Smith, $6.20; Lexington: Mrs. A. M. Rockwood, $4, $1; J. L. Townsend, $1; Page: Bartley Blain, $7.5; Plainview: Mrs. W. R. Cox, $5; Mapleville: Mrs. A. J. Goffe, $5; Syracuse: Mrs. P. T. Buck and Mrs. M. A. Rogers, $3.65; from cards, $39.95.

Nevada—Mottsville: W. C. T. U., $24; Virginia City: W. C. T. U., $2; Logan: Mrs. O. G. Church, 50 cts.

New York—Akron: W. C. T. U., $4; Auburn: Central, $2; Ballston Spa: $5; Brockton, $5.50; Brooklyn, $3.65; Brockport, $2; Churchville, $6; Fairport, $2; Gates, $5, $12.50; Henrietta, $1; Irondequoit, $2; Spencerport, $1.36; Clyde, $5; Rochester: 11th ward, $3; 12th ward, $5.20; 18th ward, $3; 9 and 10th ward, $64.50; Central Y. W. C. T. U., $10; Mrs. F. M. Hartwell, $2; Chautauqua: W. C. T. U., $5; Clymer: $1.30; Cobleskill: $1.38; Eliza W. Stevenson, $5; Cortland: W. C. T. U., $2; Dobbs Ferry, $7.50; Esperance, $2; Greece, $10.15; Kinderhook, $5, $2; Lockport: Orangeport Union, $1; New York city: South New York W. C. T. U., $33.75; Lida F. Scott, $3.50; Ida Deelser, $10; Norwich: W. C. T. U., $9.10; Mrs. S. E. Johns, $4.43; Port Byron, $5; Romulus, $10; Sanborn, 73 cts.; Mrs. Frank Habecker, $3.70; St. Lawrence Co. W. C. T. U., $68.40; Seneca: $10; Ulsterville: $2; Fulton county: 50 cts; Walton: $5; Watertown: $5; Wilson: $4; Wyoming county: $10; Batavia: Levant L. Harvey, 50 cts.: Miss Frances P. Rice, $2; Mary Drake, $1; Bloomington; Mrs. D. D. Law, $5; Brooklyn: Mrs. David J. Burrell, $2; Esther C. Hoykas, $1; E. A. Stratton: 50 cts., $1; Miss Clayton, 50 cts.; S. H. De Hanne, $1; Buffalo: Mrs. E. A. Rice, 50 cts.; Mrs. Elizabeth Bachman, $5; Clinton Corners: Anna F. Allen, $2; Corning: Mrs. Butterworth, $2; Cassayana: Mrs. Emily E. Coon, $5; Duane: Mrs. Sebie Ladd, $2; Elmira: Elmira Kimble, $5; Granville: Mrs. Mary Monroe, $1; Johnson's Creek: Mary E. F. Robson, $5; Lima: Mrs. E. J. Newbury, $2.50; Medina: Mrs. A. F. Bush, $11; Middleport: Chancellor Allen, $3; Mohawk: Minnie A. Van Allen, $10; New Baltimore: Miss Helena Hogan, $2; North Tonawanda: F. A. Myrick, $10; Mrs. Emma W. Monroe, $2; Orwell: Mrs. G. W. Nelson, $3; Sherman: Miss M. E. Myrick, $4; Utica: Mrs. Ann Eliza Segur, $105; Weedsport: Miss Ida Williams, $2; White Plains: Mrs. C. O. Page, $5; Sodus: Mrs. Charles Mills, $17.35; Collins: Anne B. Taylor, $10; Albany: Mrs. H. A. Davis, $5.

Ohio—Athens: Y. W. C. T. U., $85; Auburn, $5; Berea, $10; Bristolville, $2; Bowling Green, $20; Chillicothe, $3.80, $10.55; Cardington, $10.20; Cincinnati: Hills union, $6; Cleveland, Fannie Wilson Boswell, $6; Mrs. Estelle Purdum, $3; West Side union, $15; Federation W. C. T. U's, $90.50; Mrs. Ann Avaun, $5; Mrs. C. E. Chase, $6; Bedford: W. C. T. U., $53.03; Covington, $1; Damascus, $2; Bennington, $5; Fargo, $10; Findlay, $24.14; Geneva, $5; Ellen O. Babcox, 50 cts.; Gettysburg, $1.50; Greenville: Y. W. C. T. U., $4; Jamestown: W. C. T. U., $30; Kenton, $20; La Clede, $1; Lockland, $5, $10; Mallet Creek, $5; Mansfield, $25; Mason, $10; Maumee, $5; Mechanicsburg, $5; Medina, $12; Nashville, 50 cts., $1.60; New Martinsburg, 50 cts.; North Baltimore, $25; North Fairfield, $4.68; Oberlin, $50, $3.55, $10.75; Sardis, $2; Sharon, $3.57; Tippecanoe City, $5, $1.40; Toledo: Union of Unions, $50, $50; Phebe L. Williams, 50 cts.; Urbana, $12.28, $14.73; Xenia, $16.55; Wilmington, $1; Akron: Katherine Knot, $5; Antrim, 50 cts.; Burton: Mrs. J. O. Paine, $10; Cadiz: Mrs. D. Cunningham, $3.60; Cranberg: M. L. Trumbo, $2.25, 50 cts.; Dayton: J. P. Watson, 50 cts.; Dresden: Louise C. Smith, 50 cts.; Glen Willow: Clara Elliston, $2; Greenfield: Mrs. S. A. Hughes, $21.50; Hillsboro: Eliza J. Thompson, 50 cents; Hudson: Mrs. M. D. Robinson, $1; Newark: Mrs. Graham, $5.70; Mansfield: Susan M. Sturgis, $100, $100; New Concord: Mrs. M. J. Wilson, 50 cents; North Lewisburg: Deborah W. Sharp, $3; Powell: Mrs. Delia Benton Gardner, $5; Richwood: Mrs. Jennie Daymude, $2; Rockport: Mrs. S. H. Brown, $1; Sherwood: Ella Palmer, $20; Springfield: Lydia B. Rowe, 25 cts., 50 cts.; Springfield: W. C. T. U., $25; Swanton: W. A. Scott, M. D., $5; Toronto: Mrs. M. J. Aten, $2.80; West Salem: Mrs. M. B. Mead, 50 cts.; West Union: C. J. Naylor, $1; Willoughby: Mrs. Jeannette K. Carpenter, $5; Ostrander: Mrs. E. H. Turney, 50 cents. From cards, $54.35.

Oklahoma Territory—Bedford: Mary Danley, 50 cents.

Oregon—Ashland: W. C. T. U., $15; Salem: M. E. Updegraff, $2; The Dalles: Martha Poorman, $3. From cards, $1.

SARA G. JOHNSON.
Financial Secretary.

To February 1, 1898.

Take Notice.

Miss Cornelia M. Dow, Portland, Me., custodian of the Willard fund for the payment of the Temple trust bonds, will receive all contributions offered by those who are interested in the effort being put forward by the National Woman's Christian Temperance union to help retire these bonds. Miss Dow is a woman of well-known financial ability and does this work gratuitously. As the daughter of Gen. Neal Dow, this loyal white-ribboner has the highest esteem and regard of all connected with the movement, and it was by cordial agreement with Mrs. Carse and at the request of Miss Willard that she accepted the forgoing trust.

Will our friends please bear in mind that in many instances letters are unanswered because the name of the state is not given with the address? All important communications should be signed with the name of the person, the postoffice and the state.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

The Temple, Chicago.

For Catalogue of our Publications apply Room 1110, The Temple.

BOOKS BY

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Glimpses of Fifty Years.

The eloquent story of Miss Willard's eventful life from childhood until the rounding of the half century, given by Miss Willard herself in her own graphic way. It is the record of a life of noble purpose inspired by the simplest but purest motive, combined with a breadth of ability and fervor of consecration rarely seen. This book should be in the hands of all the women of this and every other country.
Cloth $2.25
Half Morocco, gilt edge 3.00
Full Morocco, gilt edges 3.75

Woman and Temperance.

A book of inestimable value to all White-Ribboners, both as a book of reference and as a complete and accurate history of the movement from the days of the Woman's Temperance Crusade.
Cloth $2.00

A Young Woman Journalist.

A life sketch of Miss Julia A. Ames, a young woman of untiring energy, great faith, and devotion to the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. Designed to stimulate young women to noble achievement. This volume can not help but be an inspiration to all temperance workers, and in fact all Christian and philanthropic people anywhere.
Cloth . . . . . $ .75

Nineteen Beautiful Years.

The story of the life of Mary E. Willard, "my sister Mary," as she is tenderly called by the author.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 60

How to Win.

A book for girls.
Cloth $1 00

Woman in the Pulpit.

A strong presentation of the arguments in favor of the organization of women.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 50

A Classic Town.

History of Evanston, Ill. Profusely illustrated with views of "Rest Cottage," etc.
Full Gilt $1 00
Plain Cloth 75

A Great Mother.

The Biography of Madam Willard, written by her daughter, Miss Frances E. Willard, and her kinswoman, Mrs. Minerva B. Norton. No work of such value to mothers has appeared for years. It is both an incentive toward and an example of successful motherhood. White-ribbon mothers especially need to learn its open secret. Handsomely bound, elegantly illustrated.
Cloth $1.50

How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle.

This little book is not designed to teach the art of riding the bicycle, but is full of suggestions and thoughts which filled the mind of the writer as she mastered the silent steed. It is well named "A Wheel Within a Wheel." As fascinating as a novel, and an excellent book to place in the hands of lovers of this favorite pastime.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

Do Everything.

A handbook full of instructions and suggestions which make it of inestimable value to White-Ribboners.
Paper . . . . . $ .35

The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard.

Written by ANNA A. GORDON, for twenty-one years her private secretary, with an introduction by LADY HENRY SOMERSET. The book contains 416 pages, 8 inches wide by 10 inches long. Cloth, $2.00; half morocco, $2.75; full morocco, $3.75.

Miss Gordon says in her preface: "We believe this picture of her remarkable and winsome personality will bless and brighten every home that it enters, deepening in the hearts of its readers the desire to hold aloft her white banner of purity and peace, patriotism and prohibition, the protection of the home and the redemption of humanity.

Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

By MARY ALLEN WEST. Bound in cloth, marble edge, and full morocco gilt edge. Carefully written out of a large experience. In a letter to Miss West Madam Willard wrote: "If I could have but one book besides the Bible to help me in bringing up children, I would by all means choose to have this."
Cloth $3.00
Full morocco 4.25

The Temperance Movement; or, the Conflict Between Man and Alcohol.

By United States Senator H. W. BLAIR. The most valuable compilation of statistical information ever offered to the public.
Cloth $1.00

The Year's Bright Chain.

Compiled by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. A gift book of quotations from Miss Willard's works. Illustrated. For young people.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Thumb Nail Sketches of White-Ribbon Women.

Paper . . . . . $ .50
Cloth 1.00

Unanswered Prayer.

By S. M. I. HENRY.
Paper . . . . . Not in Stock.
Cloth . . . . . $ .30

Bright Eyes.

Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised so as to suggest to children by means of outline pictures the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother or elder sister or brother on a Sunday afternoon in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.
Cloth . . . . . $ .20

Columbus and What He Found.

By MARY H. HULL. This is a history of Columbus, told in a most interesting and instructive manner to the writer's own three children and ten of their companions. It is a charming book. It contains 260 pages. It is as entertaining as the world-renowned "Robinson Crusoe," yet every fact is one of history, and goes to improve and enrich the mind of every boy and girl who reads it.
Cloth $1.00

The Junior Partners.

By A. M. RAWSON. Illustrated. Octavo, 410 pages. This remarkable story is strongly written and shows how a generous husband and father may be degraded and crushed by yielding to the demoralizing influence of the appetite for strong drink. The story is well told throughout, manly in sentiment, not narrow in portrayal, scientific in interpretation of argument and facts. The book is illustrated with a number of full page engravings and vignette cuts.
Cloth $2.00

White Ribbon Birthday Book.

By ANNA A. GORDON.
A book of the sayings of over 200 of the wisest and wittiest of women. Useful as a gift book for birthdays, as a guest book, and for a daily memorandum.
Cloth $1.00

Around the World by the Fireside.

Containing 160 photographic views from every quarter of the globe. Size 11x13 inches
Cloth $2.00

Child's Christ Tales.

By ANDREA HOFER.
The sweetest story on earth, in all literature and for all time is the story of the infant Jesus, and His wonderful coming among men. Send for this little book and show it to your friends, for it solves the problem of teaching the Christ-life to children.
Cloth $1.00

Lady Gay and her Sister.

A charming book for children by a well known author.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Boys and Other Boys.
Girls and Other Girls.

Two interesting books by Mrs. Lucy A. Scott, who wrote so charmingly for children. Just the books to give needed advice and help to boy or girl in the critical early teens. Not goody-goody, but clear, strong and faithful.
Cloth, each . . . . . $ .25

Bob Gripp's Trophy.

Cloth . . . . . $ .40

GIFT BOOKS

Containing Scripture Texts, Daily Readings for the Year.

Northfield Year Book.

Price $1.25

Gift of Love.

Gift of Peace.

Bound in white, each $1.00

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.

Bound in white vellum . . $1.00

The Shepherd Psalm.

White and silver . . . . . $ .60
Blue and silver 50

One of God's Lilies.

Story of the Soul of a Child.

Bound in white, each . . . . . $ .30

Signal Notes.

MADRID, with a population of half a million, has only four Protestant churches.

GREAT BRITAIN has the largest navy in the world; then come France, Russia, the United States, Germany, Italy, Japan, in the order named.

UNDER the Band of Hope scheme 20 lecturers in the past twelve months visited schools in 38 counties in England and Wales, and 10 counties in Ireland. They delivered 4,680 lectures.

SINCE the plague first appeared in Bombay, about two years ago, the number of deaths reported from the epidemic is a little over 100,000, but doubtless this is under the actual number.

IN the government Reformatory of Western Australia boy prisoners are to be handed over to the Salvation Army authorities, who will employ them on a new industrial farm in the Collie district.

PREPARATIONS are in progress for the mission to be conducted in London in the autumn under the auspices of the U. K. A. A great united mission is also to be conducted in Birmingham. A choir drawn from the various churches and chapels will number about 600.

THE Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals once proposed to establish a branch of the organization in Barcelona, Spain. The municipal authorities courteously accepted the proposal, and offered to hold a grand bull-fight at once to furnish the funds.

IN the San Quentin penitentiary, California, the Salvation Army has a corps of twenty-one soldiers, as a result of its officers' efforts. All are serving sentences varying from one year to a lifetime. The prison officials commend the work, and the chaplain speaks very highly of the consistent lives of the converts.

THE Church of England Temperance Society has issued an appeal to all its branches in the United Kingdom urging them to make a determined effort to induce licensing justices to follow the example of the magistrates of Liverpool and other large towns in asking publicans to refuse to supply children of tender age.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has given one hundred acres of land at Princeton, N. J., to John Henry Vroom, a Princeton graduate, for a farm school for boys. The land is to be divided into four separate farms, and these farms into acre plots for cultivation by individual boys, who are to receive a portion of the profits from produce raised.

THE Evening Post of San Francisco is authority for the statement that the United States will soon be connected by cable with her newly acquired Pacific possessions, and the cable will connect the United States from San Francisco with Hawaii, the Ladrones, the Philippines and Hong-Kong. The paper says that most of the surveys have been made. The contract for the laying of the cable has already been let. According to the terms of the contract the work must be completed within six months. The price to be paid is stated to be ten million dollars.

TO SAVE YOUR DIGESTION
Use "Garland" Stoves and Ranges.

LARKIN SOAPS AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample Soap if mention this magazine.
The Larkin Soap Mfg Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

COMMEMORATIVE PLEDGE CARDS.

The following pledge card, written by Miss Willard in the autograph album of Miss Anna Gordon' January, 1879, has by her permission been issued by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association' as a commemorative pledge card. It has been brought out in tasteful form with a half tone picture of Miss Willard and is now ready for distribution on her birthday, September 28, 1898.
Price, 25 for 50c; $1.00 per 100; $7.00 per 1,000.

Publisher's Notes.

From Miss Pemell.

"I must tell you of something nice I heard a gentleman say about your SIGNAL a short time ago. He is a superannuated missionary who spent over thirty years in the South Sea Islands, and is therefore a great authority on their folk-lore, etc. He said that upon one of the islands there is a legend to the effect that some of the natives once found a shipwrecked white man crouching under a rock to get out of the wind, and vigorously blowing his half-frozen fingers. And when asked why he was doing that, he said: 'To warm my fingers, of course. I am nearly frozen to death.' They hastened away and brought him a cocoa nut shell full of savory soup which being too hot to drink, he began as vigorously to blow it as he had his fingers. And when he was asked again why he was doing that, he answered, 'Why, to cool it, of course,' whereupon they all decamped and spread the news with breathless haste that a god had come out of the sea, for he could blow both hot and cold at once. 'Well,' the old gentleman said, 'the World's UNION SIGNAL resembled that man, for it could rouse a person's warmest energies in a good cause, and could just as effectually frustrate the designs of the evil minded and expose their wiles. For which good words I immediately decorated him with a choice rosebud.'"

BIBLE READING FOR SEPTEMBER. "Have Faith in God," by Mrs. Dora Webb, general secretary of the Reform Legislation branch of the purity department. The subject is treated under the following heads: (1) How can we obtain intelligent faith? (2) Saving faith; (3) Working faith; (4) A comprehensive faith; (5) An overcoming faith; (6) A steadfast faith. And the whole gospel of Christian faith is summed up in the words of the Master: "Believe that ye receive and ye shall have."

Our friends who order small amounts of literature, promising to remit by return mail, often stating they do not know the price, etc., can not understand the annoyance of carrying these small memorandum accounts or they would be more prompt in remitting.

As the time for annual state conventions draws near, and those in charge of programs are selecting appropriate music, we have decided to offer our Convention Hymnals—which are an abridged form of The White Ribbon Hymnal—at 15 cents each, 25 copies $2.50, (no discount) These books contain a choice collection of music selected by Miss Marie Brehm. The cover is manila and sufficiently strong for convention purpose. For local unions no better investment could be made than in a number of these Convention Hymnals. Price single copies, 15 cents; 25 copies, $2.50.

The topic for the SEPTEMBER RESPONSIVE READING is "W. C. T. U. Literature," and is written by Miss Helen L. Hood, National superintendent of that department. We are told why the department is an important ally—or rather a necessary aid—to all other departments; how to push it; what helps are needed and where to procure them. Methods of circulating literature are given, also suggestions for furnishing the "wherewithal." Local superintendents of literature should see that this Reading is read and discussed by the unions generally.

Again we must remind our readers to write the name of the state at the heading of all letters. Envelopes are often mislaid or destroyed, and frequently we can obtain no clue to the writer of a letter, who is naturally offended because her requests do not receive prompt attention. Please, dear friends, put the name of the state always in your letters, as there are many towns of the same name in different states.

We ask as a favor that those reading our leaflets, will forward to us their opinions of any particular one which has been especially helpful in their union, their neighborhood or to some friend. This will materially help others in selecting appropriate literature.

We are glad to send sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and Young Crusader for free distribution at conventions, but from friends who do not even send stamps to cover postage, we hope for some especial effort to secure subscriptions both to the official organ and to the young people's interesting monthly.

VICI
Leather Dressing
The best Shoe Dressing in the world
The genuine is made only by Robert H. Foerderer, Philadelphia, manufacturer of the famous
VICI KID
Ask your dealer for Vici Leather Dressing, and be sure the trade-mark with the name of the maker, is on each box or bottle. Imitations may ruin your shoes.
A book about buying, wearing and caring for shoes, mailed free. Address
ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philada., Pa.

NOT FEMININE.—"Papa, the paper this morning in speaking of the battle at Cardenas, says, 'She made no response to the New York's fire.' Battery isn't feminine, is it?" "No, my boy; you can silence a battery."

LITTLE Mary was discovered one day by her mother vigorously applying the oil can to the kitten's mouth. On being reproved, she replied, "Why, mamma, she squeaks so awfully when I pull her tail."

THE Scotch reverence for Gladstone is displayed in this conversation between two Scotchmen reported by the British Weekly. One of them said, with much emphasis, "There hasna been a law giver equal to Mr. Gladstone since the day o' Moses." "Moses!" retorted the other, "Moses got the law gien tae him frae the Lord, but Mr. Gladstone makes laws oot o' his ain heed."

THIS is no romance. It happened, and not two moons ago: An author wrote an Easter story for a certain publication. It was accepted, but the check for it did not arrive "on time." The author was anxious about it, and for reasons. He wrote to the editor: "Will you please send that check in time for my wife's Easter hat?" The editor was prompt in replying. He wrote: "I can't. I'm married myself."

A LITTLE girl who is just learning to read short words, takes great interest in the big letters she sees in the newspapers. The other evening after she had kept her mamma busy reading the advertisements in the newspapers to her, she knelt down to say her prayers. "Lord," she lisped, "make me pure!" Then she hesitated and went on with added fervor, a moment later, "Make me absolutely pure like bakin' powder."

AN old man and woman, apparently hailing from the country, were observed one market day in a northerly seaport town standing on one of the bridges and looking over with keen interest at the shipping. A ship happened to be leaving the port at the time, and was towing a small boat behind it. The old lady, after watching it eagerly, exclaimed to her husband, "Oh, John, look! See hoo natural like the young ane follows auld ane!"

ANOTHER REDUCTION IN RATES TO OMAHA.
Tourist tickets via the North-Western Line, the pioneer line west and northwest of Chicago, will be sold during September and October at very low rates. Apply to agents for full particulars.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 37. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, September 29, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, Jesus of Nazareth. By M. W. Law 3
Poem, There Is No Death! By Kate Lunden 3
Her Quiet Way. By H. Lavinia Bailey 3
Direct Legislation. By Eltweed Pomeroy 3
Temperance at Oberlin. By Rev. D. L. Seward 4
Willard Hall Echoes 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
A Notable Anniversary 5
The War of Institutions 5
A Temperance Union of Veterans 5
Crime—Into and Out of 5
The Foreshadowings of the Christ 6
LOCAL UNION: 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, A Little Boy's Troubles 7
Poem, Children's Chorus. By Mary L. Wyatt 7
Six for One 7
A Very Busy Man 7
Doing and Not Doing 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Wine or Water? 8
The Fruits of Christianity 8
Imperialism 8
A Little too Much, Brother Hoar 9
Helen Gould's Service to Humanity 9
Mrs. Booth's Gratitude to Miss Willard 9
Personals 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
A Gratifying Testimonial—A Word to the Girls—The Clara Parrish Fund—A Point to be Remembered . . 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Victoria, Australia—Miss Agnes Slack in Norway—World's Wave Crests 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Western Washington—Notice—New York—Louisiana . 11
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER 12
Where Our Speakers Are 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Medal Contests 13
Convention Call—Convention Calendar 13
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 13
W. C. T. U. NEWS 13
THE HOME 14
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 14

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, St. Paul, Minn., November 11–16.

Notes and Comments.

THE People's church at St. Paul has been secured for the meetings of the National Convention. It is centrally located and seats three thousand people.

THE usual rate of one and one-third fare has been secured for the National Convention. Details will be announced later by the committee on transportation.

AT the Maine convention held September 20–22, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens was unanimously re-elected president. This makes the twenty-second time she has been chosen by the Maine white-ribboners as their leader, and in all those years only one vote has been cast against her.

IT is said of the dowager empress of China that in statecraft there is not her equal in any court of Europe. She has been called the Bismarck of China. Her career has been truly remarkable. As a favorite slave in the family of a viceroy, she, at her own urgent request, was taught to read, and since then she has risen step by step until now she is, by a recent edict of her nephew, the emperor, absolute ruler over 600,000,000 subjects, and this in a land where women are regarded as necessary evils, to be kept out of sight as much as possible. In the Empress Tsi An we have the new woman as evolved under the hoary civilization of old Cathay. We might add, as an item of interest, that China's "first lady of the land" possesses feet of a normal size. Born of Tartar parents, she escaped the torture which usually falls to the lot of Chinese babies.

AS we go to press Chicago Central Union is preparing to commemorate with a fitting program in Willard Hall, Miss Willard's first birthday in heaven. The meeting is to be held from eleven until one. There will be brief talks by leading white-ribboners—among them, it is hoped, Miss Jessie Ackermann—and an address by the Rev. J. Q. A. Henry, of La Salle Avenue Baptist church, upon the subject, "The mad dog, Drink—what shall we do with him?" Miss Willard's hymn, "On Heights of Power," will be sung by Mrs. Wilber Hagans, to music arranged by Lady Henry Somerset. Membership day will be properly recognized, and special prayer offered for a prohibition victory in Canada.

OF the seven provinces constituting the Dominion of Canada, four have already secured prohibition under the plebiscite. Manitoba, in 1892, declared for prohibition by a vote of nearly three to one. The following year Prince Edward Island followed suit with as large a majority. In 1894 Ontario and Nova Scotia swung into line, the former with a majority of some 82,000 votes, the latter with more than three to one against the liquor traffic. The strong prohibition sentiment in Canada is evidenced by the fact that on a platform promising a plebiscite on this question, to be voted on by the entire Dominion, the Liberal party went before the people in 1896 and was returned to power after having been a political minority for eighteen years. So it is seen that the prospect for prohibition in the contest now on is decidedly hopeful.

THE ocean tug "R. W. Wilmot," lately launched at Cleveland, O., was christened with water. The Globe Iron Company of that city, who built the boat, had provided a bottle of champagne decorated for the occasion, but the young lady who was to christen it preferred water. That young lady was Miss Maude Wilmot, daughter of R. W. Wilmot, of New Orleans, president of the company who owns the boat. Miss Wilmot had arranged for a bottle of water to be brought from the Mississippi near her home, and this was substituted for the champagne. The tug is described as the fastest boat ever built at lake shipyards, and as the biggest, costliest and most powerful of its kind in American waters. We are truly glad that our Southern girls are adopting the more modern and common sense method of christening ships, and trust the North will not lag far behind. Miss Wilmot is a student at the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, O.

IN answer to inquiries, we would explain that a plebiscite is, according to the Standard dictionary, "an expression of the popular will by a vote of the people"—by which is meant, of course, about one-half of the adult population. The term comes from two Latin words, plebs, common people, and scitum, decree. It is, in fact, an application of that form of direct legislation known as the initiative. By means of the plebiscite, which will have been taken in Canada before this reaches the majority of our readers, the voters have said whether or not they desire the enactment of a law prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors throughout the Dominion. Should a majority vote affirmatively, the question will then come before the Dominion's legislators, who must formulate and pass such a law before legal prohibition is an accomplished fact in Canada.

PLANS for the coming National Convention seem to be the all-absorbing topic of news at National Headquarters these days. The fact that it will be the twenty-fifth anniversary since the Crusade must, from the very nature of things, make this Convention one of special interest, and it is planned to have Crusade features prominent throughout the entire session. On Welcome Night, the keynote of the addresses will be the Crusade. Saturday evening will, as usual, be given up to the Y's, but the special features of their program are not yet known at Headquarters. Monday will be State Benefit Night. Tuesday evening there will be three strong addresses on the basic principles of our work—total abstinence, prohibition and purity. The first half of Wednesday evening will be given to the children, and a program of very great interest is being prepared for them. The latter half of the evening will be a consecration service. The honor roll of the states will be responded to by Scripture texts and quotations from the writings of Miss Willard. Miss Willard's favorite hymns will be sung at this service, and there will be a closing prayer of consecration. Our Memorial Convention surely could not close with a more fitting service or one that would send us forth with a deeper, truer preparation for the next year of work. The memorial service proper will be held on Friday morning at the opening meeting of the Convention. The speakers for these various meetings will be announced in later issues. Everything indicates that this saddest Convention of our organization will also be one full of the power of the Holy Spirit and rich in future blessings for our work.

Current Events.

Temperance.

GOVERNOR ST. JOHN has announced that he will support Peffer, the prohibition candidate for governor of Kansas.

DURING the last week before the vote on the Canadian plebiscite, at least 2,000 prohibition meetings were held every night throughout the Dominion.

GOVERNOR TANNER has stated positively that the new battleship Illinois will be christened with wine and not water "if he has anything to say about it."

THE temperance women of Anderson, Ind., are credited with having completely demolished a saloon which was kept open on Sundays and after hours in defiance of the law.

DR. S. C. SWALLOW, prohibition candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, is making campaign speeches in various parts of the state and will visit every county before election day.

THE Seventh International Temperance Congress (which last met, in 1897, in Brussels) will meet next in Paris, from April 4 to 9, 1899. All federated leagues and associations are invited to be represented thereat.

THE Prohibition Union of Christian Men, of Rochester, N. Y., will hold fifty meetings during the fall and winter in the churches of the city. The campaign was opened on September 18, with two monster meetings addressed by Col. George W. Bain.

EDWIN C. WOOLLEY, son of John G. Woolley, has been nominated for representative in the legislature, by the Prohibitionists of the third district of Illinois. His running mate for senator is Dr. Wilson, state president Illinois Christian Endeavor Union.

MAINE'S vote for the Prohibition candidate for governor is 2,234. This is an increase of more than forty per cent over the vote for Levering in 1896. C. C. Fetherstone, Prohibition candidate for governor of South Carolina, received over 33,000 votes, coming within less than 5,000 votes of an election.

THE banquet of the National Editorial Association, recently in session at Denver, Colo., is described thus: "There were music and good cheer, 'brave men and fair women,' speeches and fun, but nowhere in the great dining-room was there any wine. Water, Manitou ginger and coffee made the list of drinks."

THE managers of the great Canadian railways, seven in number, in reply to a letter asking them if they "considered the drinking habits of applicants for positions, and what rules, if any, they had regarding the drink practices of men already employed," state positively that they will not employ a man who drinks, or retain an old employé who offends against this rule.

About Women.

MRS. BALLINGTON BOOTH has returned from a trip to England.

MRS. MARTHA MCCULLAGH WILLIAMS, New York, won the first prize of $300 in a short-story contest recently closed by the S. S. McClure syndicate. There were over two thousand competitors, representing every state in the Union. The third prize, $100, also went to a woman, a Miss Hitt, of Nebraska.

MRS. SUSANNA PHELPS GAGE, whose husband is a professor in Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., has been elected recording secretary of the George Washington Memorial Association, the object of which is to found a national university in the city of Washington. The Association believes the corner-stone will be laid late in 1899.

MISS WINNIE DAVIS, daughter of Jefferson Davis, and widely known and beloved in the Southern states as the "Daughter of the Confederacy," died at Narragansett Pier, on September 18. She was taken to Richmond, Va., for burial, and interred in the family lot with elaborate ceremonies under the auspices of the veterans of the Confederacy.

IOWA has a state board of control that has been investigating some of the state institutions. According to the chief paper in the state, the board discovered that in many instances women in the employ of the state received less compensation by one-fifth to one-half, than men who were employed in the same capacities, while as a rule the women performed their tasks more satisfactorily than the men. The board immediately instituted a reform. It did not reduce the salaries of the competent men employés, but it did increase the salaries of the women to the same amount paid to the men for the same work.

Educational.

COL. OLIVER H. PAYNE, of New York, has made gifts that aggregate $1,500,000 for the establishment of a great medical college in connection with Cornell University.

THE University of Alabama is to have a woman's annex; and it has been named in honor of Miss Julia Tutwiler, who was mainly instrumental in obtaining the privileges of the state institution for girls.

IN Denmark the city school children are taken on regular visits to the country, both for the benefit of their health and for educational purposes, and the process is then reversed, the country children being taken to the city in order to broaden their minds.

LASELL Seminary for Young Women, Auburndale, Mass., is the first school in the world to teach swimming. It is also the first to teach cooking, and when it began it did so in the face of ridicule and blame from the colleges, but with general praise from the press.

THE first report made by the teachers of the Chicago public schools as to the tests of the physical condition of the eyes and ears of the pupils, shows that in a school where the average attendance is 600 over twenty-nine per cent of the students have either defective eyes or ears. Of the total defects fourteen per cent are of the eye and the balance of the ear.

JUDGE EDWARDS, of Scranton, Pa., has handed down a decision in the Waverly school case. Complaint was brought against Principal F. C. Hanyon, of the public schools, for reading the Bible at the opening exercises of the schools. Sectarian teachings were charged. The court held that no violation of law or of the state constitution had been made, and dismissed the bill of complaint and the injunction obtained by the plaintiffs.

A PLAN has been started by which the school children of the country are to contribute funds to erect a monument to Lafayette, to be presented to the people of France, July 4, 1900, United States day at the exposition. October 19, the anniversary of the surrender at Yorktown, is to be observed by the schools as "Lafayette Day," and at that time the subscriptions are to be collected. In the universities and higher schools it is expected that appropriate patriotic exercises will be held, to which a small admission fee will be charged, for the purpose of raising money for the fund. In the lementary schools, the money will probably be ra ed by parental contribution. It is expected tha the monument will cost about a quarter of a million dollars.

At Home.

EX-GOV. URBAN A. WOODBURY, of Vermont, has been tendered and has accepted a place on the war investigation committee.

GENERAL STEWART L. WOODFORD will not return to Spain as the minister of the United States. This statement is made on the authority of a member of the cabinet.

THE navy department fixes the value of the ammunition fired by Dewey's fleet in destroying the Spanish squadron under Montejo at $45,000. Sampson and Schley fired $105,000 at Santiago, in the battle with Cervera.

GEN. JOSEPH WHEELER has been renominated to Congress in the eighth Alabama district, and the democratic primaries which nominated him were participated in by the republicans and populists throughout the district.

DR. JOHN HALL, one of the leading Presbyterian ministers of the United States, died in Ireland, September 17. For more than thirty years he had been pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York city.

BY the terms of a court-martial sentence, approved by the President, a cadet has been punished for hazing in West Point. Cadet Philip S. Smith is sentenced to be suspended from the United States Military Academy, without pay, until August 28, 1899, at which date he will join the then third class.

IT is reported from St. Paul that a careful compilation of the crop products of the three greatest wheat-growing states—Minnesota and North and South Dakota—places the yield of wheat at 150,000,000 bushels, and the value of the various products of the farms in these states at $150,000,000, less the expense of marketing the crop. The yield of the various farm products is divided thus: Wheat, 150,000,000 bushels; corn, 75,000,000 bushels; oats, 90,000,000 bushels.

ONE of the largest telegraph bills ever rendered will soon be presented to the war department as a result of the war with Spain. Nearly all of the correspondence of the department has been carried on by telegraph, the mail correspondence having been practically abandoned. Orders for supplies, equipments, enlistments, movements of troops, mustering out, assignments of officers, transfers of men and orders of every description were sent by wire. It cost the government $5,000 to notify Generals Miles, Shafter and Merritt of the signing of the procotol which provided for the suspension of hostilities. The toll to Manila is $2.25 per word, to Porto Rico $1.84, and Santiago seventy-five cents. The cablegrams to the generals of the army contained over 1,100 words.

A NEW organization, recently perfected at Washington, is the White Cross of America. Its officers are: President general, Mrs. Jane V. Creighton, Portland, Ore.; vice-president general, Mrs. F. W. Dickins, Washington, D. C.; secretary general, Mrs. Nelson A. Miles, Washington, D. C.; treasurer general, Mrs. George Westinghouse, Washington, D. C. A prominent member sets forth the object of the society as follows: The work of the White Cross Society will be similar to that of the Red Cross with a few exceptions, one of which is, "Whereas, the Red Cross works for all nations on recuperative lines, the White Cross works for America on ameliorative lines." Its influence is first to be extended westward, along the Pacific slope toward Hawaii and the Philippines, to forestall inhumanity in any anticipated form.

Abroad.

THE London Daily Mail says the Rothschilds will loan Spain £4,000,000 or £5,000,000 on the security of the Almaden quicksilver mines when the treaty of peace shall have been signed.

THE Queen Regent of Spain has signed the decree suspending Admiral Montejo and granting pardon to convicts who fought as volunteers in the war with the United States.

THE Japanese government has placed an order with an American car company for 250 street cars to be shipped within the next ninety days. The amount to be paid for the cars, delivered, is $300,000.

THE Pope has telegraphed to St. Petersburg giving his entire adhesion to the Czar's disarmament proposals. President McKinley has made favorable reply to the proposal, as has also Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

THE French cabinet, after much discussion and the resignation of two of its members, has ordered a special commission to examine the Dreyfus case. This is looked upon as the sure forerunner of a new trial.

THE southern part of Spain has been visited by terrible floods. At the village of Herrera, near Cadiz, eighty persons have been drowned. A great number of cattle have perished and the olive harvest is lost, especially in the Provinces of Seville and Granada. There have been many deaths in other parts of the flooded country.

Contributed.

Jesus of Nazareth.

BY M. W. LAW.

A WEARY, sun-browned man, whose dusty feet
No homeward path might tread when shadows fall;
A hungry wanderer through the fields of wheat,
A midnight watcher on lone mountain sides;
Wrestling in shrinking agony before
That brimming cup, pressed to a trembling lip
In dark Gethsemane.
Whence shone the light that haloed Thy dark face
And drew the children round Thy childless knees?
The babe stretched trustful arms to Thine embrace,
Rude men left all men love to follow Thee,
And weeping women knelt, and wistful, kissed
Thy garment's dusty hem in grateful love—
O gentle Nazarene!

Thou, lifted up, hast drawn all hearts to Thee;
Peasant of Galilee, Thy humble name,
Flung to the clouds of war on banners white,
Whispered from lip to lip where serried ranks
Of warriors clanging kneel at set of sun,
From deep cathedral doors with incense sweet
Carried by clear, child voices to the sky,
Gilds all our storied past.
Oh, potent name to melt the hearts of men!
Borne upward on the martyr's fiery breath
Where scorching hands are raised in ecstasy,
Or, on the bloody sand, beneath the lion's breath
Where pale lips parted in a tranced smile,
Have closed forever on that murmured name—
O mighty Nazarene!

Oh, watchword for the hearts that must renounce,
Inspirer of the love that dares to die,
Come, grave Thee on my hands and on my heart,
And teach me how to yearn with passion pure
O'er sorrows not my own.
Help me to gild each precious, passing hour
With humble, grateful service like Thine own,
With that warm love that lays a tender hand
Upon the loathsome hurts of human kind,
And heals and blesses even while it climbs
The hill of Calvary.

Milwaukee, Wis.

There Is No Death!

BY KATE LUNDEN.

THERE is no death! The shadows 'round us creeping
Are only curtains shutting out the night;
The pallor over stiffening features sweeping
Is but the breaking of the morning light.

There is no death! Love's tears, in anguish falling,
Are turned to dewdrops 'mong heaven's own flowers,
And though the lips are silent at our calling,
Across the depths the spirit answers ours.

There is no death! The grave is but a portal
Where the soul's earth-soiled garments are thrown down,
And through it steals the breath of life immortal,
Beyond it gleams the victor's shining crown.

There is no death! The amaranth is glistening
Between the tear-wet wreaths of asphodel,
And in the funeral bells we hear, if listening,
The loved one's parting call that "all is well."

There is no death, because its power is broken;
The Prince of life Himself passed through the gloom;
It changed to light, and of that change a token,
His conquering cross we raise above the tomb.

Flemington, N. J.

BETTER trust all and be deceived
And weep that trust and that deceiving,
Than doubt one heart, that if believed
Had blessed one's life with true believing.
—Frances Anne Kemble.

Her Quiet Way.

BY H. LAVINIA BAILEY.

MRS. EUSTACE, visiting her friend, Mrs. Brunell, accompanied her one day to the afternoon meeting of the W. C. T. U., after which temperance work and workers naturally became a topic of conversation between them.

"But, Emma," Mrs. Eustace was saying, as they rose from the tea table, "I don't see why you make so much in your union of the lady in gray who sat near the desk—Mrs. Dale, I think you called her—a good woman, no doubt, but I could not understand why you should expect so much of her and so frequently appeal for her judgment or her knowledge of affairs. She seemed to have such a quiet way that I should not have thought of her as 'an influential member.'"

"You must have noted, however," replied Mrs. Brunell, "that her quiet way is never a stupid way, that she always had the opinion or the information asked for ready to hand forth, and so helped greatly to maintain the interest and the dignity of the meeting."

"Perhaps so," admitted the guest in half-reluctant tone, and Mrs. Brunell continued:

"And that readiness and decisiveness have characterized her from her early youth. She may not be brilliant, but I can assure you she shines with steady light."

"You are enthusiastic," laughed Mrs. Eustace, "and I am interested; tell me something more of the friend on whom you set so high a value."

"A few incidents here and there will serve to justify my enthusiasm," answered the hostess. "Allow me, then, to introduce my heroine as a pupil at Monteith Academy, age sixteen, perhaps, and at least as attractive as the average schoolgirl—which, by the way, is saying a good deal; how delightful girls are!" interpolated the narrator, and, without noticing the amused smile on her listener's face, proceeded:

"She tripped lightly down the steps at close of school, and with one of her classmates started across the campus on her homeward way. Two young men walked a little behind them.

"'Let's join the ladies,' said the one with the cigar; 'I'm acquainted with that Miss Elwyn; was introduced to her this morning.'

"'Well, you're not so much acquainted with her, after all,' rejoined his companion, 'or you would not propose walking with her while you carry that cigar.'

"'What! you don't mean she would object—'

"'She certainly would.'

"'Inclines to keep a fellow at a distance, does she?'

"'Yes, in more senses than one, as some of us may find out when examination day comes round.'

"'Whew!' puffed the smoker, and they did not join the ladies in their walk."

"Sentiment!" sneered Mrs. Eustace, politely.

"No, Lydia Elwyn acted from principle, not sentiment. She had by inheritance an aspiring and truth-loving nature, and these qualities were fostered by education. She was simply sensible and sincere. She carried her convictions into the conduct of her life, and this without parade of virtue and without prudishness. Let me give you another episode.

"Having finished the course at the Academy, Lydia went for a little visit to the home of her favorite classmate. Here she was introduced to young Mr. Air, who, being the proud possessor of a fine new horse and phaeton, invited the ladies to take a ride. The invitation was accepted and at the appointed hour the handsome turnout was at the door, and the girls were ready. Her friend was handed into the phaeton, but as Mr. Air turned to offer a like assistance to Miss Elwyn, that observing maiden noticed that the hand that held the reins, held also, in graceful poise between the fingers, a lighted cigar! Consternation seized her, but there was no apparent sign of it beyond a momentary hesitation; then, like a flash, her own daintily gloved thumb and finger snapped the weed from his, and springing to her seat in the carriage she said archly, and with a smile that must of necessity have disarmed any vexation he might have felt, 'You see, Mr. Air, the cigar and I could not ride together, and you had invited me!'"

"Bravo!" exclaimed Mrs. Eustace; "I do not often advocate heroic treatment in such matters, but I do admire pluck like that, and it is a silly and uncomely thing to vitiate a pleasant ride with smoke. Anything more on the tragi-comic order?"

"Yes. On a certain afternoon she was leaving the church, where a temperance meeting had been held. An acquaintance asked the privilege of accompanying her to her home. Alas! his hand also held the never-to-be-tolerated cigar. She shook her head. And yet Martyn Dale was the recognized leader in the intellectual and social life of their village, and on the morrow he was going away for a year of travel and study. But he had marked the swift glance which prompted her refusal of his company, and tossing the offending member from him, his courteous 'I beg pardon; I should have thought of that; may I walk with you now?' gained for him the coveted pleasure.

"A year went by, and another, and in the early summer it came about that an outdoor festival was held. Refreshments were sold at several different tables, and it was a fancy of the girls having charge of the tables to decorate them each with flowers of one particular hue, and with each purchase to include a flower for favor. The effect was most pleasing. It chanced that Miss Elwyn's stand was amid the heliotropes, lilacs, violets and flowers of kindred hue, but no association of name and color had occurred to her, till, as she stood for a little time quite deserted of customers, Martyn Dale, just returned from his two years' absence, approached, and with cordial greeting accosted her:

"'Lydia, seller of purple! I am glad of this opportunity of thanking you for the rebuke you gave me the last time I saw you—the afternoon before I left home, you may remember?'

"'Yes, but I did not mean to rebuke you, only to express my own position in reference to that custom—'

"'I know,' he responded eagerly, 'but it was a lesson for which I shall never cease to be grateful, and,' he added in softer, slower tone, 'it may be some gratification to you to know that from that day I have had nothing to do with the objectionable weed. Arrested in thought by your so emphatic disapproval, I soon came to detest it as heartily as even you could desire.' And—and—ah, Marian, you are laughing, and I guess your thought. Well, I am not weaving a romance, and as Lydia Elwyn is now Mrs. Martyn Dale, possibly it would be only fair to admit that the nectarine element may have had somewhat to do with the banishment of the nicotine in this instance."

"Of course," said Mrs. Eustace; "and yet, Emma," she added thoughtfully, "your account of this lady has given me some new ideas and I see as never before how great good might be accomplished if more of our girls could show such a combination of good sense and true independence as did this Lydia in her quiet way."

Spiceland, Ind.

Direct Legislation.

BY ELTWEED POMEROY.

President National Direct Legislation League.

ALL government is government of the people. Direct legislation is government by the people as well, and hence it completes Lincoln's great trinity and makes it government for the people. Our national besetting sin is plutocracy, a rule "by" the dollar and hence "for" the dollar. We see wealth increasing and concentrating. We see the contrasting classes of paupers and millionaires both rapidly growing. We see wealth, ostentation and vice spreading on one side, and grinding poverty, bitterness and crime on the other. Here lap-dogs with diamond-studded collars and trained nurses; there glass-workers toiling for twelve or fourteen hours a day, seven days in a week for sixty-five cents a day, and girls surrendering their whole time outside of barely enough to eat in and sleep, and if requested their virtue also, for the chance of working in the glass factories at $1.65 a week. (These were told me as actual, present wages and conditions at Steubenville, O., during this very year.)

What is the cause of this? Our representative system has been distorted from the functions of representing the people, which it nobly fulfilled in the early part of this century, till now it is a hybrid. At times it desires to serve the people, but more often it is swayed by the power of concentrated wealth, and when that power controls it, we have a government "by" wealth and hence "for" wealth. Ours is a government by laws and the power which makes the laws, rules.

What is the remedy? To take away the irresponsible power from our legislatures and to link them so closely to the people that they will save the people; to embody in an actual working institution that principle so clearly stated by Professor Nash "that every man, no matter what his birth and fortune, is by divine right a part of the governing body."

Direct legislation does this. In small communities it means the people coming together in a landesgemeinde, a folk-mote, a town meeting to make their own laws for themselves. This is done and has been done since its very foundation all over rural New England, and so firmly rooted is it, that no one now ever suggests its change, and it is spreading in other states. In communities too large for town meeting, direct legislation is accomplished by the use of petitions through what is known as the initiative and referendum. By the initiative a reasonable minority of the people by signing a petition for a law, force the legislature to consider it and if they do not pass it, the proposed law goes to the referendum or poll of the people at the next election, a majority enacting or rejecting it. By the referendum, no law can go into effect after passing the law-making body for a reasonable time—say in a state ninety days—and if during that time, a reasonable minority, say five per cent, sign a petition for its reference to the people, it is held till the next election when all the people vote on it, a majority accepting or rejecting.

The initiative and referendum together make direct legislation, and their first effect will be, yea, has been where they have been used, to link the legislatures so closely to the people that they have been their servants, their councilors, their friends, and not the dishonest tools of a wealth-heaping plutocracy. This is so because under the referendum it is impossible to enact legislation which people do not tacitly or explicitly approve, and under the initiative it is impossible for the legislature to prevent the enacting of a law which the people really want. It is useless to corrupt the legislature when direct legislation is in force because the people have got to be corrupted afterwards. There is flagrant corruption of voters at elections now. But it is corruption in the name of the party loyalty or for a personality whom they know not, whether injurious to them or not. Under direct legislation, a majority would have to be corrupted to vote for a measure which would injure them, themselves. They would have to be fools as well as knaves.

Secondly, direct legislation makes every man "by divine right, a part of the governing body;" it discovers the "infinite value of the common man" and makes him "indispensable to the state." Hence it is widely educational, teaches man that he is necessary to others and others to him, that he is of "infinite value." It changes him from a thing, a pawn to be used or sacrificed on the chess-board of business, into a self-governing, self-developing, self-respecting sovereign. It provides the opportunity for self-development by allowing the initiative for laws to come from the humblest class, and it crystallizes that provision into an institution of society.

Many other advantages might be cited for direct legislation, but when analyzed into its primal constituents they would be found to come under one of these two heads—a present remedy for corruption and evils of our representative system, and a means for the self-development of the whole people. Such, indeed, has been the results of the application of direct legislation; for it is not a new and untried theory but an actual working fact, not only in the town meetings of country New England but in the adoption and amendment of our state constitutions, in all our local option laws, in many hundreds of referendum votes on appropriations and other measures, in the government of trade unions embracing at times hundreds of thousands of members and carrying on complex insurance systems. Outside of our own country it is seen in local self-government in England, France, Germany, Scandinavia, and it is having a wonderful and rapid development in Australia. But the fullest development of direct legislation and its highest beneficence of result is seen in Switzerland, the model republic of the old world. In local government it there dates back beyond the records of man into prehistoric times. There it is applied to national and federal affairs of the highest importance and greatest complexity. An honored ex-president of the Swiss republic has recently said that when he got at a proper perspective to view the acts of the people, he found they were always right.

The great present, encouraging fact about the direct legislation movement is that it is growing spontaneously all over the country. Leagues are forming, earnest men and women are talking, writing, working for it all over the country without any apparent connection or common center. The people of South Dakota vote on a direct legislation amendment to their state constitution next fall. Any city in Nebraska can have direct legislation under a state law passed last year. It has been embedded into the San Francisco charter adopted at a referendum of the people. The referendum is being attached to many laws. Boston reformers urge it for insertion in their charter soon to be drawn. It is insistently urged for insertion in the constitution of federated Australia and probably will go in. Direct legislation is gathering to itself that "superb social enthusiasm" which Professor Nash says, "lurks within the argument for bringing all existing institutions to the test of present use."

"We can no more stop," says Professor Herron, "the progress of democracy where it now is than we can take the race back to the Garden of Eden. From the idea of absolute monarchy we have progressed to the idea of representative, institutional government. But we have scarcely reached the half-way house of political progress. We shall have to move on to the goal which is the fulfilment of democracy in the direct self-government of the people. In the pure democracy the people will be their own legislators, making their own laws directly, or through an elective and representative system that will receive and effectuate in legislation the actual will of the people."

Newark, N. J.

Temperance at Oberlin.

BY REV. D. L. SEWARD.

TEMPERANCE principles entered Oberlin with the first colonist, were imbedded in the substance of the Covenant, and with a unanimity probably nowhere else ever matched for so long a time, have since borne sway. No open saloon has ever been able to survive more than a few days. Whoever has attempted to defy public opinion at this point has come to grief so speedily and so utterly as to be able to find not the least solace for his woes.

At the beginning temperance wore a meaning as sweeping as in the New Testament, being co-extensive with continence, self-mastery. The promise was to "eat only plain and wholesome food, renouncing all bad habits, and especially the smoking and chewing of tobacco, unless it is necessary as a medicine, and deny ourselves all strong and unnecessary drinks, even tea and coffee, as far as practicable, and everything expensive that is simply calculated to gratify the palate." As to the last two the good sense of the community presently removed the taboo, but alcoholic drinks and tobacco have remained under the ban even to the present. The students are required to pledge themselves to abstain, and by an overwhelming majority the inhabitants of the village pass their days in blissful ignorance of any need of such stimulants. In 1837 the colonists pledged themselves not to patronize any merchant or inn-keeper who was a vender of tobacco, and for years the noxious weed was not to be found on sale. But later the farmers of the surrounding region who chewed and smoked, and for whom Oberlin was the trading place, made so much ado that some of the drugstores began to keep it in stock, and later some of the groceries. Once or twice a tobacco store has been opened, but soon failed for lack of sufficient patronage. In 1880 an anti-tobacco crusade was instituted by a mass-meeting in the First Church under the lead of the pastors, the faculty and the mayor, and marked by stirring addresses, by forcible resolutions, and the appointment of a committee. In due season the outcome appeared in a pledge taken by all the tradesmen but one to sell the unpopular article no more. After sixty-five years, in this day of such general use of cigars and cigarets, it can be truthfully affirmed that the number of smokers in Oberlin is phenomenally small.

As for intoxicants, they have always been exceedingly conspicuous by their utter absence. At various times strong drink has been dealt out surreptitiously for a season, but discovery, arrest, conviction and condign punishment were so certain to ensue that the offender was content never to repeat the offence. The open saloon has always been considered absolutely intolerable. Since 1875 several determined attempts have been made to defy public sentiment in this particular, but each case was met with a popular uprising so unanimous, so orderly, but so evidently determined that at all hazards liquor must go, that the originators were glad precipitately to retire or make the best terms possible, sadder but wiser men, and with enlarged ideas of what good people can do when united and wholly bent upon achieving a definite purpose. Public gatherings with crowded seats were held in the churches, prayer was offered in the closet, in the saloon or upon the sidewalk, relays of citizens kept watch hard by the door day and night to take note of all who entered, the proprietor was argued with and warned by committees composed of some of the most eminent for character, wisdom, and standing in the community.

To the present day no vender of intoxicants has been found who, after a few days of such experience as this, coupled also with evident prospect of indefinite continuance of the same, has not been thoroughly satisfied that discretion was the better part of valor. In 1881-82 an alliance was formed which secured pledges to the amount of $200,000, to be employed, if need be, to the last cent in furtherance of the objects determined upon. Twice when buildings were secured and bars were opened, violence was resorted to under cover of darkness, by persons unknown however, and without the approbation of the worthier portion of the community. Once the windows were smashed in and also the heads of the liquor kegs, and once the saloon-to-be was demolished and removed so completely that no sign was left that it had ever existed. But this is not the normal Oberlin way of doing things.

Oberlin, O.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

THE wonderful days of joy and enthusiasm when "our boys" came marching home from the war will never be forgotten in the hearts of the people.

The bulletin board in front of Willard Hall called for a service of thanksgiving for the return of the soldiers, and then with the words of "America" ringing through the hall, and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" sung by Mr. Fisher as he probably never sung it before, with the thousands in the streets waiting and watching, and faithful, tender hearts lifted to God in prayer, Miss Helen Hood, Mrs. S. M. D. Fry and Mrs. Matilda B. Carse talked to us of war and its awful desolation, of the battle of life with its wounded, sinsick souls, of Christ the great physician, God, the pitying Father, and heaven the glorious home of the future for the victorious soul. God bless the women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union with their message of the gospel!

. . . . . .

A reformed man said, "Even for one thousand dollars I would not walk a block with an unlighted cigar in a brand new holder in my mouth, for some think it a sin and it would be a stumbling block for them." Such men mean to let their light shine as God gives them the light. And many say that when liquor went the appetite for tobacco had to go too. Fourteen testimonies in four minutes show earnestness of purpose.

. . . . . .

A dear sister, forty-eight years a Christian, came from afar to thank God for His loving care. One man was "thankful for a God who put the ambition into young men to want to be good."

"Submit yourselves to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

A Notable Anniversary.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Many things conspired to make the thirty-first anniversary of the Battle Creek Sanitarium one of peculiar interest to those who believe the principles of that "larger gospel," as Dr. Kellogg calls it, for which the institution stands; and nothing was left undone by the management to make it a day of days in its history.

I was at the camp-meeting at Forest, Ill., and to get back to the anniversary was obliged to travel all night, arriving Monday morning at about half-past five. As I drove up I found the building like a bee-hive—helpers everywhere putting on the finishing touches to the decorations of bunting, evergreen and flowers, which ornamented pillars, balconies and the entrance, and made of the splendid structure a picture of beauty, such as would have satisfied the most artistic eye.

A little later, upon entering the gymnasium, I was almost bewildered by the transformation which had taken place, and by which it had been converted into a school of health. Through the center of the great room was a labyrinthian avenue, intended to direct the procession that would pass through at the evening display, so that they should not become entangled in each other's feet. The paling which marked this avenue was beautifully decorated with bunting and evergreen. On either side were rows of booths in which were represented the various departments of sanitarium service—massage, cooking school, food display, manual training, dress-making, deformities in figure and dress, and housed in a veritable "Chamber of Horrors," was a table at which was very forcibly illustrated the principles of correct versus a wrong diet, etc., while, at the further end of the room over the platform was a booth where were displayed all the products of the health food manufactories.

Guests had been arriving all the day before, and by the appointed hour the place was alive with people. The exercises began at eleven o'clock, on the lawn, under the very same trees, where just thirty-one years before had been celebrated the opening, at which time Dr. Kellogg, then a little boy, sat under one of the trees which was then not much larger than his own arm.

The program was a fine one in many respects. The speeches were short but to the point, unfolding the processes by which the principles of health reform, for which the institution stands, have been evolved through investigation, culture and experiment, until now it is a leader in temperance, health, purity and rescue mission work.

One thing has impressed me from the first, a remarkable thing in this uncandid world, and that is the readiness with which an error, when it is discovered to be an error, is openly acknowledged, and put away among the dead things of the dead past, while every hand reaches out after that which comes in clearer light as truth. Dr. Kellogg and his co-laborers in the scientific evolution of health principles, have no such love for any pet idea or method that, when by practice it has been demonstrated to be unreliable or weak, would lead them to cling to it for a moment. "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life," is the watchword in this progress of reform, and the Spirit is kept in the lead, while anything that can not keep step with it is soon left far behind.

It was interesting on this occasion to sit and watch the faces of the great concourse of many kindreds, tongues and people, as regards estate, culture and faith, gathered from afar and near, and to note the evident pride which all took in the work, the successes of which were being celebrated that day. Speeches were made by some of the leading citizens and ministers of Battle Creek, and all vied with each other in expressing their appreciation of the institution and their satisfaction that its affairs had been so adjusted that its work could go on without fear of interruption.

Following the addresses in the morning was a dinner, at which as many guests as the dining-room could possibly accommodate were seated—a dinner such as can be found under no other roof and to which I wish every white-ribboner might some time be invited, that she might see what a purely hygienic meal may be. Following the dinner were excursions by carriage, car and on foot, about the premises and in the city, and in the evening the exhibitions in the gymnasium and on the lawn. It is estimated that more than ten thousand people crowded about the grounds. It was a scene never to be forgotten—a brilliant, beautiful spectacle, a vast sea of animated faces as far as the electric lights could shine, through which there marched in uniform a procession of nurses, helpers and employés, headed by the sanitarium band, carrying appropriate mottoes, which in themselves taught the principles, told the story and preached the gospel.

Yours truly,
(MRS.) S. M. I. HENRY.
Sept. 12, 1898.

The War of Institutions.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—I need not remind white-ribboners that our greatest war is not the easy conquest of Spain, but the long war with continental institutions that are making Spaniards of whole cities among us, where crowds throng kinetoscope reproductions of bull fights, as large as life and almost as horrible, and real prize fights, no less brutal, and suburban Sunday parks that are Baal groves of lust and drunkenness and gambling as well as general Sabbath breaking. In battling these, "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war."

Permit me to make one or two practical suggestions to my white-ribbon "comrades" as to the autumn campaign:

1. Let us use all the indignation aroused against the canteens to carry the Ellis Bill, which would abolish them not only in army and navy but also in the soldiers' homes, and the bars in immigrant stations and government buildings also. This bill, let us remember, is on the House calendar with a favorable report, that can be obtained by writing Hon. W. R. Ellis, M. C., Washington, D. C. Every conference and convention that meets should be induced to vote a petition for this bill, a fresh one if it has voted before. These and church petitions and those of other bodies should be delivered to congressmen and senators whenever possible—in their own towns in any case—by impressive delegations, with speeches that should cite Miles' order and Shafter's letter, the defeat of Cervera's drunken gunners and the victories of British abstainers on the Nile.

Petitions, letters, PERSONAL INTERVIEWS are good, better, BEST.

2. Other bills pending should not be forgotten in these conventions and interviews. Despite the diversion of attention by the war from more serious internal perils, four reform bills, three beside the Ellis bill, were carried to the calendar with favorable reports by the Reform Bureau and its white-ribbon allies. One of these doubles the penalty for seduction of girls up to twenty-one years—the Brodrick bill, which is "unfinished business" on the House Calendar. Its passage is practically certain. The other two can only be passed by very hard work, the Hepburn and Hoar anti-prize fight bills, which forbid the interstate transmission of pictures and descriptions of prize fights and exclude such from the mails. The Gillett anti-gambling bill is yet more important, and the bills touching divorce, cigarets, and immigration also need re-enforcements. Let any one who has not a list of pending bills apply, with stamp, to the Reform Bureau, which will also supply a petition pattern for every W. C. T. U. secretary not already supplied by my able ally, Mrs. M. D. Ellis, who was so heartily supported by white-ribboners in the last Congress.

3. I regard most important of all what I have suggested in several National W. C. T. U. Conventions, the federating of the moral forces of each community in a Union Reform Committee, first to study reforms and then to unitedly promote them. I have a new printed plan for this which I shall be glad to send to all interested.

WILBUR F. CRAFTS,
Supt. of the Reform Bureau, Washington, D. C.
En route Sept. 7, 1898.

A Temperance Union of Veterans.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—The Ella M. Thacher union of the National Soldiers' Home, was organized by Mrs. Ella M. Thacher, National superintendent of soldiers and sailors. The members are not asked to pay dues.

The union consists of one hundred and eleven men, veterans of the Civil War, now resident in the home, with Mrs. Mary D. Bradley, wife of the chaplain, as president. The meetings are held once a week on Monday evening, the pledge being presented at every meeting. Many men come forward to sign, who through the weakness of the flesh and the great temptations by which they are surrounded, fall away again. These men are sought out and persuaded to try once more. One of the thrilling features of the meetings is to have a weak member stand out before the assembled union, confess his fault, express his purpose to make a new effort and ask his comrades to stand by him and pray for him that he may not fall away again. One of the outcomes of our work here is the establishment of a reading room, "The White Ribbon Rest," for soldiers and sailors, in Phœbus, that city of saloons; this in connection with the unions in the Norfolk district W. C. T. U., they agreeing to lend a hand in the payment of the rent. It is intended that this shall be a permanent work and is for the benefit of both the veterans and young fort soldiers of the garrison at Fort Monroe, and also for the sailors visiting the port at Old Point.

It is hoped that besides maintaining a reading room and restaurant, where the men can have a quiet and decent meal free from the saloon element, that a good religious work may be done and many souls brought to Christ through the efforts of the missionary in charge. Besides holding weekly meetings, a fine flower mission work has been carried on, the men collecting flowers from the surrounding neighborhood and distributing them in the various wards of the home hospital. Papers, magazines and temperance mottoes are circulated through the home. There is a committee in every company to look up absentees and weak members, and the men have contributed twenty dollars for local work and reading room.

The president has personally seen to the distribution of five well filled boxes of clothing, etc., for the sick and wounded soldiers at Fort Monroe, expending twenty-six dollars for ice, milk, fruits and other delicacies, also giving to sailors many housewives from an Ohio union, with pledge cards and temperance song books to both soldiers and sailors. In connection with the work of the union, there has been held one social meeting, and it has also entertained the annual convention of the Norfolk district—not a bad showing for a six months' old union consisting of veterans of the Civil War.

MARY D. BRADLEY.
National Home, Va., Sept. 11, 1898.

Crime—Into and Out of.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—"There are so many pathways and concealed byways that lead to crime, that the wonder is not that there is so much crime, but that there is not more." This was the remark made by a young, but intelligent convict in the Missouri state penitentiary some months ago. Continuing the conversation he also said, "And the worst of it is there are so many ways that lead into and none that lead out. What am I to do when I leave this place? The mark of the penitentiary bird will be upon me, and although I shall be free by having paid the penalty of the law, yet no matter how well behaved I may have been in prison, no matter how earnestly I may seek for a position suitable to me, or try to make an honest living, I shall feel that every detective and perhaps every policeman is in some way able to spot me as an ex-convict. Then, as has been the case with many others, a quiet whisper to my employers would lose me my job.

"Yes, there are many kind-hearted, and I believe right-minded people, who look upon us and our condition in the right and true way; and the W. C. T. U. has been, I believe, the first organized society to consider the criminal and the unfortunate woman not merely from the judicial point of view—punishment, but from the Christ-like point of view—reform. 'Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more.'"

I could not help being struck by the earnestness, the apparent reasonableness and the almost hopelessness of this young man. Hundreds of others, men and women, have spoken in a similar strain, "After prison, what?"

So easy to do wrong, so many beguilements at every footstep of life, that the easily led, the thoughtless or the rash, are led into crime at an age when they are hardly able to consider the difference between judicious and injudicious action. Seeing so much immorality and dishonesty in some high places, they lose respect for law and regard high principle as a sham, therefore, viewing with lack of confidence all men and all conditions, they accept the well-known political slogan, "To the victor belong the spoils," and their highest aim is to be smart, for "the smart man wins," according to their false reasoning.

The majority of the criminals of our country are under twenty-five years of age. Under our present system there is hardly a possibility of the reformation of one in a hundred, and yet, fully fifty per cent, aye, more, are open to influences that would lead them out of crime. Their tendencies are not vicious, their desire is to regain self-respect and the respect of others. But how? The problem is before our country for solution, and, as many of the white-ribbon women view it, is one that they are specially called upon to solve.

We must take human nature as it is, and, by the accumulated experience of ages, formulate some plan strictly in accord with "good government," that will give the criminals of all classes at least a fair opportunity for usefulness through reformation.

LUCY M. WISKER,
State Supt. Jail and Prison Work,
Missouri W. C. T. U.

The Foreshadowings of the Christ.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—The Outline Bible Club Course of the American Institute of Sacred Literature enters upon its sixth year with the first of October. The subject for the year is one of peculiar interest, namely, "The Foreshadowings of Christ."*

The topic will at once suggest to the average mind a few isolated passages from the Old Testament prophets, such as Gen. 3: 14, 15, the Child Prophecies of Isaiah, and the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. The course as it is prepared by the American Institute, however, is a very different thing from the study of such individual sections, though including them also. Beginning with Genesis the whole field of Old Testament history and prophecy from Genesis to Malachi is covered in outline. At the same time all the material is selected and arranged so as to bring out the first beginnings and the continual growth of the whole Messianic idea as revealed step by step in the history of Israel. Every prophecy appears in its own peculiar historical environment. Such an addition of life and color gives new and fresh conceptions to the minds of those long familiar with the Scripture passages, and brings to the new student a real gratification of the historical as well as the religious sense.

It requires so little time (fifteen minutes a day) that no one who is interested need hesitate to enter upon the work. All Christians read some portion of the Bible every day. (This should be true if it is not.) Why not make this reading systematic by adopting some well constructed plan? We would advise all who wish such help to address the American Institute of Sacred Literature, Hyde Park, Chicago, Ill.

G. L. CHAMBERLIN.

IF I could, I would inaugurate a strike that would drive the liquor traffic from the face of the earth.—P. M. Arthur.

THERE is only one place that you can inform the government that you are against the saloon, and that place is at the ballot-box.—Dr. H. J. Hall.

THE destruction of the poor is their poverty, and the present licensing system is the chief cause of the present time poverty, debasement of the poor.—John Burns, M. P.

[*These Bible Courses have the endorsement and recommendations of Miss Willard and Miss Greenwood. —THE EDITORS.]

Local Union.

QUESTIONS have accumulated during the few weeks in which the "Local Union" has been upon vacation and, therefore, for some time to come our attention must be given almost wholly to answering, so far as possible, the difficulties which confront the local worker. Our correspondents will, we are sure, wait patiently their "turn."

QUESTION.—Can one woman hold office in two separate unions, or can she have a vote in two or more unions?

ANSWER.—One woman can count for but one woman in the membership of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, local, state and National. Therefore, she can have a vote in but one union—the one in which she pays her dues. If, however, she chooses to join, as an honorary member, some other union, and its members choose to give her some position of responsibility, I can see no reason why she should not accept it, provided she is a woman of such versatility of talent that she can work in two places at the same time. It should be remembered, however, that any contributions to the treasury of the second union are not to be reckoned in with the dues sent to the county and state treasuries. As a rule it is better to do twofold work in one place.

Q.—Has a state officer, by reason of her official position, any right to dictate the policy of the local unions in her town?

A.—A state officer is, in a certain sense, a member of every union in her state, since she belongs to them all for service. Her interest in their work make it imperative that she should advise and suggest, but if she is at all worthy to be a state officer, she will not "dictate" their policy. There is another sense in which each local union is absolutely independent in itself, and a wise state officer will strike the golden mean between the two extremes of dictatorship and indifference to the local policy.

Q.—Has a state officer any right to sign her name, officially, to any and all letters she may write, whether or not they have reference to state or local work?

A.—She has not. A name should be signed officially only to official documents.

Q.—Is it right for a state treasurer to receive dues, representing a certain membership from a county when she knows that the county president and treasurer have made up the balance from their own pockets?

A.—This question involves a fine ethical distinction. If the county president and treasurer are absolutely certain that there are, in the county, the number of active members for whom they have paid dues, and that those members will refund to them the money they have advanced as soon as the subject is presented to them, I should rule that they were justified in making the advance. But, if they have paid a certain amount without being positive that active members stand back of it; if their chief desire has been to represent a certain membership in the state convention, the act is absolutely wrong and morally indefensible. "Let there be a woman back of every ten cents," was Miss Willard's rule for the National. It surely applies as well to state and county unions.

Q.—Is it becoming the custom for unions to have fifty cent dues instead of a dollar, and what do the National Officers think about it?

A.—So far as I know, there has never been an established custom with reference to the amount of local dues, and there certainly is no rule covering that point. The only point which is definitely fixed by the National and state organizations is the per cent per member which shall be paid into their respective treasuries. It rests with the local union to say how much its dues shall be in excess of the demands made upon them for auxiliaryship. There seems, however, to be a growing sentiment in favor of larger dues, and one National officer, at least, regards it as a most favorable indication. It has been one of the mistakes of our organization that it has not called for sufficient money for the general work. No other society, to our knowledge, has so small a membership fee. In the missionary societies of the several churches, the fee is always two cents per week. In even the smallest clubs it is not less than ten cents per month. I believe the majority of women would find it an easy thing to give one dollar per year to the W. C. T. U.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord: for he shall pluck my feet out of the net.—Our help is in the name of the Lord who made heaven and earth.—Psa. 25:15; Psa. 124:8.

THE third district Illinois W. C. T. U. held its annual convention September 13 and 14, at Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago. The following resolution was passed without a dissenting voice: "Resolved, That we use our best efforts to secure the controlling interest in the Temple." A resolution has been sent us from Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins, Cleveland, Ohio. She writes: "September 15, the following resolution was unanimously passed at our county convention, 'Resolved, That we will continue to work and pray for the possession of the Temple as long as there is the least hope of success.'" Mrs. E. R. Collins writes on behalf of the Westfield, New Jersey, W. C. T. U. pledging their sympathy and financial support to the Temple, closing with the following words: "We feel sure the enterprise will not fail, and that in striving to own the beautiful Temple we are carrying out the wish of our beloved leader, Miss Willard." This union completed, in June, the payment of a $100 pledge to the Temple; the treasurer now holds $20 more for the same object.

✠

It is touching to see the interest taken in the "House Beautiful" in far-away lands. From Northcott, Western Australia, we have just received from Mrs. Eva Seabrook, on behalf of the York union, £2; it was accompanied by a most kindly letter.

✠

Another foreign letter comes from Kingston, Jamaica, containing £1 5*s*, sent by Mrs. C. Maddix; most of the money was raised by filling Wheels. A letter has just been received from far-away Alaska, from Mrs. Leslie Butler, of Skaguay. She writes: "The long distance does not take away my desire to see the Temple paid for. I enclose $25 for the fund." Mrs. Caroline McDiarmid, Nanaimo, B. C., sends $1. Mrs. E. A. L. Mott, the able and indefatigable Temple superintendent of North Dakota, has just sent a check for $139; of this amount $62 is for the Preston pledge, and $77 completes the Coopersstown pledge. Fifty dollars has been received from Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward, to apply on the Butler county, Nebraska, pledge.

✠

A young society woman of Chicago, Mrs. M. K. Northam, 5210 Jefferson avenue, was desirous of helping the Temple, and some time ago started on her own responsibility a chain letter. We want to say to all who receive her letter that Mrs. Northam is a noble, true woman, worthy of all confidence.

✠

We regret that our dear sister, Mrs. Rebecca B. Chambers, of Pennsylvania, has felt constrained to send in her resignation as a member of the Board of Temple Trustees, on account of lack of accord with the other members of the board. She was elected a member of the board only the past year, and her great distance from Chicago has hindered her from attending any of the board meetings. Mrs. Fessenden, of Massachusetts, has also resigned; the reason, she states, for her action is the same which she gives in her state paper, wherein she declines re-election as president of the state she has so nobly served as chief officer for so many years—a wornout body which demands rest after so many years of hard service. Mrs. Mary C. Upham, of Wisconsin, sent in her resignation as soon as she was elected president of her state some months ago, on account of the pressure of work which was upon her. She was a valuable member of the board, attending its meetings faithfully, and she is perfectly in accord with the plans of the trustees. It is, therefore, with great regret her resignation has been received.

✠

All money should be sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, and drafts should be made out in the name of Mr. G. B. Shaw, treasurer Temple Trustees.

Our Children.

A Little Boy's Troubles.

I THOUGHT when I'd learned my letters,
That all my troubles were done;
But I find myself mistaken—
They have only just begun.
Learning to read was awful,
But nothing like learning to write,
I'd be sorry to have you tell it,
But my copy-book is a sight.

The ink gets over my fingers,
The pen cuts all sorts of shines;
And won't do at all as I bid it,
The letters won't stay on the lines,
But go up and down and all over,
As though they were dancing a jig—
They are there in all shapes and sizes,
Medium, little and big.

There'd be some comfort in learning
If one could get through; instead
Of that, there are books awaiting,
Quite enough to craze my head,
There's the multiplication table,
And grammar, and—oh, dear me!
There's no good place for stopping,
When one has begun, I see.

My teacher says, little by little
To the mountain top we climb,
It isn't done in a minute,
But only a step at a time;
She says that all the scholars,
And all the wise and learned men,
Had each to begin as I do;
If that's so—where's my pen!

Children's Chorus.

BY MARY L. WYATT.

[Tune, Italian Hymn.]

NOW we our voices raise
And join in loving praise
In chorus free;
We love our native land;
Her hills and valleys grand,
For truth and justice stand,
And liberty.

We love our banner bright
So welcome to the sight
On land or sea.
May God our country bless,
With peace and happiness,
And give our cause success
And victory.

Six for One.

"I SHOULD admire," sighed Aunt Cam, "I should admire to have another cat like Tom! He was jest the smartest cat and the best cat and the handsomest cat I ever sot eyes on—clear Maltese without a white hair on him, the best hunter you ever saw and the knowin'est cat—it did beat all!"

"Too bad he should be pizened!" said Mrs. Smith, sympathizingly. "Aunt Nabby Green has a cat that's the perfect moral of him, as far as looks goes, and she says he's good as gold, but she sets such store by him I don't s'pose she'd part with him, anyhow."

Benny Prince and Nan Holloway, who sat on Aunt Cam's doorstep playing checkers and eating peach-apples, heard the conversation, and both wished they could find a cat to comfort Aunt Cam. All the children loved the dear old lady who was so sweet to them, always had a plate of apples on the light stand from which you were to help yourself, and apparently never failed to have sugar plums in her pocket. The next morning Nan came in hugging a bag that squirmed, and sometimes mewed a bit softly.

"Oh, Aunt Cam!" she cried, "here's two little Maltese kittens. I told our hired man last night about you losing Tom, and he went home and got these for you. Ain't they beauties! and two kittens do play so cute together!"

"You dear child!" said Aunt Cam, fondling the kittens. "Jest like Tom, for all the world—not a white hair on 'em. Thank you, a thousand times!"

And with a kiss and a handful of goodies, Nan hurried off to school.

Before five minutes Benny came along with a gentle old Maltese cat purring in his arms.

"Grandma says she'd jest as soon spare you old Tab as not, for she has three other cats. Run in, Tab, I am late to school!"

And Benny ran off without waiting to hear Aunt Cam's "Thank you, Benny, dear!"

That afternoon Aunt Cam put the kittens down in the cellar, shut old Tab in the woodshed, put on her thimble and went to the sewing circle.

When she came home at dusk, she found a squirming bag on her front porch, and a note from Mrs. Smith tucked under the door. It read: "Aunt Nabby says she wouldn't spare Timothy to anybody but you, but she has two kittens most as big, so you may have him."

She carried in the bag and emptied out Timothy. He was, indeed, the very moral of Tom, and her heart warmed to him at once, in spite of the two kittens down in the cellar and the old cat in the woodshed.

Going on the back porch later, she found there a box with slats nailed over the top, and peering in, saw two half-grown Maltese cats. A roughly scrawled paper lay on the box.

"I'm proper sorry your cat got killed by my rat pizen, so I have brought you two Malties. I hope this will make it alright. John Wilson."
—Our Youth.

A Very Busy Man.

IT is said that a friend once asked an aged man what caused him so often to complain of pain and weariness in the evening.

"Alas!" said he, "I have every day so much to do; for I have two falcons to tame, two hares to keep from running away, two hawks to manage, a serpent to confine, a lion to chain, and a sick man to tend and wait upon."

"Why, you must be joking," said his friend; "surely, no man can have all these things to do at once."

"Indeed, I am not joking," said the old man; "but what I have told you is the sad and sober truth; for the two falcons are my two eyes, which I must diligently guard, lest something should please them which may be hurtful to my salvation; the two hares are my feet, which I must hold back lest they should run after evil objects, and walk in the ways of sin; the two hawks are my two hands, which I must train and keep to work in order that I may be able to provide for myself and for my brethren who are in need; the serpent is my tongue, which I must always keep in with a bridle, lest it should speak anything unseemly; the lion is my heart, with which I have to maintain a continual fight in order that vanity and pride may not fill it, but that the grace of God may dwell and work there; the sick man is my whole body, which is always needing my watchfulness and care. All this daily wears out my strength."—British Christian Endeavor.

Doing and Not Doing.

"SIR," said a lad, coming down to one of the wharfs in Boston, and addressing a well-known merchant, "have you any berth on your ship? I want to earn something."

"What can you do?" asked the gentleman.

"I can try my best to do whatever I am put to," answered the boy.

"What have you done?"

"I have sawed and split all mother's wood for nigh on two years."

"What have you not done?" asked the gentleman, who was a queer sort of questioner.

"Well, sir," answered the boy, after a moment's pause, "I have not whispered in school once for a whole year."

"That's enough," said the gentleman. "You may ship aboard this vessel, and I hope to see you master of it some day. A boy who can master a woodpile and bridle his tongue must be made of good stuff."—Christian Leader.

"EDIE," cried the mother from the hall below, "what's all that noise upstairs? It's shocking." "Oh, it's these two dolls of mine, mamma. I'm going to put them right to bed and see if we can't have a little peace."

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I want to talk to you this week about the pleasure of giving. It is a text from which endless sermons might be preached, but they would not appeal to me as strongly as did the letter we had last week from a little girl in Kansas who picks tomatoes to earn money and always gives the tenth.

What a story of self-denial may be back of that simple statement, for when one earns only a small sum it is not easy to always be willing to give a tenth of it away; but what a pleasure it is, after the gift is made! The habit of giving needs careful cultivation, and its fruits are a thoughtful, unselfish character. All children do not have opportunity to earn and give money, no matter how willing they may be, but there are many other ways of being generous. Give father and mother cheerful obedience, and help in every way; give courtesy to the brothers and sisters, as well as to the occasional guest, and give patience and love to the little ones who demand attention when you want to go out to play. Write and tell me some of the ways in which you are "giving" of your very best.

Lovingly yours,
AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I and my brother Willard would like to join the Cozy Corner. I am ten years old and Willard seven. We have two little sisters, Grace and Hazel. Grandma and mamma belong to the W. C. T. U. and grandma takes THE UNION SIGNAL; I like to read the Children's Page. My brother says when he gets big he wants to go round and tell men to stop drinking whisky and being bad. When I was two years old I gave two dollars to the Temple.

Lovingly, your little niece and nephew.
DOLLIE AND WILLARD MCDOWELL.
Moundville, Mo.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little boy six years old. I have two little sisters. I belong to the Junior Temple. I would like to join the Cozy Corner.

Your nephew,
Shelton, Wash. CLARE WEHES.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a girl thirteen years old. My mother belongs to the W. C. T. U. and I belong to the Good Templars. We have a Junior Temple here and I am vice-templar and mamma is superintendent. I am sorry to say that we have seven saloons here.

Your loving niece,
Shelton, Wash. RUBY EMMOTT.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

39.

HIDDEN HEROES.

1. For supper we had plenty of milk, and samp, so no one went hungry.
2. The country hobs on seeing this were surprised.
3. If we accede to the demand made, we yield a right.
4. The name written in the book was C. H. Leyden.
5. We saw the soldiers rush after the enemy.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 22.

38. I like little pussy,
Her coat is so warm,
And if I don't hurt her,
She'll do me no harm.

So I'll not pull her tail,
Nor drive her away,
But pussy and I
Very gently will play.

Correct answer to No. 36 was sent by Emily Kennard, Lebanon, Tenn.

All communications for Children's Page should be sent to THE UNION SIGNAL office, The Temple, Chicago.

UNION SIGNAL
AND WHITE RIBBON
WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON, MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Lord gave the word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host.—Psa. 68:11.

Wine or Water?

IT is very easy, when a ship is to be christened, for those who advocate the use of wine to ask and answer questions in such a way as to indicate that it is, after all, a matter of no consequence whether wine or water be used. Some have evolved the conclusion that temperance people ought to be glad to have champagne used to lessen the amount, and in the same breath they aver that in either case there will not be one more drunkard nor one less; and objectors generally rush on to fortify themselves behind a foolish superstition worthy of barbarians, to the effect that a ship must be christened with wine to be lucky.

Just before the Kentucky was honored by the water poured upon her by Miss Bradley, we spoke under the caption, "Hoodoos," of the Constitution (Old Ironsides) and the Hartford, both of which were christened with water, and both having a record of glory and honor not equaled by any other American vessels. In the same connection a dozen other ships were named that had followed the more common custom, and the wine had not saved them from most dire calamities, and in some cases not even from the name "Hoodoo." There is nothing of luck or otherwise in either the water or wine, and it is amazing that intelligent people are willing to openly confess that they believe evil spirits people the earth and darken the air, and that they can be exorcised by this or that procedure. To be sure they generally take refuge behind the sailor and profess to speak for his comfort and happiness, but this is only a subterfuge, as our sailors are neither ignoramuses nor idiots. If there were no other argument against the use of wine but this, it would be sufficient to say, there is a superstition connected with it and therefore its use should be discontinued.

One very ingenious wine advocate objects to water because it suggests "a likeness to the great sacrament of holy baptism." As wine was used by Christ in instituting the holy sacrament of the Lord's Supper we would inquire how about the suggestiveness there? Is one sacrament more holy than another? According to this objector certain large bodies of Christians use fermented wine for the Eucharist and that alone is wine—is orthodox. This intensifies the suggestiveness, for it is good "orthodox," intoxicating wine that is used on vessels. The argument then should run: Water suggests holy baptism, therefore water should not be used. Intoxicating wine suggests the holy Eucharist, therefore it should be used!

Temperance people prefer water because wine is associated with a superstitious belief in the minds of the ignorant at the present time, and its use is but a remnant of that which came down from the libations poured out in olden times to Bacchus the god of drunkenness; and because, on the other hand, it is connected in a religious sense with the words christen and Christ. They do not wish the product of decay, that which has wrought more havoc to mankind than all the wars in the world, to hold a place of honor in a social or public function. They do not wish it to be associated in the minds of the young with the sentiment of patriotism. They see something to be gained in making water play a part in a great object lesson which will be heralded throughout the public press, and read by all the boys and girls. The choice is between saying pure, sparkling, health-giving water is a good thing, it is worthy of use in a great public demonstration; or, wine is a good thing, it should be honored in setting our vessels apart for use by our great Republic. Which of these two, wine or water, we ask, do we wish the on-coming citizens of this nation to regard as a "good creature of God"?

The Fruits of Christianity.

A GREAT deal is heard nowadays about the excellence of the teachings of the moral philosophers of antiquity; and we are told that the precepts of Confucius, Seneca and Epictetus are in no way inferior to the teachings of Christ. But such a claim by no means affords an objection to Christianity. The world was but little benefited by the great moralists, excellent though their teachings were, while Christ has been the means of a moral revolution. Wherever Christianity has gone it has wrought great changes, and races of people, among the most depraved on earth, have been transformed by the power of the gospel into civilized and enlightened people. A striking illustration of this is afforded by the fact that although only sixty years ago the inhabitants of the Fiji Islands were cannibals, their descendants, through missionary effort, have become Christians, and a little over a year ago gave evidence of the reality of their conversion by sending four thousand dollars to India for the relief of sufferers from the famine.

There is nothing in mere human teaching to uplift humanity. Neither the great Pagan philosophers, nor the leading infidels, of whom so much praise is heard in certain circles, ever improved the moral tone of society. The condition of China to-day furnishes a sufficient commentary upon the inability of the teachings of Confucius to elevate mankind. The great French Revolution, with its Reign of Terror, was the legitimate result of the propagation of the teachings of Voltaire and Rousseau. Christianity only is capable of raising humanity. Without the religion of Christ there is no true civilization. People may be cultured, as were the ancient Greeks, but it is upon the transforming power of Christ in the lives of men and women that the blessings of brotherhood, home, family and society depend.

And, in spite of their professed enmity to Christianity, infidels cannot help but recognize the advantages of living in a Christian country. They well know that life is not held to be of much account nor is property secure in lands where the gospel of Christ has not gone, and they take care to reside where they can enjoy the blessings that are due to Christianity.

Imperialism.

A CRY has been raised in some quarters that one of the most serious dangers threatening our nation at present is that we shall be diverted to a policy of imperialism. It is asserted by foreign critics and echoed by some at home that our victories over Spain will arouse in us an unquenchable thirst for conquest and the extension of our territory. We admit that this is a possible danger but we feared it more a few weeks ago than now when the temper of our people has had opportunity to show itself.

It was no appeal to national pride or desire for conquest which drove the nation into war. It was Senator Proctor's calm, judicial statement in the senate confirming the worst that the newspapers had told of the sufferings of the Cubans. Even the sentiment expressed by "Remember the Maine," in the limited extent to which it obtained, had its rise far more in the universal indignation against Spanish cruelty in general than in any feeling of mere revenge. The disavowal by our government of desire for increase of territory and assurance that Cuba would not be annexed to this country met the universal approbation of the people. Since the war has closed with the complete victory of our arms, we fail to see the change of sentiment claimed by some. It is true that the events of the war have shown us the need of holding Porto Rico for similar emergencies, but there is absolutely no disposition on the part of our people to enter upon a career of conquest. It is true the argument has been advanced that we need the Philippines for the protection of our commerce, but it has been urged chiefly in answer to the far more general sentiment that we do not want to be troubled with the care of a people who know nothing of self-government. This, indeed, is the form our selfishness takes. We have strong sympathy for any people suffering under foreign misrule, but have aversion to undertaking the education of any such people in the art of self-government. We are willing to help them free themselves from the tyrant's yoke but, when that is done, we prefer to leave them to work out their own political salvation, however unfitted they may be for the task.

Very strong opposition was expressed to the annexation of Hawaii on the ground that we had all we could do with our own home problems without attempting to take care of a people who would have to be trained in the first principles of government. The same feeling has been generally expressed concerning Cuba and prevails even more widely with regard to the Philippines. We have had no experience in governing other peoples and have not the slighest desire to attempt it. The arguments which have served in the least to overcome our repugnance to maintaining any oversight over these people are those based upon their need of our help. The declaration of the native insurgents in the Philippines that they are ready to lay down their arms as soon as they are assured the islands will be annexed to either Great Britain or the United States, or that either of these countries will establish a protectorate over them, the demand of the business men of Manila, Spanish and English alike, that the United States retain Manila, are appeals which strike to the heart and conscience of our liberty-loving people. These are the considerations which will induce us to retain the Philippines, if hold them we do. And we believe that our mission as a nation is thus to befriend the weak and oppressed and carry our free institutions and our Christian civilization to all the world. There is no danger in responding to such appeals for help from the oppressed if we steadily refuse to be ourselves enriched by their need.

A Little too Much, Brother Hoar.

IN an address at Bryn Mawr College commencement, Senator Hoar, speaking upon the power of good women, said:

"The fate of the republic depends upon the sentiments which inspire the individual citizen, and through him the councils and action of the republic. Whether the controlling motives in our national conduct are to be ambition, avarice, glory, power, and wealth, or justice, freedom, kindness, and the kindred tendencies, will depend on the individual quality of the individual citizen, and that in turn is to depend upon the character and influence of American women."

It may do very well to use this kind of a pry occasionally to spur women on, but we confess to being rather "tired" of it. We have been carrying Adam's troubles a great while and do not feel equal to the beginnings and endings of everything. It's hard enough to be held responsible for ancient civilization, and now if we are to answer for the present complex and awful condition of modern life and character, we think even the strongest will be disposed to kick—metaphorically speaking. We have gotten somewhat accustomed to being blamed for the Jewish monarchy, for Chaldæ, Assyria, Babylonia, Media, Persia, the Dark Ages, the fall of the Roman Empire and men in general, but please do not hold us responsible for this republic. We've done the best we could by it, but until we can use the slipper when it will do the most good, our influence is too limited, too circumscribed to warrant our being held responsible for everything.

Helen Gould's Service to Humanity.

WHATEVER may have been Jay Gould's motives in amassing his vast fortune, it is certain that the fortune itself, such part of it as is in the hands of his daughter Helen, is now a blessing to the world. As her annual income amounts to $1,000,000, it is easily seen that Miss Gould's power of doing good is not seriously limited through lack of means, though it is quite possible that not even this vast sum equals Helen Gould's will to serve humanity. It is impossible to tell all that she is doing, for, in so far as it is possible to preserve such secrecy, she does not let her left hand know what her right hand does. But many of her good works are on too large a scale to be concealed. Near her home at Lyndhurst, she has established a Fresh Air and Cripples' Home, where, during the summer months, hundreds of city children are cared for and educated. She herself lives and dresses in the simplest manner, and has nothing to do with "society," the upper ten society, in which her wealth would give her high position. Her various charities necessitate many helpers, all of whom become her personal friends. Before her father's death she took a full law course in order to be able to manage the fortune she knew was to be hers, and is as independent of lawyers as her father was before her.

Since the outbreak of the war with Spain she has proved herself to have a deep and practical patriotism which shows itself chiefly in providing for the needs of the soldiers, especially the sick and wounded. At her own expense she has sent car loads of provisions and delicacies to the front and to the hospitals. But money is not all that she has given to the service of her country. In this work, as in her private charities, she has shown that she possesses the qualities of mind necessary both for the amassing and the wise expenditure of great wealth. William E. Curtis, writing to the Chicago Record from the hospital at Montauk Point, N. Y., thus refers to her: "If the President should place Miss Gould in charge of this hospital, and make the surgeon-general and all his assistants bow down to her, it would not only be a blessing to the soldiers, but the recognition of a patriotism, a generosity, a devotion, and executive ability that surpasses anything that has been shown in any of the staff corps of the army thus far. Miss Gould will have her reward hereafter, if the promises of Scripture are fulfilled, but the remarkable genius for organization and direction she has inherited from her father should be utilized by the government."

We agree fully with this sentiment, and are positive that both church and state would be greatly strengthened if they would act upon the same common-sense principle with reference to many others of their gifted daughters.

Mrs. Booth's Gratitude to Miss Willard.

FOR lack of space we omitted the following paragraph from Mrs. Bramwell Booth's characterization of Miss Willard in a late issue:

"There will be other tongues to speak of what she has done for women as women, but personally I am more grateful to her for her brave stand in this matter than perhaps for anything else. She believed in her sex, and in the incompleteness of man alone for any of the important positions of life. 'No sex in citizenship' was her battlecry, and to us Salvationists, one of the few peoples who are able to say our religious organization is free and equal, there being 'neither male nor female in Christ Jesus' with us, Miss Willard was endeared by her championship of woman's cause. She writes, 'I do not recall the time when my inmost spirit did not perceive the injustice done to woman; did not revolt against the purely artificial limitations which hedge her from free and full participation in every avocation and profession to which her gifts incline her; and when I did not appreciate to some extent the state's irreparable loss in losing from halls of legislation and courts of justice the woman's judgment and the mother's heart.'"

MRS. CLARA B. COLBY is writing an interesting series of letters to the Woman's Tribune from Chickamauga, where, it will be remembered, she joined her husband, General Colby's command, with passports from the war department. Speaking of the woful record of the military camps in general, she points out the real source of the trouble as viewed from her point of vantage. She says:

Our government has copied the German system, which makes the medical department of the service independent from the military, yet without that efficiency and thorough organization which prevail in that nation which is always on a war footing. It is an innovation in this country, and its practice has shown it to be entirely unsuitable for dealing with a volunteer army. Under this system, as soon as the sick soldier passes from regimental hospital to the division or general hospital, he is absolutely removed from all control or relationship to his colonel, his brigade and division commanders, and even that of the commander of the camp, as if he were a subject of the Khan of Tartary. The loss in personal contact, sympathy and responsibility is immeasurable, while it is just here in this transfer of authority that all the delays and failures and blunders have their origin and difficulty of bringing the guilty parties to account.

This separation of interests has made the officers powerless, given the men a feeling of aversion to the hospital service, as if it were wholly foreign to them, and has at the same time so multiplied red tape obstructions that the medical department has been baffled at every turn.

MRS. MARGARET G. W. MERRILL, of Fryeburg, Me., furnishes us with this interesting item concerning a temperance church in Wales, called the Tabernacle. She says of it:

"This church is in a quiet village in the lovely valley of the Tivy, in Wales. It was built solely in the cause of temperance, and in 1882 became entirely detached from any denominational associations. Both minister, Rev. Wm. Rees, and people, a society of 160 members, enjoy this freedom. The church stands on leasehold ground as their property, without any trust deed to prevent them from determining their own religious and spiritual standards. Both church and parsonage are free from debt."

Personals.

MRS. LUCY S. BLANCHARD, a white-ribboner, has been nominated school superintendent for Los Angeles county, Cal.

SINCE the death of Miss Lodie Reed, press superintendent of the World's W. C. T. U., Miss Agnes E. Slack, Honorary Secretary, is acting in this capacity for the present.

MISS CLARA A. STEPHENS, financial agent for the Iowa W. C. T. U., and long connected with the W. T. P. A., made a short call at THE UNION SIGNAL office last week.

MRS. HELEN STODDARD, president of Texas, made us a cheery call on her way from Bay View, Mich., to her home in Texas. She was one of the speakers at the W. C. T. U. Institute held at Bay View.

MISS FANNIE M. PUGH, of Oakland, Cal., has been nominated for state superintendent of public instruction by the prohibition party. Miss Pugh is a teacher, and it is believed is well qualified for the position.

MRS. E. B. INGALLS, of St. Louis, writes that Mrs. M. M. Clardy, who was the first president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., is sick at the residence of her son, 3683 Cook avenue, St. Louis, and that she would be glad to hear from old friends.

MRS. LEONORA LAKE, president of the Catholic Woman's Total Abstinence Society, called at Headquarters on her way to speak at the Maine state convention. She was somewhat distressed because her only son has been sent to Denver, Col., on account of lung trouble.

MRS. SUSAN S. FESSENDEN, W. C. T. U. president of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Ruth B. Baker, the state corresponding secretary, gave addresses on the battleship Massachusetts lately, at a meeting held by the state union. The choir of ladies was led by Mrs. H. T. Todd. Great interest was aroused.

MRS. S. C. O. UPTON, of Lincoln, Neb., state superintendent of the evangelistic department of the Nebraska W. C. T. U., has returned home, much recuperated in health, from her summer rest in Washington, New York, Long Branch, and other points of interest. She is the candidate, on the Prohibition ticket, for state superintendent of public instruction.

MRS. S. M. WALKER, state president of the Nebraska W. C. T. U., spoke, by special invitation of the program committee, before the young people's society of the First Baptist Church of Lincoln, Neb., Sunday evening, September 11. She was well received by the pastor of the church and the congregation, and had opportunity to dispense valuable information in regard to our work, which she did in her usual clear-cut style.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

A Gratifying Testimonial.

ONE of our Japanese exchanges comments as follows upon the position Clara Parrish has made for herself and the cause in that country and her departure in the near future:

"We are very sorry to announce that Miss Clara Parrish will leave Japan for China and other countries of the Orient in October. Her two years' sojourn in Japan has been of untold blessing to the temperance cause. She has won many hearts, and made a host of friends. Her devotion to the cause will be an inspiration to all workers in Japan—male and female—for many years to come. We shall follow her with our prayers, and we shall watch her movements and labors as she goes from country to country as the representative of one of the blessed agencies for the amelioration of life's woes and miseries, ever praying that God's richest blessing may rest upon all her labors.

"We understand that Mrs. Large has been appointed Miss Parrish's successor. The Central Temperance Committee, at its last meeting, passed resolutions, promising to coöperate with Mrs. Large in the position to which she has been appointed. We wish her great success in this good work.

"The following letter has just been received from Lady Henry Somerset, in reply to the letter from the Central committee, asking that Miss Parrish be continued one year longer in Japan:

"EASTNOR CASTLE, Ledbury, June 9, 1898.

"DEAR FRIENDS:—I have received your letter in which you have written so kindly and with such great appreciation of Miss Clara Parrish's work in Japan. I should be so glad if your request could have been granted for Miss Parrish to stay with you longer, but I understand that since your letter was written she has made other plans, and I can only therefore refer you to her for her decision in the matter, as I understand that her arrangements are already made.

"With best and prayerful wishes for the success of the work in Japan, believe me,

(Signed) Yours in the best bonds,
"ISABEL SOMERSET."

A Word to the Girls.

ALTHOUGH there is no legitimate knowledge, the acquisition of which may not prove useful to you, one of life's great needs is that you learn to care for, and if need be, fashion your own wardrobe. A wardrobe is one of the prime necessities, and be it ample or scanty, it is constantly needing repairs or renovating of some sort. It is difficult, inconvenient and often impossible to hire this done neatly, and mother, bless her willing hands, can not always attend to it; you frequently have leisure which could be well employed at such work. A few stitches, a little cleansing to remove unsightly spots, a bit of toning up with lace, ribbon or other dainty addition, will take the slovenly look from a dress or wrap; a few slight alterations easily made will often give a toilet more of an up-to-date look. Nothing adds so much to a woman's grace of carriage and ease of manner as the consciousness that she is well and neatly dressed; therefore, have your outfit as costly as your purse will, by a well-balanced system of expenditure, permit. Learn to take the "stitch in time," to replace the fastenings neatly.

I call to mind an otherwise charming girl, frequently at leisure from her office work, who can not so much as supply a missing button as it should be done, not to speak of repairing a skirt where the foot binding is frayed. Have your shoes, with their laces or buttons, as neat as possible for comfort, and learn to mend your hose nicely; a hole in the stocking is a badge of untidiness. Train your eye so that you will know how to adjust any of the milliner's work that has not been tightly fastened; a lady's hat is a very noticeable part of her attire. Learn to arrange ribbon tastefully and neatly, to tie the modish bow correctly.

Try making garments for yourself, cutting them by the perfectly fitting patterns so readily purchased, so that you may learn how their parts are put together and get some ideas about using material and the placing of patterns. It is important that you learn these things, even if, as is frequently the case nowadays, it is more wise and economical to buy clothing ready made, that you may be able to strengthen the weak sewing, make the slight changes which your figure or the trained eye demands, and add the many little finishing touches which render garments more neat and serviceable. Learn to darn neatly, and just how to fasten the little breaks which will come, especially in the waist seams. Learn these things, and yet learn as well to take the best allowable care of the wardrobe at all times, that it may the less frequently require your skill as needle woman, or the application of brush, ammonia, gasoline or other renovator.

MARY ALICE BROWN.

Oxford, Pa.

The Clara Parrish Fund.

THE receipts from the various states since November 1, 1897, have been as follows: Maine, $3; Massachusetts, $15.50; Rhode Island, $23.10; Connecticut, $15.67; New York, $87.05; New Jersey, $16.60; Pennsylvania, $9.27; Ohio, $1.25; District of Columbia, $3.50; Virginia, $32; Indiana, $3; Illinois, $5; Michigan, $4; North Dakota, $36.41. Total, $253.35.

In addition to this $200 was received from the sale of Y Almanacs. I hope soon to hear from states which have not contributed. Please send in all contributions as soon as possible, so that I may have a full report to send to the National Convention. Yours in the work,

MARY CAMPBELL WELLS,
Custodian.

Lock Box R. Erie, Ill.

A Point to be Remembered.

MARY MCKAY SCOTT, superintendent of Y work for the Dominion of Canada, makes the following point in a letter to her constituency, which applies to Y unions everywhere:

"Show more loyalty to your provincial unions. What must we say of a provincial officer who does not think it necessary for a Y union to affiliate with the provincial union, or does not see the use of sending delegates to a provincial convention? There is a danger of attaching too much importance to conventions and ignoring the daily hand-to-hand fight with the liquor traffic, but there is another danger also of individual aggrandizement and sectionalism and a forgetting of the chain in which we are only links."

World's W. C. T. U.

Victoria, Australia.

WE are slowly and steadily pressing onward in the Master's service. It was reported at the executive meeting twelve unions had been visited during the preceding month by the Colonial president, secretary and superintendent. Reports show that the unions have been benefited by the officers' visits. Four unions have increased their membership.

A letter has been sent to the chief inspector of police drawing his attention to the statement which appeared in the Melbourne Herald that there was no woman in attendance at the N. Melbourne lockup to search female prisoners. No reply has been received up to date.

Mrs. Nicholls, Australasian president, purposes visiting as many unions as possible in Victoria. Mrs. Press, Colonial president, also intends devoting two months to visiting country unions and giving lantern entertainments which will be instructive as well as attractive. It is the intention of the education department to insert in the monthly school paper extracts on temperance physiology from "The Pathfinder Series," used largely in American schools.

Good reports still continue to come from Isabel Somerset House and the Frances Willard Club. These institutions have proved a blessing to many girls. Poverty exists to such an extent in one district that it was decided to establish a soup kitchen during the winter months. One little chap, belonging to New Market L. T. L., sold fifty copies of the memorial number of the White Ribbon Signal. We might say, "Unions, please copy."

Bendigo Y's have taken up the temperance scientific examination heartily. They also had "Newspaper Day." The late press superintendent sent a most carefully prepared manuscript paper full of pithy temperance information in prose and verse, entailing much research and painstaking preparation.

A pink social was held in the Temperance Hall; the Y's wore pink aprons, decorations, and icing on the cakes were of the same color.

The W. C. T. U. have been successful in obtaining a booth at the Royal Agricultural show, to be held in Melbourne at the end of August.

JENNIE ANDERSON,
Colonial Correspondent.

Crayford House, Creek St., Bendigo, Vic.

Miss Agnes Slack in Norway.

THE members and friends of the white ribbon army in Norway have had the pleasure of listening to one of the most enthusiastic and warm-hearted temperance advocates that has ever visited our shores. Miss Agnes Slack "took her hearers by storm." That's how we express it here; in England you would say, I suppose, "brought down the house." Acting as interpreter I caught the first sounds of a strong and effective voice, and although used to that kind of business, she warmed me up with volcanic outbursts, scarce giving me time to do duty as a sounding board. But the burning words caught and spread enthusiasm and interest all around. More than sixty joined at the last meeting in Christiania, and the impression made on the congregations was evidently deep and we believe it will be lasting. Miss Slack has not visited Norway in vain.

A reception was given her in the beautiful Temperance Hall, Christiania, last Saturday evening. She came from Trondhjim that day and was very tired, but spoke words of encouragement. The following Sunday she spoke to a large congregation in the Methodist church at five o'clock. Her last meeting during her short stay here was given in the Temperance Hall Sunday evening, at eight o'clock. The Third Church, Methodist, gave over their service in this hall for the occasion.

We trust God's richest blessing will always attend the work of this devout lady.

G. B. BARRATT,
Pastor First Methodist Church.

Sdfienberggd 2a, Christiania.

World's Wave Crests.

MISS OTTO says some of the brightest conversions last year in Hirosaki were from the non-Christian members of the temperance society organized by Miss Parrish in October, when fifty women came to hear her speak.

MISS LOTTIE WIGGINS, who was chairman of the World's Convention committee last year, has been addressing meetings very successfully in Nova Scotia. At one of these in Canso forty dollars was subscribed for the plebiscite.

THE New Brunswick Provincial W. C. T. U. is preparing to make franchise the particular department on which to concentrate all effort in November. This is a suggestion of the provincial superintendent of that department, Mrs. R. A. B. Phillips, of Fredericton.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET and Miss Agnes Slack are considering the various invitations for the next World's Convention, and it is not improbable that Scotland will be decided upon for October, 1899. More definite information on the subject will be given out very soon.

THE Royal Templars of Temperance, through Mr. G. H. Lees, of Hamilton, Ont., have donated two thousand paper back Testaments to the Dominion W. C. T. U. These have been apportioned to the provinces, the provincial corresponding secretary telling Mr. Lees to whom they were to be sent.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

News From the Field.

[State reporters are earnestly requested to send no news over two months old. Brief and frequent reports are preferable.—THE EDITORS.]

Western Washington.

THE state convention met this year at Centralia. It was well attended and very inspiring. Cordial addresses of welcome were given by the mayor and representatives of various organizations. These were replied to most happily by Miss A. L. A. Murcutt, our young Australian sister. Miss Murcutt has very vivid descriptive powers, rising at times into eloquence rarely surpassed, and this combined with her irresistible, sympathetic good nature, captured her audience.

The president's address was full of good things, cheering in its account of the past, stimulating for the future. Superintendents' reports were supposed to be limited to three minutes, but many of them could not be compassed in that length of time and were so bright and interesting that the readers were unanimously requested to "go on." Among a number of such, perhaps special mention might be made of the evangelistic report, by Mrs. M. O. Stubbs, of Tacoma. It told not only of meetings held and literature distributed, but of blessed results, many souls brought to the knowledge and love of Jesus.

Mrs. Anna Riggs, of Portland, Ore., was presented to the convention, and spoke in behalf of The Northwest White Ribboner, of which she is editor. This paper was adopted as our state official organ, and a goodly number of subscriptions for it were taken.

An interesting feature of the convention was a literature booth, where each state superintendent of a department had (or should have had) on sale nickel packages of the leaflets, etc., best calculated to further the work of her especial department. Contest medals and several helpful books were also on sale here.

Doubtless the greatest attraction of the convention was Mrs. Maude L. Greene, with her inimitable chalk talks. The meetings in which she had a place on the program were noticeably full, and with her magic crayons she drove home to the hearts of her captivated audiences truths which would linger there long after mere words would be forgotten. With Mrs. Greene was Miss Hattie L. Henderson, also a National organizer, who conducted a query-box, led an "experience meeting," assisted in the memorial service and in other ways added much to the helpfulness of the convention.

The memorial service was a very impressive one. Last days and last words of our dear leader were recalled by hearts and to hearts in which she is forever enshrined.

The affairs of the White Shield Home were discussed, and it was decided to retain the institution in our own hands rather than to accept the financial aid and accompanying supervision of Mr. Chas. Crittenton. It was also stated that the home was not designed so much for hardened offenders as for young girls who had been betrayed and were needing shelter for the first time.

The last evening at Centralia was given up to a gold medal contest, held in the opera house, which was taxed to its utmost seating capacity. The contestants all acquitted themselves admirably, and after Miss Murcutt had presented the medal to the successful one, a local business firm surprised each of the competitors with a dainty spoon—souvenir of the flagship Olympia. This was followed by music by Professor Westendorf, of the state reform school and some of his pupils.

Election of officers was speedily gotten through with, our loved and efficient president, Miss Mary L. Page, of Olympia, being again elected, as were also the treasurer, Miss Clara Ansorge, of Shelton, and the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Alice Ridout, of Tacoma. Mrs. M. O. Stubbs was chosen first vice-president, and Mrs. Ellen K. Simison, of Seattle, recording secretary.

Thus closed, what delegates and strangers united in pronouncing one of the best conducted and most helpful conventions they had ever attended. There were many good things in the way of recitations, drills, music, papers, etc., which but for lack of space should each have special mention.

Mrs. Greene and Miss Henderson have made a very successful tour of the state this summer. These workers have been most beneficial to the cause. Miss Henderson's "workers' conferences" are full of new and helpful suggestions to local white-ribboners, while Mrs. Greene's chalk-work fascinated old and young. Her pictures of the little child and the crouching tiger transfixed by the swift arrow of "law," of "our American reconcentradoes" and numerous others will long be carried in many memories. She deals telling blows for equal suffrage and for prohibition, and tobacco users who listen to and watch her must wish they could take their places with Korah, Dathan and Abiram.

Some of our local unions have been "out camping" through this unusually hot summer, but are now taking up work again in the interest of the suffrage amendment, which is to be voted on by the men of Washington this coming November. Suffrage contests are being gotten up, literature distributed and petitions circulated. About nineteen-twentieths of our Washington women sign these petitions when presented, and yet the old argument is still heard that "women do not want to vote." The opposition is also busy, and anti-suffrage literature (?), weak and pointless and dealing chiefly in undignified caricature and ridicule, which yet carries weight with a certain class, is being industriously circulated. But we are working and praying and hoping. God speed the right!

LAVEINE ROBERTSON SHERWOOD,
State Reporter, Everett.

Notice.

My convictions not being in harmony with the methods and policy of the Board of Temple Trustees, I hereby give notice that I have resigned membership in the same, and am no longer a part of that body.

REBECCA B. CHAMBERS.

"A PERFECT FOOD—as Wholesome as it is Delicious."

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
BREAKFAST COCOA
"Has stood the test of more than 100 years' use among all classes, and for purity and honest worth is unequalled."
—Medical and Surgical Journal.
Costs less than ONE CENT a Cup.
Trade-Mark on Every Package.
WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.,
TRADE-MARK. Established 1780. DORCHESTER, MASS.

New York.

REPORTS of annual county conventions have been coming ever since my last letter, and as I read the glowing descriptions of these enthusiastic meetings with their splendid reports from the local unions, the earnest addresses of the county presidents, the eloquence of the public speeches, the beautiful decorations, the welcomes, the music, the cordial coöperation of pastors, the bounteous hospitality and enjoyable social hours, I am moved to exclaim with poor "Glory McQuirk," "Such lots of good times in the world and I ain't in 'em." Then comes the heart-warming thought that these good times are duplicated over and over again in every county in this great nation where the white-ribbon star-spangled banner is unfurled (and is there a county now where it is not?) and that all of us, everywhere, can have a share in just such good times. And so it is not necessary to tell about each one separately in the Field news, for just the mention of annual convention calls up memories in every white-ribboner's heart which enables each one to fill out the report to the minutest detail.

As state superintendent of press work, I am most pleased with the open hospitality of the county and local newspapers of our state, shown by the long, detailed descriptions which they print of these various conventions. Reports have been received from the counties of Allegany, Broome, Chautauqua, Franklin, Ontario, Saratoga, Schenectady and Wyoming. Among the speakers who are warmly praised are Miss Belle Kearney, Miss Celia Hutton, Mrs. Mabel Conklin, Mrs. L. E. Bailey and Mrs. Jennie Fowler Willing. Ontario decided to finish paying for their tablet in Willard Hall. They have gained 139 members this year. The L. T. L. and Y Branches had a part in the convention proceedings. The Manchester Legion and the Geneva union were awarded the county banners for the greatest increase in membership.

Saratoga convention entertained fraternal delegates from five counties. Mrs. L. E. Bailey has added to Wyoming county a new union of fifty-two members, which was represented at the convention. This county has gained eighty-eight members this year.

The war has given the department of soldiers and sailors unusual opportunities for activity, and the unions in New York, Kings, Queens, Suffolk and Richmond counties, in and near New York harbor, have been particularly zealous in this work. Mrs. M. A. Burdick, county superintendent of New York, is doing good work on the ships and among seamen on shore as well, in the Marine hospital especially. By her arrangement, our state president, Mrs. Boole, recently held a religious service on board the U. S. ship Harvard. A number of young people from Prohibition Park went with Mrs. Boole. They carried over four hundred bouquets and every soldier and sailor on the vessel had one. There had not been a religious service on the vessel for more than two months, nor had the men had an opportunity to go to church. So they enjoyed the service, particularly the singing. The men in the sick bay were also read to and prayed with.

MAY MORGAN MCKOON,
State Reporter, Long Eddy.

Louisiana.

THE board of trustees of the W. C. T. U. restaurant in New Orleans has achieved a signal success. A commodious four-story building has been leased on one of the principal streets of the city, and it was formally opened September 12 for their lunch room. The president of the board, Mrs. A. M. Zable, with her able assistants, Miss A. Deacon, Mrs. S. S. Bothick, Mrs. M. A. Reiley, Mrs. J. N. Mackie and Mrs. A. J. Lyons, carried out the plans and the change was made from the old place on Gravier street to its present attractive site at 303 and 305 St. Charles street. The enterprise has grown from a small beginning seven years ago, to its present proportions and now enters on a new era of usefulness under auspicious circumstances.

The first floor of the building is devoted to the dining-room, and is pleasant and accessible to their patrons. It is near the St. Charles Hotel, and we trust that here white-ribbon workers throughout the state, as well as from other states, will find pleasant and profitable companionship and entertainment. The hall, on the second floor, has been rented to the Central union for headquarters, and also for the meetings of the executive committee of the state organization.

This is the fulfillment of a cherished dream of Mrs. Sarah Dalton, the mother of Mrs. Zable, and one of the charter members of the Central union. In feeble old age and blindness she collected the nucleus of "the headquarters' fund," and it is now the happy privilege of the daughter to carry out her wishes, as a memorial to the beloved mother long since deceased.

The Central union has thus taken a step towards the permanent W. C. T. U. headquarters in New Orleans, which is the aim of these hard-worked, devoted women and the prayer of Mrs. Dalton.

Mrs. Zable, president of the first district, has been obliged to resign. The numerous duties of the state corresponding secretary, president of the restaurant board, and also president of the Central union, was quite work enough for one so capable and willing even as Mrs. Zable, without the district work, and her resignation was accepted. Mrs. S. S. Bothick was elected to the position.

There are seven active unions and several L. T. L's in the district, with a small balance in the treasury to begin the district campaign.

LURY GOULD BALDWIN,
State Reporter, Baldwin.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

Will all the original Crusaders who are expecting to be at the St. Paul Convention, kindly send to me their names at the earliest possible moment? This Convention, as you all know, will be the twenty-fifth since the Crusade, and although we are always anxious to give the Crusaders a place of honor, it is especially desired that this year we shall know who will be with us, in order that their presence may be definitely prepared for. Year by year their ranks are growing thinner; year by year the band of Crusaders upon the other side is being augmented. Let us give all honor to those who remain.

I am also especially anxious to know as soon as possible what states are to be entitled to the privileges of benefit night at the coming National Convention. Those privileges, you will remember, are accorded to the states which have made a gain of five hundred in paid-up membership during the year. We are earnestly hoping that the states thus represented this year may be greater in number than at any previous Convention since this plan originated. Please bear in mind also, the banners which Miss Willard promised to the state, district, county and local unions making the largest gain in membership during the year. I have already stated in my column, but will state again, on the principle of "line upon line, precept upon precept," that we must look to the state officers for the information as to the district, county and local unions entitled to this banner. The state making the largest gain will of course show in the treasurer's report. Will you be kind enough to exercise great care in ascertaining these points, as it would be a great pity to have this last offer of our beloved Chieftain unavailable through lack of careful reporting?

Will the local unions which observed the day of prayer called for on Good Friday last, please notify me? The question is not incorporated in the National corresponding secretary's blanks, but both the National superintendent of the evangelistic department and myself will be glad to have data with reference to this.

Many of the National organizers are in the field, and from the state officers come most encouraging reports of their work. Mrs. Harford is in Oklahoma Territory and is doing very good work there. She writes from Kansas, just before going into the territory: "I have organized four unions on four consecutive evenings, and at not one meeting, because of the harvest work, could the service begin before 9 P. M." Surely this is a most encouraging report. The Kansas plan of keeping one organizer in the field constantly throughout the year is one which I most heartily recommend to other states and it is encouraging to know that Mrs. Harford's collections have in nearly every district paid her expenses and in the majority of cases left a small surplus in the district treasury.

Mrs. Fields and Mrs. Skelton are in Minnesota and will work there until the time of the National Convention. Mrs. Bullock and her daughter are in Indiana and have other engagements in the middle west up to the time of the Convention. Mrs. Law has been working in Michigan since her excellent work for the plebiscite in Canada. Mrs. Unruh is in Montana, and the others are busy in the various fields. Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart, Maryland's efficient Y secretary, would be very glad to make engagements en route to the National Convention. Miss Stewart is skilful in the use of the stereopticon and has two illustrated lectures, "Famous Faces and Affairs Afield," and "Echoes of a Great Convention." She has also an illustrated song service which is highly spoken of. The convention lecture is an admirable description of the World's Convention at Toronto. Besides her efficient work in her own state, Miss Stewart has worked in Pennsylvania and everywhere gives great satisfaction. She may be addresssed, as to terms and dates, at White Hall, Chestertown, Md.

My Notes this week seem to be largely composed of requests, but I have still another. Will all white-ribboners who are likely to attend the session of the National Woman's Council, which is to be followed by a W. C. T. U. conference, dates October 24 to 29, inclusive of our conference, kindly let me know at once? The president of the Council, Mrs. May Wright Sewall, is exceedingly anxious to know how many from each affiliated organization may be expected to be in attendance. The program, both of the Council itself, and of our Temperance Conference, is one rich in interest, and I am sure if you are contemplating visiting the Omaha Exposition, you cannot do better than to choose these dates for your visit. I greatly regret that the necessary preparatory work for the Convention will keep me at my desk, but the National organization will be represented by Mrs. Beauchamp and Mrs. Rounds.

The Honor Roll has not appeared for some time, but a list of names is herewith appended:

Mrs. Helen D. Harford	19
Mrs. L. E. Bailey	12
Mrs. Mabel L. Conklin	2
Mrs. Emma D. Hudson, Massachusetts	1
Mrs. Emma Ware, Massachusetts	1
Mrs. Marie C. Rockwood, Massachusetts	1
Mrs. Ella M. Keith	1
Worcester W. C. T. U., Massachusetts	2

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

National Convention Corner.

Retrospective and Descriptive.

It is twelve years since the National Convention met in the Northwest. The Convention of 1886 was held in Minneapolis, and now the sister-twin, St. Paul, extends welcoming hands to greet us.

The official roster is largely changed since our gathering in Minneapolis. Only one of the General Officers then is an officer now, Mrs. Stevens. Connecticut, Illinois, Maine and Missouri are the only states that have the same presidents. Mrs. M. L. Welles is the only one of the organizers who was an organizer at that time. None of the present UNION SIGNAL editors were on the staff then. The list of lecturers contains not one name of the list of twelve years ago. The departments have all changed heads except work among foreign speaking people, scientific temperance instruction and anti-narcotics. At that Convention five departments were reported that we do not have now, but we have on our list eleven that we had not adopted then. At the Minneapolis Convention we were talking about W. C. T. U. conferences at Chautauqua, now we are holding them. We were talking about building a Temple, now it is built. We were talking of organizing in Alaska; that is now an accomplished fact. We were discussing indorsed temperance text-books, and now the schools of the land have them. It is by looking backward that progress is measured, therefore this little retrospection.

St. Paul is beautiful for situation. A city of 160,000, lying at the gateway of the famous Park Region of Minnesota, which has more inland lakes than the same area anywhere in the world. White Bear Lake, noted for its Indian legends, and Lake Como, are within easy driving and street car distance, the latter situated in one of the most beautiful parks in our country, covering 300 acres.

Fort Snelling is of great interest in these military times. The Minnesota troops are located there, and the state Soldiers' Home is there also. The Indian Mounds on the Mississippi river afford a wonderful view up and down the river, and of the city proper and West St. Paul, and no one will want to return home without seeing the historic Minnehaha Falls.

The center of Minneapolis is ten miles distant from the center of St. Paul, while the corporations join. They are connected by two of the finest electric railways in the world. The beautiful lakes, Harriet and Calhoun, are in Minneapolis, and the famous Lake Minnetonka is but a short ride by steam cars. The Library Building and Walker Art Gallery are well worth a visit.

Between St. Paul and Minneapolis is the College Centre. The State University, Hamline University, Macalester College, the College of St. Thomas, Hill's Seminary, Concordia College, Robinsdale College, the State Agricultural College, make a fine showing for the educational spirit of the twin cities. Beside these, sixty-four excellent private schools, with 6,000 students supplement the public institutions. The public school exhibits and system took the first prize at the World's Fair, and the character and standing of its schools are recognized as second to none in the country. To such a city go we forth, and in the next Corner initial plans for the Convention will be given.

Where Our Speakers Are.

DR. MYRA A. GILLETTE, of Medina, N. Y., lecturer for the department of non-alcoholic medication will remain in the neighborhood of St. Paul for several weeks after the National Convention. This will be a good opportunity for unions near St. Paul to secure lectures on this most interesting subject.

After the National Convention Mrs. Mary E. Teats will be available for work in her especial line of purity or any other phase of W. C. T. U. work in the middle and eastern states. Her address, until October 20, will be Oakland, Cal.; after that Fremont, Neb.

Buy of those who advertise in The Union Signal.

The cakes of Ivory Soap are so shaped that they may be used entire for general purposes, or divided with a stout thread into two perfectly formed cakes for toilet use. For any use put to, Ivory Soap is a quick cleanser, absolutely safe and pure.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Copyright, 1898, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

"There's the rub." (Hamlet.) The "rub" in one hand, and the effect of it in the other. Good design for a soap "ad."—isn't it? Question of health, if nothing else, ought to make you give up this wearing washboard rubbing with soap, and take up the sensible way of washing with Pearline—soaking, boiling, rinsing. The washboard rubbing, done in the midst of soiled clothes and tainted steam is harmful to any woman. If you think it isn't, you'd better think again. 570

Millions NOW USE Pearline

Official.

Medal Contests.

DEAR SUPERINTENDENTS:—Blank reports have been sent to each state superintendent. If you have not received yours, send for duplicate. I want all reports in before October 15. This will give you time to report state contests, and me time to prepare my report for National Convention. Local superintendents from nearly all the states have sent to me occasionally for medals. This should not have been done, but usually has been, because they did not know who their state superintendents were and did not have time to ascertain and get medal before contest. All these will be added to National report.

Several complaints have reached me that orders have not been filled; money was enclosed with the order. I seldom receive letter or money, so cannot fill the order. Remember to send express order, postoffice money order, draft, or will take stamps for small sums. I congratulate you all on the work done this year and the good prospects for doubling it the next year.

Yours for conquest,
(MRS.) A. E. CARMAN.

Convention Call.

DELAWARE.

The annual convention of the Delaware Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Camden, October 12, 13 and 14.

E. ELMA PYLE, Acting Pres.
ANNIE C. VANDEVER, Rec. Sec.

NEW JERSEY.

The twenty-fifth annual state convention of New Jersey W. C. T. U. will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, October 11–14. Speakers, Mrs. Jennie Fowler-Willing, Mrs. Hammer, Miss Kearney and Colonel Bain.

EMMA BOURNE, Pres.

UTAH.

The eighth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Utah, will be held in Ogden from September 29 to October 1.

(MRS.) G. N. MARTIN, Pres.

CALIFORNIA.

The California W. C. T. U. will hold its annual state convention at Berkeley, Cal., October 17 to 22.

(MRS.) B. STURTEVANT PEET, Pres.
DORCAS J. SPENCER, Cor. Sec.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold its twenty-fourth annual convention in Reading, October 14–18, 1898.

(MRS.) REBECCA B. CHAMBERS, Pres.
(MRS.) OLIVE POND-AMIES, Rec. Sec.

RHODE ISLAND.

The Rhode Island annual W. C. T. U. convention will be held at Newport, October 12 and 13.

(MRS.) MARY H. BABCOCK, Pres.
(MISS) E. P. NICHOLS, Cor. Sec.

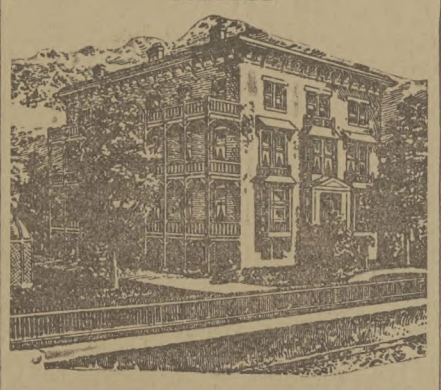
TENNESSEE.



Tennessee state W. C. T. U. convention will be held at Jonesboro, Oct. 11–14. Executive meeting the 11th, convention proper the 12th, at 9 A. M.

(MRS.) A. A. GIBSON, Pres.
(MRS.) SILENA MOORE HOLMAN, Cor. Sec.

Convention Calendar.

KENTUCKY, Louisville, Sept. 30-Oct. 4.
NEW YORK, Johnstown, Fulton county, Oct. 4–7.
VIRGINIA, Richmond, Oct. 4-7.
ILLINOIS, Elgin, Oct. 4-7.
OHIO, Columbus, Oct. 5-7.
NEW HAMPSHIRE, Portsmouth, Oct. 5–7.
OREGON, Eugene, Oct. 5–7.
IOWA, Waterloo, Oct. 11-14.
CONNECTICUT, Torrington, Oct. 12-14.
MASSACHUSETTS, Boston, Tremont Temple, Oct. 12–14.
KANSAS, Horton, Oct. 19–21.
MISSOURI, Poplar Bluff, Oct. 21-25.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—It is with sorrow that we this week record the death of our sister, Mrs. Mary J. Wadhams. She died in Tucson, Ari., whither she went several months ago in hope of regaining her health. We tender our sincere sympathy to the husband and three motherless little ones thus so sadly bereft of a loving mother of many rare virtues of mind and heart.

Our new year began September 1, with the sun shining through the clouds, promising a year of work and reward, which can only come to any institution through persistent effort well directed. Our new ward, with its white beds, newly painted floor and cheery surroundings, present an attractive shelter for those who need treatment or rest. Some changes have necessarily been made in the matron's apartments, causing some personal inconvenience to her. It has been pleasant to the board to note her cheerful compliance with the conditions, saying, "Anything for the good of the hospital." Indeed, this atmosphere pervades every department.

Many letters are received asking, "What can we do to best help the hospital? We believe in the great temperance principles you are endeavoring to demonstrate, and we want to help." To all such we would suggest the different ways most serviceable to us at this time. Gifts of money are always acceptable, fruits, vegetables, groceries, eggs, butter or lard, in fact, any supplies necessary in a home; table linen, tray cloths and bed clothing, also old cotton for bandages; $350 per year endows a bed. Illinois has had her endowed bed for several years.

Twenty-five dollars makes one a life member. Contributions of useful and fancy articles are solicited for our sale the first week in December. These are some of the most popular ways to aid, and probably the most acceptable to our constituency.

Last year you will remember that Miss Willard asked for five cents per member for a special fund to pay the debt. A few hundred dollars were raised. Now, in every union, no matter how small, women will be found both willing and able to give this amount, but the trouble was that no one woman was appointed to make it her business to collect the nickels. What an object lesson right here, to "attend to the pennies, and the dollars will attend to themselves."

This year we wish to make more effort to have a greater number of typhoid fever patients and others considered to be better test cases for non-alcoholic treatment, although our proportion has been fair in those diseases, considering our accommodations.

Hoping and praying for the way to open that our quarters may be enlarged and supplied with modern appliances, yours in faith of a new building of modest dimensions in the near future,

(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.

W. C. T. U. News.

[Bright, newsy items of special interest are acceptable for this column, but do not send detailed reports of unions or conventions to us. Send them to your state reporter.]

THERE is a new L. T. L. in Elbert, Col.; it is mothered by a strong and active union. Far-reaching results are expected from the children's work.

MRS. FANNY NORTON, of Elmore, a county president of Minnesota, organized six unions in her county last year. Minnesota white-ribboners at state convention gave part of the credit to Mr. Norton, who always sets apart a portion of whatever money he receives to help on his wife's cherished work. Three cheers were given Mr. Norton at the state convention.

THE Chatfield, Minn., union is doing good work in several departments; has had a prohibition speaker, are circulating the army canteen petition, have subscribed for ten copies of School Physiology Journal for public school teachers, and attended a "missionary tea," eight miles in the country, the proceeds of which, six dollars, were given to them to be sent to Miss Dow for the benefit of the Temple; also sold one of Miss Willard's new pictures.

One thousand styles and sizes.
For cooking and heating.
Price from $5 to $70.

GARLAND STOVES AND RANGES
The World's Best

Often imitated. Never equalled.

Best Cookers. Strongest Heaters.
Last Longest. Use Least Fuel.
Made only by
The Michigan Stove Company
Largest Makers of Stoves and Ranges in the world.
Sold Everywhere.

A RECEPTION was given by the Lake Union of Seattle, Wash., to Mrs. Marion B. Baxter upon her recent visit there. Mrs. Governor Roberts shared in the honors, being a guest of the hostess, Mrs. Eutz. The rooms were decorated with ivy and sweet peas. A charming afternoon was enjoyed.

THE W. C. T. U. of Hornellsville, N. Y., is responsible for the curfew law agitation in that city and its adoption. The benefits of this law are already clear and positive. It is being rigidly enforced, and the children have found that it will be, and are obeying the nine o'clock summons without delay.

KANKAKEE, Ill., W. C. T. U. had headquarters on the fair grounds. A rest room for mothers with tired babies was provided. Ice water was kept at hand, free literature distributed and afternoon tea served. Willard souvenirs and W. T. P. A. literature were on sale. The ladies were well patronized.

THERE are 395 Loyal Legioners in Danville, Ill., nearly all having taken the triple pledge. The union reports an unusual amount of work on many lines. Flower mission department has given out 268 bouquets, and 1,330 garments. Literature department has distributed 28,550 pages of literature. Memorial day for Miss Willard was observed in nearly all the churches.

THE Grand Forks, North Dakota, Norwegian W. C. T. U. sets an example to our American unions in their zeal and industry. They were organized in February, and now number seventy active, and twelve honorary members. They have paid for and distributed over four thousand pages of Norwegian tracts, and are still further making converts to total abstinence and prohibition. Mrs. G. H. Smith is the president.

HEADACHE

"Both my wife and myself have been using CASCARETS and they are the best medicine we have ever had in the house. Last week my wife was frantic with headache for two days, she tried some of your CASCARETS, and they relieved the pain in her head almost immediately. We both recommend Cascarets."
CHAS. STEDEFORD,
Pittsburg Safe & Deposit Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.
... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...
Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 317

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

The Home.

Training Housewives.

Belgian authorities recognize the fact that one of the best qualifications for a wife is the ability to manage a well-ordered home, and have undertaken to supplement home training in housewifery by the establishment of classes in both the primary and secondary schools, where the whole system of housekeeping is taught, beginning with the smallest children and continuing until the girls are graduated.

One of the largest of these classes is held in the basement of a Brussels house. One room is set apart for lecture purposes, and in it lectures are given on domestic economy, nursing, care of children and invalids and hygiene. Another room is furnished as a kitchen, and the cooking utensils are precisely such as would be found in a cottage of any respectable working man. On the walls are odd-looking pictures of joints of meat, with price attached, and notes stating whether it would be most economical to roast, boil, stew or fry in each case.

Members of the class take turn in cooking the dinner every day. They are made to go through the form of purchasing all materials for the meal, which must cost under two shillings, and must be sufficient for six persons. Both judgment and economical management are required to feed six persons at a cost of two shillings, but it is stated that the girls turn out very fair meals, each dish being well made in every way.

The girls go through a regular course in the laundry as well as in the kitchen, and order everywhere is especially insisted upon. Two hours a week are given to instruction in making dresses, darning stockings, and all kinds of needlework. Lessons on how to take care of children are also given. They are taught in other classes how to bind up wounds, dress burns, and treat the simple kinds of ailments. The result of all this is that when a Brussels maiden marries she is more likely to be a success as a wife than any other girl in Europe.

Don't think that any medicine will take the place of right living!

Don't fret; whatever else you do, don't fret; don't scold; don't worry; keep calm and even tempered. This will preserve your face from wrinkles, your body from infirmities, your mind from unrest and friction, and prolong your life in peace.

It is possible to prevent many diseases and cure others by drinking large quantities of water. An eminent French physician says that typhoid fever can be washed out of the system by water. He gives his patients what would amount to eight or ten ounces an hour of sterilized water! Experiments have been made with diseases caused by bacteria which demonstrate the curative value of water. Hot water, in fevers, is of great use, and an ordinary tumblerful of water as hot as can be taken once an hour is one of the very best remedies. The important thing is to get into the system and out of it a sufficient amount of water to prevent the accumulation of ptomaines and toxins within the body.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Our Library Table.

APPLETON'S POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY for October will contain an article by Edward Atkinson, entitled, "The Evolution of High Wages from Low Cost of Labor." He points out that in every branch of industry there has been a progressive advance in the rate of wages, and that this advance has been accompanied by, and is, in fact, a consequence of a general decline in the prices of nearly all products.

Prof. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of Cornell University, has written a new life of Alexander the Great, which will be one of the leading features of THE CENTURY MAGAZINE during the coming year. The papers will be richly illustrated with pictures by André Castaigne, Louis Loeb and others. At this time of empire-making projects, the career of the Macedonian conqueror is of particular suggestiveness to modern statesmen.

Worry and its cure is the subject of the leading article in the September TEMPLE. After picturing the nature of this complaint and its consequences, the author gives cogent reasons for considering it an entirely needless, avoidable and curable affliction. The logical remedy for worry is found in work; and this leads to a vivid contrast of the effects of work animated by faith with that which is merely mercenary in motive and purpose. (Ten cents a copy, $1 a year. The Temple Publishing Co., Denver, Col.)

The September ATLANTIC is an especially "timely" number, both in the selection and the treatment of its topics. When the Spanish war began the ATLANTIC promptly reviewed the whole question, and showed the justifiable and inevitable causes of our action; and now that the war is closed, the ATLANTIC is first to discuss the new situation, and the new problems and tasks which confront the country, exhibiting a spirit of hope and courage which fully accords with the true national feeling of our country to-day.

A paper of which "President McKinley and the War" is the subject will attract the attention of many readers of the October CHAUTAUQUAN. Its author, William Eleroy Curtis, does full justice to the man who has proved his right to the title of commander-in-chief, and gives many interesting details of his daily life as a war president. Of perhaps equal interest at this juncture is "The Psychology of War," by C. Fabris, in the same issue, in which theories as to the causes of wars are advanced and the attitude of the European governments is defined.

The editors of MCCLURE'S MAGAZINE have secured for the October number a "human document" of the recent war of the highest interest and value. It is a diary kept by the British Consul at Santiago de Cuba from the day before the arrival of Cervera's fleet until the day after the American army took possession of the city. Mr. Ramsden, the author, had been British Consul at Santiago for nearly forty years. During the siege he was the special guardian and advisor of the panic-stricken foreign residents, and was in close, confidential communication with the Spanish authorities, civil and military. Under the great labors and hardships of his position he finally fell ill, and, soon after the surrender, died.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel.

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers; Third Nebraska, Col. W. J. Bryan; First Texas, Col. W. H. Mabry; Fourth Ohio; First and Third Kentucky; First Wisconsin, Colonel Schadel.

Petition Against the Canteen Now.

WHITE-RIBBONERS, CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS, EPWORTH LEAGUERS, GOOD TEMPLARS, CHURCHES, PASTORS AND PEOPLE — EVERYBODY, CUT OUT THE APPENDED PETITION, SIGN IT, SECURE OTHER NAMES, AND SEND IT TO PRESIDENT MCKINLEY AT ONCE. OR, IF YOU PREFER, USE THE ONE WE PUBLISHED LAST WEEK, OR WRITE ONE YOURSELF, BUT SEND A PETITION TO DO AWAY WITH THE ARMY CANTEEN, AND DO IT NOW:

To the President of the United States:

We do hereby respectfully petition that you will, to the extent of your authority as Commander-in-Chief of the army, forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors at all post and camp exchanges, or elsewhere within the lines of the armies of the United States.

Take Notice.

Miss Cornelia M. Dow, Portland, Me., custodian of the Willard fund for the payment of the Temple trust bonds, will receive all contributions offered by those who are interested in the effort being put forward by the National Woman's Christian Temperance union to help retire these bonds. Miss Dow is a woman of well-known financial ability and does this work gratuitously. As the daughter of Gen. Neal Dow, this loyal white-ribboner has the highest esteem and regard of all connected with the movement, and it was by cordial agreement with Mrs. Carse and at the request of Miss Willard that she accepted the forgoing trust.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money. Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

STOP SMOKING!

EVERY LADY SHOULD READ THIS

I will send free a positive cure for all female diseases, irregularities, etc. A simple private treatment, a common sense remedy that never fails. FREE with valuable advice. Mrs. L. HUDNUT, South Bend, Ind.

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR MAN AND BEAST

THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS

84-90 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK — 311-313 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright, 1898, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

North, South, East, West —all are represented at the

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

Send for our illustrated Catalogue and learn the advantages to be obtained at the MUSICAL CENTER of the musical city of the New World.

GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Musical Director.

All particulars and Catalogue will be sent by FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF

OUR WAR WITH SPAIN

ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,

A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

High Arm

Warranted Ten Years.

$10 to $25 SAVED

in buying direct from factory. 30 days free trial. No agents large profits to pay. No money in advance

$65 Kenwood Machine for.....$22.50

No better Machine at any price.

$50 Arlington Machine for.....$19.50

Other Machines $8.00, $11.50 and $15.00

all attachments free, over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free Write today for special freight offer.

CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 West VanBuren St., B-30 Chicago, Ills.

MONTICELLO Opens the 61st year Sept. 29. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Prin., Godfrey, Ill.

MATERIAL furnished for Talks, Papers and Speeches. Any subject. Advice free. Confidential. Address, Secretary, 257 W. 42d St., N. Y. City.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

THE
UNION SIGNAL
Official Organ of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.
THE TEMPLE
CHICAGO

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, as second-class matter.

TERMS:

THE UNION SIGNAL

Is a weekly religious temperance paper of sixteen pages. Additional pages are frequently given without cost to the subscriber.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS

May commence at any time during the year.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Is $1 a year, payable strictly in advance. To pastors in the United States, Canada or Mexico, 50 cents a year, payable strictly in advance.

FOREIGN RATES

To all foreign countries included in the Universal Postal Union, the subscription price of THE UNION SIGNAL is $1.52 a year, postpaid.

REMITTANCES

Should be sent by check, draft, express order or postoffice money order, payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. Cash should be sent by registered letter. We cannot be responsible for loss if sent in any other way.

RECEIPTS

We do not send receipts for subscriptions, unless the request is accompanied with stamp. The change of date upon your address label will indicate within three weeks that the remittance was received.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

When a change of address is ordered, both the old and new address must be given

DISCONTINUANCES

Subscribers wishing THE UNION SIGNAL stopped at the expiration of their subscription must notify us to that effect; otherwise we shall consider it their wish to have it continued. All arrearages must be paid.

ALL QUESTIONS

concerning contributions or the policy of the paper should be addressed to the Managing Editor. All business matters referring to THE UNION SIGNAL should be addressed to the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
The Temple, Chicago...

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Official Organ of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

(EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY.)

An Illustrated Children's Temperance Paper.

TERMS.

One copy, per year	$ .25
In clubs of ten or more	.20
In clubs of fifty or more, to one address	.12
Sample packages for distribution, 100 to one address	1.00

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The regular issue of the paper contains, aside from illustrations, stories, poetry, etc., three departments, viz.: In Sunday School, Busy Workers' Corner and L. T. L. Letter Box.

QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON SUPPLEMENT.

Especially for the use of teachers in Sunday-school. Four pages containing temperance lesson helps, suggestions for observance of temperance Sundays, etc. This supplement can be secured without the CRUSADER at the rate of 65 cents per 100 copies, $2.75 per 500, $5.00 per 1,000. To regular subscribers the Supplement accompanies each paper free of charge.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

We are glad to send sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and Young Crusader for free distribution at conventions, but from friends who do not even send stamps to cover postage, we hope for some especial effort to secure subscriptions both to the official organ and to the young people's interesting monthly.

Again we must remind our readers to write the name of the state at the heading of all letters. Envelopes are often mislaid or destroyed, and frequently we can obtain no clue to the writer of a letter, who is naturally offended because her requests do not receive prompt attention. Please, dear friends, put the name of the state always in your letters, as there are many towns of the same name in different states.

Publisher's Notes.

Do You Wish to Help Our Wounded Soldiers and Sailors?

We have just published a beautiful war song, entitled "The Blue and Gray Together," by C. H. Addison. This song sells for 40 cents everywhere. We will furnish this song for 20 cents in silver or one and two cent stamps to any lady who will agree to write to two friends and advise them to buy it, also ask them to write to two friends in the same way. In this way we start what is called an endless chain. We have arranged to turn over to Mrs. J. W. Castles, at Cape Charles, Va., superintendent of the soldiers' and sailors' work of the W. C. T. U. of Virginia, one-half of all the money made from the sale of music in this way. If you have not been able to do anything for our soldiers and sailors, here is a chance at a very small cost, and if you will write the letters and send the slips that come with the music to some of your friends, you may help to raise hundreds of dollars for this great work.

STANDARD MUSIC CO.,
Publishers.
Danville, Va.

CAPE CHARLES, VA., July 27, 1898.
To the W. C. T. U. Workers of America:—

The need of money for this branch of our work is very great, and I hope that the above offer of the Standard Music Co. will be accepted by as many as possible. If you can not order the song, get some one else to do so, and write to your friends and send them the slips that you will find in the music, or they can be had from me.

Yours for the cause of humanity,
(MRS.) J. W. CASTLES,
State Supt. of Soldiers' and Sailors' Work.

"On Heights of Power." Music by Lady Henry Somerset. Words by Frances E. Willard.

Lady Henry Somerset has set to music the Memorial Hymn, by Frances E. Willard, and the song only requires to be known in order to become very popular. The melody is sweet, tuneful, and attractive, and marked with considerable expression, rendering the words most effective. It opens with a short symphony, and concludes with a chorus in four parts. The compass is well within the reach of the average singer. It ought, therefore, to have a wide sale among local temperance choirs. It was sung with marked effect at the British Women's Temperance Association's annual meeting, at Queen's Hall, and is, we are sure, likely to achieve a wide sale.

The above notice from an English paper will be read with interest by American vocalists and white-ribboners, and as copies will be in great demand, the W. T. P. A. have ordered a supply from the London publishers, which will be on sale in about three weeks. Price, single copy, 50 cents.

The Responsive Reading for October is upon a subject in which we feel sure every white-ribboner is keenly interested, viz., THE UNION SIGNAL, and the writer is Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, its present managing editor. In the form of questions and answers much information is given concerning the pages of that paper which Miss Willard called so aptly, the weekly "letter from home." Local unions are told what kind of articles and news items are sought after by the editors and how the individual society may speak through its columns. The various departments of the paper are touched upon and methods suggested by which THE UNION SIGNAL may become the "greatest woman's paper in the world."

BIBLE READING FOR OCTOBER. "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit," by Mrs. Addie Webster DeLong. There is no effective service for God without the gift of the Holy Spirit, says the writer truly. The soul for expansion requires the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of Jesus Christ and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost. The baptism of the Spirit, we are told, is for testimony and power, and we may know when we receive it. If we lack this power we shall be held responsible, for all may have it for the asking. How to obtain this baptism is a question this Reading aims to answer.

Gleanings.

The California Voice quotes as follows from an article by Abbott Kinney:

"The statement in one of my articles that the canteen at the Home was used by politicians to offer liquid reasons to the soldiers for political support, is denied by one person, on the ground that outsiders can not there purchase liquor. This is true, but the canteen is thus used. The way the canteen is used in politics is simple enough. A candidate or political worker hands money to one of the soldiers, who then invites other soldiers to drink for the candidate. A good deal of money has been spent in this way at the Home canteen for political purposes. At times the results have been scandalous. In the last shrievalty contest in this county, the Los Angeles Times, a Republican paper, charged one of the candidates with getting the soldiers so drunk at the Home that a number lost their standing and special advantages. This was under date of November 4, 1896, page 12, column 7, item 3

"I am in a position to prove that the canteen has been used by politicians, and to give the names of candidates and the amounts spent."

MRS. HELEN M. STODDARD, president of Texas W. C. T. U., writes cheeringly of the outlook in that state, and encloses a letter written by Chaplain Sexton, of the First Texas Regiment to the Dallas News, on the canteen question, from which we quote as follows:

"Some one writing to your most excellent paper thoughtlessly stated that the First Texas was arranging to establish a 'canteen.' This statement is an error, and I now write to make the correction.

"A regiment canteen carries the idea of beer, a thing that has not been sold in our regiment. We of the First Texas Regiment feel quite proud of the record which we have made, both as regards discipline and health. I speak for the colonel of the regiment, W. H. Mabry, and say that no mother need ever fear of a beer saloon being established in this regiment.

"Beer has not nor will it contribute to the health and discipline of the men. For this and many other reasons no beer canteen will ever be established. We have a regiment restaurant, where the boys can get a glass of sweet milk or a good lunch, which we consider more needful than beer.

"While other regiments have been unfortunate in losing so many of their noble boys the First Texas has only lost four since our enlistment, May 1. One was killed by lightning, and another from effects of strong drink before enlistment and two from natural causes.

"In the great parade and review of the seventh army corps, while the men in other regiments fell out overcome by the march, not one man in this regiment dropped out of line.

"The commission to inspect the sanitary conditions in the United States army camps stated that the First Texas was the best they had inspected. They also pronounced the first division hospital of the seventh army corps the best in the entire army."

OF the recent republican convention of Los Angeles county, California, the Los Angeles Daily Times (republican), says: "It has been a distinctively cold-water convention, the delegates (744) having consumed during the week about five hundred gallons of distilled water. The nearest saloon, a block and a half distant from the pavilion, was poorly patronized. A soberer convention never sat anywhere."

Gabrella T. Stickney, state reporter, commenting thereon, says: "One primary was held in Temperance Temple this season—and some heretofore—so perhaps they received an object lesson which has been beneficial."

MAYOR FELLOWS, of Topeka, Kan., has given notice that the law must be rigidly enforced, and that particular mayor means exactly what he says. Hence the "joints" are closed. The prohibition liquor law is as fully enforced as laws against theft, burglary, arson, or any other kinds of crime. The city is free from thugs and law-breakers. Immorality has been reduced to the minimum. The people are proud of their city. So are decent people throughout the whole country. Three cheers for Mayor Fellows! What a benediction to some other Kansas towns if they could have a chief officer with backbone.—Epworth Herald.

LORD BRASSEY, the eminent British naval authority, in enumerating the matters demonstrated by the late war, says, "I fancy smoking cigarets has always been the chief occupation in Spain's navy." The comment is as just as it is caustic. But shall the people of the United States permit the mercenary methods of a trust to enforce upon the next generation of Americans the physical and mental characteristics of the Spaniards today? Is th ,to be the cigaret smoking nation? If the trust has its way it will.—The New York Journal.

A CORRESPONDENT has this suggestion concerning one phase of life at Camp Thomas: " 'There was lack of woman's nursing.' That was a strange feature of the hospital management at Chickamauga. It is said that Florence Nightingale and her noble band of assistants, by the success of their great mission to the sick and wounded of the Crimean War, 'broke down a Chinese wall of prejudices, religious, social and professional' against female nurses. Has American officialdom yet to learn what everybody else learned in 1854?"—Central Christian Advocate.

Signal Notes.

IN 2,450 parishes in the provinces of Canterbury and York there is not a tavern, neither is there on Mr. Roberts' estate in Liverpool, nor in Queen's Park, London.

THERE are now in the German Alliance 1,430 Young Men's Christian Associations, with a total membership of 85,000; and there are beside these 400 unaffiliated Associations, with a membership of 10,500.

THE Maréchale of the Salvation Army is appealing for help to establish a Rescue Home in Brussels, where it is computed there are 17,000 fallen women, among whom there are children ten and eleven years of age.

THE Habitual Inebriates Bill has become law. It merely applies to habitual drunkards who have been convicted by the police. Lord Wemyss fought hard for its restriction to persons convicted of crime. The bill is a small temperance mercy, for which we ought to be thankful.—The Irish Temperance League Journal.

THE movement for perpetuating the memory of Mr. Gladstone in a tangible way and on a national scale is being taken up with great enthusiasm in London, Edinburgh, and Dublin. It is intended to erect statues of the dead statesman in all three capitals. A new building will also be erected for the library in connection with St. Deiniol's church, Hawarden.

QUITE a quantity of toast packed in barrels, an article made of stale buns split through the center and toasted, is imported from the United States into Canada. It is brought in solely by Norse people along the border in the Algoma district, who use it in soups. Latterly the discovery has been made that the Finns have been smuggling tobacco packed among the toast.

THE international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association will consider the matter of establishing association work in Havana, San Juan, Porto Rico and Manila. Inquiries are now being made to learn if some local financial support can be looked for, and if it can within a reasonable time, association buildings will soon rise in the new colonies and gradually spread throughout the respective fields.

A NEW form of summer work in the tenements has been inaugurated this season by the People's University Extension Society of Greater New York. In about twenty different places they have started a series of practical talks by expert physicians. These talks have dealt with the prevention of hot weather diseases, the care of children, food, drink, clothing, cooking, cleanliness, emergencies, and so on. The advice has been adapted to the actual conditions of life in the tenements, and the physicians giving the talks are those familiar with hospital, dispensary and tenement work. The talks are in English, Italian, German, French and Bohemian, and a practical little book of simple rules is supplied in these languages. This fall other important subjects will be taken up. The expenses of the work are provided by voluntary subscription. Mr. Rossiter Johnson is president of the society, and Mr. Charles Dudley Warner is vice-president. Mr. J. Eugene Whitney, 150 Nassau street, is the secretary.

LARKIN SOAPS

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample Soap if mention this magazine.
The Larkin Soap Mfg Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

The Temple, Chicago.

For Catalogue of our Publications apply Room 1110, The Temple.

BOOKS BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Glimpses of Fifty Years.

The eloquent story of Miss Willard's eventful life from childhood until the rounding of the half century, given by Miss Willard herself in her own graphic way. It is the record of a life of noble purpose inspired by the simplest but purest motive, combined with a breadth of ability and fervor of consecration rarely seen. This book should be in the hands of all the women of this and every other country.
Cloth $2.25
Half Morocco, gilt edge 3.00
Full Morocco, gilt edges 3.75

Woman and Temperance.

A book of inestimable value to all White-Ribboners, both as a book of reference and as a complete and accurate history of the movement from the days of the Woman's Temperance Crusade.
Cloth $2.00

A Young Woman Journalist.

A life sketch of Miss Julia A. Ames, a young woman of untiring energy, great faith, and devotion to the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. Designed to stimulate young women to noble achievement. This volume can not help but be an inspiration to all temperance workers, and in fact all Christian and philanthropic people anywhere.
Cloth . . . . . $ .75

Nineteen Beautiful Years.

The story of the life of Mary E. Willard, "my sister Mary," as she is tenderly called by the author.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 60

How to Win.

A book for girls.
Cloth $1 00

Woman in the Pulpit.

A strong presentation of the arguments in favor of the organization of women.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 50

A Classic Town.

History of Evanston, Ill. Profusely illustrated with views of "Rest Cottage," etc.
Full Gilt $1 00
Plain Cloth 75

A Great Mother.

The Biography of Madam Willard, written by her daughter, Miss Frances E. Willard, and her kinswoman, Mrs. Minerva B. Norton. No work of such value to mothers has appeared for years. It is both an incentive toward and an example of successful motherhood. White-ribbon mothers especially need to learn its open secret. Handsomely bound, elegantly illustrated.
Cloth $1.50

How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle.

This little book is not designed to teach the art of riding the bicycle, but is full of suggestions and thoughts which filled the mind of the writer as she mastered the silent steed. It is well named "A Wheel Within a Wheel." As fascinating as a novel, and an excellent book to place in the hands of lovers of this favorite pastime.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

Do Everything.

A handbook full of instructions and suggestions which make it of inestimable value to White-Ribboners.
Paper . . . . . $ .35

The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard.

Written by ANNA A. GORDON, for twenty-one years her private secretary, with an introduction by LADY HENRY SOMERSET. The book contains 416 pages, 8 inches wide by 10 inches long. Cloth, $2.00; half morocco, $2.75; full morocco, $3.75.

Miss Gordon says in her preface: "We believe this picture of her remarkable and winsome personality will bless and brighten every home that it enters, deepening in the hearts of its readers the desire to hold aloft her white banner of purity and peace, patriotism and prohibition, the protection of the home and the redemption of humanity.

Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

By MARY ALLEN WEST. Bound in cloth, marble edge, and full morocco gilt edge. Carefully written out of a large experience. In a letter to Miss West Madam Willard wrote: "If I could have but one book besides the Bible to help me in bringing up children, I would by all means choose to have this."
Cloth $3.00
Full morocco 4.25

The Temperance Movement; or, the Conflict Between Man and Alcohol.

By United States Senator H. W. BLAIR. The most valuable compilation of statistical information ever offered to the public.
Cloth $1.00

The Year's Bright Chain.

Compiled by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. A gift book of quotations from Miss Willard's works. Illustrated. For young people.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Thumb Nail Sketches of White-Ribbon Women.

Paper . . . . . $ .50
Cloth 1.00

Unanswered Prayer.

By S. M. I. HENRY.
Paper . . . . . Not in Stock.
Cloth . . . . . $ .30

Bright Eyes.

Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised so as to suggest to children by means of outline pictures the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother or elder sister or brother on a Sunday afternoon in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.
Cloth . . . . . $ .20

Columbus and What He Found.

By MARY H. HULL. This is a history of Columbus, told in a most interesting and instructive manner to the writer's own three children and ten of their companions. It is a charming book. It contains 260 pages. It is as entertaining as the world-renowned "Robinson Crusoe," yet every fact is one of history, and goes to improve and enrich the mind of every boy and girl who reads it.
Cloth $1.00

The Junior Partners.

By A. M. RAWSON. Illustrated. Octavo, 410 pages. This remarkable story is strongly written and shows how a generous husband and father may be degraded and crushed by yielding to the demoralizing influence of the appetite for strong drink. The story is well told throughout, manly in sentiment, not narrow in portrayal, scientific in interpretation of argument and facts. The book is illustrated with a number of full page engravings and vignette cuts.
Cloth $2.00

White Ribbon Birthday Book.

By ANNA A. GORDON.
A book of the sayings of over 200 of the wisest and wittiest of women. Useful as a gift book for birthdays, as a guest book, and for a daily memorandum.
Cloth $1.00

Around the World by the Fireside.

Containing 160 photographic views from every quarter of the globe. Size 11x13 inches
Cloth $2.00

Child's Christ Tales.

By ANDREA HOFER.
The sweetest story on earth, in all literature and for all time is the story of the infant Jesus, and His wonderful coming among men. Send for this little book and show it to your friends, for it solves the problem of teaching the Christ-life to children.
Cloth $1.00

Lady Gay and her Sister.

A charming book for children by a well known author.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Boys and Other Boys.
Girls and Other Girls.

Two interesting books by Mrs. Lucy A. Scott, who wrote so charmingly for children. Just the books to give needed advice and help to boy or girl in the critical early teens. Not goody-goody, but clear, strong and faithful.
Cloth, each . . . . . $ .25

Bob Gripp's Trophy.

Cloth . . . . . $ .40

GIFT BOOKS

Containing Scripture Texts, Daily Readings for the Year.

Northfield Year Book.
Price $1.25

Gift of Love.

Gift of Peace.
Bound in white, each $1.00

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.
Bound in white vellum . . $1.00

The Shepherd Psalm.
White and silver . . . . . $ .60
Blue and silver 50

One of God's Lilies.

Story of the Soul of a Child.
Bound in white, each . . . . . $ .30

HISTORY OF THE
WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00. Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.

AGENTS WANTED

both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address

DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

"Do those people next door say they are from Boston?" "Yes." "Well, they're not. Jimmy showed their little boy his bean-shooter, and the ignoramus didn't know what it was."

MAMMA (engaged in correcting Johnny)—You know I hate to do it, Johnny. I sympathize with you, but—(Johnny)—Haven't there been enough sympathetic strikes without your beginning?

AN Irish judge, who was much annoyed by loud conversation in the court room, cried out: "Silence! Keep silence in the court! Here I have decided a dozen cases this morning, without hearing what one of 'em was about."

As a brick fell from a carrier's hod it knocked down a Spanish flag displayed from a store front below. "That must have been an American brick," said a passer-by. "Yis," said the hod-carrier above, "but it was of Oirish descint."

THE Spaniard ground his teeth in impotent rage. "If I could only call that Americano something that would insult him! I call him 'Yankee,' but he not get mad." "Why don't you try calling him a Spaniard," suggested the Englishman.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the J. L. Mott Iron Works, which has been running in the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL for many years. Those societies who are considering the question of placing drinking fountains in their localities will find in the illustrated catalogue sent out free by this company a large variety from which to make selections.

"Have you selected your topic for a graduation essay?" asked the dear girl's mother. "Yes. It is 'The Injurious Restraints of Superstition, Ancient and Modern.'" "That's very interesting. You must get right to work on it." "Oh, dear, no! You wouldn't have me begin it on Friday, would you?"

AT a reception in Washington, ex-Secretary William M. Evarts was once drawn into a discussion between two ladies. "Mr. Evarts," said one, "do you not think I am right in saying that a woman is always the best judge of another woman's character?" "Madame," replied Mr. Evarts, "she is not only the best judge, but also the best executioner."

ONCE Mr. Gladstone had been cutting down a tree in the presence of a large concourse of people, including a number of "trippers." When it had fallen and the ex-Premier and some of his family who were with him were moving away there was a rush for the chips. One of the trippers secured a big piece and exclaimed, "Hey, lads, when I dee this shall go in my coffin." This drew the wife-like retort, "Sam, lad, if thou'd worship God as thou worship Gladstone thou'd stand a better chance of going where thy chip wouldna burn!"

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 38. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, October 6, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Victory in Canada—Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, The New Patriotism. By Henrietta Pomfret Anderson 3
Lives that Touch. By H. T. H 3
To-morrow's Rose 4
The Social Creed of Frances Willard. By Rev. Frederick G. Strickland 4
Willard Hall Echoes 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Miss Parrish's Last Letter From Japan 5
A Batch of Conventions 5
A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing 5
A Bit of Praise all Around 5
The Women of the Church Not Responsible 6
LOCAL UNION: 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, Over the Hills. By Louisa A'hmuty Nash . . . 7
The Story of a Tree 7
The Friendly Shadow. By Frances Bennett Callaway . 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Our Loss and Our Increased Responsibilities 8
The Personnel of Our National Convention 8
Ho, for St. Paul, Minnesota! 9
The Conqueror of France 9
The Mosaic Law 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Y's, Attention!—New Helps for the Y's—Y's at Work . . 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Queensland 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
New Mexico—Missouri 11
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER 12
ORGANIZERS' CORNER 12
TREASURER'S CORNER 13
W. C. T. U. NEWS 13
Convention Call—Convention Calendar 13
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 13
Regimental Roll of Honor—Temple Receipts—Take Notice 14
Petition Against the Canteen Now 15
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, St. Paul, Minn., November 11–16.

Notes and Comments.

THE National Council of Red Men in session at Indianapolis voted down the proposed constitutional amendment preventing admission to the order of any one engaged in the liquor business. Of the 125 delegates present only eight voted against the saloonkeepers. The Red Men evidently do not favor any discrimination between the man that sells the drink and the man that supports the traffic by his influence, vote or patronage.

THE Chicago public library is to have an entire set of Miss Willard's books. It is to be the gift of the white-ribboners of the fourth district of Illinois, who voted at their recent annual convention to present it. The convention also recommended that the local unions of the district present copies of these books to the libraries of their respective towns. We are pleased to chronicle this most commendable action of the fourth Illinois—Miss Willard's own district—and to pass it on as a wise and practical suggestion to unions throughout this and other lands.

ALL lovers of justice will rejoice in the decision of the French Cabinet providing for a reopening of the Dreyfus case. Too long has the military spirit dominated that nation; too long has grossest injustice been done in the name of "military honor." But now the French people with characteristic impulsiveness, are clamoring for the truth. They are demanding that the searchlight be turned on no matter what or whom it may reveal. And, we maintain, the more that is known of the military system of any nation the stronger becomes the argument for general disarmament.

THIRTY-FIVE years ago, Mr. John Bright, then the most conspicuous figure in the English parliament, made this prophecy from the floor of the House of Commons: "Mr. Speaker, if our kinsfolk on the other side of the Atlantic settle their civil war satisfactorily and get back together in peace, in forty years there will not be a gun fired in the world without their consent." Doubtless those who listened to this statement regarded it as the words of a visionary; now they speak of John Bright's "remarkable foresight." And, if only five years ago any political leader in England or America had predicted that within ten years from that time the United States would be powerful enough to maintain, if they chose to do so, a world-wide peace, he would probably have been derided by his more "practical" brethren as a dreamer or a fanatic. Yet to-day no one will deny the wonderful power and influence which this country is gaining among the nations, nor that the American people are destined to be a chief factor in the making of the future history of the world. God grant that their standing motto may always be, at home and abroad, "Let us have peace!"

AT the close of the services in Willard Hall on Wednesday, September 28, a delegation of white-ribboners from the Temple visited Rosehill and covered Miss Willard's grave with floral offerings, making that always green and flower-bedecked spot a solid mass of bloom and beauty, There were American beauty roses from Mrs. Stevens, Mareschal Neil roses from Anna Gordon and white roses from Lady Henry Somerset. Gifts from Chicago white-ribboners were calla lilies and ferns bordering the grave, white china asters surrounding the sweet alyssum growing on the mound, white chrysanthemums, white carnations, and other roses, many of which decorations had been carried from Willard Hall. The day was glorious—leaves just turning to gorgeous tints and falling gently in the late summer sunshine, a cloudless sky, and air soft and warm—"queen's weather" indeed, as was eminently fitting. Our Chieftain's fifty-ninth anniversary (as we mortals count time) will always be held in tender remembrance by those of her home city who were privileged to participate in its observance in Willard Hall and to stand that day by the resting place of the precious dust at beautiful Rosehill.

ALTHOUGH the people of Canada have declared against the liquor traffic by a majority of 20,000, its prohibition by national law is by no means an assured fact. How large the majority would have been had women citizens voted as well as men cannot be estimated. From the standpoint of political expediency, the situation is an embarrassing one for the government. From the standpoint of right—moral and political—its duty is clear. The premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, does not hesitate to declare that "it is the function of constitutional government to listen to the voice of the people," yet at the same time he is credited with saying that the result of the plebiscite means death and burial to prohibition. The only province which voted against it is Quebec, the province upon which the liberal party mainly depends for its majority, so it seems that the government is between the Scylla of the rum power and the Charybdis of the temperance vote. The administration itself is divided upon the question, the French-Canadian ministers opposing the measure and the English ministers (including the representative from Quebec) favoring it—a division which has no little significance.

SINCE questions continue to be received by each one of us implying that we may have changed our opinions since July 15 we desire, on the principle of "line upon line and precept upon precept" to state that we are more thoroughly convinced each day that our action regarding the Temple is right. We are sustained in this judgment by nearly all our leading women. Lady Henry Somerset both cabled and wrote her hearty endorsement after receiving the statement of the executive committee. The other World's officers likewise approve. The judgment of the members of the executive board not present with us on that day has already been stated in these columns. We have no reasonable ground for hope that there can be secured the $157,500 necessary at that time to retire the Temple Trust Bonds, and the additional amount of $975,200 necessary for ownership of the Temple. The money which has been sent to Miss Dow since the Buffalo Convention, is safely deposited and drawing four per cent interest, and the sum is not being lessened by any attendant expenses. Thus, it will be seen the delay in returning money to the donors, applying it to retiring the Temple Trust Bonds, or directing it towards a memorial for our translated leader (all of which plans have been suggested), can in no way defraud any one. We shall be glad to answer personally questions on any point not understood, or to send statements to any one wishing them. Our great desire is that white-ribbon women, and all interested in the Temple problem, should know the truth, and the whole truth.

(Signed) THE GENERAL OFFICERS.

Current Events.

Victory in Canada.

Prohibition is Given an Estimated Majority of Between 19,000 and 20,000.

BY popular vote the Dominion of Canada declared for prohibition on September 29. Quebec is the only province enrolled on the side of liquor. She has given an estimated majority of 40,000 against the proposed law. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick combined have practically offset this. Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island have joined them, and have thus given prohibition a net majority ranging between 19,000 and 20,000.

The question submitted to the voters of the Dominion was a plain one. It was this:

> Are you in favor of the passing of an act prohibiting the importation, manufacture or sale of spirits, wine, ale, beer, cider and all other alcoholic liquors for use as beverages?

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was under distinct pledge to the Prohibitionists, made prior to his last election, that if elected he would see that a bill passed submitting the above question to the people. He has kept his pledge. With that pledge was the further guaranty, that if the question carried by popular vote he would see that parliament enact the proposed law if the government party was in the majority. This latter pledge the premier now practically denies. His supporters say the burden of passing the law through parliament rests upon the prohibitionists. The latter retort, by pointing to the popular majority at their backs, and saying that defeat of the proposed legislation in parliament will bring with it the ruin of the entire Liberal party.

A correspondent to the daily press says:

"The liquor interest throughout the polling had all the advantages of money and an up-to-date organization. It had an almost exclusive monopoly of liveries, cabs and experienced political workers. The temperance people put up scarcely any money, had hardly any organization for bringing voters to the polls, and relied on the moral sense of the community to come to the front and carry the cause to a victorious issue. The Catholic church, led by Archbishop Duhamel, was solidly arrayed against prohibition."

Victory in the face of such odds is the more gratifying.

Temperance.

THE papers report that arrangements are making for the establishment in both Cuba and Porto Rico of large distilleries to be owned and operated by Americans, these to be followed by breweries.

AT the annual meeting of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers recently held in Detroit, a committee was appointed to secure the passage of a resolution through Congress, reducing the tax on spirits from $1.10 to 90 cents per gallon.

GEN. JOSEPH WHEELER, popularly known as "Fighting Joe," who was about the only prominent officer against whom no charges of incompetency or neglect were preferred during the recent war, says in a letter to the New York Voice: "I am a thorough believer in temperance in all things and am utterly opposed to soldiers being sold intoxicating liquors, and I believe that every effort should be exercised to remove the temptation of such dissipation from them."

THE Third Presbyterian Church, Shanghai, has a book containing pledges against liquor, tobacco and footbinding. The pastor, who has already signed his name, has read to the congregation a tract on the evils of alcohol, also an article on the subject from one of the Chinese papers. The aim is to cultivate a sentiment against these evils with the hope of having a church pure and free from all. Already several members have signed their names.

ARTICLES of incorporation for the Liquor Dealers' Protective Association of Iowa have been filed at Des Moines, which is to be the headquarters of the association. The chief object of the organization is to bring about the repeal of "obnoxious laws," namely, the Iowa prohibitory law, still effective by local option. Other objects are to further the business, sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquor in the state, to ascertain the effect of prohibitory laws in other states and to govern the manufacture of liquor.

THE Methodist Episcopal Conference of Michigan passed the following resolution at its recent session in Lansing:

"Believing in the declaration of the General Conference that this business can not be licensed without sin, while not presuming to dictate to our members as to their political affiliations, we desire to record our deep conviction that Christian citizens, and surely loyal Methodists, can not consistently vote for men or with political parties who declare in favor of license measures."

"TEMPERANCE beer," a mixture of ordinary lager beer, water and carbonic acid, sold by dealers without a license as non-intoxicating, has been held by Police Court Justice Perkins, in Hartford, Conn., to be an "intoxicating liquor" within the meaning of the law, and its venders have been held by him for selling liquor without a license. It was alleged by the brewers who supplied the beer that it contained only 1½ per cent of alcohol, and that about 15 to 20 per cent of ordinary lager beer was used in preparing the "temperance drink." The justice held that the beer came within the statutes and imposed the minimum fine for violation of the law, no appeal being taken from his decision.

THE temperance committee of the Chickasahay Baptist Association of Mississippi presented to that body a lengthy report which contains the following resolution:

"That the sense of this association is, if a church member visit a saloon, sign whisky petitions, go on bonds of liquor sellers, vote for the sale or in any way countenance or encourage the traffic of intoxicating liquors, it is conduct unworthy of a Christian and should be brought under church discipline.

"That we will withdraw from any church and refuse to receive any church failing or refusing to enforce discipline as set forth in the foregoing resolution."

About Women.

THE venerable Queen Louise of Denmark, frequently referred to as the "mother-in-law of Europe," died at Copenhagen on September 29.

A BRONZE tablet to the memory of Miss Winnie Davis will be placed in the wall of St. Paul's church, at Richmond, Va., beside the memorial window to her father.

MISS FRANKIE V. MUDD has been appointed by Governor Stephens, inspector of oils for the city of St. Charles, to succeed Julius Rauch, whose term has expired. This is the first case of a lady being appointed to inspect oils in Missouri.

A HOTEL for respectable and needy girls has been opened at 6231 Lexington avenue, Chicago, under the auspices of the American Purity League. The object is to tide over those in financial distress. Board and room are furnished at extremely low rates. As prevention is better than cure, it is hoped to reach many who might otherwise speedily sink.

MISS BEATRICE CUTLER, a trained nurse, has been appointed inspector of the female pilgrims at El Teb (Egypt) by the Egyptian quarantine board. Her duties are to overhaul and inspect the women coming back from Mecca, for this year, on account of plague. They are kept in camp on quarantine for twelve days before being allowed to return to their respective countries.

THERE is one Indian woman who is a practicing lawyer in the United States. She is Miss Laura Lykins, a half-blood Shawnee woman. She graduated from the law department of the Carlisle, Penn., Indian school in June last, and then went to Oklahoma City, where she has been admitted to the bar, and is said to be very popular. She is twenty-eight years old.

THE death is announced at Santiago de Cuba, of Dr. Irene Toland, of St. Louis, Mo. Dr. Toland graduated from a medical college at St. Louis, became a member of its faculty, and soon obtained an excellent private practice. When the war with Spain was declared she enlisted as a nurse. She was sent to Shafter's army, and at Siboney attended wounded and fever-stricken soldiers until she fell at her post of duty.

AT an entertainment given in New York on September 30, in aid of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Protective Association, General Wheeler made an address, in which he said: "The men who have fought the nation's battles on land and sea have come to be spoken of as 'the men behind the guns.' It is a good thing to have men behind the guns sometimes; it fact, we couldn't very well do without them. But I tell you, my friends, this nation is quite as much indebted to the women of the land, who are ever and always behind the men who are behind the guns."

Educational.

ACCORDING to the Detroit Free Press, there are still 309 log schoolhouses in Michigan.

MEMBERS of the board of education have taken preliminary steps toward the establishment of a commercial high school as part of the educational system of Chicago. It is expected to put the plan into operation January 1, 1899.

IN a recent school election in West Olean, N. Y., the officers elected were all women. They were Mrs. Ida Fox, Mrs. John Anderson, Mrs. Henry Webster, trustees; Mrs. William Kamery, collector; Mrs. Henry Kamery, clerk.

BY the will of Hon. Howland Hazard, of South Kingston, Conn., Brown University gets $100,000; the Narragansett Library Association, $20,000, for the support of the library in Pease Dale; $20,000 for the support of a high school in South Kingston, especially to always maintain a manual training department in said school.

At Home.

MAYWOOD, a suburb of Chicago, has a curfew law which went into effect October 1.

COLONEL THEODORE ROOSEVELT of the now famous Rough Riders, has been nominated for governor by the Republicans of New York.

YELLOW fever is epidemic at Jackson, Miss., but in a mild form, and chiefly among the colored population. Quarantine regulations are strictly enforced.

THE estimated cost of raising the warship Maria Teresa up to date has been $100,000, and it will cost $800,000 to put her in perfect repair. The value of the ship is over $4,000,000.

THOMAS F. BAYARD, Democratic leader, who has been senator, Secretary of State and Ambassador to Great Britain, died at the home of his daughter in Dedham, Mass., on September 28.

REV. THOMAS E. GREEN, who was elected bishop of Iowa, to succeed the late Bishop Perry, at the special convention of the Episcopal Church at Davenport, September 5, has declined to serve until vindicated from certain veiled charges made at the time of his election.

Abroad.

SENOR EMILIO CASTELAR, the Spanish republican leader, has received a letter, dated at London, threatening that he will be the next victim of the anarchists.

SIR JOHN V. MOORE, an alderman of the city of London and senior partner of Moore Bros., leather merchants, has been elected Lord Mayor of London, to succeed Horatio David Davies, the present incumbent of that office.

ON September 26 the remains of Columbus were officially exhumed in the cathedral at Havana, preparatory to removal to Spain. The ceremony took place in the presence of General Blanco and the church and civil authorities.

THE office of counselor and assistant to the civil governor, the most important post in Santiago Province, has been offered to General Castillo, of the Cuban Junta. General Castillo is on cordial terms with Generals Wood and Lawton, and is popular among the Cubans. General Wood will immediately send him to the interior to talk to his countrymen and persuade them to disband and go to work on the big plantations and in the mines.

Contributed.

The New Patriotism.

BY HENRIETTA POMFRET ANDERSON.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?"—Scott.

LIVES there a man with heart so dead
Who never to the world hath said,
My own, my neighbor's land?
Who, loving freedom for herself
Refused the bribe of power or pelf
To stay the helping hand.

Alas! this world holds sordid men
Who heed no cry of want or pain,
That threats their bonds or gold.
Their fingers clutch the crying throat,
"A life is naught beside a groat,"
Their hearts congealed and cold.

"All lands are mine," the patriot cries.
For freedom's cause he bravely dies
In some far distant clime,
To help her banner o'er it wave,
To shield the weak and cheer the brave
Of every land and time.

Armenia called for help in vain,
A nation writhed in blood and pain,
Held by Europia's hand,
While fiendish slaughter, hellish lust,
Dragged freedom's banner in the dust,
In that far Eastern land.

Once more the cry for help has rung
From Cuba's parched and swollen tongue;
For freedom she implores.
Our boys in blue and boys in gray
Command the hosts of Spain to stay
The slaughter at our doors.

But, oh! why sounds no clarion call
In town and country, church and hall
For hundred thousand slain!
Alas! alas! our sons are sold
To fill our treasuries with gold,
And then we cry, "The Maine!"

To censure Spaniards can we dare
While staining our escutcheon fair
With blood of our own sons?
The freeman's ballot can prevail
To stop the voice of piteous wail
And change to joyous tones.

Oh, freemen of America,
Come! Battle in this bloodless fray;
The Captain never fails.
He leads us in this war for right,
The worlds shall bow unto His might—
For volunteers He calls.

Delano, Cal.

Lives that Touch.

BY H. T. H.

"NO, Mr. Scoville, I cannot take it. My mother would not have wished me to accept it. I must get some situation and, if successful, I need miss but one year. I can enter with the graduating class next year and will be much happier than to know I am incurring debt."

Ruth Harris handed back to the old family lawyer the generous check which he had so kindly offered her, and, thanking him again for his many kindnesses to her, she left the office and started towards home.

"Now, that is the kind of pluck I like," ejaculated the legal adviser whom men deemed so stern and businesslike alway. "I wish more of our young girls were as willing to help themselves. She will go home and look over the lists of 'Wanted,' I haven't a doubt—Why! just the thing!" suddenly springing up as if a new idea had rather forcibly struck him, "wonder why I did not think of it before! I'll step across the street and see Banks immediately. Perhaps the vacancy has not been filled," and he seized his hat somewhat excitedly for such a mechanical interpreter of the law. Leaving word with the office-boy, he threaded his way through the busy streets, chuckling to himself. "And if she receives more wages than the one going out, she will never be any wiser about it."

Ruth Harris wended her way into the quiet street, in which was the pretty cottage she called home, with an air of deep thoughtfulness which bespoke one to whom life meant more than mere existence. Her neat, half-mourning costume was not one to attract attention, and Ruth herself was called plain by all who judged from the exterior. But hers was a glad, buoyant nature, and her life was beautiful to all who knew her well. As a child trouble sat lightly on her shoulders, and the sunshine of her later years had driven many a sigh from her widowed mother's heart.

After the simple tea served by Sarah, the only servant, Ruth went up stairs to the room she called, sacredly, the family room. Drawing a rocker to a place where the light fell full upon two large portraits on the wall she sat down, her hands clasped loosely in her lap, her head leaning back, and began to think out the problem of life that necessity was forcing her to consider.

This was her twentieth birthday and the first anniversary of her mother's death. Of her father she remembered but little. Even of the day he was borne home white and still, there lingered but a faint memory; of the many doctors, the strange hush everywhere, the beautiful flowers. She had always associated her mother's tears with the name of father and had tried to chase the shadows from that loved face. They had lived in and for each other. The old life on Maple avenue faded from Ruth's mind and home to her meant the pleasant cottage where she and her mother lived so happily and simply with the servant who faithfully clung to them, planning the small income to such advantage as to provide for a college education for Ruth. But the small sum, even with the utmost care, had dwindled until the lawyer informed her that only a very little remained. Clearly she must do something to earn money before she could complete her college work. She thought long and earnestly without seeing any opening, for teachers were all engaged for the year, and she well knew that into every avenue of possible employment scores of applicants were daily crowding.

"A note, Miss Ruth," said Sarah at the door, "the boy is waiting."

Ruth opened and read. "Miss Harris," it ran, "an assistant teacher in West Side High School has resigned. You have been recommended to fill the vacancy. Will you call at my office at nine in the morning?"—signed by the clerk of the board.

Surprised and delighted, Ruth dispatched an affirmative answer by the boy. She felt confident that this recommendation and opening had come, in some way, from and through the old lawyer who had known her father and mother in their youth and now took such an interest in their only child. She had little doubt as to the satisfactory arrangements on the morrow. And so it proved.

The gentlemen assembled in Mr. Banks' office seemed as pleased with the applicant as she with the position and wages, the latter being much higher than she had even hoped. It was with a very grateful heart that she wended her way homewards again, and her lips sang joyful bits of songs throughout the day. Just at the sunset hour she left her room and started downstairs for the piano. She had avoided music of late, as it intensified her loneliness, for at this time, each evening, she had been accustomed to draw her mother's easy chair near the piano and to a soft accompaniment sing with her their favorite songs. But to-night it seemed as if the custom had never been omitted. On the stairs she paused and listened to the sound of music wafting up to her. It came from the room below, on the left of the hall, where now lived Mrs. Ellis and her invalid daughter, to whom she had rented part of the house since her mother's death, the moderate rent defraying Sarah's expenses while Ruth was at school.

Of them the latter had seen but little, her only opportunity having been this short summer vacation, and it had been spent chiefly in study, as she wished to complete more than the usual number of studies in her last year, and these strangers beneath her roof seemed to live closely to themselves. The daughter, by a stroke of paralysis, had lost the use of her lower limbs, and the mother seldom went out. They had made arrangements with Sarah to do their marketing, and it was from her that Ruth had received the little she knew of them. Her kindly advances in the way of flowers and delicacies for the invalid had been met with warm expressions of thankfulness, but beyond that she was no nearer an acquaintance than before. The tones that floated up to her as she stood listening for a moment were low, sweet and exquisite. Then a pause, and the mother was heard busying herself about the room. Ruth resolved to make another attempt soon to break the reserve between them, especially as she was to remain there all the year instead of going back to L—. As she reached the bottom step, something seemed to say, "Why not this evening?" and without waiting to reconsider, she turned and tapped lightly on their door.

"May I come in a moment without intruding?" she asked, somewhat timidly, seeing the look of surprise on the mother's face.

"My dear young lady, you are more than welcome," responded Mrs. Ellis, warmly; "we were speaking of you only a little while ago. Laura, Miss Harris is here."

While speaking she had placed a chair for Ruth and was turning the wheeled chair of the invalid from the window, out of which she seemed to have been looking. Laura held out her hand saying with a smile of rare sweetness, "I am so glad you came in."

Ruth thought she had never before seen so fair a face, and, stooping, impulsively kissed the pale brow. "I heard music and wanted to come nearer it. Indeed, I have long wished to know you better. There is one thing, at least, that we both love," turning her eyes significantly toward the window, against which leaned a beautiful harp.

Again that rich smile suffused the face of the invalid as she replied, "Yes, I love it, but mother seldom brings me my harp. She says it makes me sad. To-night it has had the opposite effect. Do you play?"

Before Ruth left the room that night, she and Laura had become warm friends. There was something about this beautiful, delicate girl, only a few years her senior, that appealed to the deepest sympathies in Ruth's nature. After that evening the two girls were often together; the one so strong and full of life and hope, the other so fragile and shrinking in her helplessness from the busy, thoughtless world; the one so buoyant and cheerful, the other often in tears, as though hiding some secret sorrow. And the great law that binds together the human universe drew these two into the warmest friendship.

Ruth freely told of her life here with her mother, her school days and plans for the coming year. Gradually, little by little, the reticence of this mother and daughter wore away and they revealed much of their past to her and gave her many glimpses into their lives of other days. They spoke of the years of luxury and travel, the long time spent in Italy, where Laura's musical talents were developed under the best teachers; a hint at the stay in London where this same lovely girl was received into the choicest circles of society, but not a word as to the husband and father.

At last Laura's burdened heart overflowed. "I must tell some one! I can not bear all this suspense and pain. Do you want to hear of poor, dear papa, Ruth?"

Ruth sat on a hassock by the invalid chair and held one of the white hands in her own. Mrs. Ellis had left the room. The two were quite alone.

With all a daughter's love and pride, Laura described her father as he used to be, handsome, kind and noble. But her voice took on a saddened cadence as she spoke of his love for the wine cup, and the night when, under its influence he staked largely at the gaming table and lost; of their return to this country and his repentance; how the passion for drink and gambling grew until at last only a note was left to tell of his flight and resolve to end his worthless life.

"Almost five long years have passed since that dark day, and we have never been able to discover a clue as to where he might be, or what he had done. I was ill for a long time, and when the doctors told me I could never walk again, I prayed to die. But God knew best. As soon as I was able to be moved we came to this city where our sorrow could be hidden among strangers."

Hot tears poured down her cheeks and sobs shook the fragile frame. Ruth, with quiet sympathy, allowed nature the first right of soothing the tired, sorrowed heart. Then, with tender, loving words she talked, and comforted, and quieted, until the sweet face wore its usual calmness as the mother re-entered the room. And as the weeks and months passed, this confidence drew the two girls more closely together than ever.

It was both a pleasant and profitable year to Ruth. Contact with fifty wide-awake boys and girls taught her almost as many lessons as she strove to inculcate, though on different texts. She threw all her energies into the work and with her rich, full and firm nature, she gained not only the obedience but the love of all her pupils. When mingling again with the students at L—, she looked back upon the year spent in teaching, and knew she was much stronger and wiser for the experience.

Commencement day came and passed. Ruth was given the place of honor as orator and scholar; but, better still, an offer of position as instructor in the college for the coming year. The future looked bright to her despite the shadows in the background, as, once more, she came up the walk that led to her own home. Catching sight of Laura's pale, patient face at the window, watching eagerly for her, she hastened her steps and found a warm welcome awaiting her.

The short summer vacation seemed shorter than ever. As the time drew near for Ruth to return to L— again, she was almost loth to leave the two whose lives appealed so strongly to her, and seemed so intertwined with her own. She wished that she might bring some pleasure to them, lasting and deep, that would dispel some of the clouds of sorrow that hung low above them. But in four days she must leave for her work in the college. On the last morning but two of her vacation, Mr. Scovil came blustering in with a roll of papers under his arm, which he deposited on the table, saying:

"Miss Harris, we are having mass temperance meetings at Music Hall this week. I heard you at the university on Commencement day, and I want you to have as enthusiastic an address on temperance to-morrow night as you had on those old 'ologies,' or whatever they were. Here is material for statistics if you need any. I will send a carriage for you at 7: 30. Good-morning," and with nothing further he was gone.

. . . . . .

The hall was crowded. Ruth was the last speaker. Into her strong, pathetic appeal she had woven the story told her by Laura. As she told it, a man in the audience rose to his feet in intense excitement. As she closed, he sank down again, burying his face in his hands.

The large audience was dispersing, and Ruth was half way down the aisle when this same man grasped her arm and, in a voice hoarse with agitation, said, "Pardon me, but do you know of whom you spoke to-night? Is my Laura and her mother still living?"

For a moment only was Ruth startled and amazed. The man before her bore no marks of recent dissipation, was well dressed and of cultured appearance. Then she said, eagerly:

"Are you Mr. Ellis? Oh, I am so glad. Yes, your wife and daughter are living. Mr. Scovil," turning to that astonished gentleman, "will you please take Mr. Ellis immediately to my home? I will wait here until you return for me."

Late that evening Ruth, standing before her mother's picture, caught the sound of low, throbbing music from the harp below that was so used to responding to the soul of its owner. Then came a murmur of voices, rising, falling, blending —a deep, strong tone, a rich contralto, and then a clear note above—only a murmur, but it seemed to the listener like a benediction from above.

West Unity, Ohio.

To-morrow's Rose.

AUTUMN weather may sweep the leaves of happiness ruthlessly away, but deep in the heart is set the promise of to-morrow's rose.

Why fret at present grief, at the darkness, the lonliness, the misfortunes of to-day? The promise is sure. Towering skies, blustering winds, and piercing cold can do no harm while this promise, in living warmth and sweetness, lies close shut within the heart. Patience is at all times master of adverse circumstances.—Frances Bennett Callaway.

The Social Creed of Frances Willard.

BY REV. FREDERICK G. STRICKLAND.

IN "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard," by Anna A. Gordon, on page 395 you will find the following tribute from Benjamin Fay Mills:

"No work that Frances Willard did was small. But these two characteristics marked her service of humanity. She moved continually from the lesser to the greater, and she grew younger and fresher with the lapse of years. These two are the rarest and most potent qualities that God gives to men. The climax of a great life would have been reached if she had left the body after the establishment of the first World union for the world's sake and the culmination of her great work for temperance. But she was greater than this. By a new birth in her last years her vision was enlarged, her horizon was extended, and she has spoken, among her last words, her greatest message, the prophecy and the inspiration of a true, social regeneration."

"Miss Willard," says Mr. Sidney Webb, of London, Eng., "did not start back in nervous apprehension, as so many of her countrymen do at the name of socialism. She had fought too many hard fights for the weak and down-trodden not to know that every good cause, from Christianity itself down to the social reform movement of to-day, is promptly confused by its enemies with violence, incendiarism and the breaking up of laws. She found herself in close sympathy with the principles, objects and methods of the English socialists, as represented by the Fabian society, and in August, 1893, she, spontaneously and unsolicited, applied for membership, signed the society's 'basis' and continued until her death to send her annual contribution to the society's funds."

Naturally white-ribboners will be interested to know something of the Fabian society and its creed. Briefly, it aims at the reorganization of society by the emancipation of land and industrial capital from individual and class ownership, and the vesting of them in the community for the general benefit.

We all want to abolish drunkenness, still, we should hold in mind that it is not the only cause of distress. Mr. Warner, in "American Charities," concludes that the first great cause of dire poverty is lack of employment. The second great cause, almost equal to the first, is sickness and death in the homes of the poor. The third great cause, though only one-half as great as either of the other two, is the use of intoxicants. But, waiving other questions, we want to abolish drunkenness, for surely it is bad enough to be abolished. To get at this we wish to abolish the drink-fostering institution, the saloon.

But where shall we strike in order to hit the saloon? It is a politico-social institution, thoroughly ingrafted in our national life. Its proprietor is supported and protected by the business and political interests of the nation. In what way, we shall see. The saloonkeeper is the mightiest political factor of this commonwealth. He may or may not control votes directly, but he is all-powerful through his influence. How does he get this influence? By providing communities with a great social need, a neighborly clearing house, a public parlor (especially for homes that have no parlor)—that is, a saloon. Of course, this need is supplied under debasing surroundings and through degrading means, because a degraded man is the more susceptible to influence. Starting then with the floating voter, the bum or the slum dweller, above him in the politico-social scale is the saloonkeeper, as we have seen. Over him is the ward politician, next the party manager and then the statesman. But still ascending the scale, we reach the great corporation lawyer, once vulgarly called the lobbyist (a position often occupied by our ex-presidents). Then above the corporation lawyer, the great business king. And, presumably, above him is the molder of public opinion—the educator, the editor and the preacher.

We have traced the saloon and the slum to the very altar of the church. The shrewd, self-interested business man to-day laughs at our voting out the saloon. He knows that the whole system must be voted out before the saloon will go. Let us reduce it to a house-that-Jack-built series. In order for his business to succeed, he must secure protective legislation. For this he pays his corporation lawyer, who in turn pays or persuades the legislator, that renders his tribute to the party manager, that manipulates the ward politician, that pays the saloonkeeper, that gives to the voter a drink, a lunch and a cigar.

Now look at me, the Pharisee, beholding this tragedy of human life. The great business man, the corporation lawyer, the statesman, and possibly the party manager, all belong to my church. And shall I open my mouth and say: "How great and how good and how prosperous Christianity will make men such as these, my parishioners; and on the other hand, how vile are those sinners outside of the church, the low ward politician, the lawless saloonkeeper and the anarchists of the seething slum?" No! God helping me, I will and do, here and now, sign the pledge to quit this nonsense. With Rev. Mr. Tuckerman I say the man at the top of the heap is at the bottom of the deviltry. The man who is giving his life to the upholding of our present social and industrial order is striking hands with the saloonkeeper, although the said man votes regularly the Prohibition party ticket.

But what is the way out? The social conscience of the people must be aroused. The American people are right at heart; they are with us in this temperance reform, but they think we have not gone deep enough, although they cannot tell how to go deeper. But this is the way. It is the way of Him who prayed, "Thy kingdom come."

Our lamented leader said in a letter to the Fabian society: "I believe the things that Christian socialism stands for, and were I not 'teetotally' occupied would go into the movement heart and soul, as indeed I have done in public utterances for many years. Oh, that I were young again, and it should have my life! It is God's way out of the wilderness into the promised land. It is the very marrow and fatness of Christ's gospel. It is Christianity applied. Oh! that I were young again, and it should have my life!"

Do not those words appeal to you? Shall the prophet-like spirit of this beautiful life still lead on?

Chicago, Ill.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

ONE dark rainy morning a dear woman, diseased in mind and frail in body came into Willard Hall to find peace. She was accompanied by her mother and a trained nurse, who said when her patient found she was in Chicago she would not leave until she had been to the place where Miss Willard lay in her last sleep, for there she wanted to ask God to give her health and peace of mind. She went to a worker who was at the organ and said, "Come, pray," and then knelt there in the very place where the dear Chieftain in her dainty gray casket, received the homage of a loving, sorrowing people, and with her arms clasped around Miss Willard's picture, prayed for health and strength. She went away with a quiet "Thank you."

Oh, how many in despair and lonely heart-yearnings which can not be uttered, and with agony burned into their very souls, have through Frances Willard's steadfast faith in God, been drawn nearer and upward into the white heights of God's love!

. . . . . .

Prayer was asked that a girl going through a terrible operation might have her faith strengthened. Letters from the far East were presented, and God in His infinite mercy heard and answered prayer right there at that special service. Such a hush comes over us all as we say, "The time for the noontide prayer has arrived. Are there any special petitions to-day, either for yourselves or for others?" Then one, in scarcely audible tones, presents her husband, another asks for a friend, another that he may have more courage to speak for God when the opportunity arises. Another that her husband who left her that morning saying he would never return, might come back a converted man.

. . . . . .

At the close of one hour the appeal was made, "Is there any one here who by the uplifted hand will ask us to stay and pray with them?" Three men responded and one woman. A blessed prayer service followed. God was with us, and four newly awakened souls went out into life redeemed.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

Miss Parrish's Last Letter From Japan.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Truly, the days of miracles have not passed. Last summer such a small group of white-ribboners—methinks I could have counted them upon the fingers of my hands—gathered for an hour in the little chapel at Karnizawa (the place where missionaries assemble during the heated term) to discuss W. C. T. U. plans and methods. There was no enthusiasm. This year we arranged for a full day's session, and the interest was so great that we were compelled to continue up till noon of the second day, and then many did not want to close. The same chapel was full this time, and it was evident that the society has a score of friends now, where it had only one a year ago.

In the absence of the president, Miss Florence Denton, Mrs. James Gooderham, of Toronto, Canada, was called to the chair. She made a most beautiful speech in which she said that she had met many of the noted women of the world, but that Frances Willard was without a peer. She urged the membership in Japan to be loyal to their present leader, the Lady Henry Somerset, who had so fully demonstrated her greatness by acknowledging her mistake, and closed with the hope that each one of us might be standing in the place of a helper, or at least that we might not be hindering the work.

Five excellent papers had been prepared by as many superintendents of departments. "Scientific Temperance Instruction," Miss Alice Miller, read by Mrs. Nelson, of Canton, China; "Unfermented Wine," Miss Elizabeth Preston; "Literature," Miss Florence Denton, read by Miss Gertrude Cosad; "Foods," Miss H. Frances Parmelee; "Dress Reform," Mrs. Genevieve Faville Topping. Then the conference closed with a free parliament.

The papers, particularly those on foods and dress reform, were followed by spirited discussions, nearly all the ladies taking part. Miss Parmelee's arguments in favor of a vegetarian diet were unanswerable, and some of the ladies declared if they were kindergartners, and could look like Mrs. Topping, they would be ready for any sort of dress reform at once. Many unusually clever things were said. I wish the dear old UNION SIGNAL were twenty times its present size, so that I might really take you into this far-away but wonderfully home-like meeting.

Fourteen subscribers to our World's organ were secured, and nearly two hundred for the two vernacular temperance magazines (the men's and women's societies here each publish a paper), besides thirty dollars were subscribed toward Mr. Miyama's traveling expenses. This earnest evangelist gave such excellent satisfaction last year, that he has been retained by the National committee, and will be associated with Mrs. Large.

In every sense the conference was a great success, and the suggestion to make it, as well as the Kamakura meetings, a permanent Chautauqua, has met with much favor. I believe the work in the "land of the rising sun" will go grandly forward from this time on. There are so many signs of promise. Two other of the largest missions in Japan, the Presbyterians, representing seven or eight distinct bodies, and the Baptists, also strong, adopted the fourth Sunday in November as temperance day at their recent annual councils. The writer has had many things to make her happy these last months. Hosts have come to believe that there is need of organized work for total abstinence in Japan.

The Buddhist world has not been slow to note that it is the Christians who are active in this line of effort. Not long ago, when an American gentleman was passing through this country who did not know a word of the language of the people, some natives asked him to drink. He shook his head, and then, he supposed, they asked him why he refused, for when they found they could not make him understand in that way, one of them took a book and drew a cross on it with his finger, as much as to say, "You are a Christian?" To this he assented with his head, and then they smiled and troubled him no longer. I am more and more surprised at the impression Christianity has made upon this nation.

Already you are aware that the time draws very near when I shall leave the scene of my last two years' labors. A little more work in the schools and colleges, and then the Men's National Organizing Convention, October 1 and 2, completes the schedule outlined months ago. October 5 is the date of sailing. When this is read, I shall perhaps be on the seas. Pray that "the winds and the waves" may be very still. It will not be easy to leave those here whom I have learned to love dearly, and go once more to meet strange faces and new conditions, but our Father goes with me, and who is so sympathetic and appreciative as He?

My address when in China will be 12 Range Ave., Shanghai; in Burma, care of the Baptist College, Rangoon. While you follow me, please do not fail to remember, also, the one who takes charge here, Mrs. E. Spencer-Large. She is one of the most capable workers I have ever known, speaks the language well, and will render excellent service if you "hold up her hands."

As I close my letter, I learn that Mrs. Yajima and Miss Mitani have returned to the capital, jubilant over the success of their itinerary.

Yours for the full emancipation of womanhood everywhere, CLARA PARRISH.

Tokyo, Japan, Sept. 8, 1898.

A Batch of Conventions.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Thus far during this month I have attended eleven conventions, the annual meetings of ten counties in Pennsylvania, some of them as large and larger than many state conventions, and last night at Bangor the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Maine Woman's Christian Temperance Union was closed with great success and enthusiasm.

There seemed no diminution of zeal and interest in the Keystone state meetings, and not a breath of criticism was heard concerning the decision of the executive committee taken in Chicago last July relative to the Temple. In the majority of cases, strong expressions of confidence in and endorsement of that action were heard, and resolutions to that effect were passed.

To some of these meetings women drove across the country twenty and twenty-five miles. Several were held in country churches, where the town consisted of church, postoffice, blacksmith shop and one or two residences within sight.

The people from all the region round about drove in to the meeting, bringing baskets of lunch with them, which was in abundance and to spare. At night the church and churchyard were packed; choirs of men and women—sometimes men alone—furnished a class and style of music, carefully prepared, which many a town would be glad to hear and proud to produce. Let us hold more conventions in the country.

Of course, it goes without saying, that Maine re-elected her president without a single dissent, and a strong resolution endorsing the action of the National executive committee was passed. To those who have known Mrs. Stevens outside of Maine only, she will appear as a revelation when seen among her own women and as presiding officer. Genial, free and natural, with a pleasant word for each, she enlivens the routine of business with bright little sallies of wit, which are charming.

The last night of the convention in Bangor, the fine city hall was provided by the Catholic priest, and Catholic Total Abstinence Societies, and a great audience of Protestants and Catholics were addressed by Mrs. Leonora Lake, of St. Louis, who made a fine impression. Sunday she speaks in Portland, and then goes to South Dakota for the month of October.

Maine's faithful corresponding secretary, Mrs. Sarah Lord-Cram, resigned and was succeeded by Miss Cornelia M. Dow, of Portland. All other officers were re-elected.

This morning I accompanied Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, of our very own, to her most delightful home in Winthrop Centre. I am writing from this busy, quiet, charming haven of rest. Oh, that I could stay a month! Mrs. Bailey has been ill but is recovering her strength so well that she has decided to go on to Chicago for W. T. P. A. stockholders' meeting October 19, and afterward to the National Council of Women (of which she is a general officer) at Omaha.

Our dear Anna Gordon has been sick for weeks, but in the clear, odorous piney woods of Maine she is recovering slowly and was able to be in the convention now and then for a little while.

Dear, brave, breaking heart, she is making a silent but awful fight with the grief that finds no surcease from sorrow. God help her—God help us all! CLARA C. HOFFMAN.

Winthrop Centre, Me., Sept. 23, 1898.

A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—I hasten to warn your readers against a new novel that I have been induced to read, because it is labeled, in a sub-heading, "A Romance of Palestine," and "dedicated, by permission," to Gladstone. Surely he never read it, for it revolves about three illicit loves, all of which are unwholesomely pictured, and one of which is apologized for, even glorified. A shepherd, finding some difficulty in getting permission to marry the peasant girl he loves, who has been betrothed by her parents to another, takes her for his wife in a mountain cave. This adultery is not once condemned, but excused in a way that would suggest to readers that have found obstacles to marriage a like course. Such gilded lies as these are given: "In the sight of God and angels, Hassan and Hilwe were man and wife." "Nor did I [Hassan] offend against custom till nature cried within me and I could not help myself." "Thou art innocent and spotless [Hilwe says to Hassan] as the daylight." "The aureola of motherhood [when the child was born] shone round about her and sanctified her," "a personification of the Madonna."

The author has no condemnation, except for those who sought to punish this and the other chief adultery of the book, which is described in a way which would have a tendency to duplicate it.

No wonder impurity is increasing apace all over the land when such publishers as the one of this book will send out such doctrine as this, in such a pious garb of Bible scenery as will introduce it into Christian homes, where, by its seeming religiousness, it will work like the serpent in Eden. Police Gazettes are bad enough, but purity's worst foes are the free-love novels that talented writers and reputable publishers are sending out so numerously to-day, one of many expressions of the current social doctrine that one need not do right if it involves self-denial.

(REV.) WILBUR F. CRAFTS, PH. D.
Washington, D. C.

A Bit of Praise all Around.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—No paper comes to my desk which is more thoroughly perused than THE UNION SIGNAL. I do not know whether the paper with its most efficient editors will accept a word from a male correspondent, but if so, I wish to congratulate the W. C. T. U. upon the glorious, magnificent and most humane work that it performed during the recent war.

Especially would I write of the superintendent of the soldiers' and sailors' department of the District of Columbia, Miss Lavinia H. Chase, one of the most modest, consecrated, indefatigable workers that I have ever known. "They have done the work and deserve all the praise," are the words with which she closes her letter in the SIGNAL of the 15th inst. Such words are characteristic of the writer; one must know her that her zeal and labors may be fully appreciated.

She does not tell that when she proposed the opening of a lunch room, and to have a place where the soldier boys could go in and rest, sit down and write to mother or sweetheart, find friends who would visit with them, and thus keep them from the saloon and other places of vice, that many ladies said, "Oh, it can't be done. Where will we get the provisions from, who will be able to give their time to this work?" etc. With her hand on the wheel, with faith in God, and confidence in humanity, Miss Chase with suavity of manner replied, "Ladies, it can be done." That was sufficient; of course there were workers to rally about her, for while she commanded the ship no one feared that it would run upon the shoals or rocks. The ladies knew her, she had spoken before, she had done what seemed nearly miraculous, why should they not trust her now? There is not another woman in Washington who can rally so many workers, who has such an influence for good, and who does as much work for God and home and native land as Miss Chase.

Many shall rise in that day and call her blessed. Many a heart has been cheered, many a life reformed, and many a soul will be saved because of her sacrifice and toil.

May God bless her and her department! We will not be selfish in the matter, may God bless the world-wide W. C. T. U. in all of its departments and cause it to do even greater things in coming days because of its glorious victories in the past.

Trusting you may print this communication that Miss Chase may know her work is fully appreciated and others knowing of her good work may go and do likewise, I have the honor to remain,

Sincerely yours,
ARTHUR O. SYKES,
Chaplain U. S. Navy.

Washington, D. C.

The Women of the Church Not Responsible.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In traveling around one often takes "Hobson's choice" in reading matter, and under such circumstances an old number of THE UNION SIGNAL just gave me the following sentence from Rev. J. Edward Farrow, of Wilmington, Vt.: "The power to place the vote on election day is ours, and when the Christian church on this continent so pleases, the liquor traffic can be wiped out in one day." One would infer that "ours" and the "Christian church" meant one and the same thing. Does it? The "Christian church" means women, generally speaking, as fully two-thirds of its membership is of that sex. But as they have no voice in placing the vote, and if wiping out the liquor traffic depends upon the vote, we fail to see how he can lay its continuance at the door of the church when the majority of its constituents have their hands tied behind them. If he does mean one and the same by these two terms, then he means men only, in which case the "Christian church" has always had the power. That they have failed to use it, should hardly be excused by blaming the church. I have no desire to enter into a controversy with any one, much less one from my "Old New England" home, Vermont, but it would be with a sense of loyal pride that I would congratulate Brother Farrow if he had spoken right out from the little "Green Mountain state" in unmistakable tones that when the greater element of the church is endowed with its rightful privileges—when women can use their God-given power as well as their sentiments—then and then only can the church do its duty. Let the law-makers, the men, the small but powerful element of the church, answer for themselves for withholding from one-half of humanity and two-thirds of the church the privileges which would make the church the power it ought to be in the land.

MARY A. WHEDON.

Fargo, N. D.

THE papers far and wide publish the fact that a three-year-old boy in Paterson got hold of a bottle of whisky and drank from it with fatal result. In spite of the carelessness that made it possible for him to get the poison, the county physician decided that no one was to blame but the poor little victim himself. Church and society unite on the same verdict in the case of thousands of older boys poisoned body and soul by the drink put in their way by the criminal neglect of a Christian civilization.—The Voice.

Local Union.

QUESTION.—Does the Woman's Christian Temperance Union really believe that the cause of temperance would be advanced by the use of water instead of wine in the christening of a battleship? Would not throwing it into the ocean be a very good use to which to put all wine?

ANSWER.—The question shows a singular misapprehension of the purpose of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in making its request that water be substituted for wine in the launching of the Illinois. Strange as it may seem, the friends of temperance have shared that misapprehension with a naturally critical press. The thought embodied in the two questions has been presented in various forms, all implying that the putting of wine where it could injure no one would be a highly meritorious act. One dear old lady writes, "What is broken over the prow can't be drunk in the cabin." Despite the irrefutable logic of the last assertion the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, as a whole, believes that the use of water instead of wine, would so far advance the cause of temperance as to richly compensate for the risk entailed in allowing one particular bottle of wine to be absorbed by a man rather than by Father Neptune. Perhaps I should say we believe that the use of water would tend to a recognition of the advance the temperance cause has already made. That was the inner purpose of our request. There was a time, not so very far distant, when new buildings were baptized with liquor; when it was present for both external and internal uses at nearly every public occasion, from the "raising" of a barn to the dedication of a church, at least the dedication of some churches. The advance in temperance sentiment has made such a procedure almost impossible to-day. Why should we not score another victory and set up another milestone to mark our onward way by banishing an obsolete custom from the one point to which it adheres—the launching of ships? The fitness of dedicating the vessel with the element in which it is to exist, it would seem, must be apparent to all. Surely the absurdity of the position must lie with those who argue that the destruction of one particular bottle of wine could in any way advance the cause of temperance. If "drunk in the cabin" it would be only an index to the personal habits of the cabin's inmates and would not mean that a great state had given its official sanction to an act which recognizes alcohol as a promoter of happiness, safety and prosperity, when the facts of experience as well as the dicta of science prove that it promotes the exact reverse.

Q.—I notice in THE UNION SIGNAL that requests are repeatedly made for money for an especial cause, to be sent directly to some designated person. Ought not all money to be sent through the regular channel of local, county, district, state and National treasurers?

A.—Without doubt this is the proper channel for the transmission of dues and, without doubt it would be the proper channel for the transmission of all other moneys, if only we were enjoying the large leisure of the millennium and the "King's business" did not so often "require haste." A little thought will show how greatly our work would be retarded if this rule were rigidly enforced. For example—if Mrs. Thacher had been obliged to await this slow process her work for the soldiers and sailors in this time of crisis would be yet in an embryonic state. We could not so swiftly have poured our help into Armenia if this rule had been insisted upon. Moreover, think of the additional nervous force and additional postage involved in the writing of so many letters. It would seem to be a rule more honored in the breach than in the observance, except in such financial transactions as do not demand haste. This, which to my thought, is the essential spirit of the rule, should, however, always be observed—viz., all moneys expended for any cause whatever should be reported through the regular channel. The observance of this law would make it possible for the various treasurers to correctly report the amounts raised in county, district or state and, at the same time, would not hinder the expedition of important work.

THE best way to keep chaff out of a half bushel, is to fill it up with wheat.—Rev. W. C. Bartlett.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Our God hath not forsaken us. Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you. The Lord your God proveth you, to know whether you love the Lord your God. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God.—Ezra 9:9; I. Pet. 4:12; Deut. 13:3; Psa. 146:5.

AT the fourth district Illinois W. C. T. U. convention held at Ravenswood, September 22 and 23, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we will use our utmost endeavor to help retire the Temple Trust Bonds, believing this to be the wish of our sainted leader, Frances E. Willard, as well as a moral obligation."

Mrs. Stannard was appointed Temple superintendent of the district for the ensuing year.

At a meeting of the second district, Illinois W. C. T. U., held September 22, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, That we will stand by the Temple Trustees in their efforts to pay for the Temple, and make it a memorial to Miss Willard."

✠

At the annual convention of the fourteenth district Illinois W. C. T. U., a strong resolution to stand by the Temple and pay off the Temple Trust Bonds as a moral obligation, was adopted.

At the nineteenth Iowa W. C. T. U. district convention held at Ruthven, the following resolution was passed:

"Believing that the Woman's Temple is the greatest enterprise undertaken in the name of womanhood, and that its loss would be an irreparable calamity, not only to the temperance cause, but to the progress of womanhood, and as no memorial to our beloved leader, Frances E. Willard, could be as fitting as this,

"Resolved, That we pledge to the Temple Trustees our hearty support, until by its ownership it becomes such memorial; and under her name continues her work."

✠

Mrs. Maria Malloy, Ishpeming, Mich., sends a most touching letter written by a prisoner. He is very ingenious and seems to be a thoroughly converted man, only desirous of doing good. He takes THE UNION SIGNAL in prison and knows all about the Temple. He wants to give $10 to the Temple fund, and a specimen of his work in the shape of two dainty white satin bows is inclosed in a letter. One has on it W. C. T. U. in raised gold letters, the other L. T. L.; these and other pretty devices, such as book marks, which he makes in prison, he proposes to send us to sell for the benefit of the Temple.

✠

Mrs. A. S. Mott, Grafton, N. D., our able Temple superintendent, has sent us another check, amounting to $84, which completes the Grand Forks pledge; $5 has just been received from Miss Agnes Morgan, Wakayama Ki, Japan, to be placed in the name of her mother, Mrs. W. H. Morgan, a loyal temperance worker of Watson, Mo. Miss Lucie Dobbie sent some time ago $50 to be credited to the Calumet, Mich., W. C. T. U. Of this amount, $28 was received from fifty cent subscription cards. If all members of unions had taken the same trouble to send out to their friends four cards, we would by this time have realized from the 500,000 sent out $250,000. We ask, what is to hinder this being done now, and save our beautiful Temple?

✠

In a late number of the Household Realm, Alice Webster has an article on the Temple, which contains much that has no foundation in fact, but it also contains facts that no one can gainsay. She says: "In Chicago, the city of magnificent business blocks, the Woman's Temple stands out as one of the grandest and most imposing. No other building in the world erected by women can approach to it in beauty and strength." Oh, women of the white-ribbon, if you have no money yourselves to give to the Temple, surely you can at least find four persons among your acquaintances in this broad land, who would be more than willing to slip fifty cents into the cards that are now lying idly in your homes, in order that the House Beautiful may be saved.

Our Children.

Over the Hills.

BY LOUISA A'HMUTY NASH.

OVER the hills to "sleepy hollow,"
Over the hills and away;
The red sun's gone, and you must follow,
Tired quite out with play.

Over the hills with lagging footstep
Hard "to say good-by,
Long he waits on the pale blue doorstep,
Before he leaves the sky."

Over the hills a starry lantern
Lighted to show the way
To "sleepy hollow's" cozy curtain,
To say good-by to play.

"Up over the stairs, I'm going slowly
Into my cozy cot
Good-night, good-night, I'm saying only
That must n't be forgot!"

Nashville, Ore.

The Story of a Tree.

"I AM so tired! I am so tired! I am so tired!" Over and over, the Wind, passing through the beautiful top of a Palm Tree, heard it sighing.

"What," said the Wind, with a petulant little gust, "what are you so tired of, I should like to know? I might have some reason to talk about being tired, always on the go, as I am. But you! Why, you do nothing but stand still, from year end to year end! No, you don't stand quite still, you do grow. But then, that's nothing. Everything grows until it begins to die."

The beautiful Carnahuba Palm Tree, standing in the wide Brazilian forest, was of a very mild and patient disposition, but even it could not silently endure such contempt as this.

"Your remarks only show your ignorance, my friend. There are in this whole wide world very few of our Heavenly Father's creatures who do more work than I for the benefit of mankind."

The Wind laughed so hard at this that the leaves of all the other trees in the forest rustled and clapped together in boisterous applause; while the Wind called out between his fits of laughter, "Hear! hear! Tell us, oh, Mr. Palm Tree, what is the work you do that tires you so?"

The patient Palm Tree shook his leaves softly, as if he would say, "It is of no use; no one will ever appreciate my work," but he did not say this, he only thought it, and began thus to answer the question of the Wind:

"I give to men food, drink, and clothing; I provide them with means to keep rain from their houses and to sail on the water; and I have to work hard to do all this. I began even before I can remember, and I shall continue until I die. I do not complain, I am not tired of the work, but I am tired because my work is not recognized; I would like to be thanked! I think thanks are my due."

Again the Wind laughed, and all the trees of the forest rustled.

"Mr. Palm Tree wishes to be thanked; ho! ho! As if men—the ungrateful creatures—ever thanked any of us! We all spend our lives in working for them, but what man ever thanks us?"

But all the while, down at the foot of the great, sad Palm Tree, was sitting a man who listened, and said to himself:

"The Palm Tree and the Wind are right. Men are ungrateful creatures. Let me count up now just a few of the things which this very palm tree does for the men who live near it.

"Here is my own little dwelling. Its roof is thatched with the palm's great leaves, which shed rain like sheets of india rubber, and are as strong as pine shingles.

"From its leaves and bark have been drawn the strong fibre which has been woven into stout, close canvas for the sails of my boat, and for my door hangings and curtains. My floor is covered with stout matting made from the same; and all the ropes and cords I use are made from them; while from the finer fibres are made the broad, light hats which shield my head so well from both rain and sun.

"The hollow tubes of the great leaf-stalks serve as pipes for my pump, and as water conductors wherever I need them.

"When I am thirsty, I can bore a hole into the side of the tree's trunk, and draw from it a delicious sweet sap.

"From the young leaves I can make a drink that is as good as coffee, and this I can sweeten with the fruit sap.

"On the under sides of the leaves collect scales of wax, from which I make candles of a beautiful yellow color and a fine fragrance.

"The largest of the leaves I can bind together with ropes of their own fibre, to make a water-tight raft in which I can sail on the river.

"The young sprouts of the new leaves are a most delicious vegetable when cooked like asparagus, and its small, black fruit is both pleasant and wholesome, whether eaten raw or cooked in various ways.

"Its trunk furnishes a wood that is valuable for all the purposes for which wood is used. Its pith is good for food when prepared like sago. Even its ashes are useful, because from them we can extract a substitute for cooking soda.

"Yes, decidedly," said the man at the foot of the tree, looking up into its branches, and taking off his hat to show his respect, "yes, decidedly, Mr. Palm Tree, you do deserve the hearty thanks of mankind."

Then the Carnahuba Palm Tree was so pleased that he sighed no more, while even the Wind turned his laughter to praises, and all the other trees of the wide Brazilian forest again clapped their leaves together in applause, to think that at last even one tree had been thanked for its labors.

The Friendly Shadow.

BY FRANCES BENNETT CALLAWAY.

ONCE upon a time there grew by the wayside a sturdy oak with such wide-spreading branches, rustling leaves and glossy acorns, that passers-by used to look up and exclaim with admiration: "What a magnificent tree!"

But no one ever noticed the friendly shadow. The oak tree used to scold until hoarse, while this quiet companion would nod pleasantly in reply, and sometimes, after the longest monologue one might have suspected the shadow was sound asleep.

The shadow, though so quiet, had a way of entering intimately into all one's thoughts and feelings which the oak understood perfectly; so the oak tree loved the shadow, and felt lonely and dismal enough on dark days when this friend was hidden away.

On a sunshiny May morning, when the oak was clad in downy, half-open leaves, the shadow would come forth as shy as any young girl, in light and filmy dress, and every step would be as soft as a caress over the young grass. How different in midsummer when the leaves were crisp and dark! Then the shadow, grown more confident, put on innumerable crimps and frills with opulent rich gowns which threw a velvet coolness all about the tree.

In autumn weather when red leaves were flying fast, the shadow would come in fluttering skirts all shimmering with drops of brightness, and to and fro with jocund steps dance in perfect time while the oak tree and the wind whistled measures of shrill music together. The scene was changed on a winter's night when the moon peering between wild, dark clouds found only a few torn leaves shivering on the oak tree and the faithful shadow also wrapped in rags, shivered with the tree.

One day the oak tree was cut down and carried away. Then the little children cried because their old playmate, the shadow, was gone, and the poor, tired woman with a burden to bear sighed whenever she passed the spot where the shadow had been, feeling as if she had lost some sweet solace out of her life. The harvesters complained loudly because there was no shadow at noon to fan them to coolness, and the poor wayfarer in the blazing sun found no resting place. One and all lamented as if a friend was gone when they said,

"How we miss the shadow!"

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Read the little letter from Grace Rieke and see if there is anything peculiar about it! One senterce contains a whole gold mine of "food for thought!" I read it once, then I rubbed my eyes and read it again, to make sure that I was not mistaken. She says, "I have four brothers and two sisters, and we are all going to vote the prohibition ticket some day." What an astonishing statement for a girl to make, I thought, and then I looked down to the bottom of the page and found that this little girl lives in Colorado. That explains it all, for of course you know that women vote in that state; but it seems a little queer to read: "My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and votes the prohibition ticket."

I am quite sure that all mammas would vote the prohibition ticket if they had a chance, and so would the girls of our Cozy Corner and the L. T. L., so the question is, What are we going to do about it, all the rest of my girls and me? We can't move to Colorado, for the state would not hold us all, so there is but one other course. We must all work for suffrage as well as temperance, for votes count for more than prayers when it comes to driving out the saloon, and that is what we are striving for. Suffrage for women can only come by vote of the men, so here is a grand opportunity for my boys to distinguish themselves when they come to their majority. If they vote to confer this privilege on their sisters and mothers they will be doing credit to their "bringing up." Don't you think so?

Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—My mamma has been reading the cousins' letters in the Cozy Corner to me. My mamma has taken THE UNION SIGNAL for years and votes the prohibition ticket. My papa never used tobacco or liquor. I have four brothers and two sisters and we are all going to vote the prohibition ticket some day.

Yours lovingly,

Sterling, Col. GRACE RIEKE.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a new girl in the Cozy Corner, but I want to tell you that I liked your last letter ever so much, because I have been trying to help father and mother as you said we ought to. This summer papa and I helped mamma about the evening work. He was tired from his day's work in the city, and the weather was hot, and it was often very hard for me to volunteer to help mamma, but I knew he would if I didn't, so I tried to get ahead of him, but sometimes I didn't. I have a little brother, Richard, and he can keep some one running after him all the time. I love him dearly, and wheel him in his little wagon sometimes when I want to go and ride on my wheel ever so much. It is awful hard for me to do it, but now that I know even Aunt Mary calls it "giving of your very best" I am going to do it and enjoy it, too: I know papa and mamma thought it was hard for me sometimes, but I'm glad other big folks know that we children have hard times, too.

Your niece,

Harvey, Ill. MARY.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.

40.

I am composed of 10 letters.
My 8, 2, 10 is something we ride in.
My 5, 4, 7 is something we burn.
My 1, 9, 3 one kind of anger.
My 6 is a vowel.
My whole is a very large island.

Lebanon, Tenn. EMILY C. KENNARD.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 29.

No. 39. Hidden Heroes. 1, Sampson; 2, Hobson; 3, Dewey; 4, Schley; 5, Shafter.

Correct answers to No. 32 were sent by Pansy Andrus, Detroit, Mich., Tommy Hoyt, Roseland, La., Hilton S. Pedley, East Peacham, Vt., and Edwin Byles, Fredonia, Pa.

UNION SIGNAL
HANDY WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Lord gave the word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host.—Psa. 68:11.

Our Loss and Our Increased Responsibilities.

LIFE gives us small opportunity to indulge in the luxury of grief. Close upon the heels of every bereavement it presses upon us its practical problems and we have no choice but to face and solve them. Death lays its hand upon our dear ones but before our tears are dry, we must consider the cold, practical question, who shall take up the work which their hands have dropped? Is it the breadwinner of the family who is taken? The sore stricken hearts must lay aside mourning to face the fact that life has become a hard struggle for bread and butter. Is it the mother? Who shall care for the helpless little ones? overshadows all other considerations.

When the Woman's Christian Temperance Union meets in National Convention next November, it meets, not only under the shadow of the heaviest bereavement which has ever fallen upon it, the death of "our best beloved," but it must also face the problems which her death has laid upon us.

It is a trite saying that "God buries the workers but carries on His work." It is a blessed truth but, like every other truth, is capable of being wrested to the grievous injury of His work. God indeed carries on His work but always and only through human instrumentality. It is when we forget that and expect Him to carry it on without our help that His work suffers untold loss.

It is idle to expect that He will carry on the work by raising up another "like unto her," our dead Chieftain. The great leaders of the race appear only at rare intervals. In some emergency they are called to the service of mankind, do their work, that which no other can do, then lay it down for other hands to carry to completion. We have many women of exceptional gifts, of devotion and consecration, who will carry forward our standard nobly. If the work which her hands so nobly begun is carried on successfully, it will be because the whole army of white-ribbon women rallies to the support of its leaders.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union could not have been what it is without Frances Willard, but she has left it so organized that its work need not suffer serious loss from her death. The empires of a Charlemagne, a Cæsar, an Alexander, founded upon the genius of one man, fell to pieces when their founders died. But the great leaders of the Anglo-Saxon race early learned to leave their work embodied in institutions, institutions which live on and accomplish their end however many individuals may perish. The W. C. T. U. is a thoroughly organized institution, still needing wise generalship and devoted service, but, having those competent to accomplish the ends which its gifted leader had in view. It would have been very easy for the W. C. T. U. to have confined itself to one line of work. There are those now who criticise it bitterly because it did not. In that case its members would have dwindled into a little band of "fanatics who had lost all sense of proportion." Our great leader's "do-everything" policy saved us from that. For twenty years her clear gaze took in the world with all the multiplied allied evils which woman's ministry might relieve. For twenty years her active, fertile brain has devised ways and means by which the army of women marshalled under her standard might reach those evils. For twenty years, by her broad policy and wise sympathy, she has constantly added to our ranks women with missions, women of strong intellects, great hearts and noble purposes. Who now will survey the field as she did, failing never to seize upon every strategic point? Who now will plan as she planned for the broadening and strengthening of the work? No one alone, but every white-ribbon woman the world over must contribute her eyes and brain to carry on the work which Frances Willard has laid down. The chief power of the W. C. T. U. is spiritual, largely because in the life and character of its great leader the spiritual reigned supreme. How insignificant petty jealousies and personal ambitions suddenly became in the presence of her great, unselfish purposes! How contemptible angry resentment toward those who had injured us seemed when she spread over it the mantle of her sweet charity! Who now will smooth away with gentle sympathy and droll humor the little frictions which like the "little foxes spoil our vines"? Who hold steadily before us, in all the fullness of its meaning, our motto, "For God and Home and Native Land"? No one alone. But every member of the white-ribbon army must take up the work with a deeper consecration than ever before, remembering that she who seemed to make good everybody else's shortcoming is no longer here.

The soldiers of Napoleon or Cæsar never felt more keenly the personal inspiration of their leader than did the followers of Frances Willard. But, though her personal presence has gone from us, that inspiration may be as real as ever. The greatest honor we can pay to her memory is to measure up to her faith in us, and, in loving loyalty to her Master and ours, carry grandly forward the work to which she dedicated her every power, and for which she laid down her life.

The Personnel of Our National Convention.

THE time is at hand when some of our number must take upon themselves the responsibility of manipulating the machinery of a great organization which affects in its workings nearly every phase of human weal or woe. Who shall do this? We answer, the delegates that are sent up to the National Convention. How shall they do it? They will do it well or not, as they understand their business, and are ruled by right.

Would one set a child to tend an engine, to run a train, to open and close the sluices in a watercourse, to give the signals on a warship, to tend the switches in a network of railways, to plan a campaign, to make the drawings for a Mont Cenis tunnel or a St. Gothard railway? No more should children manipulate the weightier things of life, especially willful children, who do not know that they do not know. They are dangerous. It awakens alarm in a state president to find that those who stand next to her do not know; that they have been in the service, and yet have taken no course of training, have not read the state reports, the state and National papers, have not familiarized themselves with the network of superintendencies and the scope of each; that they do not know the history of the work, its possibilities, its plans and its policy—such an one, after she has had time to grow and has not, is a dangerous element in a state executive committee instead of a helpful one. She is a menace to success, because of her inevitable blunders, and it may be her arrogance to cover up her ignorance. If this be true of a state, the danger is a thousand times enhanced if such be members of the general law-making body, the highest governing body.

Our National Convention should, just so far as is possible, be constituted of the most intelligent women—the wisest, the most judicious, the most religious ones. Let us look at these terms a moment. If a member is not intelligent—not only in general, but in particular about the things with which she is to deal—she does not possess the first absolutely necessary requirement to make her worth something to the body of which she is a member. To be wise is to discern and judge properly of what is true or false, proper or improper. It is to choose the best ends and the best means for accomplishing them. It is to make due use of knowledge, to be judicious, all of which presuppose knowledge already acquired. But knowledge is not sufficient of itself. It does not presuppose the judicial mind.

Up to a late date the education of women has cultivated the imagination to the neglect of the reasoning powers and it is still claimed by some that women are naturally weak in the judging faculty. We will not stop to take issue here, but accept the fact that untrained minds, whether of men or women, jump at conclusions, that they do not weigh things well, they "go it blind." Close akin to this is that other deplorable fact, that such people are often unable to separate the thing from the person. A difference of opinion straightway becomes a personal difference—a personal antagonism. The judicious mind rises above this. It fixes itself upon the subject of consideration and is oblivious to everything else. The question of what is best demands all the mental powers and the moment any inferior consideration invades the thoughts the mind has lost its grip, it has descended from a great and important matter to a trivial fragment worthy only of the attention of a child.

Religion plays an important part in making an intelligent man or woman to be a conservator of "whatsoever things are good." Even as the great Creator, Law-giver and Preserver controls the heart of man, so is He ready to conserve that which is highest and best even at the expense of his own personal wishes or aggrandizement, so is he able to separate himself from the things of moment, and if necessary to abase himself that God and good may be exalted.

There is every reason to expect that our next Convention will be a body of thoughtful, earnest, intelligent, devout women, more completely committed to the work than ever before. That they will have been chosen with more than usual care we doubt not, and that having accepted the trust, they are even now mastering the subjects upon which they are to have a voice and that when they come together they will walk softly before the Lord, girt about with truth and shod with the gospel of peace.

Ho, for St. Paul, Minnesota!

TO one who is familiar with St. Paul and the state of Minnesota (sky-colored water) the selection of that city for the place of our annual gathering together is peculiarly satisfactory. It is worth a long trip from the east to see the Mississippi (father of waters). To catch a glimpse of wheat fields which include thousands of acres, and to feel one's self upon the borderland of the great farms of America, that sometimes include 30,000 acres even in Minnesota. But the chief attraction will be centered, of course, in the "twins," and of these we shall, for the time being, be partial to the boy, St. Paul. But the charms of these great and growing cities will be fully set forth in our National Convention Corner, instituted in the last issue of THE UNION SIGNAL. Our readers should look each week, under that head, for added information in regard to what there is to see "at the head of navigation," and particularly for what there will be to enjoy within the walls of the People's Church, and how to get the most out of it.

Already the great wheels are in motion, the National treasurer is counting her money, which represents women. The National corresponding secretary is compiling her statistics and preparing the program. The National president is cudgeling her brain over the problems that must be solved, and like a great civil engineer is dealing with every particular with mathematical exactness. The National superintendents are finishing their inventories of the year's stock, and soon the W. T. P. A. presses will be printing the results by the thousands—and the unions will be in the great aggregate or not, as they have, or have not, attended to duty. If they have not paid their dues and sent them in they will not be counted. If superintendents have been careless, shall we say criminally careless? the aggregate will drop by just that much; and the result will approximate the same if they have failed to gather up the fragments. The time of reckoning for all of us is at hand, when we shall be counted with the faithful or the unfaithful stewards. If we have anything to do let us do it quickly, and thus be ready for November 16.

The Conqueror of France.

FRENCH statesmen, and thinking people of that country generally, are manifesting no little uneasiness concerning the rapid decrease in population. At the present rate, it is said, the time will soon come when there will be two Germans to one Frenchman, a state of affairs which is naturally alarming to the latter. Along with this numerical decrease another change is clearly noticed, viz., the gradual disappearance of the "better manners" of the people. Various reasons are assigned for this marked decadence. Imperialists declare that a democracy is not suited to the spirit of the French people; the clergy say that France is being punished for its atheism, and socialists try to prove that capital and monopolies are prime causes. Still others believe with Jules Claretie, the brilliant Paris journalist, that "the scourge of France is alcoholism." This, he tells us, not only brings destruction to the drinker, but transmits the seeds of insanity and death to his offspring. It is a significant fact that a fifth asylum for the insane has recently been built in the Paris district especially for incurable drunkards.

"Frenchmen," says M. Claretie, "are becoming the maddest of all alcohol drinkers in the world." They consume per capita, yearly, fourteen quarts of alcohol. Owing to the destruction of the grape vines by a parasite, liquor dealers are placing on the market various chemical concoctions labeled wine, and these poisonous drinks are rapidly performing their deadly work among all classes of people. Added to this, the use of absinthe is becoming alarmingly prevalent. Students drink it as their daily tonic, and the dreadful habit is fastening itself upon the hardy fisher folk, the sturdy, robust Bretons and Normans, whose health and strength is being sapped by this crime-provoking demon and whose children will be heirs to all the ills derived from drunken parents. Alcohol costs France a milliard of francs annually, "yet," says M. Claretie, "prohibition is impossible, for King Dramseller would revoke every deputy who dared to vote for anything approaching it."

Saloon politics is just as powerful in the French republic as in our own. What France—as America—needs to do is to dethrone King Dramseller and become a democratic government in fact as well as in name.

The Mosaic Law.

ONE of the strongest arguments for the divine origin of the Bible is afforded by the fact that the Mosaic law commands the admiration of the wisest legislators of modern times. Infidels have referred to the ancient Israelites as little better than barbarians, yet the Israelitish code far surpasses all the legislative systems of the Greeks and Romans and forms the foundation of all modern civilized jurisprudence. The wisdom of ages has discovered no defect in this ancient code. Said Professor Huxley, the agnostic, "There is no code of legislation, ancient or modern, at once so just and so merciful, so tender to the weak and poor, as the Jewish law."

A feature of Mosaic legislation which deserves especial consideration in these days of social unrest is, that under that law such evils as socialists and so-called "reformers" complain of were impossible. Every man was provided with a home and he could not be dispossessed of his inheritance. He could lease his land until the year of jubilee, which occurred every fifty years, or bind himself for a period to servitude, but at the year of jubilee the land would again be his. The only exception to this was that the houses and gardens within the limits of cities and villages could be disposed of absolutely; but the farms and fields could not be sold. No father could dispossess his children of their rights under the Jewish law. We hear a great deal in these days about the advantages of a law which would give to every family a portion of land, but, strange to say, many of the advocates of such a system profess not to believe the Bible but talk of the "mistakes of Moses" and are apparently ignorant of the fact that the Mosaic law gave to all a homestead, and that under it the people were far more prosperous than any other nation the world has known.

MR. SANDERS tells of a movement in the interest of temperance in Kamundongo, Africa, in an article in the October number of the Herald, the organ of the American Board of Foreign Missions. He says the people have pledged to shun beer drinks, and "they will not visit for beer; they will not take beer at funerals. They will take beer only in cases of extreme hunger, and then in moderation. At weddings, they feel they must supply some, because of the relatives and friends who attend and who will not otherwise be contented." All agreed to this, non-church members as well as church members, and some of the young fellows took more advanced ground. This is regarded as a most encouraging and hopeful stand. Food is very scarce, and often the only breakfast a boy has is a small gourd of beer, and nothing more until anywhere from 3 to 6 o'clock P. M., so their action is really heroic. We are more and more of the opinion that Africa will yet send temperance missionaries to America. Think of these people pledging not to take beer at funerals when it has been their custom, so the same missionary tells us, to the extent that when a personage of importance dies and corn is scarce, they keep the corpse till corn is plenty and beer can be made in large quantities, and that all but a few of the more advanced Christians have been in the habit of going to these funerals.

OUR Mrs. Barker characterizes christening ships with wine as a custom having no significance, and says it will be done away with even as churches have ceased to use it at their dedication. She tells this story of an old church in Allegany county, New York, which was dedicated with whisky, and of which her husband was at one time the pastor: "When the time arrived for the dedication a man climbed up the steeple and, balancing himself upon a globe on the top, put the jug to his lips, drank deeply, corked it up and then threw it to the ground. The jug landed without breaking. The deacons stood by with their arms solemnly folded. When the jug was seen to land without spilling its contents they looked at one another and said, 'The spirits have not flown away; it is a happy omen.'" The credulity of "the brethren" is shown to have been, in this instance, on a par with that of the people of the present who want ships christened with wine to insure good luck.

IT is as inevitable as the action of the law of gravitation that waste can be compensated for only by production and at the expense of the producer. To my mind it is childish for manufacturers (capitalists or artisans) to weep about lack of demand for their products, while they encourage or complacently tolerate the destruction of their own market. During the late period of depression in business there has not been a day when the amount worse than wasted on intoxicating beverages would not have employed, at fair wages, every willing worker in the land. Not only do thousands upon thousands fail to protect their own interests by claiming the market that ought to be theirs, but they bitterly antagonize all of our efforts for their relief, and deliberately and doggedly continue to pay tribute money to the enemy of their business prosperity.—From a paper read by Hon. Henry B. Metcalf at the Temperance Congress at Prohibition Park, July 2, 1898.

MR. BOK, in the Ladies' Home Journal, touched some of the bad tendencies in our public schools. He says: "Children nowadays are expected to know at eight years what a few years ago they were not taught until they were twelve. This is one of the most fatal tendencies in our schools. The field of knowledge is represented to be so large that the child is pushed beyond its capacity to cover as large a portion of this vast field as possible. What is the result? Some of our children have a smattering of knowledge, really worse than ignorance. They know nothing well; a lot of things they know imperfectly, or, in reality, not at all. And this smattering of knowledge passes for education."

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Y's, Attention!

WILL state Y secretaries kindly send me their reports promptly, and be sure to report paid membership this year and last. It will be necessary to have it in for the award of banners.

The Y banner, which last year was won by the Y's at Tuskogee, will this year be awarded to the state making the greatest increase in numbers, and the Y banneret will be awarded to the state making the greatest increase in per cent of membership.

We are all looking forward to the National Convention, and as state Y secretaries are this year ex-officio members of the National Convention, we are hoping that many of them will be present. Would it not be a great help to the Y work if states would provide for the expenses of Y secretaries, or the Y's in the states would assist in defraying the expenses of such delegates? Nothing would so enthuse the Young Woman's work all over the Union as for Y secretaries in each state to feel the enthusiasm of a great National Convention.

The Y conferences at the National will be held in the state capitol and we trust that there will be a large attendance, not only of Y secretaries, but many other young women. Saturday evening will be given to the Young Woman's Branch, and we are hoping to make the meeting tell for Y work, and the temperance cause in general.

If any state Y secretary has failed to receive a blank for state report, kindly notify me at once.

Will all who have prepared papers concerning the work of Clara Parrish kindly send copies of the same to Mrs. Esther Linton Graham, Taylorsville, Bucks Co., Pa. Many such papers will be read at state conventions this year and it is desired to make a collection.

Yours for earnest effort,

ELLA A. BOOLE.

New Helps for the Y's.

TWO new leaflets have just been issued by the Young Woman's Branch, the one, "Is there Need of a Y?" the other, "A Y Catechism." The price of the former is 50 cents per 100, and of the latter $1 per 100; smaller quantities at proportionate rates. To be ordered of National secretary. "Eighty Pleasant Evenings," a new book of entertainments or socials, can also be obtained of the National secretary of Young Woman's work. There is not a single objectionable entertainment in the book, while there are many new and novel ones adapted to every sort of occasion. The "Temperance Twist" is found in many a one, and can be introduced in many others. The members of the committee compiling the book are Miss Lilian M. Heath, Mrs. Florence M. Kingsley (author of "Titus" and other books), Mrs. Ella C. Doremus, Mrs. M. Belle Miller and Mrs. Ella A. Boole, all of whom are white-ribboners.

We have had prepared a new Y badge, smaller in size than the others, so that members desiring to wear the Y can have choice of sizes. The price is the same for both, thirty-five cents.

The new Y Almanac is beautiful, and every Y ought to have one. Order of Mrs. Frances B. Yarnall, 1011 Park avenue, New York city.

ELLA A. BOOLE.

Y's at Work.

OHIO.

Y EVENING at the Cuyahoga county convention at Berea was a contest by active members from various unions. The program took this form at the request of the central committee, and the wisdom of the suggestion was fully shown in the result. Miss Eda L. French recited "In the Kegs," Miss Lula D. Snell, of Oriel Miller Y, Berea, gave "College Oil Cans," Mrs. J. T. Shibley, of Willard Memorial Y, "Give Woman the Ballot," and Miss Jessie Symons, of Ensign Y, "Don't Marry a Man to Reform Him." All did well, and the judges had to consider carefully in marking, finally awarding first place to Miss Snell and second place to Mrs. Shibley. Mrs. H. B. Wisner then presented the prize, "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard," to Miss Snell, with appropriate remarks, bidding her follow the beloved leader in every way open to her. The judges were Mesdames Hersheiser, Eddy and Hammond. Mrs. Henry Hill kindly assisted with the prize by ordering it for us and donating her commission, a kindness greatly appreciated by the committee. The choir of Mount Zion's Congregational church, Cleveland, assisted in the exercises, rendering five choice selections in an admirable manner, and their organist, Miss Ella C. Alexander, served as accompanist for the congregational singing as well. The Berea Loyal Temperance Legion rendered valuable help in two well-prepared exercises. "Is it I?" by nine boys, called attention to the personal responsibility of every one in legalizing the liquor traffic, and nothing could have been more beautiful than the flag drill by the girls. If such intelligence and loyalty could be generally cultivated in the boys and girls, we feel certain the liquor traffic would die for want of fuel. They reflected great credit on their teacher, and she certainly had good material in them. Through the courtesy of the Oriel Miller Y, all the contestants and singers were furnished bouquets, and Miss Harroth entertained the audience with two humorous selections rendered in her own style.

Willard Memorial Y, organized April 4, 1898, reports twenty-four active and two honorary members, have taken up six departments of work, wear the white ribbon badge, raised $8.45. They have held six business meetings, five work meetings and one public meeting, and attended conventions. Their flower mission superintendent has distributed three hundred bouquets, and the union has made up a box of delicacies for Montauk, and comfort bags for soldiers, enclosing in each Bible and pledge card. Excellent for the first half year.

Ensign Y reports fifteen active and twelve honorary members, having held fourteen business meetings, one social and one public meeting, preparing special programs for meetings. They take the state paper, wear the white ribbon badge, have taken up three departments of work, and the flower mission superintendent reports 550 bouquets sent out and some charity work done. Have raised about $70.

Oriel Miller Y reports fifteen active and fourteen honorary members, and have held twenty-three business meetings, seventeen social meetings and five public meetings. Have distributed six thousand pages of literature and secured sixteen pledge signers. They use the state paper and THE UNION SIGNAL, wear the white-ribbon badge and prepare special programs for the meetings. They have taken up three departments of work. This Y coöperates with the city Y's in flower mission work, sending baskets of fresh cut flowers for distribution in hospitals.

MABEL LEACH,
Cleveland, O. County Y Sec.

World's W. C. T. U.

Queensland.

THE Rockhampton district conference was held at Clermont, one of our "out west" towns, when there were fourteen delegates from Rockhampton, Lake's Creek and Mount Morgan. Mrs. Payne, one of our Colonial organizers, was present throughout the conference; she speaks in praise of the influence for good that the president of the Clermont W. C. T. U. has over the honorary members, some of them far from home and exposed to the many temptations of life in a bush town. They appreciate her loving interest, and showed it in a practical way by paying board for delegates rather than conference should be postponed, when a difficulty arose from it being carnival week and the town crowded with visitors. They also gave a most enjoyable picnic, when a very happy time was spent by all; two new honoraries were gained at one of the meetings, and all took a great interest in the conference, some of them attending all sessions and taking part in the discussions.

There was a "welcome," with a public meeting to follow, and a most enthusiastic franchise evening, Rev. J. Williams in the chair, when a unanimous resolution was passed, "that the time has now arrived when the franchise should be extended to women." Mrs. Payne held a franchise meeting at every place she visited, and found the people interested in this subject. The W. C. T. U. has done much throughout the colony to arrest thought and arouse interest in woman suffrage, both members and those not white-ribboners becoming educated in this department. Mrs. Payne stopped at Enerald on her way back to Rockhampton and gave a suffrage address, when she had the pleasure of taking six pledges and knowing that she had made several converts to woman suffrage; a resolution was also carried unanimously, that the time had arrived when woman should receive the franchise.

Mrs. Granville Jones, of Rockhampton, presided over the conference, and gave an interesting, instructive address on several methods of work. A letter of greeting was received from Mrs. Brentnall, and a telegram of loving greeting sent her; also a letter to Lady Henry Somerset, assuring her of the loyalty of Queensland unions. Papers were read on "Narcotics," "Responsibility of Wearing the White Ribbon;" discussions held on grocers' licenses and local option, and a mothers' conference was opened by Mrs. Payne. Reports were given on evangelistic work, mothers' meetings, literature and flower mission; a number of tracts on Sabbath observance have been distributed, and superintendents were appointed for juvenile work, press, purity, agricultural booths and local option. An invitation was accepted for the next conference from the Lake's Creek union.

The Warwick union recently gave a farewell meeting to Miss Dowe, who is leaving the district, after being an active member for seven years, first as local secretary, and for the last five years as district secretary. Mrs. Wallace, of Killarney union, and others, spoke of the constant and willing help given by Miss Dowe, and the regret of the unions at losing her. Mrs. Johnson, on behalf of the Downs district, presented Miss Dowe with a very beautiful silver cake basket. Miss Dowe, in a suitable manner, acknowledged the kind things said, and the beautiful gift which would always remind her of her connection with the Downs district, and made a strong appeal for some one to come forward and take her place. The union also bade farewell to Mrs. Baker, another most valued, esteemed member, who has filled various positions, librarian, district superintendent of press, and was always to be relied upon as a willing worker. This district has taken up White Cross work.

The Killarney union recently concluded an ordinary meeting by a pleasant little "at home" to welcome their president's sister. The officers of this union are to be congratulated upon the successful work they have accomplished; their influence for good is making itself felt in a marked degree.

The Roma union held a most successful annual social, which brought in a nice little sum. The attendance was large, program good, and six pledges were taken. They have also sent in £2, 4s. 6d. as their contribution to the Temple fund.

The MacKay union raised £17 by a fair they had, for the purpose of starting a library to educate themselves and their honorary members on the temperance question. Most unions in Queensland have a library, and when read by members lend the books to outsiders, and this has been the means of interesting people sufficiently for them to come forward as members. It also spreads the knowledge of W. C. T. U. methods and lets folks know what we really are. Literature collecting cards are issued to all unions at the new year, and to the one collecting the largest amount a prize is given; this year it is to be "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard," a book we all covet. One third of the amount is deducted for the expenses of the literature department, and the balance is returned in literature to the union, so that unions are helping themselves by these cards. Mrs. Carvosso, colonial superintendent of literature, has a very good stock of American publications, and sends parcels to unions in other colonies. At our new headquarters, Wickham Street Valley, we have a very nice "secretary's office," where the literature is kept and local unions are able to choose their own.

Our headquarters is now in working order and looks very nice. Every one who comes is pleased with the dainty refreshment room and the bright look of the entire establishment. The hall is a large building with a cottage attached which the committee have fitted up for boarders; there are committee rooms, a ladies' rest room, and a pretty hall which is let for meetings. The headquarters committee are most enthusiastic, and Queensland white-ribboners should be pleased with Willard Hall.

The annual social of the Bald Hills union was presided over by Mrs. Clough, president of the North Brisbane district, who gave a bright, helpful address. Rev. S. Wright, of the Wesleyan church, also spoke in sympathy with W. C. T. U. work. The L. T. L. took a prominent part in giving songs and recitations. The annual report was read, and friends rendered valuable assistance with solos. Refreshments were handed round at the close, and all enjoyed this very pleasant evening.

The Central union had a very good lecture from Mr. Navin on "Woman and her Power." He spoke very highly of the W. C. T. U., and a collection was taken up for the Temple fund.

The Ipswich annual meeting was a specially interesting one, as Mrs. Payne, president, gave an account of her organizing tour in the north where she spent eleven weeks, traveled 2,690 miles, secured sixty-five new members, nineteen honoraries, twenty-two pledges, conducted seventy-two meetings, attended two conferences, organized two Loyal Temperance Legions of twelve and fifty-six members, and reorganized a Y union. Mrs. Payne's visit helped the workers in many ways, especially those who have had no opportunity of attending any but their own union meetings. At Townsville she held eleven meetings; at Charter's Towers nothing pleased her so much as the attentiveness of her audiences at the suffrage meeting. She had three hundred, mostly men, who were most enthusiastic. There were members of Parliament from both sides of the house on the platform. She also addressed a Sunday-school gathering of 326 scholars and thirty teachers.

The Ipswich union are happy in such a devoted president; they have an enrollment of sixty active and sixteen honorary members. Papers have been prepared and discussed on hygiene, heredity, hints on nursing, purity; weekly mothers' meetings are held and a quantity of literature distributed. Letters of sympathy, fans and bouquets were sent to hospital at Christmas, and fruit to the asylum. Prizes have been given for Scripture knowledge to the children at Aboriginal Station; Christmas gifts to the Lazarette.

Mrs. Davison Lee, of Victoria, has been holding meetings in our northern towns, and is now in Brisbane. The Mount Morgan newspapers say: "The meetings were, in point of attendance, large, and in quality excellent. She spoke on words of cheer for temperance workers, and no worker for righteousness ever had a more cheering cup than that mixed and presented by Mrs. Lee, as she spoke of the marvelous growth of temperance sentiment during the last thirty years, and of such workers in temperance reform as Frances Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Canon Wilberforce and Thomas Whitaker. Her lecture on Beautiful Britain was a treat to listen to. Sunday she joined with the Salvation Army in an open-air meeting. Occupied the pulpit of Presbyterian church Sunday morning, and gave addresses afternoon and evening. The result of her mission must be gratifying in every way. Sixty pledges were taken.

F. EMILY HAM,
Colonial Press Correspondent.
Willard Hall, Wickham St. Valley, Queensland.

News From the Field.

[State reporters are earnestly requested to send no news over two months old. Brief and frequent reports are preferable.—THE EDITORS.]

New Mexico.

THE work for temperance has steadily progressed in New Mexico during the past six months. Some of the old established unions have shown renewed energy and consecration, and new unions have been formed by our territorial president, Rev. Mary J. Borden, at Silver City, with a membership of eighteen, and at the mining towns of Kelly and Magdalena with a membership of twelve each. She also expects to see the work established at Deming and San Marcial in the near future.

As was natural under the circumstance of the Nation's conflict with Spain, especial activity has been evinced in the department of soldiers and sailors, and much good work accomplished. Not only in the sending to the front of numberless comfort bags, woolen bandages, night-robes, and other necessities, but also in the presentation of copies of the New Testament, each containing a pledge-card to the regiment moving directly from our home cities. A fair proportion of the pledges were signed and returned.

All Christian organizations in the territory are aiding the W. C. T. U. in circulating petitions to President McKinley to prohibit the canteen, and with encouraging results.

Jail and prison work has made most gratifying progress in Albuquerque, the signing of the pledge being a notable feature. In Santa Fé the annual flower mission services of the local union were held at the territorial penitentiary the latter part of June. This interesting occasion was participated in by the resident clergy and many others, its success being largely due to the interest manifested all along the line, from Colonel Bergman, superintendent of the institution, to generous citizens who kindly contributed of their choicest flowers. The one hundred and fifty inmates appeared very appreciative of the individual bouquets, each containing a verse of Scripture, and many of them joined in the singing with interest and expression.

The Demorest contest work is receiving fresh attention in several localities, but Eddy county is the banner county in this department. There the superintendent, Miss Bettie Hoag, has been most successful, fourteen silver medal and one gold contest having been held in the past four years.

The Albuquerque union is devoting some time to the training of its members in parliamentary usage, being fortunate in the possession of a president well versed in such work. A recent visit from Miss Jessie Ackermann was productive of much good, several new members being added to the union as a result of the interest awakened by the services held by that efficient worker.

In New Mexico, as elsewhere, the friends of temperance rejoice in the stand taken by some of the most important railroads of our country concerning the use of intoxicants by their employés, and even the frequenting of saloons for social purposes. Our own Santa Fé is not behind any in requiring a high moral tone of its workers, and is, little by little, requiring them to attain to a higher plane. When all business success is made directly dependent on right living, the doom of the saloon and other evil places is assured. ALICE P. HADLEY, Territorial Reporter, Albuquerque.

Missouri.

THE state convention at Poplar Bluff, October 21–25, is the talk now among the unions, and they have already heard so much about it that all are anxious to go. Mrs. Frances Beauchamp, of Kentucky, will be present, and it is thought that Miss Anna A. Gordon will be there part of the time. A gold medal contest will be held, the participants being state organizers and lecturers, besides other noted women of our state. This will be under the direction of the state superintendent of contests, Miss Ellen D. Morris, and a medal made for the occasion will be awarded. Mrs. Belle Kimball, state superintendent parlor meetings, and Mrs. Etta Kelley, of Poplar Bluff, are planning a reception for delegates to meet the people of Poplar Bluff. Every effort is being made by the state to make this one of the best conventions ever held.

The fifth district will hold its annual convention September 27 and 28. Mrs. Lillie King, president of that district, and Mrs. Alice Webster, county manager, held a conference of Andrew county in Savannah, September 8 and 9, which was very interesting. While there are only three unions in the county and not many delegates, they had a good program which was well carried out. The papers were all excellent and departments of work ably discussed. All present enjoyed the address by Elder Gresham, on "The Church and Temperance." A gold medal contest was held the first night which was good and Mrs. King only regretted that she had not as many medals as contestants, who were Alfred Thoman, Ella Thoman, Bessie Irwin, of Helena, Jessie Chapman, of Empire Prairie, and Lizzie Murray, of Savannah. Bessie Irwin received the medal, subject of her recitation being, "Scourge of the Republic." Mrs. H. E. Manley, of Empire Prairie, was elected county manager for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Lora S. LaMance, president of McDonald county, has a splendid column in the Pineville Democrat. The column of August 19 had a "Pineville Catechism" and among the questions are the following:

Q.—Have you said that the Pineville W. C. T. U. was doing no good?

A.—Some say it every day.

Q.—Are you treating them fairly when you expect twelve women to Take It Up Stairs, Too.

Nearly everybody uses Wool Soap down stairs in the laundry. It's the one soap that won't shrink woolens, and people must use it there. But you need it up stairs more—up in bathroom and bedroom. Don't use on your face what you dare not use on wool!

WOOL SOAP

is simply pure soap. Other soaps are called pure—but they shrink wool. They lack our secret.

Whenever you need a pure soap you need Wool Soap. You need it most for toilet and bath. That's where Wool Soap is important,

MY MAMA USED WOOL SOAP I WISH MINE HAD.

IT SWIMS.

All Grocers and Druggists sell it.

undo fifty men's influence? When you expect twelve voteless women to do more than grand jury and prosecuting attorney combined have done?

The eighteenth district will hold its convention October 19, 20. In the press department this district keeps W. C. T. U. columns in all local papers and publishes our principles, workings and everything pertaining to the work in these columns, and makes them bright and newsy.

Mrs. Alta Stevens, of Stanberry, is a faithful press superintendent and a poet of great ability. The poem, "A Sitting on the Conference," in the franchise number of the Counselor, was very good indeed.

Mrs. Mattie A. Faulconer, of Montgomery City, sends us a condensed account of their year's work. They did special work in gospel meetings, contest, literature, press, flower mission, Sabbath-school and petitions. They have held nine gospel meetings and two contests. Forty-four columns have been furnished their papers and communications in eleven of the twelve issues of the Counselor. They celebrated their tenth anniversary and about five hundred were present. Have distributed 6,679 pages of literature, sent out twenty-eight bouquets with Scripture cards attached, had services in jail June 9. Universal temperance Sunday and two quarterly temperance Sundays observed by all the schools in the city. Sent Yale, cigaret, International Sunday-school petitions. Have had Miss Carter and Mesdames Burger and Howe for lectures. Have held twelve public meetings.

Mrs. J. W. Settle, of Norborne, state superintendent of anti-narcotics, has moved to Butte, Mont. She is a fine worker and her husband is with her in all she does. We are very sorry to lose them.

Remember if you want the dailies during the state convention, send your dime for same to Mrs. J. T. Davisson, Poplar Bluff, Mo.

ALICE BLACKBURN,
State Reporter, Bethany.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

"Ho, for St. Paul!" is the watchword upon all lips at the present time. Many of our workers are already turning their steps in that direction. Mrs. Fields and Mrs. Skelton are in Minnesota and will remain there until the Convention. Mrs. Howe writes from Missouri that she will be open for engagements in Minnesota and Wisconsin, during November and the first week in December. She may be addressed at 1602 St. Charles street, St. Joseph, Mo. It now looks as if almost the entire force of organizers would be present at this Convention and a new and very helpful feature will be an all-day organizers' conference to precede the Convention proper. This will be held on the 10th, and an effort is to be made to secure churches in the outskirts of St. Paul and Minneapolis for services on that evening by those of the organizers who may be in attendance upon the conference. In that way the good news of the Convention will be brought to those who might not otherwise be advised of it, and the attendance at the Convention will, we trust, be largely increased thereby.

Mrs. Law is planning to go immediately after the National Convention to California, and would be glad to make some dates en route. We make this announcement thus early in order that the states and unions desiring her services may communicate with her at once. Her address is 1152 Fourteenth avenue, Detroit, Mich. Our Canadian sisters write most enthusiastically concerning Mrs. Law's services during the time before the plebiscite, and I feel very sure that those who secure her for work on this trip will be very glad they have done so.

A most amusing misinterpretation of our official call comes to us from a St. Louis paper in the following statement: "Any woman who desires to become a delegate to the next National W. C. T. U. Convention, and can afford the investment, is not dependent upon the members of any organization for election. All she need do is to pay fifty dollars into the National Treasury and receive a delegate's credentials. This will certainly simplify matters." It certainly would if the statement were based on fact, but as all W. C. T. U. women know, and, as we had supposed, all outsiders would know from the Call, fifty dollars paid into the National treasury represents five hundred members, in the proportion of ten cent dues from each one. I have written the editor of the paper asking him to correct the statement, and allude to it here in case it may have appeared in other papers as well. If so, will those of our sisterhood who have seen it please make the correction?

I am writing my Notes for this week on that day so sacred to white-ribboners, the first anniversary of the birth of our beloved leader which she has known in the life beyond. Her presence seems sweetly near on this day, and I feel more than ever confident that she has not lost her interest in this work and that she is watching it perhaps nearer than we dream, and that all that pertains to our sacred cause is dearer than ever to her heart. May God grant that a baptism of her spirit may come upon us all as we pledge ourselves anew to this work to which God has called us. I shall be glad to hear from the unions which have observed her birthday, and especially glad to know of those who have secured new members during membership week.

The only name for the Honor Roll this week is that of our indefatigable worker, Mrs. Mabel L. Conklin.

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

A MATRONS' contest was held in connection with the North Dakota convention, at which $116 was netted.

National Convention Corner.

Preparation for the Delegates.

St. Paul women have been at work since early summer making and perfecting plans for the National. At first they met once a month, now once a week, and soon they will get together every day.

Only those who have been in the thick of Convention preparations can at all understand the constant thought and careful planning necessary to bring to a successful issue the housing and care-taking of from four to six hundred women for a week. It is a prodigious work, and requires the utmost patience and herculean strength in the few upon whom the brunt always falls. If we could bear this in mind when we arrive as guests at St. Paul, we could be of untold assistance to the burdened workers. We would accept without questioning or murmuring the lot that falls to us, even if our choice had been for something entirely different and possibly more convenient. Let us bear this in mind, that we are guests accepting hospitalities most graciously offered, and not patrons who can demand something that is ordered and paid for.

The People's church will entertain the sessions of the Convention. It seats three thousand people comfortably, and is perfect in its acoustic properties, which makes a convention a far greater joy than when we must strain mind and ear to understand. The church is centrally located, easy of access, and is an ideal place for the Convention.

Plymouth church has been secured for the purity conference, which precedes the National by two days.

The program is still embryonic, but will rapidly gain shape in the quickly passing days. Mrs. Bessie Laythe Scovell welcomes the Convention in the name of the state, Mrs. Thompson, of Hamline, in behalf of the local unions. The responses will be from the compass sections of the country. Mrs. Mary L. Page, president West Washington, Mrs. Mary E. Cartland, president North Carolina, Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, New Jersey, and Mother Stewart, of Ohio, have been invited to make the responses.

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock has been appointed chairman of the standing committee on Sunday services in the place of Mrs. Anna M. Hammer resigned. The luncheons have been put in the hands of a fine caterer, and delegates will be well served at a reasonable price. The home entertainment will consist of breakfast, dinner in the evening, and room. The headquarters of the Convention will be at the Hotel Windsor. The city has been districted for entertainment. The delegates from New England and the middle states will be sent to the homes on the Hill, those of the central states in lower town, the western part of the southern states to the West side, and the delegates from the western states to the parks, and those from the coast territory to East St. Paul and Dayton's Bluff. A chairman from each of these districts will be appointed to be at the depot to meet the delegates and assign them to places. The large churches have been asked to entertain from ten to twenty delegates and the response as been free and general.

Ho, for St. Paul! is now our watchword. All the energy of our organization from the private member in a country local union to the highest officer in the National should be bent toward making this next convention an advance on all others. If in no other way, it can be an advance in spiritual life and in devotion to the great cause which we love.

A Wick Sent Free.

The Standard Oil Co. says: "We have made a number of careful and exhaustive tests of your "Marshall Process" WICK and we cannot speak too highly of its qualities."

No more smoking, smudgy, creeping lamps. No more dirty, cracking chimneys.

We want you to send for a free sample and a book about it, and test the unique qualities of "THE BROWN WICK."

For sale by all good dealers. Take no substitute.

NEW JERSEY WICK CO., Newark, N. J.
[Patented in U. S. and foreign countries.]

Organizers' Corner.

DEAR CO-WORKERS:—Since I last spoke to you through this column I have had a somewhat varied experience. I spent the month of May in New Hampshire, speaking once or twice every day, the result being many new members for Y's and W's, one new W. C. T. U. at Rumney and a large White Cross Society among the young men of New Hampton College.

In June I worked in western New York until I sailed for Europe. While abroad I laid aside all public work except in London where, at the invitation of Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, I addressed his regular weekly meeting for men only Sunday, June 26. We had an audience of eight hundred men and at the close of that meeting Dr. Meyer invited me to occupy his pulpit the following Sunday. I met many of our workers while abroad, among them being Mrs. and Miss Lile, of London, who you will remember were with us at Toronto, last year. I was with Miss Lile and her father, John C. Lile, C. C., one evening at Hugh Price Hughes' mission, of which they are both members and influential supporters.

On my return to this country I at once took up the White Cross Army work, and spent August in visiting camps and hospitals, raising funds for and purchasing and shipping White Cross purity leaflets for men to every camp from Santiago to the Philippines. I am very grateful to the W. C. T. U's and White Crossmen who have collectively or individually sent me money for this work among our army boys, and at the National Purity Conference in St. Paul I will give an itemized statement of receipts and expenditures. Although the war is over the camps are to be kept open, so that this branch of my work will continue so long as I can raise the money to buy the literature.

Early in August I conducted a three days' purity conference at the Silver Lake (N. Y.) Chautauqua Assembly. In September my week days have all been employed in county conventions in Pennsylvania and New York, and my Sundays in Young Men's Christian Associations in New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

October will be spent in doing county work in Pennsylvania and speaking at that state's convention, where I am to conduct purity conferences and occupy pulpits Convention Sunday.

I am looking forward to meeting

GAIL BORDEN
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK
HAS NO EQUAL AS AN INFANT FOOD.
"INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE. N.Y. CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

you all at St. Paul, realizing with you that this will be one of the saddest and most important Conventions in the history of our work. But with love and loyalty in our hearts for our new president, whom, I feel, God Himself has raised up for us, and with faith in the wisdom and judgment of our National Officers and a determination to aid and abet them, we can be important factors in making this also one of the most successful Conventions in our history.

With praise and thanksgiving for what the W. C. T. U. hath wrought, I am,

Cordially yours,
MABEL L. CONKLIN.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Treasurer's Corner.

Do not lose sight of the fact that October 25 shuts the door of the National treasury, and that all your dues must be in before that time. I have just returned from North Dakota convention, and was cheered by the report that that brave state has made a net gain again this year of over 500 members. They held a most successful convention, the largest, I think, ever held. The old officers were re-elected unanimously. Miss Preston is greatly beloved by her women, and she deserves and has their entire confidence. She is in the field most of the time, and the results tell of her excellent work. A braver band of women never worked for God and Home and Native Land.

The reports from the unions, so many of them my children, were especially gratifying to me. They make themselves felt, especially in legislative work, and have the respect of all good men, and are wholesomely feared by men that are not good. It will be remembered that Miss Preston acted with Mrs. Stevens last fall as committee on affiliated interests, by appointment of Miss Willard, hence no one will be surprised that North Dakota convention passed the following resolution unanimously:

"Resolved, That we heartily support the National Officers and the executive committee in their judgment that it is unwise to make any further effort toward the ownership of the Temple, believing with them, as Miss Willard said at Buffalo, that it would place a greater financial burden upon our unions than they are able to carry."

They also dropped the Temple department.

John G. Woolley gave one of his splendid addresses to a house packed to its utmost capacity. Every one was delighted. North Dakota white-ribboners are bound to go on to still greater success. Park River, where the convention was held, is a beautiful little city full of lovely homes and its citizens did everything to make our stay among them delightful, a most enjoyable drive given to all the delegates being among the pleasant courtesies. Miss Preston, Mrs. Wylie and myself were made perfectly at home with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Catherwood. Prohibition is a marked success in Park River.

I greatly enjoyed a brief visit to old friends in Casselton, Fargo, Grand Forks and Larrimore. Miss Addie Kinnear, former president of North Dakota W. C. T. U., presided at my meeting in Fargo with her old-time grace.

Dues are coming in at a gratifying rate, still there is room for more. Don't forget books close October 25.

HELEN M. BARKER.

W. C. T. U. News.

THE Chicago West Side W. C. T. U. is publishing a little paper in the interest of their alcohol cure called The Non-Alcoholic Banner.

MISS BELLE KEARNEY has been speaking every night during September in New Jersey, under the auspices of the state W. C. T. U.

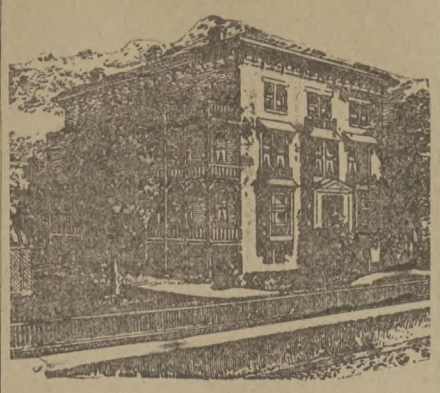
THE appropriation of the Wisconsin medal superintendent was raised at the last convention, owing to the help the contests have been to the state work.

OKLAHOMA has recently had five new unions organized by Helen D. Harford. She added new members everywhere she visited, increasing the membership in the old unions by forty-three active and thirty-two honorary.

OUR Mrs. Zable of Louisiana is a very busy woman. She was obliged to resign the presidency of her district being so absorbed by her duties as state corresponding secretary, president of the lunch house board, president of the local union and custodian of the temperance headquarters fund.

Convention Call.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.



The annual convention of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U. will be held October 20 and 21, in the Church of Our Father, corner Thirteenth and L streets, N. W. On the evening of each day the white-ribboners will attend the "Anti-saloon Revival," addressed by Mr. Lou J. Beauchamp, under auspices of Anti-Saloon League of the District of Columbia.

MARGARET B. PLATT, Pres.

Convention Calendar.

IOWA, Waterloo, Oct. 11-14.
CONNECTICUT, Torrington, Oct. 12-14.
MASSACHUSETTS, Boston, Tremont Temple, Oct. 12-14.
NEBRASKA, Pawnee City, Oct. 11-14.
TENNESSEE, Jonesboro, Oct. 1 - 4.
NEW JERSEY, Elizabeth, Oct. 11 to 14.
DELAWARE, Camden, Oct. 3 - 4.
RHODE ISLAND, Oct. 12 and 13.
PENNSYLVANIA, Reading, Oct. 14-18.
CALIFORNIA, Berkeley, Oct. 17-22.
KANSAS, Horton, Oct. 19-21.
MISSOURI, Poplar Bluff, Oct. 21-25.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—Dr. J. J. Thompson, of the Temperance Hospital staff, has consented to answer a question asked in the Inquirer. He says:

"Your letter with newspaper clipping is at hand, and I shall be pleased to answer the article, but in order to do so intelligently it will be necessary to quote a part of it: 'My husband has been very ill this summer and at one time was thought to be dying. He was cold, and we could hardly discover any pulse movement. . . . A neighbor woman came in while he was in this condition, and as soon as she could she ran home and got a bottle of whisky. She forced some down his throat and we rubbed him with flannel cloths wet with the whisky. . . His brother blames me for using the whisky even at such a time. He says if it had been God's will that my husband was to die, that the whisky wouldn't have helped him. . . My question is this: Do you think it was wrong to use any means to save life, and do you not think the whisky should have some credit in the case?'

"I will state my position as follows: If no other remedy could be procured I believe that a temperance woman would be perfectly justified in giving her husband whisky as this woman did, and the statement of her brother that 'if it was God's will that her husband should die, whisky would not save him,' is entirely without warrant and does not reflect the Christian intelligence which a temperance lecturer should exhibit. The grave question in such a case is, are there other remedies which are equally or better suited to revive a patient in case of collapse? In my opinion we have several remedies which are far superior to alcohol in any form as a medicament in these cases and they should each be kept in every household in place of the ever ready whisky bottle. First and foremost we may mention

"Hot water. In cases of collapse there is no expedient which will serve the housewife better than hot water, applied both externally and internally. In the case mentioned above if the friends had put hot-water bottles to the patient's feet, and a hot-water bag or hot cloths over the heart, and forced hot water into the patient's mouth, as hot as could be borne without scalding, no doubt it would have taken effect quite as promptly as the whisky. If, in connection with the hot water treatment some one of the following remedies had been at hand there would have been no occasion whatever for the whisky.

"One of the best household remedies is nitro-glycerine. A one per cent solution of this remedy is a better stimulant for the heart than alcohol in any form (whisky, brandy, wine, etc). Its action upon the heart and nerve centers is more prompt and is more satisfactory in every way, in cases of shock, especially if resulting from accidents or sunstroke. We use it at the Temperance Hospital for the nausea and collapse which sometimes follow surgical operations, especially in cases of heart failure following the use of chloroform. This is also a valuable remedy in case of opium poisoning. It is a good home remedy for asthma, hysterical collapse or collapse of typhoid or other fevers. One or two drops of this remedy is said to be equivalent to an ounce or more of brandy, besides having the advantage of being both tasteless and odorless. It acts instantaneously and cannot in any way excite a latent desire for alcoholic stimulants. In sunstroke this is the grand specific when given in minute doses, i. e., two or three drops of the one per cent solution in half a glass of water, a teaspoonful to be given every twenty minutes. Similar doses will be found useful for cases of vertigo, pain about the head, and neuralgia, one physician going so far as to state that he had never yet found a case of neuralgia, neuralgic headache, hiccough, toothache, or any spasmodic affection that glonine

BEAUTIFULLY WHITE
"Foolishly Fashionable."
"Almost Criminal."

These strong words have been applied to white flour, because it is robbed of the Gluten of the wheat to make it white. Flour deprived of Gluten has lost its nutritive elements and hence its life sustaining qualities. Franklin Mills Fine Flour of the Entire Wheat is rich in Gluten and when baked into Bread or Rolls is a beautiful golden brown.

If your grocer does not keep it, send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied.

See that the flour delivered bears our label; avoid substitutes.

Booklet free.

The genuine made only by the

FRANKLIN MILLS CO., LOCKPORT, N. Y.

Sour Stomach

"After I was induced to try CASCARETS, I will never be without them in the house. My liver was in a very bad shape, and my head ached and I had stomach trouble. Now, since taking Cascarets, I feel fine. My wife has also used them with beneficial results for sour stomach."
JOS. KREHLING, 1921 Congress St., St. Louis, Mo.

CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good, Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe, 10c, 25c, 50c.

... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...

Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 318

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

(nitro-glycerine), in ordinary doses failed to relieve.

"This, of course, is rather a strong assertion but the fact remains that nitro glycerine as a household remedy is not only much more useful in case of collapse than brandy, but also covers many other of the ordinary ailments for which brandy is used. For instance, in sick headache a few doses of glonine will often stop the pain in a short time. The patient should lie down and take a dose of the medicine every twenty minutes until relief follows."

Dr. Thompson's reply to my letter would take so much space that I will save a part of it until next week.

(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.
1610 Grace St.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel.

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers; Third Nebraska, Col. W. J. Bryan; First Texas, Col. W. H. Mabry; Fourth Ohio; First and Third Kentucky; First Wisconsin, Colonel Schadel; First South Dakota, Colonel Frost; Second Missouri.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Temple Receipts.

Pennsylvania — Ariel: Willard union, $1; Bradford: W. C. T. U., $100; Columbus, $15; Easton, $2; Farmer's Valley, 40 cts.; Franklin: L. T. L., $5; Freeport, $5, $2; Miss Sara C. McClelland, $10; Fallowfield: W. C. T. U., $5; Mountaindale, $2; Newtown: Bucks county union, $25; Erie county, $18, $2; Mount Washington, $12.50; Port Alleghany, $10; Roaring Springs, $6.80; D. B. Carpenter, $1; Shenandoah Y, $12, $8; South Oil City, $100, $100, $25; Mrs. Kern, $5; Sugar Grove: W. C. T. U., $34; Yardley: W. C. T. U., $2; Laura Swartzlander, $2; Esther B. Justice, $2; York: W. C. T. U., $9.60; Warren, $45.25; Warren county, $12.15; Ambler: Miss Clara R. Griggs, 50 cts.; Bergettstown: Mrs. G. G. Kerr, $5.90; Beaver Falls: M. B. Alford, $2.50; Butler: Mrs. R. M. Harper, $7.50; Ellisburg: Mrs. Estella Coulston and Mrs. Anna J. Ryan, $4; Lucy H. Snead, $2; Equinunk, Mrs. F. M. Woodmansee, $2; Fairview: Emily L. Goodrich, $1; East Smithfield: Martin Gerould, $2; Hallslead: Mrs. J. M. Chichester, $1; Hamburg: Mame S. Confer, $3.50; Honesdale: Esther Stephens, $10; Hawley: Mrs. E. L. Stephens, $50; Hillsgrove: Sara A. Snell, $2; Mrs. Anna M. Hoffman, $5; Homestead: Mrs. W. A. Summersgill, $1.50; Mrs. N. E. Howard, $1; Honey Brook: Mary A. Graham, $40; Miss M. A. Buchanan, $5; Mrs. C. L. Manship, $1; Johnstown: Mrs. Sadie Shugart, $1; Kendall Creek: Mrs. W. Hamaker, $10; Macungie: Annie R. Renis, $2.50; McCulloch's Mills: Emily A. Fulton, 25 cts.; McDonald: Mrs. R. R. Allison, $2; Munson: Anna Fishburn, $8.75; New Brighton: Mrs. B. F. Kench, $2; Norristown: Anna R. Reed, $3.65; Parker Ford: Sarah S. Pennypacker, $4; Petrolia: Bertha Bottner, $1; Rochester: Mrs. Mary Patton, $3, 50 cts.; Elk Lick: Mrs. Rebecca Wagner, 50 cts.; Sandy Lake: A. P. Hutchinson, $1; Shepherdstown: Mrs. Lida K. Coover, $1; Tunkhannock: Delia A. Mills, $2; Uniontown: Mrs. Kate Ritenour, $1; Mrs. Sturgeon, $1; Venetia: Mrs. T. E. Robb, $1; West Alexander: Mrs. Jane Reed, $2; Westerville: Mrs. Pauline Young, $1.50; Westgrove: Mrs. Rebecca Chambers, $2; Yohoghany: E. G. Cope, $4; Zelienople: Mrs. A. G. Otterman, 50 cts.; from cards, $4.50.

Rhode Island—Abbott Run: Miss Alice M. Cargill, $100; Pawtucket W. C. T. U., $1; Providence: Elizabeth P. Nichols, $5.50; Mrs. C. H. Tilley, $5; Westerly: Mrs. Thomas V. Stillman, $3.

Texas—Houston: W. C. T. U., $2.30; Ft. Worth: Mrs. O. L. Fisher, 50 cents; Iowa Park, Mrs. D. M. Smith, $3.50; Kerrville: Mrs. Clara Candlin, $3.65; Mineral Wells, $1.75; Rockwall: M. Lula Harris, $5.

Tennessee—McMinnville: W. C. T. U., $5; Jonesboro: Mrs. Mary H. Epps, $6.80; Memphis: Mrs. Mary B. Abernethy, 50 cents; Morristown: Mrs. Lydia Johnson, $2.25; Chattanooga: Mrs. G. H. Ferguson, 50 cents; Tullahoma: Mrs. S. W. Arrosmith, $2; Mrs. M. J. Maynard, $4 50, $2.

Vermont—Barre: W. C. T. U., $1; Mrs. J. R. George, $5; Barton: W. C. T. U., $10; Mrs. M. A. Owin, $2; Brattleboro: W. C. T. U., $4; Bennington county: $31; Mechanicsville: W. C. T. U., 65 cts.; Mrs. Hannah G. Vail, $1; Eunice Vail, $1: Middletown: W. C. T. U., $10; Peacham: $13; Rutland: $10; Waterville: $4.80; West Wardsboro: $6; Woodstock: $11, $71; Bellows Falls: Mary A. Burt, $2; Mrs. John C. Persons, $2; Berlin: Geo. K. and Mrs. A. C. Perrin, $1; Bradford Center: Mrs. Ida E. Emerson, $1.25; Cambridge: Mrs. Charlotte Safford and husband, $4; Chelsea: Mrs. F. J. Corwin, $4; Chester: Miss E. J. Stickney, 60 cts.; Derby: Mrs. A. B. Hopkinson, $1.50; East Peacham: Elsie B. Esden, $1; Essex: $1.80; Essex Junction: Mrs. J. E. Bingham, $1; Middleburg: Mrs. H. M. Seely and Mrs. M. H. Eddy, $1; Manchester Depot: Miss Mary R. Farnum, $2; Pittsford: Mrs. S. K. Burbank, $2; Mrs. J. E. Leonard, $1; Poultney: Electa H. Chapin, $3; St. Johnsbury: Mrs. L. T. Clark, $1.50; St. Johnsbury Center: Mrs. E. P. Allen, $6; Mrs. Chas. Cobb, $2; Vershire: Alma F. Adams, $2.25; Waterbury: M. T. Davis, $2.75; Wells: Jennie Carpenter, 50 cts. From cards, $1.

Virginia—Brambleton: W. C. T. U., $6, $20.50; Norfolk: Mrs. M. F. Parker, $2; Margaret F. Parker, $5; Richmond: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; Winchester: W. C. T. U., $1.60; Lynchburg: $5; Riverton: Mrs. Elenor Lent Weston, $100. From cards, $1.50.

West Virginia—Buckhannon: W. C. T. U., $2.06; Mannington: $25; Moundsville: $1; Ravenswood: $1.60; West Grafton: $4.35. From cards, $1.

Washington—Seattle: Lake union, $6; South Bend: W. C. T. U., $5; Spokane: $14.85; Tacoma: Central, $3.85, $8; W. C. T. U., $2; Lathrop: Mrs. M. Parish, $2; Everett: Miss Ella Howard, $5.80.

Wisconsin—Appleton: W. C. T. U., $50; Belmond: $5.50; Hammond: $4.13; La Crosse: $3; Colman: $1 Marshall: $5; St. Croix: Brookville union, $1; St. Croix county, $10; Sparta: $5.40, $7.60; Sun Prairie: $8; White Water: W. C. T. U., $7.09; Racine: E. M. Darling, $10; Rice Lake: Mrs. E. A. Spencer, $1; Balmoral: E. Jamieson, $1; Barron: Mrs. A. E. Wendell, $5; Eau Claire: Miss I. Cobban, $4; Janesville: Mrs. W. J. Knight, $5; Milwaukee: Sarah E. Williams, $3.65; New London: Mrs. A. R. Starks, 50 cts.; Spring Green: Edward P. Smith, $1; Mrs. Albion E. Smith, $60; Evergreen: Mrs. C. C. Pinney, $1.25; Viroqua: Mrs. Edith Trowbridge, 50 cts.; West Green Bay: Mrs. Sarah Legot, $1; Clinton: Mrs. L. S. Wilcox, $25.

Wyoming—Rawlings: W. C. T. U., $2; Green River: Marie Moss Wheat, $1; Lusk: Mary S. Wucherer, $5; Manville: Mrs. B. J. Brooks, $2.

SARA G. JOHNSON,
Financial Secretary.

To February 1, 1898.

Take Notice.

Miss Cornelia M. Dow, Portland, Me., custodian of the Willard fund for the payment of the Temple trust bonds, will receive all contributions offered by those who are interested in the effort being put forward by the National Woman's Christian Temperance union to help retire these bonds. Miss Dow is a woman of well-known financial ability and does this work gratuitously. As the daughter of Gen. Neal Dow, this loyal white-ribboner has the highest esteem and regard of all connected with the movement, and it was by cordial agreement with Mrs. Carse and at the request of Miss Willard that she accepted the foregoing trust.

STARVING
in the Midst of Plenty.

That's what people with poor digestion are doing every day. They have no appetite or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require it does them no good, because the stomach does not digest it and the fermenting mass of food becomes a source of disease, of headache,

MR. JUDSON A. STANION.

sleeplessness, languor and the thousand and one symptoms of disordered digestion. Mr. Judson A. Stanion, the great Church and Sunday School worker and president Christian Endeavor Union, St. Louis, Mo., says:

"I have had to be extremely careful what I ate. Many things were indigestible, and after a hearty dinner I could scarcely keep awake. I never have been sick in bed, but have had a great deal of inconvenience from indigestion. Since I learned of the merits of Stuart's Tablets, I keep them in my desk or carry them in my pocket, and find that I can eat anything at all without discomfort. They were recommended to me by a friend who is enthusiastic in their praise. I can not afford to be drowsy after lunch, and find these tablets just the thing to assist digestion and keep all my faculties wide-awake." Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. They digest the food whether the stomach works or not, and that's the whole secret. At all druggists, 50 cents a box. For book on stomach diseases, giving valuable advice, address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Official Organ of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

(EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY.)

An Illustrated Children's Temperance Paper.

TERMS.

One copy, per year	$ .25
In clubs of ten or more	.20
In clubs of fifty or more, to one address	.12
Sample packages for distribution, 100 to one address	1.00

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The regular issue of the paper contains, aside from illustrations, stories, poetry, etc.

QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON SUPPLEMENT.

Especially for the use of teachers in Sunday-school. Four pages containing temperance lesson helps, suggestions for observance of temperance Sundays, etc. This supplement can be secured without the CRUSADER at the rate of 65 cents per 100 copies, $2.75 per 500, $5.00 per 1,000. To regular subscribers the Supplement accompanies each paper free of charge.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

A Curious Wick.

Ever since lamps were made, we suppose that the wick has been the bane of every housewife, and since the use of oil heaters and oil cooking stoves has become general, her life has been more than miserable. Yankee ingenuity, however, has come to her help with the invention of a wick which the Government has thought meritorious enough to patent, which will not clog, will not creep, and needs but little care or trimming. Smoking lamps are now a thing of the past, and cracked chimneys are unnecessary with ordinary care.

For the first time in its history, the Standard Oil Co., one of the largest corporations on earth, has seen fit to give a complimentary letter. It is as follows: "We have made a number of careful and exhaustive tests of the 'Marshall Process' Wick, and feel that we cannot speak too highly of its qualities." It has been adopted by all the leading lamp, stove and heater makers, including the makers of the famous Rochester and Miller lamps.

This wick, which is known as the "Marshall Process" Wick, is colored brown, so that you may easily identify it; in fact, it has become to be known among its friends as "The Brown Wick."

It is made by the New Jersey Wick Company, whose advertising will be found in our columns for some months to come, and we note that they offer to send a sample wick free to any one who will write for it to their office in Newark, N. J.

You Can Trust

A manufacturer who says of his goods, "We do not ask you to remit in advance, give them a thorough trial for thirty days and then return them or pay for them, as you prefer."

The manager of the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. of Buffalo, N. Y., on being asked "How can you afford to offer such remarkable terms to people you do not know?" answered:

First—By making the Best Soaps in the world. None excel them, for in no factory is more intelligence, more care or better materials employed.

Second—By selling our whole product without the aid of middlemen in any capacity, saving all their profits and expenses, and,

Third—By selling only to honest people who pay their bills. Everyone is sure to pay us, for we give such value for the money as one never had before, and all are at once our friends.

They have an advertisement in this paper.

Petition Against the Canteen Now.

WHITE-RIBBONERS, CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS, EPWORTH LEAGUERS, GOOD TEMPLARS, CHURCHES, PASTORS AND PEOPLE — EVERYBODY, CUT OUT THE APPENDED PETITION, SIGN IT, SECURE OTHER NAMES, AND SEND IT TO PRESIDENT MCKINLEY AT ONCE. OR, IF YOU PREFER, USE THE ONE WE PUBLISHED LAST WEEK, OR WRITE ONE YOURSELF, BUT SEND A PETITION TO DO AWAY WITH THE ARMY CANTEEN, AND DO IT NOW:

To the President of the United States:

We do hereby respectfully petition that you will, to the extent of your authority as Commander-in Chief of the army, forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors at all post and camp exchanges, or elsewhere within the lines of the armies of the United States.

Advertisers like to know what paper pays them best. Always mention The Union Signal when writing.

Publisher's Notes.

The Responsive Reading for October is upon a subject in which we feel sure every white-ribboner is keenly interested, viz., THE UNION SIGNAL, and the writer is Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, its present managing editor. In the form of questions and answers much information is given concerning the pages of that paper which Miss Willard called so aptly, the weekly "letter from home." Local unions are told what kind of articles and news items are sought after by the editors and how the individual society may speak through its columns. The various departments of the paper are touched upon and methods suggested by which THE UNION SIGNAL may become the "greatest woman's paper in the world."

BIBLE READING FOR OCTOBER. "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit," by Mrs. Addie Webster DeLong. There is no effective service for God without the gift of the Holy Spirit, says the writer truly. The soul for expansion requires the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of Jesus Christ and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost. The baptism of the Spirit, we are told, is for testimony and power, and we may know when we receive it. If we lack this power we shall be held responsible, for all may have it for the asking. How to obtain this baptism is a question this Reading aims to answer.

Do You Wish to Help Our Wounded Soldiers and Sailors?

We have just published a beautiful war song, entitled "The Blue and Gray Together," by C. H. Addison. This song sells for 40 cents everywhere. We will furnish this song for 20 cents in silver or one and two cent stamps to any lady who will agree to write to two friends and advise them to buy it, also ask them to write to two friends in the same way. In this way we start what is called an endless chain. We have arranged to turn over to Mrs. J. W. Castles, at Cape Charles, Va., superintendent of the soldiers' and sailors' work of the W. C. T. U. of Virginia, one-half of all the money made from the sale of music in this way. If you have not been able to do anything for our soldiers and sailors, here is a chance at a very small cost, and if you will write the letters and send the slips that come with the music to some of your friends, you may help to raise hundreds of dollars for this great work.

STANDARD MUSIC CO.,
Publishers.

Danville, Va.

CAPE CHARLES, VA., July 27, 1898.

To the W. C. T. U. Workers of America:—

The need of money for this branch of our work is very great, and I hope that the above offer of the Standard Music Co. will be accepted by as many as possible. If you can not order the song, get some one else to do so, and write to your friends and send them the slips that you will find in the music, or they can be had from me.

Yours for the cause of humanity,

(MRS.) J. W. CASTLES,
State Supt. of Soldiers' and Sailors' Work.

FREE RHEUMATISM CURE

A Liberal Way to Prove That Gloria Tonic Cures Rheumatism — Thousands of Sufferers Have Been Permanently Cured—A Free Trial Package Mailed to All Who Apply.

It is safe to say that nearly everybody who has rheumatic pains has doctored till they are discouraged. They are disgusted with remedies that cost money and won't try another unless it is proven to be a specific for the disease and not a mere drug to sell. This is why John A. Smith who discovered a remarkable cure for rheumatism sends free to all a trial of his remedy so that the sufferer may know positively that Gloria Tonic cures the disease.

There are many people who are afraid to try even this free sample package fearing that it may contain something harmful. But all such are assured that Gloria Tonic is entirely safe and cannot harm even a baby.

Write for a free sample today. If you have a friend who suffers ask him to write also to Mr. Smith so that every person afflicted with rheumatism may be released from the terrible pains of this ruthless disease.

Address Mr. John A. Smith, 627 Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wis., and he will send a free trial package of Gloria Tonic by return mail, prepaid, or a full sized box may be obtained from your druggist for $1.00.

Our Memorial Ode.

"Press On and On," our Chieftain's orders, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, music by Mr. O. H. Hawley, is meeting with wide appreciation. The words are tender and effective, the music stirring and martial. It will be sung wherever the W. C. T. U. has voice. The Ode is printed in sheet form, with a beautiful half-tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy; 60 cts. per dozen copies to state, county and local unions. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

We ask as a favor that those reading our leaflets, will forward to us their opinions of any particular one which has been especially helpful in their union, their neighborhood or to some friend. This will materially help others in selecting appropriate literature.

Will our friends please bear in mind that in many instances letters are unanswered because the name of the state is not given with the address? All in portant communications should be signed with the name of the person, the postoffice and the state.

IT is no wonder that the question, "Where do all the pins go?" is so hard to answer, when they are all pointed one way and headed the other.

An Ounce of Prevention is worth several pounds of cure in medicine. Thoroughly sanitary conditions make disease impossible.

How to have thoroughly sanitary surroundings is told in a pamphlet by Kingzett, the eminent English chemist. Price 10 cents. Every household should contain this little help to comfortable living. It will be sent FREE to subscribers of this paper. Write

THE SANITAS CO. (Ltd.),
636 to 642 West 55th Street, New York City.
Disinfectant and Embrocation Manufacturers.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.

STOP SMOKING!

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

DR. WORST'S NEW SCIENTIFIC
CATARRH INHALER.
With Medicine
For one year mailed
FREE!
To all Readers of the UNION SIGNAL.

Cures Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever, Colds, Pains and Roaring in the Head, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Headache, Partial Deafness and all diseases of the Air Passages by inhalation.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For a short time I will mail to any reader, naming this paper, one of my new Scientific Catarrh Inhalers with medicine for one year, on three days' trial free.

If it gives satisfaction, send me $1.00, if not, return it. Address,

Dr. E. J. Worst, Dept. 5, Ashland, O.

Drinking Fountains
FOR
MAN and BEAST
Manufactured by
The J. L. Mott Iron Works
84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.
311-313 Wabash Av. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright 1896, by the J. L. Mott Iron Works.

HISTORY OF THE
WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00. Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.

AGENTS WANTED

both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address

DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF
OUR WAR WITH SPAIN

ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war. Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,

A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

FREE! We will send this triple SILVER Plated Ladies' HEART Stick PIN or GENTLEMAN'S SCARF PIN FREE to any person who sends a 2c. stamp to pay postage. Address

LYNN & CO.,
48 Bond St., New York

MONTICELLO Opens the 61st year Sept. 29. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Prin., Godfrey, Ill.

740 Silk Fringe Cards, 10ve, Transparent, Escort & Acquaintance Cards, LAUGHING CAMERA, Prize Puzzles, New Games, Magical Illusions &c. Finest Sample Book of Visiting and Hidden Name CARDS Premiums Biggest list of All for 2c. stamp. OHIO CARD CO., Cadiz, Ohio.

Signal Notes.

IN all official documents Wilhelmina of Holland is referred to as "the king."

THE population of Palestine is increasing rapidly. Ten years ago there were only 15,000 residents in Jaffa; to-day there are nearly 50,000.

RECENTLY, with secrecy and haste, the legislative council of Jamaica passed a bill to increase their income by multiplying the facilities for the sale of spirits. A vigorous opposition was started by the missionaries. The Queen has declined to confirm the bill, and so it has fallen through.

THE new Maryland Medical College, Baltimore, Md., is about to open a hospital in which alcohol will not be used in the treatment of disease. Dr. Joseph H. Branham says of the plan: "The purpose of our hospital is to discourage the free use of alcohol by the medical profession; to prevent, as far as possible, the spread of the taste for alcoholic drinks, and to prove that many diseases treated with alcohol can be cured better and quicker by our methods."

THERE are eight women colonels in the German army who draw their salaries regularly if their swords only semi-officially. These are: Queen Victoria; the Empress of Germany; the dowager empress, wife of the late Frederick III; the Princess Frederick Charles, of Prussia; the Queen Regent Sophia; and Queen Wilhelmina, of the Netherlands; the Duchess of Connaught and the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (Edinburgh), sister of the Emperor of Russia.

IN a discussion at the Young Men's Christian Association in Edinburgh, on the question, "The drifting away of young men from the church, and how to remedy it," Mr. D. Drysdale, Dunfermline, said there were 1,300 ministers who were shareholders in breweries, and the young men hold that the church was inconsistent to have anything to do with the drink traffic. If the church was to reach young men, it must take up a more consistent attitude with regard to all social questions.

A YOKOHAMA weekly paper says: "The Salvation Army has worked a great change for the better in Yokohama in the district formerly known as 'Bloodtown,' the paradise of loafers and loose characters. With gentle, but firm, indefatigable hands, the good men and good women of the army have reclaimed one poor waif after the other, with but little outside assistance, and to-day the moral tone of 'Bloodtown,' through their untiring efforts, has been so much improved, that there is now no longer any justification for the term."

DR. NORMAN KERR stated before the Royal Commission that there was a greater tendency among medical men to state plain facts in their certificates. He also stated that inherited tendency came as much from the mothers as from the fathers, citing the case of an Irish lady inebriate, whose two sons, ministers of religion, were both drunkards, whose two grandsons were both drunkards and whose three great-grandsons were drunkards. Teaching as to the effect of alcohol on the brain and heart, according to the same witness, ought to be included in the university curriculum. The subject was rarely mentioned or taught as it ought to be.

TO LIVE WELL AND HAPPILY
Use "Garland" Stoves and Ranges.

The Larkin Soaps

The Whole Family supplied with Laundry and Toilet Soaps for a year at Half Price. Sent Subject to Approval and Payment after Thirty Days' Trial.

IT IS WISE ECONOMY TO USE GOOD SOAP. Our soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES USE THEM, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity. Ask us for your neighbors' testimonials.

The Larkin Plan

saves you half the retail cost of your soaps, and doubles the purchasing value of this 50 per cent. saving in a premium bought for you below usual cost of making. One premium is A White Enameled Steel, Brass-Trimmed, Bow-Foot Bed. Metallic beds add beauty and cheerfulness to the chamber, while they convey a delightful feeling of cleanliness that invites repose. They harmonize perfectly with furniture of any wood or style. Brass top rod at head and foot, and heavy brass, gold-lacquered trimmings. Malleable castings that never break. Detachable ball-bearing casters. 4½ or 4 or 3½ feet wide. 6½ feet long. Head, 4½ feet. Foot, 3½ feet high. Corner posts, 1 inch in diameter. Very strong and will last a lifetime.

AFTER THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL if the purchaser finds all the Soaps, etc., of excellent quality and the premium entirely satisfactory and as represented, remit $10.00; if not, notify us goods are subject to our order. We make no charge for what you have used.

If you remit in advance, you will receive in addition a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Money refunded promptly if the BOX or PREMIUM disappoints. Safe delivery guaranteed. The transaction is not complete until you are satisfied.

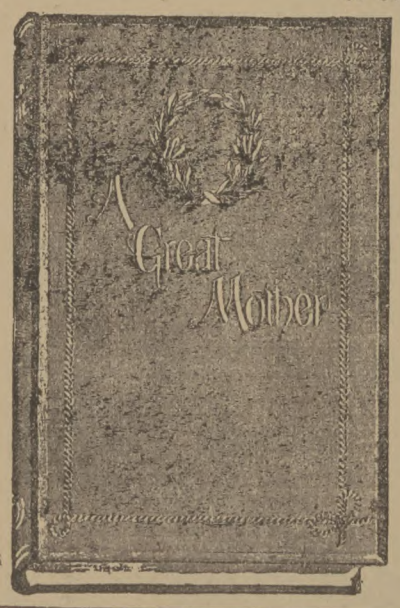
☞Many youths and maidens easily earn a Chautauqua Desk or other premium free by dividing the contents of a Combination Box among a few neighbors who readily pay the listed retail prices. This provides the $10.00 needful to pay our bill, and gives the young folk the premium as "a middleman's profit." The wide success of this plan confirms all our claims.

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating 15 Premiums sent on request.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., LARKIN ST.
Estab. 1875. Capital, $500,000. Buffalo, N. Y.
☞ READ NOTES BELOW.

Our Great Combination Box.

Enough to last an Average Family one Full Year.



This List of Contents Changed as Desired.

100 BARS "SWEET HOME" SOAP. For all laundry and household purposes it has no superior. Large bars.	$5.00
10 BARS WHITE WOOLLEN SOAP. A perfect soap for flannels.	.70
12 Pkgs. BORAXINE SOAP POWDER (full lbs.) An unequalled laundry luxury.	1.20
4 BARS HONOR BRIGHT SCOURING SOAP,	.20
1-4 DOZ. MODJESKA COMPLEXION SOAP, Perfume exquisite. A matchless beautifier.	.60
1-4 DOZ. OLD ENGLISH CASTILE SOAP,	.30
1-4 DOZ. CREME OATMEAL TOILET SOAP,	.25
1-4 DOZ. ELITE GLYCERINE TOILET SOAP,	.25
1-4 DOZ. LARKIN'S TAR SOAP. Unequalled for washing the hair.	.30
1-4 DOZ. SULPHUR SOAP	.30
1 BOTTLE, 1 oz., MODJESKA PERFUME. Delicate, refined, popular, lasting.	.30
1 JAR, 2 ozs., MODJESKA COLD CREAM. Soothing. Cures chapped skin.	.25
1 BOTTLE MODJESKA TOOTH POWDER. Preserves the teeth, hardens the gums, sweetens the breath.	.25
1 STICK WITCH HAZEL SHAVING SOAP	.10
THE CONTENTS, Bought at Retail, Cost	$10.00
THE PREMIUM, worth at Retail.	10.00
All for $10. (Premium gratis.) Actual Retail Value	$20

From The Baptist Union, Chicago.—The editor of The Baptist Union, speaking from a personal acquaintance of nearly twenty years with the head of this firm, is glad to bear witness to his thorough reliability. The premium offers made are surprisingly liberal, but the test of experience, as well as knowledge of the high standing and character of the firm warrants the statement that the promises made will all be kept.

New York Observer says:—We cheerfully recommend our readers to accept the offer made by the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. of Buffalo, N. Y. Members of the Observer's staff have personally tested the Soap made by this Company, and they know, too, that the extra value in premiums is very generous.

"The quickening mother-heart of the world needs demonstration, not theories of child-culture."

Such demonstration is given in the pages of

A GREAT MOTHER

The biography of Madam WILLARD written by her daughter, Miss Frances E. Willard, and her kinswoman, Mrs. Minerva B. Norton

No work of such value to mothers has appeared for years. It is both an incentive towards and an example of successful motherhood. White-ribbon mothers, especially, need to learn its open secret.

Handsomely Bound. Elegantly Illustrated.

PRICE $1.50.

W. T. P. A. The Temple... CHICAGO

A NEW EDITION OF

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life

BY HANNAH WHITALL SMITH

Bound in cloth, artistically decorated in two colors.

PRICE, - - 30 CENTS.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
The Temple, CHICAGO.....

VICI Leather Dressing

The best Shoe Dressing in the world
The genuine is made only by Robert H. Foerderer, Philadelphia, manufacturer of the famous

VICI KID

Ask your dealer for Vici Leather Dressing, and be sure the trademark with the name of the maker, is on each box or bottle. Imitations may ruin your shoes.

A book about buying, wearing and caring for shoes, mailed free. Address
ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philada., Pa.

A LITTLE girl who had mastered her catechism confessed herself disappointed. "Because," she said, "though I obey the fifth commandment and honor my papa and mamma, yet my days are not a bit longer in the land, because I am put to bed at seven o'clock."

THE Irish servant of a naval commander had the misfortune one day to let a tea kettle fall overboard. In fear and trembling he rushed to his master, and cried out to him: "Plaze, yer honor, can anything be said to be losht whin ye know where it is?" "Certainly not," replied the officer, "why?" "Why, thin, yer honor, ye may tink the tay kettle is losht, but it ain't, sorr. I know where it is, sorr. It's at the bottom of the ocean, sorr."

AT a reception in honor of President McKinley last winter a little girl came in with her mother. Instead of just shaking hands, like the grown folk, this little maiden put up her mouth to be kissed. She was a very little girl and her mouth was very sweet. Before anybody could realize it the president stooped down and kissed her. "Why, Dollie," cried her astonished mother, "how could you?" "Well," said the little girl, "I fought it would be interestin' to tell my grandchildren."

TO AID THE SOLDIERS.

North-Western Road Issues a Humane Order as to Them.

Volunteers on Trains Must be Treated With All Consideration.

ROAD KIND TO SOLDIERS.

NORTH-WESTERN ISSUES ORDER.

A humane order has just been issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y.

Impressed with the pitiable condition of a majority of the returning soldiers, General Manager Whitman of this road has determined that none of the boys in blue who may come into contact with his company shall suffer for lack of attention. The North-Western system covers five or six states which furnished a large proportion of the volunteers, and in order that the boys may be treated kindly on their way home, whether discharged or on furlough, Mr. Whitman has issued special instructions to every agent and conductor on the entire system to give special care and attention to returning soldiers en route from camps to their homes while upon the trains or at the stations of the North-Western. The employes are instructed to be diligent to ascertain if any of the soldiers are in need of food, and more particularly if they are sick and require medical attention, and if any such are found he is to be attended to at the expense of the company, if necessary. It will not be necessary for the soldier to be in uniform to get the advantage of the road's hospitality, for if he can show the proper papers of discharge or furlough, he will receive the same consideration.

"We can not do enough for the returning soldiers," said General Superintendent Sanborn, in speaking of the order. "The boys went down there and faced death in a hundred different ways, and those who escaped are returning home debilitated and worn out. They did this for what? Not for money; it is not in any sane man to resign himself to death for a money consideration. They did it for the love of country."

Other roads probably may follow the North-Western's humane move.—The Chicago Chronicle.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 39. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, October 13, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
An Indian Outbreak—The Rock River, Ill., M. E. Conference Votes for Equal Lay Representation—Temperance—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, The New Woman. By Hanna A. Foster 3
How a Velvet Gown Was Paid For. By Ira Brashears . 3
Dealing in Futures. By Mary H. Hunt 3
The Why—The How. By Rev. Frances E. Townsley . . 4
Willard Hall Echoes 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Work at Camp Thomas by the Chattanooga Union . . . 5
The Army Canteen System 5
"Advice to the W. C. T. U." 6
LOCAL UNION: 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, God's Kiss 7
Uncle John's Talks 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Our Country—Its Faults and its Virtues 8
It is Worry that Kills 8
World-Aspects of the Temperance Question 8
Personals 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Queensland—Y's at Work 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Norway—Tasmanian Notes 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Western Washington—Indiana—New Hampshire . . . 11
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Parlor Meetings—Anti-Narcotics 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
TREASURER'S CORNER 12
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 13
ORGANIZERS' CORNER 13
W. C. T. U. NOTES 13
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER 14
Regimental Roll of Honor—Opposed to Canteens . . . 14
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 11-16.

Chairmen of Nat'l Convention Committees.

General Committee of Arrangements, Mrs. C. S. Soule, 105 East Isabel street, St. Paul.

Entertainment Committee, Mrs. C. L. Webber, 1729 W. Minnehaha street, Hamline, St. Paul.

Finance Committee, Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, 37 East Tenth street, St. Paul.

Press Committee, Mrs. L. M. Rich, 1397 Hewitt Ave., St. Paul.

Boarding House Committee, Mrs. Arella L. Phillips, 717 Geranium street, St. Paul.

Notes and Comments.

THE chairman of the entertainment committee for the National Convention, Mrs. C. L. Webber, asks that state and territorial secretaries send her the names of delegates as early as possible, that she may have ample time to arrange for their entertainment.

MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS and Miss Anna Gordon are now at Headquarters, to remain until the National Convention. Mrs. Stevens arrived last Friday, and together with the other National officers at the Temple, is busily engaged in completing plans for the annual gathering at St. Paul. Miss Gordon came a few days later, after a brief visit to her mother and sisters at Auburndale, Mass. She is, we are glad to state, looking well, and has quite recovered from the recent attack of gastritis.

RESERVED seats for the National Convention are selling fast, and all who desire them should write at once to Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, chairman of committee on finance. Seats are reserved only when the money for the same is sent to her. The price per seat is one dollar, and coupons will be returned to the purchasers. Send money order or check, not postage stamps.

WE trust that the women of Illinois will not forget to use at the coming state election the little bit of suffrage that belongs to them. Under a law passed in 1891 women are entitled to vote for University trustees. The state board of University trustees has nine members, three of whom are elected every four years. The prohibition party has, it will be remembered, placed the names of two women on its ticket, Mrs. Mary E. Metzgar of Moline, and Mrs. Mary I. Barnes of Lacon. Let every white-ribbon woman of the state perform her own duty as a citizen by registering and voting, and endeavor to induce her neighbor to do likewise.

MRS. J. K. BARNEY, World's superintendent of penal and reformatory work, our prison evangelist and eighth round-the-world missionary, has accepted an invitation from the B. W. T. A. executive to work in Great Britain and Ireland. She sailed from Boston, October 6, on the Dominion line steamship, New England, for Queenstown. From there she will go to Dublin and Belfast, then on to England. We are sorry not to have her with us at St. Paul, but gladly bid her Godspeed in her mission of love. She is praying, she says, that we may have "a blessed Convention and a wonderful year of work all along our lines."

WE grieve to announce the death of Mr. Edwin Church, husband of Mrs. Abbie Frances B. Church, who for more than a year had charge of the Willard Hall noon meetings, and whose name is familiar to UNION SIGNAL readers as writer of the "Echoes." Mr. Church was a merchant in Crown Point, Ind., and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him, both as a friend and as a business man. He was a staunch supporter of the temperance cause and a tower of strength to his wife in her W. C. T. U. work. He had been in failing health for some time, and on Monday, October 3, began the new life in that other world—"the world that sets this right." THE UNION SIGNAL, for its great constituency, extends to Mrs. Church sisterly love and sympathy in her deep bereavement.

THE Young People's Christian Temperance Union of Chicago are carrying on their crusade against the saloons with unabated enthusiasm. The Rev. J. Q. A. Henry, superintendent of their department of law enforcement, is leading in the onslaught against the transgressors of law with all the persistence and ardor for which he is noted. Other pastors of the city are giving active support and that well-known temperance advocate, Father Cleary, is aiding the cause immensely by securing the coöperation of the Catholic young people in this movement. The city press is also, by its able championship, giving added momentum. The special aim of the present campaign is to bring such pressure to bear upon the city officials that restrictive liquor laws already on the statute books will be thoroughly enforced.

PROF. C. F. HODGE, of Worcester, Mass., having publicly attacked the indorsed text-books now being used in the public schools in the teaching of scientific temperance, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt replied to him at length through the columns of the Worcester Sunday Telegram. She cites eminent authorities to show that Dr. Hodge's position is untenable, proving (1) that alcohol is a poison, (2) that alcohol is not a food, (3) that moderate drinking is unsafe. The article, "Dealing in Futures," on page 4 of this issue, is a summary of her exhaustive replies to Dr. Hodge, and we trust our readers will give it careful attention and wide circulation. "There is a concerted attack," writes Mrs. Hunt, "now being made on the very foundation principles of our reform, and our women ought to be enlightened. If they would only universally put the School Physiology Journal in the hands of the teachers and read it themselves, it would, with its strong scientific testimony, go a great way toward stemming this tide of the advocacy of alcohol on the part of such men as Professor Hodge."

AS there seems to be some misunderstanding as to the position of the executive committee regarding the $300,000 Trust Bonds, we deem it wise to again present the resolution adopted at our meeting last July:

Resolved, Second, That while we are not legally bound, we regard it as a sacred trust to purchase, before the next convention, the Temple trust bonds so far as available funds make possible. Therefore, we recommend, provided the permission of the donors be secured, that all money now in the hands of the Temple trustees and Miss Cornelia Dow, with all money forwarded to her for this purpose before November 1, 1898, be used to purchase these bonds. To such bondholders as do not dispose of their Temple trust bonds before November 1, 1898, we recommend that they be exchanged for their collateral security, Temple stock.

It will be seen that the executive committee did not assume any responsibility beyond the National Convention and advised all bondholders who by that time had not received their money, to claim the security for their bonds, viz., Temple stock.

[Signed] THE GENERAL OFFICERS.

Current Events.

An Indian Outbreak.

The Pillagers of Northern Minnesota Give Battle to the Regulars—Seven Men Killed.

TROUBLE with the Pillager Indians which has been brewing for some time, culminated in a pitched battle on October 5, which cost the lives of seven white men, seventeen Indians, and fourteen whites wounded. Press dispatches predict a general uprising of the Chippewas, but the more conservative correspondents claim that the trouble is purely local. The causes which led to the battle are set forth by William E. Curtis, in The Chicago Record, as follows:

"The outbreak was caused by the determination of the Indians to prevent the arrest and punishment of their head chief, who is accused of violating the laws that prohibit the sale of whisky on Indian reservations.

"There has been a great deal of trouble in this particular tribe about the whisky traffic. It has been difficult to make the Indians comprehend why they should be punished for selling whisky to each other, when white men in the villages around are allowed to do so, freely and without interruption. Their 'untutored minds' can not catch on to the logic of such discrimination, and the license system adds to their perplexity. Eighteen or twenty Indians have been punished for selling whisky to their neighbors, and the neighbors who bought it were taken to Duluth and held as witnesses until the trials were over, when they were released and told to go home. They received their witness fees and their mileage, and most of them proceeded to get roaring drunk on the money. Nobody prevented them from buying whisky in Duluth, and the men who sold it to them were not interfered with, which they consider a rank injustice on the part of the officers of law.

"Bush Ear, the chief, who was the principal offender against the whisky laws and regulations, managed to escape arrest when the original raid was made, and he lay low until he thought the trouble had blown over; but the deputy marshal, who was biding his time, caught him when he came down to the agencies to draw the annuities for his people, and endeavored to run him off to Duluth. But the Indians were too quick for him and rescued the prisoner. They were not only impelled by loyalty to their chief but by a sense of injustice arising from the circumstances I have described. The regulars were sent to assist the local authorities in arresting and bringing in all the offenders with the result above stated."

The Rock River, Ill., M. E. Conference Votes for Equal Lay Representation.

THE Rock River Methodist Episcopal Conference which met in South Park Avenue M. E. church, Chicago, October 5, voted 200 to 6 in favor of equal lay representation in the General Conference. The presiding bishop, Henry W. Warren, had already declared that there was no intrinsic difference between laymen and ministers, the only distinction being one of office and relation, and that every grace, every field of usefulness and possibility open to the one was equally open to the other.

Dr. Arthur Edwards, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, declared that the woman question would be the next to demand attention. With equal lay representation in the General Conference it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that women will be accepted as delegates to that body.

Two unique features of the conference were a reception and banquet given to the conference at the Auditorium the evening previous to the opening of the conference, at which there were over 1,000 people, including five bishops, and a series of lectures on literary subjects, given to the general public at 4 P. M., three days of the conference.

Temperance.

FATHER MATHEW, or Temperance Day, was celebrated by the Catholic Total Abstinence societies of Chicago, on Monday, October 10, by a parade of all the societies.

JUDGE MAXWELL, of the circuit court, at Bay City, Mich., has announced that hereafter he will enforce the liquor law to the limit.

PRINCIPAL W. O. BROWN, of Green Bay, Wis., has authorized Captain Marquardt, of the high school football team, to expel any member who is known to use liquor or cigarets.

THE Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of Wisconsin, in session at Janesville, reports a gain in membership of 500. One year ago the Grand Lodge was in debt $1,200; now all bills are paid and there is money in the treasury.

COUNTY ATTORNEY WOODWORTH, of Nemaha county, Kansas, actually had Fred Hook, a Seneca jointist, convicted of selling liquor on seventy-seven counts. The fine imposed is $7,700, with six years and five months' jail sentence. The county attorney's fee is $1,925 and the costs of prosecution $100.—The Champion (liquor organ).

THE four Methodist conferences in Illinois in recent session, had temperance meetings on the program. Samuel Dickie spoke at Charleston, September 24, and at DuQuoin, October 7. Central Illinois preachers at Kankakee heard the Rev. U. Z. Gilmer on September 23, and Rock River conference invited the Rev. Dr. Banks to address them in Chicago, October 10.

SINCE Jackson, Miss., became a "dry" town there has been a great accession of "literary" clubs. When the last application for a charter for certain "literary" privileges was presented to Governor McLaurin for executive approval, he added the following section, and then affixed his name and the great seal of the state:

"Section 12. No spirituous, vinous or malt liquor, nor any other intoxicating liquor, nor any kind of cards or dice or device used in gambling, shall be carried upon or permitted upon any real or personal property of the corporation, and a violation of this section by any person—the corporation being responsible for its enforcement—shall, ipse facto forfeit the charter, and all the property of the corporation shall thereby belong to the state, and the sheriff of Hinds county shall immediately take possession thereof for the state, without waiting for the legal proceedings to decide the charter forfeited. The organization under this charter will be an acceptance of these conditions."

The conditions were not accepted.

THE following resolution was passed at a meeting of the Volunteers of America in Waverly theater, Chicago, on the motion of Rev. Corydon Millard, late army chaplain:

"WHEREAS, The manufacture and traffic in intoxicating drinks are a fruitful source of evil, deeply injurious in their effects upon the moral and pecuniary interests of our country, causing four-fifths of the sickness, pauperism and crime which afflict our city (Chicago); and,

"WHEREAS, Their abandonment presents the only effectual remedy for the giant evils of intemperance: therefore,

"Resolved, That we citizens of Chicago in mass-meeting assembled, will wage an incessant warfare against this gigantic evil of our city; that we will work for prohibition legally and morally, and that we will never falter nor recede in this great moral work until its final consummation. God hasten the day."

Educational.

THE board of education of Chicago has conceded to Dr. Andrews, the superintendent, the right of initiative in the appointment, transfer and promotion of teachers.

NEW YORK'S state superintendent of public instruction, Charles R. Skinner, has issued a statement disapproving of the various movements started to raise money in the public schools for patriotic purposes.

GEORGE A. PLIMPTON, treasurer of Barnard College, announces that the entire indebtedness of the college, $124,000, has been discharged, and that the conditional endowment of $100,000, offered a few days ago by an anonymous friend of the college, will now become available.

MRS. ELLEN H. RICHARDS will give a course of lectures upon sanitary science and household economics before the junior and senior classes of the woman's college of Western Reserve University at Cleveland, O., during October and November. Cleveland will be her headquarters, though she will give similar lectures in some other cities in Ohio.

THE Amish people of Elkhart county, Indiana, have religiously opposed all educational, as well as all other modern movements, for many years. They refused to obey the compulsory education law, and banded together to pay all fines resulting from it. After they had paid a fine of twenty-one dollars, because one parent refused to send his son to school, they decided that it was less expensive to comply with the law. Hereafter their children will attend school.—The School Journal.

THE public school designated as No. 49, 237 East Thirty-seventh street, New York, has been opened as a free evening school for girls and women. Reading, history, spelling, geography, business, arithmetic and penmanship, are taught in the junior department, and in the senior department the additional subjects of book-keeping, composition, stenography and sewing. Foreign women receive instruction in English. The hours are from 7:15 to 9:15 P. M., and pupils over fourteen years of age are admitted.

At Home.

DR. DAVID J. HILL, of Rochester, N. Y., president of Rochester University, has been appointed first assistant secretary of state by the President, to succeed John Bassett Moore.

YELLOW fever still continues to spread in Mississippi. There are now twelve counties and fifteen towns infected and reports from all these tell of growing distress. The panic has seized upon all classes, and a case of any kind of sickness in a neighborhood causes the people of the vicinity to shut off all communication with their neighbors.

SENATOR QUAY, of Pennsylvania, and his son, Richard R. Quay, an ex-state representative, were admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000 each by Magistrate Jermon, of Philadelphia, upon charges of conspiring to rob the commonwealth of Pennsylvania by using portions of its deposits in the now defunct People's Bank for stock speculation. District Attorney Graham is prosecuting the case.

JUDGE LEROY B. VALLIANT, of the St. Louis circuit court, has rendered a decision of great moment in the case of Marx & Haas, clothiers, against Watson et al., members of the Garment Workers' L. A. 993. It establishes a national precedent. By it the judge makes the boycott a legal weapon. The decision dissolves the injunction granted against the Assembly and dismisses the case in full.

Abroad.

IT is announced from Madrid that Admiral Cervera will be appointed a life senator.

THE Spanish government has sanctioned the sale, to South American Republics, of the Spanish gunboats lying in Cuban waters.

A SPECIAL dispatch from Shanghai, China, says it is feared that 1,000 lives were lost in a great fire which partly destroyed the city of Hankow on last Sunday.

THE Pope has charged Mgr. Bavona to prepare a memorandum, which will be presented to the American and Spanish commissioners in Paris. In this memorandum his Holiness requests protection for the rights of the Catholic clergy in Cuba and the Philippines.

THE collective note of Great Britain, France, Italy and Russia, demanding the withdrawal of the Turkish troops in the island of Crete, has been presented to the Turkish government. It insists that the Turkish troops must evacuate the island of Crete within a month from October 5, their withdrawal to commence within a fortnight.

THE basis of a settlement between Canada and the United States has been reached in the matter of the Bering Sea and the Atlantic and inland fisheries. A report setting forth the conditions was presented to the commission by the chairmen of the joint committee on those subjects, John W. Foster and Sir Louis Davies. The provisions are not definitely known, but it is believed that the Canadian commissioners have, however, decided to prohibit pelagic sealing on the payment of an indemnity to actual sealers by the United States.

Contributed.

The New Woman.

BY HANNA A. FOSTER.

WHO, what, is this wondrous "new woman"?
This creature of body and soul?
Angelic, satanic or human—
What forces her being control?

How classify, measure or grade her?
Queen? menial? in fetters or free?
List; woman is what the Lord made her,
Has been, and forever shall be!

The sister—so tireless and tender,
With purpose no fears can beguile—
Like Moses' fair nurse and defender
Who lulled him to sleep on the Nile.

The daughter—so rare in her beauty!
So constant to conscience and truth!
So loyal to mother and duty—
Like harvest-field heroine Ruth.

The wife—through all danger and trial,
Courageous and patient, I ween,
And strong in her grand self-denial
As ever was Esther the queen!

The mother while soulfully saying
"My children, Heaven's richest award!"
Like Hannah, is working and praying,
And giving them back to the Lord.

'Tis woman forbidden the sweetness
And beauty of Eden so long,
Athirst for life's coming completeness,
Just catching her jubilee song!

Despite her wild way through the ages,
False lights, and traditions of men,
And latter-day doctors and sages,
She is seeking her Eden again!

Behind her, the slow evolution
Of centuries; facing the light,
She'll work to its perfect solution
Her problem of "fitness" and "right"!

Berea, O.

How a Velvet Gown was Paid For.

BY IRA BRASHEARS.

SOME years ago in my rounds as a commercial salesman, I had occasion to visit a fashionable dressmaker's establishment in a thriving, young western city. Several ladies were inspecting and admiring a very handsome silk velvet dress, to which the finishing touches had just been given. In color it was a royal purple, and in material and finish it was fit for a queen to wear on any occasion. Very profuse were the expressions of admiration, in the midst of which some one asked, "And who's to be the lovely wearer?"

"Why, I suppose that it's Banker C's daughter, for I hear that she is to be married soon," answered a gray-haired lady, while all looked inquiringly at the fair proprietress, who quietly responded,

"We do not always tell who is to wear a dress. You can see for yourselves some of these days who is the owner, for she lives in the city."

A plainly dressed lady said in subdued tones, "I know who she is, ladies, for there's but one woman in this town who can afford it and is so foolish as to pay three hundred dollars for one gown, and that's the wife of our most prosperous saloonkeeper, who runs the House of Lords, you know, where so many of our men spend their evenings and their money, while their families scarcely have the necessaries of life. It's a burning shame," she continued, with greater firmness of tone, "but Banker C's wife tells me that that saloonkeeper carries more than twice as large a bank account as any one of our most successful business men in general trade."

One of the ladies made some purchases, and when all had retired and I had taken an order for goods, I could not help taking another look at the beautiful garment of which the fair proprietress was justly proud as a piece of workmanship.

"So that plainly dressed lady was right as to ownership?" I queried, as I turned to go out, and a nod of assent was the sufficient reply.

Being at leisure during the evening, in company with a friend I strolled into the "House of Lords," in order to see its gaudy furnishings and to observe the customers as they came by twos and threes to deposit their cash and carry away or burn the so-called "goods" dispensed by the well-dressed proprietor and his white-aproned clerks. Many of the customers were mechanics and day laborers, as could be easily told by their dress. Others were young men from the country—farmer's sons—who plainly were taking their first lessons in the art of spending money for that which satisfies not, and others, well-dressed citizens of the city.

The long, brilliantly lighted apartment was well supplied with gaming apparatus—pool tables, card tables, and, at the farther end, a wheel of fortune. We strolled about among the players, and concerning some of them my friend informed me about as follows:

"That gray-haired man is a carpenter, and gets about twelve dollars a week, but here he generally spends his evenings and his money. He is a generous, whole-souled fellow, and has a passion for card playing. He seldom wagers more than twenty-five cents at a time, but he learned to gamble when in the army, and probably will keep it up as long as he lives. His wife mainly supports the family with her laundry work."

"That's a great shame," I replied mechanically, for I was running over some figures mentally, that in a single year half of his weekly wages put into the saloon fund would pay for the handsome velvet dress, which like a thing of beauty still floated before my mental vision.

Without noticing my abstraction, my friend continued: "That tall, black-eyed, well-dressed gentleman at the pool table yonder is a professional gambler, who is almost always a winner. He drinks but little, though he often buys the drinks for others in the routine of gaming, and always provides well for his family."

I concluded that he was one of the strong advocates of the license system, and so suggested to my friend. "Certainly," was the prompt reply, "for when the temperance folks last year made an effort to defeat license before the excise board, he was one of the opposition leaders, because as he claimed, saloons promote business generally."

"It helps his business, of course," said I, as a well-dressed young man passed us, on his way to the wheel of fortune.

Looking after him my friend said, nodding assent to my last remark, "He's the oldest of five children, one of whom is a hopeless invalid, and the mother, a widow, who keeps a boarding-house for their support. He is a good blacksmith, and could make plenty of money, but he neglects business while his mother supplies him with board and lodging, hoping that he will reform sometime." Looking at him more closely, as he bore the marks of a wrecked manhood, I came to the conclusion that his overtasked mother was assisting to pay for that beautiful velvet gown on the weekly installment plan.

Suddenly there was a commotion at the front of the apartment, loud talking and laughing and everybody astir. "What does that mean?" I asked my friend as we rose up.

"Oh! that's old Tom Jones on a spree. He sold a lot of fat hogs to-day, and is throwing away his money. Just watch him now," he continued.

Then we saw him coming toward us, shaking hands with every one and saying, "Come, boys, take something. It's old Tom's treat this time—anything you want; don't be afraid of bills, Uncle Tom's got lots of money," and much more in a similar strain.

We walked toward the door, and just as we were about to pass him to leave the place he reached a hand to each of us, and repeated his invitation to take something. We might have been considerably annoyed before being able to get away from him, had not the proprietor come up at the moment from the rear of the room, where he had been running the wheel of fortune.

"Hello, Bill, I'm so glad to see you," said old Tom in great glee. "Why, I want to give the boys a good square treat all round before I start. Set 'em up, Bill, and fix me some hot toddy—brandy, you know, the very best—and here, this will help pay expenses," while he handed the fellow a twenty-dollar gold piece.

"That's all right, Uncle Tom, I'll fix your toddy myself," responded the smiling landlord, as he pocketed the money, and went behind the bar, in front of which stood perhaps a dozen men or more.

Amid the fizzing of beer faucets and the clicking of glasses, we departed, while a bystander said, "Old Tom never cares for money when he's on a spree. I've seen him spend fifty dollars in one evening."

Later at the hotel I learned that "Old Tom Jones," as everybody knew him, was the owner of a fine, though heavily mortgaged farm, which would shortly be sold under foreclosure, because he could not pay the interest.

He had a large family, of whom two or three boys were treading in his footsteps. The mother was a hard-working, patient woman, but powerless to prevent the calamity that would shortly make her and her family homeless, because of her husband's habit of "going on a spree" whenever he got a little money.

With such spendthrift customers it was no longer a matter of wonder that the saloonkeeper took in twice as much cash as any regular business house in that city, nor that at least one clear-headed woman knew at a word, who could afford to wear the costliest clothing in the city.

Stafford Store, Va.

Dealing in Futures.

BY MARY H. HUNT.

WHEN the fallacies are laid bare on which a gigantic evil rests, how soon that evil can be overthrown depends upon how long it will take to dispel from the popular mind the fallacies which are the foundations of the evil. It took a half century of agitation to dispel the hallucination that upheld human chattel slavery, but when it was dispelled, then came the end.

The drink evil rests upon the idea that alcohol will help humanity bear its burdens and add to its joys; a fallacy that has been dispelled in a hundred modern laboratories, by as many clinics and mortuary records, and by centuries of experience. The most hopeful present sign for the temperance cause is the fact that there is not a claim made for alcoholic beverages to-day that is not refuted by the scientific demonstration of some of the greatest investigators of this scientific age. This has been notably shown in recent attacks on the accuracy of the total abstinence teaching of the indorsed physiologies now used in the public schools of this country. These attacks have appeared simultaneously in different localities, but all with the earmarks of a common source. It takes very little ability to call the advocates of temperance teaching "ignorant fanatics" and other like names. These critics seldom get farther, but when they can be induced to specify the inaccuracies which they charge, then the field is open and the battle for truth can go on.

We have just had such an experience. A few weeks ago Dr. Hodge, of Clark University, Worcester, published through the Daily Telegram of that city, one of these attacks without specifying what the alleged inaccuracies were. A protest through the same paper against the unfairness of charging a large class of responsible authors with inaccuracy without telling what these inaccuracies were, finally led Dr. Hodge to publish the statements from the indorsed textbooks which he challenged, with quotations from physiological works which he claimed controvert the former. Our readers will be interested to know that the disputed passages in the indorsed textbooks are those that teach, (1) that alcohol is a poison; (2) that it is not a food; and (3) that moderate drinking is unsafe.

To be asked to defend these fundamental propositions of the total abstainer's creed was a good deal like being called upon to vouch for the multiplication table. For every quotation or part of a quotation which Dr. Hodge presented as opposed to this teaching of the textbooks, it was not difficult for one familiar with the scientific work of the past fifteen years to find many more testimonies from abler authorities than those he quotes, which positively controvert his position. Space forbids our citing more than two instances. One of the last pleas for alcohol just now being much exploited by its friends is quoted in part by Dr. Hodge from "Stewart's Manual of Physiology" as given below. The immediately following and qualifying portion of this paragraph which Dr.

Hodge omitted to quote, we append in italics:

"In small quantities alcohol is oxidized in the body, and is, therefore, to some extent, a food substance. Alcohol in strictly moderate doses is not harmful to healthy men living and working under ordinary conditions.

"Recent experience goes to show that in severe and continuous exertion, coupled with exposure to all weathers, as in war and in exploring expeditions, alcohol is injurious, and it is well known that it must be avoided in mountain climbing."

Immensely superior in medical rank to the above quoted writer is Dr. Adolf Fick, professor of physiology in the University of Wurtzburg, Germany, a university which holds foremost rank in medicine, where many of our American physiologists have pursued their final course in professional study. Dr. Fick says concerning the alleged statement that the oxidation of alcohol proves it to be to some extent a food:

"Although the relation between the burning of alcohol and the burning of the nutritious substances in the animal organism has not been fully explained physiologically, this much is true, that alcohol, taken however moderately, is not to be classed among nutritious substances."

Space forbids our quoting other scholars of high rank, who also bear positive testimony to the fallacy of the idea that the oxidation of alcohol proves it to be a food. To prove further that alcohol is a food and not a poison, Dr. Hodge also quoted the so-called evidence from "Hoppe-Seyler's Handbook of Chemical Analysis," which says:

"Ethyl alcohol is found in the fresh tissues of man and animals as a constant constituent where no alcohol has been given."

This sort of assertion which proves nothing, has been frequently flaunted of late by men who should know that it would be as reasonable to claim that oxalic or carbolic acid are foods simply because they are found in living tissue. They are formed there by the changes which are constantly taking place in the processes of life. They are not foods but poisons, or waste matter on its way to elimination. If alcohol is thus found in the tissues there is no evidence that its character and destiny are not the same as these other poisons. Bouchart (see "Auto-Intoxication") has demonstrated that the normal man manufactures enough various poisons each day to destroy the body if retained within it. These are only a few samples of the absurdities with which the advocates of alcoholic drinks are now trying to defend their use even for the coming generation. Such false ideas have enslaved and destroyed more than all other forms of evil.

The members of a local union are dealing in futures for living temples—the school children in their own community—as they decide what they will do for scientific temperance the coming year. More than that, they are dealing with destiny in a larger way than we can now foresee. The eagerness and enthusiasm of the teacher is dulled by the charges which he hears but cannot answer, that the statements of the indorsed text-books on alcoholic drinks are not reliable. The School Physiology Journal kindles anew the teacher's zeal, because it gives the testimony of great authorities for everything these books teach, and thus shows them to be true. The unions that send these Journals to their public school teachers are doing their part in sowing the seed; God is responsible for the harvest.

It would not have taken fifty years of agitation and four years of bloody war to free the slave if there had been laws in nearly every state requiring the study of the truth about slavery in the public schools. The message of deliverance would have come as the deliberate, intelligent voice of the people, not as the price of precious human lives that went out in the roar of battle-troubled air.

The cup of iniquity following the use of alcohol is fast filling to the brim. As the shadow of the coming twentieth century could not abide the atrocities of Spain in Cuba and other islands of the sea, no more can it tolerate the abominations of alcohol's greater slaughter. The truth against alcohol is out, and the way is open for it to reach the next generation, and through them the fathers and mothers of to-day. The invincible power of Him who said, "I am the Truth," is behind that truth, and if we only do our part it will be given to the people, who will no more be "destroyed for lack of knowledge;" and the redemption of our nation from the drink curse will come, not through a thousand camp fires and rows of burnished steel, but because a great people have declared themselves free.

Boston, Mass.

The Why—The How.

BY REV. FRANCES E. TOWNSLEY.

HOW weary grow the feet, how falter the hands, how feeble seems the faith of the many who are trying to bear witness for unpopular truth, in our own and similar ranks of moral soldiery and Christian reform.

Have we forgotten the why, or the how of our calling? Listen: The bells ring in our steeples Sabbath after Sabbath; the chimes from cathedral and temple sound forth for mid-week services and special gatherings for prayer; the gilded church domes shine in the sunlight or glisten in the starlight—for what? Simply to declare one truth, to utter one call, to announce one mighty fact—that the message of God in Christ to men, rich or poor, wise or ignorant, learned or illiterate is one, the message of the cross. As George D. Herron says so concisely, "The cross is the heart of every message; not a cross, but His cross, the cross of absolute self-renunciation which our Saviour carried in His heart."

If we are reconciled to God, we surely are reconciled to God's way of blessing and saving men. It means to be a Christian, that we accept as the rule of our lives the divine law of the life of God, as seen most absolutely in the life and read in the teachings of His Son—the law of self-abnegation. From creation's dawn to the end of the age we must not fail to note this powerful truth, this potent fact, the law of sacrifice. "The sorrow of Gethsemane was in the heart of God before He breathed life into man; and the suffering of the cross continues in the Father-heart till sin vanishes from the hearts of His children."

In the blaze of martyr fires men read every new truth and study every new question of reform. The man who dies for a principle, dies socially, dies financially or dies politically—is but carrying out the lesson of Calvary. He is teaching this lesson as surely as the man who dies in a dungeon or at the stake, for

> ". . . whether on the scaffold,
> Or in the battle's van,
> The fittest place for man to die
> Is where he dies for man."

I have been learning, slowly, perhaps, but no less surely, that we are not to be overanxious as to the method God sees fit to adopt in making good our personal endeavors to obey the divine law of the Cross. What we each owe the past centuries is great; what the oncoming ages shall owe us depends upon our present grasp of this blessed law. Split theological hairs as we may over the question of vicarious atonement for sin, this one thing is sure, every true Christ follower is perforce a vicarious sufferer for humanity.

The mother by the sick bed of her child; the father toiling early and late, that his son or daughter may be educated; the soldier who drills and fights, or who waits in camp or pines in a hospital ward for his country's honor; the minister of the gospel who foregoes popular applause that he may preach the righteousness of the Sermon on the Mount; the woman who will be true to the principles of temperance and social purity and her duty to the church as a witness bearer in the earth; the young maiden who will turn her back on the path where an unchristian though intense and flattering love offers earthly ease, that she may shield and guide and bless others who need her aid and her example—each is walking, a vicarious sufferer, with the Blessed One.

> "Toiling up new Calvarys ever,
> With the Cross that turns not back."

If some of us have been overburdened because we saw not the results we longed for, I bid you remember we have nothing to do with the times, the results, the manner of God's doings, but with one thought—am I living out the life of God, the life of sacrificial service? It is easier to sing than to suffer, to read from a prayer-book than to bear a cross, to pay a subscription, than to surrender a fond wish. But clear, sweet, true and gloriously happy is the song of the cross-bearers. For their life is the only life worth living for one hour! It is the only life that counts, the only service that is linked with eternal blessedness.

And, believe me, the crown is here. Its gleam will shine forth in the peace, the sense of right, the fellowship with the triune God which will so mark you among men that the worldliest of them all will secretly envy you your dedication to the supreme law of your life.

And if the Word be true which our mothers carried in their hands when they went forth from the Ohio church to the saloon, from the closet to the conflict, from the Throne to the battlefield, the hereafter's crowning is most sacredly assured.

For there is no man or woman who has left houses, or lands, or love, or gold and gear, social leadership, or worldly glory for the cross of Christ and the uplifting of the ones within reach, that shall not shine as the stars forever and ever.

Vassar, Mich.

Willard Hall Echoes.

AS the representative audience gathered in Willard Hall, September 28, men and women with tender memories of the loved one, the anniversary of whose birth we gathered to honor, listened and received new impetus of thought and purpose for pushing on this great cause of temperance. In the unavoidable absence of Mrs. Carse, president of Chicago Central Union, Mrs. S. M. D. Fry presided.

. . . . . .

The platform was profusely decorated with lilies and asters by the skillful hands of Mrs. Robert Greenlee and daughter. Mrs. Charlton Edholm led in a prayer which drew all hearts closer to God, and with much feeling we sang "Blest be the tie that binds." The beautiful ninety-first Psalm, words of remembrance and comfort were read by Mrs. T. C. Reiley, president of the fourth district, after which a solo, "In Memory She Lingers," was exquisitely sung by Miss Ella Norton.

With tenderness and love Miss Helen Hood gave some "Fireside Scenes from Rest Cottage," of which beloved household she was a member for several years. Mr. Burt Rice rendered the memorial hymn, written by Miss Willard, and the music composed by Lady Henry Somerset, "On Heights of Power."

. . . . . .

The plebiscite vote to be taken in Canada next day was clearly and forcefully set forth by Mrs. Fry, who also led in the prayer that God would grant victory to the temperance hosts in this crucial hour. Membership in the Central W. C. T. U. was invited by Mrs. Hilton, and a collection taken to purchase a picture of Miss Willard to be presented to the Frances E. Willard public school of Chicago.

. . . . . .

The comforting words of Christ, "Come unto me and rest," were sung by Mrs. Wilber Hagans. The address by Rev. J. Q. A. Henry was listened to with rapt attention. "The mad dog, Drink, what shall we do with him?" was the subject set forth in forceful, ringing words of denunciation, admonition and appeal. The crowded hall rang with applause, or became almost breathlessly quiet as the speaker spoke of the laws as now enforced, and the great possibility of future good to the people if radical and persistent efforts be systematically carried on.

. . . . . .

"As the electric light in its brightness casts such deep shadows, so our secret sins in the light of God's countenance are as the black shadows. Only the blood of Christ which cleanseth from all sin can wash and make one white as snow." A lad came to the office and said, "I want to sign the pledge and get some pledge-cards. That lady down in the Hall who talks about it every day seems to think it is such a serious thing to drink, and I've got two friends who drink a little, and I thought I'd sign and take some cards and ask them to sign, too." As Miss Willard's sister Mary said, "Tell everybody to be good." Somewhere there is a soul waiting for your message.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

Work at Camp Thomas by the Chattanooga Union.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—However we may have felt in regard to the war, we who have for five months watched and worked at and around Camp Thomas with its from forty-five to sixty thousand men, are convinced that its results will be more far-reaching than any of us thought possible in the beginning.

When we started the "Rest" in Chattanooga, the most sanguine did not dream of the great opportunity it was going to be. New conditions confronted us constantly. From a resting place for soldiers it came to be an intelligence bureau, where we looked up friends all over the states. Often the boys' mothers did not hear from them; over four hundred such letters were written, and more than one hundred boys were seen and cared for by our women.

In the beginning of the camp women were not allowed in hospitals even as visitors, and the department wanted no women nurses. It was not long, however, until they were allowed to go to the hospitals with flowers. I shall never forget our first trip to the Third Division hospital, of which so much has been written and so much criticism of Major Hubbard, surgeon in charge.

At this hospital there was provision made for two hundred and forty men, but on that hot June day there were three hundred and sixty. Of course many of these must lie on the ground under trees or anywhere they could. Almost all of the three hundred sick men lay in their uniforms just as they were when stricken down. I said to Major Hubbard, "Don't you think it is very bad for these men, burning with fever, to lie in their clothes?" He looked at me in the most hopeless way and said, "What are we to do? No provision has been made for nightshirts, and then, too, we are so crowded that it is impossible to do better than we are doing." "What you need is women for nurses," we said, but the reply was, "The government does not approve." Upon returning to the Rest we found Mrs. Whitaker's check for $25.50, a check from Mrs. Thacher for ten, and from Miss Belle Mix, of Iowa, for five dollars, all in the same day. A heavy weight was lifted. In less than six hours one hundred nightshirts were sent to Major Hubbard and no happier man was on the camp than he when we greeted him a few days later. We women believe in him. We have been able through the kindness of our sisterhood to furnish to the different hospitals, two thousand nightshirts and pajamas, five hundred sheets, twenty pillows, fifteen bolts mosquito bar, besides innumerable boxes and cans of jellies, fruits, soups, cereals, etc. Two hundred and fifty-seven have taken the pledge at the Rest. I am daily getting letters from these pledged boys. I think from time to time I must let THE UNION SIGNAL hear from them too as they come to me from Porto Rico, Manila and Santiago, and the other camps in our own country.

The amount received from all sources was less than three hundred dollars, however. And how the work was done on that sum no one but women accustomed to economical planning could tell. We feel that especial thanks are due those who helped make the work at Camp Thomas possible by their timely assistance, and to the women who sometimes came to the Rest at five o'clock in the morning to get sick soldiers off on early trains and stayed until ten at night.

It is said the work of the Y. M. C. A. at Camp Thomas cost over five thousand dollars, and I am so glad they had it, for their work has been truly wonderful—one thousand conversions. No one who has not gone to the camp and seen the tents with Y. M. C. A. in large letters and an invitation to every one to come in, filled with soldiers, reading and writing, can estimate the good done in the one item of keeping the men out of the saloons. The secretaries have been of great assistance to us in hunting up boys. I shall as never before hold their work in esteem. May God bless them with more money and still more influence. And yet, I could not but wish the funds could have come our way a little more freely. Mrs. Lowe tells me she has, besides her constant work at the Rest, written two hundred letters and cards. I have myself written over three hundred. The first two months and a half I went to the Rest at nine o'clock and stayed until five, not missing a single day. Then I began to break down, and three weeks I was forced to spend in the mountains, where I have been until last week, sick with malarial fever and nervous prostration. I am now at work again, but slowly. The soldiers are almost all gone, but the work is scarcely less important, as so many are sick, over eight hundred, and the work of writing to the pledged boys is growing more and more interesting. I am also still hunting up those too sick to go with their regiments.

Just now I have a letter from a nurse in the hospital at Jacksonville, locating a young man whose mother had lost all trace of him, he having been too ill to write for weeks. A young man from New Hampshire, who has been very ill, was left by his regiment. We have cared for him, and finally one of the ladies has secured transportation for him to his home.

I have some letters asking if we still need supplies. No, unless it be money. We do very much need a little of that, for the work of looking up these sick men. We thank every one who has helped in any way.

The women at Knoxville, where many of our soldiers now are, are doing noble work, and I hope from headquarters they will send literature and pledge cards. Nothing is so gladly received as our little leaflets. No newspapers are needed nor old magazines, but supplies or money will be gratefully received. Address Mrs. Lucy Grey, Knoxville, Tenn.

The last three weeks we kept the Rest open were indeed memorable; over four hundred sick soldiers were fed and cared for between trains, flowers were sent to hospitals; on every coffin, before being placed in the box, a bouquet of flowers was placed.

To Mrs. Jones, who, when I became too ill to serve, more than filled my place, too much praise can not be accorded, while my own especial staff, Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Darling, were a tower of strength and marvels of endurance. Indeed, there was no lack of helpers who will by and by receive their reward.

Those of us who have stood by the side of the dying on hospital cots, and have held the wasted hands of some mother's boy, as he slipped away with only a word of good-by to mother, who have looked into eyes becoming dull, and yet no word of complaint, just a whispered "how good you are," self-forgetful even in the supreme hour, must have a higher estimate of true courage than ever before. The heroes did not all go to Santiago, Porto Rico or the Philippines; many of the bravest lie here in Chattanooga in the national cemetery.

If those who want to hear from their boys, or who have lost trace of them in this changing about of regiments, will write me I will try to find them. Ten days ago a sister in Virginia heard that her brother was ill but could not find out at what hospital, and his regiment was on the move. She wrote me, I traced the poor fellow through two hospitals and back to Steinburg and received this note from a nurse: "The young man of whom you inquire I find is in our hospital in tent 8, bed 4, improving daily, and will recover. Will be pleased to be at your service to inform about the boys as well as I can."

At once this went to the young man's friends. I am glad to do this for our women.

Yours truly,

M. L. WELLES,

State Supt. Dept. Soldiers and Sailors.

Highland Park Station, Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 20.

[Mrs. Welles sent an itemized list of supplies and money received, to which, we regret to say, we can not give space.—THE EDITORS.]

The Army Canteen System.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL: — Legislation against the army canteen was begun in the United States Congress in the month of March, 1890. General Cutcheon, of Michigan, chairman of the military committee of the House, had just brought forward the report recommending an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars for the establishment of the canteen system for the enlisted men of the army of the United States. This was creating a great sensation, inasmuch as it provided for the sale of fermented liquors by the government on a coöperative plan, which, if the bill carried, would put the traffic in the hands of officers and under their control.

This change from the old sutler system emanated from the War Department. General Proctor, the secretary, was influenced by representations from a few officers in command of posts on military reservations, who argued its advantages as a measure of compromise with an admitted evil.

Immediately on presentation of this appropriation bill, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, through its superintendent of the department of soldiers and sailors, introduced an amendment which provided that "No alcoholic liquors, including beer and wine, shall be sold or supplied to the enlisted men in any canteen or in any room or building, at any garrison or military post." Hon. Elijah A. Morse, of Massachusetts, championed this amendment very ably, showing the utter fallacy of the argument in the report of the military committee that the sale of milder drinks will promote temperance. He denounced the proposed government saloon for putting temptation in the way of young men who are not hardened or confirmed drunkards, and also, the harmful effect upon men who are endeavoring to resist the appetite for alcoholic drink. The discussion excited intense interest and the galleries of the House were filled with visitors. The amendment after being argued for an entire day was carried by a large majority.

This was, of course, a splendid triumph for the cause of temperance, and when later on in the fifty-first session, the Senate, under leadership of Hon. Eugene Hale, of Maine, also gave emphatic indorsement to our amendment in the exact phraseology as sustained by the House, by vote of thirty against thirteen, it was recognized as a decided victory for truth and righteousness.

But the rum power would not allow such destruction to the kingdom of darkness, so it summoned the adverse forces, and our amendment suffered defeat in its final consideration in the House, making it necessary to put the bill into the hands of a conference committee, who finally disposed of it by making it apply only in prohibition states. As an immediate result of this agitation and action on the part of the government, together with the ridicule from press and platform, military authorities were compelled to change the name of these coöperative stores from canteen to "post exchange," and to put behind the bar, for sale of beer and wine, a civilian, as men in uniform, who had dispensed the liquors, realized that it was degrading to their profession as American soldiers to occupy such a position. The testimony, at that time, brought out by the congressional debates, proved conclusively the opposition to governmental control of the sale of liquor; men who had not heretofore been radical in their utterances came out boldly in defense of temperance principles. Such distinguished senators as Hons. Dawes, Allison, Davis and Hale expressed the views that are now brought so forcibly to the notice of the American public. From a letter received by the National superintendent, in correspondence with Hon. Eugene Hale at that time, he makes this prophetic statement: "I am confident that the army canteen policy, which Congress has for the time adopted, will never stand the wear and tear of time and observation. It will be found, as I said in the debate, that under it, the men will drink more rather than less, and, before long, you and I will see a general movement from the thoughtful officers of the army in favor of its repeal."

It was found that the effort to restrict drinking to the fermented liquors was an entire failure. Not only was whisky smuggled in, but it was a regular thing on "pay day" for the greater part of the men to repair to the various saloons in the town near by, to settle their bills. So much credit, too, was given between pay days, that the arrival of the paymaster was more eagerly watched for by the saloon proprietors than by the men.

The wife of a chaplain who had received from Washington a request asking the effect of the new institution upon the character and conduct of the men, said that her husband did not estimate the evil as did the moderate drinking officers. From their standpoint, all that was considered important was its effect upon the conduct of the men, relative to discipline, but the chaplain recognized the character affected by the drink habit. Therefore a marked discrimination had to be made in replying to the official question. Besides, when officers and their families use wine on their tables and at social gatherings, they could not consistently object to the use of such a beverage as the enlisted men can afford to drink.

Quite recently a gentleman, for many years in the United States military service, deeply interested in the material as well as the moral welfare of America's defenders by land and sea, expresses these sentiments in a private letter to a prominent citizen: "Restriction of degrading vices will not come from the army itself; there should be a clamorous public voice that shall demand reform; the American home, that furnishes a majority of recruits, and in the future will supply a still larger percentage, must determine whether service in the army shall debauch their sons or return them to civil life as noble as when they entered it. The mothers of this nation should speak on this vital question, for many of the recruits now entering the ranks are minors."

Sustained by such advanced public opinion, the sale of ardent spirits was forbidden by President Hayes. By the same progressive educational forces, President Harrison placed himself upon record in the prohibition of gambling, and now, may we not hope that our government, through its executive head, will no longer derive a revenue from the vices of its splendid army and navy, but will demolish the iniquitous canteen system? (MRS.) SARAH A. MCCLEES.

Oakland, Cal.

"Advice to the W. C. T. U."

EDITORS THE UNION SIGNAL:—Under this head I was glad to see in the SIGNAL a well-timed warning against the use of patent medicines containing alcohol. But, I ask, is alcohol worse than other poisons? Why should not the W. C. T. U. and all who would live true lives, be warned of the peril to human life in them all?

I have been thirty years in the medical profession—a branch of it which authorizes the use of no drugs in doses that would harm an infant.

Homœopathy "Christian Science," "Faith Cure," "Sanitary Cures," "Water Cure," and the "Expectant system," show cures of diseases with no medicine at all. Why should the noble women of the white-ribbon army continue to destroy their vitality by poisonous drugs while such cures are wrought? They need the physical energies of veteran soldiers for the conquest of the world that awaits them.

I heard Dr. Austin Flint say, "I treated a large number of cases in Bellevue Hospital with a 'Placeboac mixture,' entirely inert, and they recovered remarkably well." This was thirty years ago. What right had he, the most eminent of doctors, to give poisons after that confession?

Another eminent M. D. who had been the president of a great medical college, said recently, "All the good we doctors do is in surgery. If people would not take medicine they would be a great deal better off."

The W. C. T. U. has bravely assaulted giant evils, and yet, while the delusion that poisons cure disease stands, their use as stimulants will stand, and intensify all evils. It is now a question with many which is worse, drug shop or saloon. If the noble army of women is to conquer the foes of humanity, it must be armed with truth at every point. The world needs "the whole truth and nothing but the truth," fragments of it are an impotent defence and impotent weapons. The errors that curse and delude men are all linked together. If we support one it sustains another we would overthrow.

Thank God for your wise "do-everything" policy. If you did no more than begin it for others to follow it would be highest service to mankind. Thank God that you would save His wonderful temples, human bodies, from defilement and destruction, and make them fit dwellings for spirits made in His image.

Vain must be all efforts, as they have been vain, to make angels of human souls while dwelling in bodies defiled with worse than brutal appetites and passions, and with blood and brain tainted and maddened by poisons. If men are to be redeemed in this world it must be body and soul together. If men and women are to save others, they must first save themselves.

A. O. FULLER, M. D.

Austinburg, O.

Local Union.

QUESTION.—Do Moxie and malt extract contain alcohol?

ANSWER.—I sent this question to Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, and he gives the following reply: "I placed a sample of Moxie in the hands of our chemist. Upon distillation he found alcohol present; an exact determination of the proportion of alcohol was not made, but it seems to be about that present in beer. On boiling in a flask enough alcohol was drawn off to maintain for a short while a flame at the mouth of the flask. Malt extract is simply concentrated lager beer." Such high authority can not be disputed, and I trust we may hear no more of Moxie as a temperance drink.

Q.—May any local union desiring to do so insert the words, "as a beverage" in the pledge after the word, "malt-liquor"?

A.—This has always been considered the privilege of the local union. Indeed, most state unions insert the words "as a beverage" in their pledge. While it is unquestionably true that the trend of sentiment in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is toward doing away with the use of alcohol for medicinal purposes, it is also true that with the present state of indecision in the medical profession, it would not be wise for us to exact from our members a pledge that alcohol should never be taken as a medicine. At the same time we are constantly urging the fact that its use as a medicine is not necessary, and the National Temperance Hospital stands as a splendid proof that all diseases can be better treated without alcohol than with it.

Some time ago a call was made in this column for programs for local unions. A few have been sent me from which I have culled the best: Program for regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. of ——. 1, Prayer and singing. 2, Scripture recitation. 3, Minutes of last meeting. 4, Communications. 5, Unfinished business. 6, New business. 7, Current events. 8, Paper, "The Love of Christ in Politics." 9, Discussion of paper. 10, Flower mission collection. 11, Adjournment.

Herewith is appended a series of programs covering several meetings: 1. Devotional service; business; L. T. L. Manual; lesson No. 10, topic, "Chapter in Current Events." 2. Devotional service; business; paper, "Is the Complicated Civilization of this Country a Valid Reason for the Relaxing of Sabbath Observance?" 3. Devotional service; business; L. T. L. Manual; lesson No. 11, topic, "A Story in Beginnings." The union sending these programs has its outline prepared a year in advance, and at every meeting some topic of vital importance is discussed. Perhaps at some future time further suggestions may be made.

Q.—Is it parliamentary for the minority present at a meeting of a local union to send a written request to an absent member to resign as a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, such member's character being spotless and her dues paid in advance. Should not reasons be given with the request?

A.—Most unquestionably reasons should accompany such a request. Parliamentary or not, such action could hardly otherwise be just, and our National superintendent of parliamentary usage tells us that "justice is the foundation of all parliamentary law." Of course, I can not know the circumstances which enter into such an action as the one alluded to, but in any case it is safe to say that if the request was rendered necessary, it should have been accompanied by a statement of the reasons which governed the union.

Q.—What is the purpose of the "Union Reform Committee" as organized by Dr. Crafts in several of our cities?

A.—Its purpose is the utilization of forces already existing rather than the creation of a new force for effecting the various reforms which all who have eyes to see recognize as the next step which must be taken in the redemption of society. It consists of members from the various churches, temperance and other reform societies who are banded together in the twofold purpose to "change the man" and then to "change his circumstances." The work is done through subcommittees, and though yet in its infancy, promises to be a most hopeful force in bringing in the happy future.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear. This is the confidence we have in him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us; and if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know we have the petitions we desired of him.—Isa. 59:1; I John 5:14, 15.

MRS. A. J. GORDON, of Boston, writes: "I want to express to you my sincerest sympathy and admiration for your faith and courage in continuing your endeavors to secure and retain the Temple as the property of the W. C. T. U. I wish to offer my three shares of W. T. P. A. stock toward the needed amount, conditioned on its all being secured." This dear white-ribboner in the past has sent as a personal gift $100 to the Temple. Since the death of her noble husband, Dr. Gordon, her means, necessarily, are much more limited, yet in the face of this fact, she offers, if it may aid the Temple in this crucial hour, her little holdings in the W. T. P. A. Mrs. Gordon's letter is a fair sample of the communications we are receiving from the rank and file all over the country.

✠

At the state convention of the Colorado W. C. T. U., held in Denver a few days ago, the executive committee brought in a report adverse to the Temple, which the convention promptly voted down, and passed a resolution to stand by it. At the state convention of the South Dakota W. C. T. U., just held, the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That we suspend judgment in the Temple matter until the question has been thoroughly discussed at the National Convention at St. Paul."

✠

We have every reason to hope that by the first of January, 1899, in spite of all adverse circumstances, we will be able to carry out Miss Willard's heart's desire and pay off the Temple Trust Bonds. Instead of requiring, as it has been stated, $975,200 to give us the entire ownership of the Temple, a sum not over $750,000 and probably less, with twelve years to pay it in, would free the building entirely from debt. This calculation is based on our personal knowledge of pledges and promises of stock to be donated if we secure the $300,000 to pay off the Temple Trust Bonds. No class of persons are more anxious than the Temple Trustees that the entire truth should be known in regard to the affairs of the Temple. We find from letters received that a large number of unions have collected money for the Temple and are holding it awaiting the action of the National W. C. T. U. Convention in November. We wish that all unions thus holding money would notify us at once.

✠

The question arises, how is the amount going to be raised if unions and persons hold back both money and pledges? We wish to impress on the minds of our white-ribboners that the money which has been sent to the Temple Trustees either has, or will be, used in the purchase of Temple Trust Bonds, consequently the money is not lost, but secures to us an amount of stock equal to the face value of the bonds, and gives us an interest in the building no matter whether we own a controlling interest in it or not.

✠

A Presbyterian minister, Rev. Chas. W. Wood, Hampton, Va., who is deeply interested in our work, writes suggesting that a call be made for pledges for the Temple in sums both small and large, the payment conditioned on the whole $300,000 being subscribed. The suggestion is a good one, and we will be glad to hear from all persons desirous of securing the above sum which will give us the controlling interest in the Temple. We are glad to say that we are steadily securing names both for the $1,000 band of one hundred names, and the $100 band of a hundred names.

✠

We have sold over a thousand of Miss Willard's beautiful tinted life-sized pictures. Mrs. M. J. Hockett, Gilbert, S. D., says of it: "Picture grand and worth the money." Miss E. P. Nichols, Providence, R. I., writes: "The beautiful picture of Frances E. Willard has just come. I hasten to express my pleasure. It has a glorified expression, and is a very fine painting."

Our Children.

God's Kiss.

[A little lad at Duxhurst, Lady Henry Somerset's home for slum children, after he had finished saying his prayers, put in another petition as a kind of postscript, "And please, God, would you mind giving my mother a kiss?"]

PLEASE, God, I have finished my prayers,
But there's one thing I want to say,
My mother lives up at the top of the stairs,
And she's lonely now I'm away.

You'll be sure to know her, because
There ain't nobody half so good;
And she's just the dearest that ever was,
I'd die for her if I could.

The neighbors are not very bad,
But, of course they aren't like me,
I've got for to think what will make her glad,
And to get her a cup of tea.

And sometimes, please, God, she ain't strong,
She have got such a lot to do,
And it frets her so much when folks does wrong,
And she thinks no end of you.

When she's tired she likes to sit
On the floor and lean against me,
For it comforts her aching head a bit,
To rest it upon my knee.

I sit all so still and don't stir,
And she calls me her bit of joy,
And tells me I'm like a mother to her
As well as her sonny-boy.

It does hurt me to think of her
All alone by the firelight,
And she ain't got me for to comfort her
To love her and hold her tight.

So, please, God, I hope you won't mind
If I ask you just to do this,—
I'm sure she'd take it so very kind
If you'd please to give her a kiss.

Uncle John's Talks.

KEROSENE LAMPS AND STOVES.

HELLO! chicks. There, now, don't squeeze my head off. No time for preliminaries, to-day. I want to talk about lamps and kerosene stoves, now that cold weather is coming.

Of course you remember what I told you about kerosene, months ago. Cold kerosene is safe, and will extinguish flame. Hot kerosene will burn, but not explode, that is, if hot enough. It ought not to burn below 140 by the thermometer; but there are criminal laws in some states requiring only 110. And the most astounding thing is that they mark it 150! About 10 or 15 below the burning point (fire test), kerosene gives off a vapor which not only burns like dry leaves in a house-afire, but, when mixed with air, forms a mixture which, when flame is applied, will explode like gunpowder. And then, as a deduction from this, you remember that you may pour kerosene upon wood, in starting a fire, providing the stove is cold; or even when it is hot, if you have a flame where the oil will touch it instantly, before it has time to turn to vapor. All the terrible accidents, sometimes explosions and sometimes burnings, can be explained in accordance with these simple facts. Bear these points in mind in all your dealing with lamps and stoves, of whatever kind or nature.

Now come and see my oil shelf. First, you see it is five feet long and a foot wide. Next, that it is breast high. At one end is a soap box, open side toward the shelf, and on the box is a 5-gallon can, with a brass faucet just high enough from the shelf so that the one-gallon can will stand under it and leave half an inch to spare. Then when you fill the small can, you lift it up and slip this piece of one inch board under it. Over the shelf you see a narrow one for chimneys and odds and ends. Under this narrow shelf is a row of nails, and on the nails six rags, clean and white at one end, and graded down to black and grimy on the other. Lamps? Oh, they belong on the large shelf, when in hospital for treatment, and the lantern stands here all the time; but each lamp has its place in the room where it is used, and is taken there when in order.

Here is a stick, like a big pencil, a foot long and with one end like a screw driver. This is for pushing rags through small places. Here is a strip of tin, six inches long, a scant eighth wide at one end and three-eighths at the other, with the big end folded over for a handle. Do with it? Why, that is my shears, as I'll show you in a minute.

Now, let one fact soak all the way through your brains, namely, that lamps are machines and must be kept in order like any other machine. First, a clean wick, running easily in the tube; second, plenty of air under the cone. Be sure that the perforated tin is not clogged with dust and bits of burned wick. No, you need not cut the wick off every time you fill the lamp; but there is one thing you may do—must do—every day, and that is to scrape off the bits of carbon that accumulate upon the wick. Yes, that is what the tin is for, and I use it also to clear out the tops of student lamps. Scrape the wick flush with the top of the tube, but not enough to ravel out new threads. No, you needn't turn the wick up and cut it down below all discoloration, and snip the corners. Scraping off the crusty part is enough; and if the cone and draft are right, the flame will be the right shape. If not, your lamp is not perfect. Took me some years to learn this. Once a month or so scrape out the incrustations around the inner side of the top of the tube; and once a year or less, get a new wick. If ever you have the misfortune to get smoking oil (paraffine), make a clean sweep of all wicks and start new. When the screw and collar get too hot to touch there is something wrong. If you can not correct it get a new top. It is safest to keep the lamps full. Be most particular with the hot kind. When you fill a lamp, hold it under the faucet to save time. Use the small can only for student lamps. In filling an opaque lamp, tip it toward the opening and you can see the oil in time to prevent it running over.

Stoves are only large lamps. The same principles apply as to draft, cones and wicks. But you must have measures. Find out how much each stove holds and then measure the oil before putting it in—a big convenience. Here you see this two quart tin pitcher. A wire hooks over the edge and hangs down inside, with a loop or crook for each size of stove, to mark a stoveful of oil. Handiest thing on the continent.

About getting new wicks in. Felt, asbestos or any kind not made of threads will go in all right; but the ordinary kind generally catch around the wheels and break—your patience. This is really a serious trouble and may prevent getting new as often as should be; but the remedy is very simple—since I learned it. Take the wick to the sewing machine and run a few seams across close to the end, when it will almost fall in by itself.

No, it is not quite safe to fill them while burning, nor is it dangerous provided the stove is right. When you pour oil in, of course the gas over the oil (abundant if the stove is hot) is lifted up. If it has ample room to escape, perhaps where the oil goes in, all is well. But if it can not escape in that way it is forced up through the wick and causes the flames to flare up in an alarming manner, not to mention smoke. Then, if there is any opening large enough for the flame to reach the oil-chamber, there may be an explosion, that is, if the stove is hot enough, which it ought not to be. I knew a case that destroyed two lives and burned a house. The tank was covered only by a cast iron plate resting upon an iron edge, without rubber or anything to make it tight. Everything between the flame and the tank should be air tight, with the place for filling as far away as possible, and opening directly into the tank. One kind has a place for water to stand over the tank. This is an ideal stove also in other respects, so that the water is scarcely necessary.

Yes, I know about the little tube by the wick-tube. It is not needed when there is an opening as mentioned, but when there is none, the tube is needed for ingress of air and egress of gas. Fire will not run down so small a place—Davy safety lamp for miners.

Then we have gasoline stoves, and several kinds that turn kerosene into a gas before burning it. Perhaps I can compass them in another hour, if you listen as well as—See that clock! Scat!

Ocean Grove, N. J.

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Those of you who live in the country, or small towns, and have to do your studying by kerosene lamps during the long, winter evenings, will be greatly interested in Uncle John's talk this week on lamps and stoves. We city folks, of course, have either gas or electric light, but do you know I think there is something particularly cozy about a well-filled, well-trimmed, brightly burning lamp!

Uncle John's description of his oil shelf made me feel as if I wanted to walk right in and help him put a whole row of lamps in shining order; and right here I want to whisper to my girls that I always judge a housekeeper by the appearance of her lamps. It isn't dainty work by any means; and I never knew a growing girl who liked to do it, but the best way to conquer such tasks is to go at them the first thing in the morning instead of leaving them to the last. I can not think of a circumstance more humiliating to a housekeeper if she is entertaining callers, or more annoying if only her own convenience is concerned, than to have the twilight fall and not a lamp in the house fit to be lighted. "Keep your lamps all trimmed and burning" is a practical as well as a spiritual sentiment, and I hope my girls will put it into immediate use.

Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a boy twelve years old and would like to join the Cozy Corner. We moved from Kansas in 1893. My papa is a farmer and we have a dairy. We take THE UNION SIGNAL and like it very much. Papa is a prohibitionist, and my mamma has been a member of the W. C. T. U. for fifteen years. I have two brothers. They are larger than I.

Your nephew, DWIGHT FOSTER.

Sessumsville, Miss.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and wears the white ribbon. I go to the Loyal Legion when we have one, and enjoy the stories on the Children's Page. I go to the M. E. Sunday-school. Mamma is corresponding secretary of our W. C. T. U. I go with her sometimes and wear a white ribbon, too. I am eleven years old, and have two big brothers, one who is a soldier boy, and was away to war; he is home now on furlough, but expects to go away again; we hate to see him go, as I love my brother Ray so much. I am taking music lessons and can play quite well. I am in fifth grade at school, A class. Can I become your little niece? This is my first letter.

Olean, N. Y. KATIE M. ROLLINSON.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I live way out in the Rocky Mountains, fifty miles from Denver. This is a pretty little town, but I'm sorry to say it is not a temperance town. We have an L. T. L. which I belong to, and mamma is a member of the W. C. T. U. I have one of the nicest grandmammas in all the world. She lives on a big farm in Illinois, and she came to visit us this summer. She is "red hot" on temperance, and always wears a white ribbon. My! I don't know how much money she spends buying ribbons. Our summers are so nice and cool. Can't you come out next summer and see us, Aunt Mary? Mrs. Telford (the state W. C. T. U. president) comes to see us real often. My brother Robert is four years old. Emely Drayer says she would like for some "Cozy Corner" girl to write to her. I suppose she wouldn't want to write to a boy like me. I'm only half as old as she is and she is thirteen; now guess my age. Robert and I have the whooping cough so I can't go to school. Since this is my first letter I better not write any more. Much love to all.

RICHARD CHERI BOURK.

Georgetown, Col.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.

41.

I am composed of 8 letters.
My 1, 2, 6 is an ornament of dress.
My 4, 5, 1 is the name of a conveyance.
My 4, 5, 8, 7 is something college boys affect.
My 3, 5, 6 is a carpenter's tool.
My whole is the name of a town in New Hampshire.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 6.

No 40.—Madagascar.

Correct answer to No. 38 was sent by Dwight Foster, Sessumsville, Miss.; to No. 39 by Julia Blanchard, Grand Ledge, Mich., Ethel C. Watts, New York City, and Kate M. Rollinson, Olean, N. Y.

UNION SIGNAL
HAND WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Lord gave the word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host.—Psa. 68:11.

Our Country—Its Faults and its Virtues.

IT is not necessary, in order to love our own family, that we throw stones at our neighbor's, nor is it needful that we be entirely oblivious to the faults and frailties of our own. The same is true with regard to the larger family which we call our country. True patriotism does not involve hatred or jealousy of other nations nor blindness to our own faults as a people. On the contrary, the truest patriotism watches jealously against the sins which eat out a nation's life. And yet it is forever the mark of true love that it "beareth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things." Love does not track the faults of its beloved with the remorselessness of a bloodhound nor seize upon them with the rapacity of a vulture. Rather it is longsuffering. With tender sympathy it understands the temptation and comprehends the environment which betrays into sin. This has always been the attitude of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union toward "native land." None realize more keenly than do the white-ribbon women the sins which dishonor our nation, and some evil-doers are not slow to testify that there are none more active or fearless than these same women in combatting these sins. But, however cordially we hate the sins, we have not ceased to love the sinner. We are not blind to the sins, but we do not allow the sins to blind us to the virtues which make our nation chief among the nations of the earth. Our hearts are sorrowful as we see the evils that find safe refuge beneath the stars and stripes, yet "Old Glory" is still to us the symbol of all that is best and noblest in national life.

We have, however, had occasion to learn that this is not true of all would-be reformers. There are those who point to the liquor traffic, to our municipal misrule, and political corruption as if there were no better side to our national life, and who, therefore, claim that the carrying of the stars and stripes to other countries means only the spread of these evils. We confess to a profound pity not unmixed with patriotic indignation at such expressions. Have such people, in their worthy zeal to destroy evil, prowled in the dark in its pursuit until they are incapacitated to discern the sturdy virtues which make our nation what it is? Have they in their blindness given up all hope? Do they believe that our iniquity is full, and that God has indeed cast us out forever? It is true that terrible evils in our body politic await the surgeon's knife, and we know not at what cost we shall cast them from us. It is also true that a great and generous people is arousing itself to struggle with these wrongs, and we know that at whatever cost we shall, in the end, cast them out.

It would seem that had these croakers ever read history they would have learned that evils as great as those of the present have been overcome in the past; that with all our faults, the two great English-speaking nations have wrought out the best system of self-government yet devised, and that up to the present it has secured civil liberty to those under its sway. They might learn more, that it has such capacity for change and development that it alone of all present forms of government holds promise of solving the new and multiplied problems which are pressing upon us. They might learn, too, that our race has loved liberty not for itself alone. England has given to every people that has come beneath her rule a better government than it had ever known before. Our own nation in agony and blood freed her own slaves, for let it be forever remembered, it was the Anglo-Saxon himself, in response to the mandates of his own aroused conscience, who freed the African slaves, and no pressure from without forced a change in our Indian policy. It needed only that the people as a whole should know the wrongs of these wards of the nation. The words of scathing denunciation came from the pens of our own citizens, and the people listened. Nothing can change the record of that "century of dishonor," but the nation is honestly trying to make the future record one of justice.

We can not refuse to honor those who counted their lives as nothing when their country called them. There is something worthy of admiration in the bravery which leads men to face death without hesitation even though they do it in a false cause. No greater courage was ever shown than that of our soldiers at Santiago. Seventy-five men attempted to scale a height under a most galling fire. They scaled the height and took the fort, but only twenty-two of their number were left, and this was but one of many similar deeds when our army did what military experts the world over had said could never be done, "took the entrenchments without the aid of artillery." Such courage and devotion, even though it be mistaken, will command the homage of the world to the end of time. And it rightly inspires confidence and hope for our nation. The child of strong will is not an easy child to control, but the wise mother knows well that such a child is to be depended upon, as the weaker-willed, more easily managed child is not. Once get the strong will enlisted on the side of right and the battle is over. A people capable of such deeds has before it the greatest possibilities. It is not in its decadence, it has but entered upon its career, a career which promises to bless the world. If ever the mission of any people was clear it is clear that our nation is chosen of God to spread its free institutions and Christian civilization over all the world. Neither we nor our institutions are perfect, but thus far progress has been carried on through faulty agents and it is likely to be so carried on for a long time to come. The civil liberty which in our better days we have worked out will help the world forward. It is our duty as Christian patriots to do our utmost to inspire our nation to respond as a Christian people to the call and to serve even as those who would be greatest.

It is Worry that Kills.

WORK seldom ever kills, worry does. Regular, systematic work is enjoyable to many people and it ought to be to all. "To be good is to be happy," runs the old adage, but there is no goodness without activity. Goodness implies not only the choice of what is right, but the exercise of it. The body thrives by its activities and this is no less true of the mental and spiritual life. Worry is an entirely different thing. It is destructive. Primarily it is mental, but it acts upon the physical as grief, fright, and other intense and depressing feelings. Jesus taught that we should not take anxious thought for the morrow. Science teaches the same thing and tells us exactly how worry kills. An authority puts it in this way: "Worry injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain; and, the brain being the nutritive center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and, when some disease of these organs, or combination of them, arises, death finally ensues. Worry, to make the theory still stronger, is an irritant at certain points, which produces little harm if it comes at intervals or irregularly. Occasional worrying of the system the brain can cope with, but the iteration and reiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against. It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain struck lightly with a hammer every few seconds, with mechanical precision, with never a sign of a let-up or the failure of a stroke. Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike or fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, and week by week diminishing the vitality of these delicate organisms that are so minute that they can be seen only under the microscope."

It is not the work of a pastor, an organizer, a reformer, a teacher, the president of a great corporation or society, but worry that kills them. There are bad conditions that will not down, and above all they have to deal with people who are chronic irritants, those who kick whether there is anything to kick about or not, those who never remain settled but continually toss up mire and dirt, not seeing that the dirt comes of their own tossing; those who are incurable mental dyspeptics—nothing agrees with them. Such people are miasmata. They disturb a whole community, disintegrate societies, and demoralize armies. They are found everywhere and they act as hammers upon the brains of those who are in any way responsible for their acts or interested in their well-being.

An ordinary mind can control things. It takes a master-mind to control persons—and what shall we say of the mind that can control itself? That can dismiss the "annoying idea, the maddening thought"? Yet this is necessary if our activities are to be constructive rather than destructive. To worry is to allow a great and wonderful machine to be destroyed by its own momentum.

World-Aspects of the Temperance Question.

REV. J. T. SUNDERLAND, M. A., a traveler student and in several foreign countries has something to say about the aspects of the temperance question.* He does not claim infallibility of judgment, but he took time for his studies and went outside the beaten tracks, and made an effort to find out the exact facts. The following excerpts are gleaned as kernels from his statements:

IN ENGLAND.

"Three things especially surprised and shocked

*A pamphlet printed by the Unitarian Temperance Society, Boston, Mass.

me. One was the tremendously high pressure at which they [drinking places] were all running on Sunday, particularly Sunday evening. The second was the general practice of having girls and young women, the prettiest and most attractive to be found, to deal out the drinks. And the third was the large proportion of women among the customers. As regards Sunday closing Scotland, Wales and Ireland are all in advance of England. Scotland has had such closing since 1854, Ireland (except in five large towns) since 1878, and Wales since 1881. Repeated attempts have been made to extend this reform to England, but without success." . . .

"It is generally conceded that a majority of the clergy and the laity [in the Established Church] give their influence in favor of drinking practices, though, of course claiming to counsel moderation." . . .

"They told me, to my surprise, that the cathedral towns, where, of course, the state church is particularly strong and its clergy particularly numerous and influential, are the worst liquor strongholds in the kingdom, and the hardest to be affected by any kind of temperance movement." . . .

"It is agreed that the House of Lords is an obstacle in the way of temperance reform, as it is in the way of most progressive movements." . . .

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT IN ENGLAND.

"Increasing attention called to the evils of drink. Temperance societies growing steadily stronger and more numerous. One vigorous society recently formed for the express purpose of waking up the churches. Temperance literature increasing fast. Drinking customs changing for the better. Statesmen slowly waking up to see what a burden strong drink is to the kingdom, as a destroyer of wealth and a crippler of industry, and what a menace as a corrupter of politics and a producer of crime. Military men beginning to see that drink is a great weakener of the army. Total abstainers found to stand the severest campaigns where even moderate drinkers break down. Medical men recognizing the serious effects of drink upon the health of the people. Laboring men learning to see in it a foe to industry. Children receiving temperance teaching. The church opening its eyes to see that religion is recreant to both God and man, if it does not throw itself earnestly into the temperance cause. Signs that a public conscience is growing slowly, yet steadily and surely, regarding the nation's sin against Africa and the Islands of the Sea and India and all the weaker peoples that are under her sway." . . .

AFRICA.

"Nearly everywhere the native races brought into contact with Europeans are decaying. Investigations have been made again and again as to the causes. Always the answer is the same. The causes are vices introduced by Europeans, the most widely spreading and destructive of which is the drink habit." . . .

"There is a region above the seventh parallel of north latitude in which prohibition has been put in force, with the consent of the British government, and with excellent results. There are also several territories of larger or smaller extent in the southwest and southeast, where prohibition has been decreed, generally by native rulers." . . .

Says Sir Richard Burton, the distinguished African traveler: "It is my sincere belief that, if the slave-trade were revived with all its horrors, and Africa could get rid of the white man, with the gunpowder and rum which he has introduced, Africa would be a gainer by the exchange." . . .

"Maliki, the Mohammedan emir of Nupe on the Niger, wrote to Bishop Crowther in 1884: 'Rum has ruined my country, it has ruined my people. Beg the British queen to prevent the bringing of rum into the land.' Again and again King Khama has appealed to the British government to be allowed to protect his people against the destruction which drink is bringing upon them. 'I dread the white man's drink,' he says, "more than all the Matabele who kill men's bodies and it is quickly over; but drink puts devils into men, and destroys both their souls and their bodies.' Sir George Goldie, founder and governor of the Royal Niger Company in West Africa, said, in a speech at Grosvenor House, London, in May, 1895: 'I speak from sixteen years' experience, and I say confidently that, unless immediate steps are taken to stop this traffic—not by higher duties, but by absolute prohibition—a state of things will soon be brought about that must ultimately lead to the entire abandonment of the country." . . .

FRANCE.

"In France and Germany a somewhat larger proportion of wine and beer is used and relatively less distilled liquor than in England, and there is not so much drunkenness in sight. But in both countries drinking is even more universal than in England. The vice extends as much or more to women and children, and less is being done to check it or to produce a temperance sentiment." . . .

"The statistics issued by the French Minister of Justice for 1896, tell us that, of all persons convicted for murder in Paris that year, fifty-three per cent were confirmed drunkards; of persons convicted for serious offences against morals, the same per cent were confirmed drunkards; of persons convicted for begging and vagabondage, seventy per cent were confirmed drunkards; and of persons convicted for crimes of violence short of murder, ninety per cent were confirmed drunkards." . . .

"Not only does wine-drinking hold its own, but the appetite which it creates leads steadily to the use of stronger liquors. The drinking of absinthe is coming to be widely prevalent, and the use of distilled spirits has increased three hundred per cent in twenty-five years. One ray of hope is found in the fact that at least a few persons are becoming aware of the gravity of the situation, and are beginning to sound the alarm and to ask, 'What can be done?'" . . .

GERMANY.

"Statistics regarding drunkenness are very difficult to obtain in Germany, because drunkenness is looked upon with so great leniency, and is not usually classed among crimes. Even the president of the best-known 'temperance' society in Germany declares that 'a man may get drunk a good many times without being in the least addicted to drink or in danger of becoming so.' Careful and conservative estimates put the number of habitual drunkards at 400,000." . . .

"Of the 28,300 patients in the insane asylums of Prussia in the year 1889, not less than ten per cent had delirium tremens." . . .

TWO HOPEFUL SIGNS.

"Economists are beginning to see that, if Germany could get rid of the disadvantages that come to her from the drink habits of her people, it would give her a tremendous advantage in her industrial competition with other nations." . . .

Soldiers who are habitual beer drinkers are found to have only eighty or eighty-five per cent of the endurance of soldiers who are total abstainers, and considerably less mental quickness and precision.

LESSONS FOR AMERICA.

Mr. Sunderland draws three chief conclusions from his study of the temperance question in England, France and Germany:

1. That he does not want the further introduction of the drink habit among the mothers in America.

2. We would better consider very long and carefully before deciding to send any of our children to those lands for educational purposes until they are old enough and mature enough to be able to think for themselves and to stand on their own legs.

3. There is no safety in wine or beer. Many of the worst evils that spring from drinking come from their use, and their tendency is to create an appetite and a demand for stronger liquors, and that the claim that they are temperance drinks finds no support in the condition of things existing in France and Germany to-day, and has no discoverable basis to stand upon.

Personals.

MRS. CHARLTON EDHOLM has been in Chicago for a few days. She spoke at the law enforcement meeting at Central Music Hall, Chicago, Sabbath, October 2, together with Rev. J. Q. A. Henry and Rev. Frank Crane.

DR. MARY WOOD-ALLEN, National superintendent of purity, made a short call at the National Headquarters lately. She is preparing for the purity conference which precedes the National Convention at St. Paul.

MRS. MAUD L. GREENE, of Colorado, National chalk-talker and organizer of the W. C. T. U., and Hattie L. Henderson, of Texas, National organizer, are in Spokane, Wash. They are on their way to the National Convention of the W. C. T. U., and are stopping along the way delivering lectures and organizing unions.

MISS JESSIE ACKERMANN, round-the-world missionary, was to have spoken at the Willard birthday meeting in Willard Hall, September 28, but did not find herself well enough. She has been in a hospital part of the summer, and is most of the time rusticating on a farm, hoping thereby to regain her usual vigor.

MR. J. N. DODSON, principal of colored schools, Crockett, Texas, writes that his wife, Mrs. Carrie Z. Dodson, president of the state W. C. T. U., No. 2, was called from labor to reward, September 1, 1898, in the full triumph of faith. The cause of temperance has lost an energetic devotee, and education and morality a strong advocate. She was a devoted wife. Her life was given to the elevation of her race.

MR. AND MRS. T. PORTER SMITH, of Burnley, Lancashire, England, were callers at National Headquarters last week. They had visited Canada and Maine and were present at the Maine W. C. T. U. state convention. They spoke highly of the dispatch of business at the convention and of the general good tone of the body. Mr. Smith is an indefatigable worker in the temperance and prohibition movement in England, and is a member of the Alliance Executive and bore fine credentials, signed by Alexander McDougall, Jr., chairman of the Alliance, and James Whyte, secretary.

THE Patriotic Anti-Alcohol League of Belgium, whose honorary president is the Count of Flanders, the king's brother, and whose acting president is the Prime Minister of the kingdom, pays tribute to one of our countrywomen. Through the action of their General Assembly, in July, 1898, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Boston, U. S. A., was made honorary member of the organization. The note telling Mrs. Hunt of this distinction emphasizes the high esteem and keen appreciation which the League entertains for her labors in behalf of scientific temperance education in the schools of her own and other countries; it is signed by M. Jules Le Jeune, Prime Minister of Belgium.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Queensland.

THE following interesting report came in tne regular World's letter from our correspondent in Queensland, and the Y editor has appropriated it for this department, hoping that it may prove suggestive to some of our American Y's:

"The Brisbane Y's gave a unique and pretty 'leaf social' to celebrate their union's birthday. The decorations were all in leaves, the letters 'Y. W. C. T. U.,' 'welcome' and 'leaf social' being specially tasteful; the platform table was draped in white, and decorated with autumn leaves and ferns; the tickets were vine leaves; the girls wore oak and ivy leaves and the clock and pictures were wreathed with ivy.

"The lady mayoress of Brisbane, who presided, was presented with a leaf Y, and spoke in praise of the work Y girls are doing. Rev. James, of Albert Street Wesleyan Church, gave an interesting address on 'Leaves, Young and Old,' with their varied charms and uses, encouraging the Y's to continue their good work. Mrs. Carvosso spoke on 'Leaves from Miss Willard's Life,' showing the compelling power of her genius and character, and how she had the widest range of interests, concluding with the thought that now she had won the 'Laurel wreath of everlasting life,' and carried the 'Palms of Victory.' Mrs. Young, superintendent of South Brisbane Y's, spoke of the importance of interesting the honoraries and of the 'True Vine.' Friends contributed music, singing and recitations, and there was an interval for social chat and coffee. A message of loving greeting to Mrs. Brentnall was proposed and carried by the Y's, who regretted her absence through illness, as she has always shown such loving sympathy toward them.

"Reports for the year proved that the Brisbane Y's have been helping others to some of their sunshine. They have a singing band to the children's hospital, gave a tea to Our Girls' Club, Christmas cheer to the old folk in the Benevolent Asylum, and help financially with many W. C. T. U. departments. They have read papers on narcotics and other subjects at their meetings and are educating themselves to keep in step with white-ribboners throughout the world."

Y's at Work.

MICHIGAN.

MICHIGAN Y's have been branching out into literature for the first time and that too quite recently. A little leaflet has appeared with the subject, "How shall we make our meetings more interesting?" This leaflet is in fact an essay which was awarded the prize for the best production written on that subject by the Y's of the state. I will be glad to send sample copies of this to whoever desires them.

We have eighteen societies in our state, an increase over last year, and some of them have adopted what is, as far as we know, an original feature. This is a general secretary or counsellor. The counsellor is an older woman who advises, encourages, sympathizes, and often entertains the girls under her charge. The office is elective, and while a very responsible one, seems to meet a great need. The Y's themselves have held the receptions, socials and public meetings which are no doubt the rule with Y's in every state. At the state W. C. T. U. convention, one evening was given up to the Y and L. T. L. work. The Y's conducted their part of the program, giving short speeches, recitations, etc. At this time occurred also the presentation of the state Y banner from the Y which had previously held it (Scottville) to the Y showing the largest per cent increase in membership (Port Huron). It was a Port Huron girl too, Miss Bertha E. Fitch, who won the prize, "Nineteen Beautiful Years," for the essay above spoken of and who received the book on this occasion.

Another instance of the enterprise of Michigan young women is shown in the little Y paper which the Marquette union edits. It is typewritten on carbon paper, so that many copies are written at once. It contains Y news of local interest together with articles on various temperance subjects. Other Y's come in for their share of commendation. Hillsdale has the largest active membership outside the industrial school Y at Adrian, while Allendale bears the palm for having the most papers (W. C. T. U.) on its reading tables.

ANN L. R. COLEMAN,
Pontiac. State Y Sec.

NEW YORK.

PERHAPS the Y readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will be interested in knowing, even at this late date, that the Silver Jubilee Anniversary was appropriately celebrated by the Y. W. C. T. U. of Kerhonkson, N. Y. The Jubilee was held in the M. E. church on the evening of May 25, 1898, the second anniversary of the Kerhonkson Y. W. C. T. U., thus combining National and local sentiment, which tended to make the celebration a marked success. The personnel of this society is considered excellent, and apparently good work has been accomplished under the indefatigable leader, Mrs. George B. Millikin, the president.

An interesting musical and literary program was rendered, and the address of Rev. Ross, subject, "Frances Willard," was an able review of her life and character.

ELLA DUBOIS GILLETTE.
Kerhonkson, N. Y.

World's W. C. T. U.

Norway.

MISS SLACK has now left Norway, but her words have taken root in the hearts of many, and the Norwegian W. C. T. U. will always look upon her visit as a red-letter epoch in its development. Since my letter of August 18, from Bergen, Miss Slack has visited Egersund, Aalesund, Trondhjim and Kristiania, giving two or three addresses to good audiences at each place. New members have been enrolled at the close of every meeting. I have not yet received exact numbers.

In Kristiania Miss Slack spoke on "The greatest woman's organization the world has ever known" and on "The greatest moral movement of the age." She has introduced work on departmental lines among us; the press and flower mission departments have especially attracted our women.

It was my privilege to accompany Miss Slack and act as interpreter as far north as Trondhjim; there we separated, she going by train to Kristiania (a journey of eighteen hours at the very moderate speed possible when traveling by rail in Norway), I remaining to address one more meeting in Trondhjim (Drontheim) on "The practical aspect of the temperance question." I have since been to Hommelvik, Stenkjar and Ytteroen, where I spoke at four meetings, enrolled new members and started the press and flower departments. I am writing from Christiansund, a town in which no meeting was arranged for Miss Slack, owing to dates being unsuitable. I have had two meetings here, one for members only, where I started two departments, and at yesterday's "fest" sixteen new members joined; to-night I am to give a public address, to-morrow leave for the south.

Before I close I would like to refer to the controversy which has been going on in our white-ribbon ranks, and make a statement as to the position taken by the Norway W. C. T. U. It is well that our sisters in other lands should clearly understand that we in Norway are very firm on both the points referred to, viz., the liquor traffic and the social evil, and that there has never been any idea of compromise with us. We are all working to forward total prohibition of the drink traffic by popular veto; at present the law only makes it possible for us once in five years to vote down the sale of brandy and spirits, but we are doing that, and we have always before us as our aim, total prohibition of the whole of the liquor traffic, both by means of new laws and local veto.

On the purity question we are uncompromisingly opposed to any form of state regulation of vice, and we hold that the standard of morals should be equally high for both sexes.

Miss Slack's visit to us has made us feel, even more than hitherto, what a privilege it is to be long to the W. W. C. T. U., and I take this opportunity of making known our loyalty to the organization which was so wonderfully planned by our dear, departed Frances Willard, and is still so splendidly officered.

May the "tie which binds" be strengthened in other countries as it has been here by Miss Agnes E. Slack's presence among us.

Faithfully yours,
(MRS.) ELIZABETH ESPENAK,
Hon. Nat. Norwegian Sec.
September 5, 1898.

Tasmanian Notes.

THE action of the Hobart W. C. T. U. in suggesting the curfew bell ordinance, as a means for keeping young children off the streets at night has evoked varied criticism and ridicule. It is talked of as an obsolete custom too barbaric for this enlightened nineteenth century, and savoring too much of "grandmotherly" legislation. Some treat the matter as a big joke, others speak of it with sneers and contempt, while not a few are in sympathy with a movement that would prove beneficial to the community. The city council has received the letter favorably and the results of its deliberations on the subject is, that the council has agreed to ask Parliament to enact a law which will prevent so many young children spending their evenings on the streets.

The W. C. T. U. of Wjechau, a flourishing mining town on the west coast, has held a most successful meeting at the opening of its coffee and reading rooms in the Montagu Hall. Commissioner Hall presided, and during the evening there was an exhibition of gymnastics; parlor games were played, and musical items were rendered. Refreshments were handed round and an instructive and pleasant evening was spent. In providing these rooms our women are catering to the necessities of a large number of men who live in the township, most of whom are far from their "ain folk" and home. It is in order to counteract the attractions of the saloon that this young union has, with motherly thought, made this venture to save somebody's boy from degrading influences and bring him in touch with those that are ennobling and Christlike.

Our franchise petition has reached the ears of the legislative council and has passed its first and second reading. We are looking forward eagerly to the time when that august body shall consider its third reading, as the opposition at the previous readings was less than it has yet been.

With the July number of the People's Friend, began the thirtieth year of issue of this temperance paper. Mr. Lodge has worthily occupied the position of editor since its inception, and is a witness to the fact that good work, much work and protracted work can be performed without the use of alcohol.

The Y. W. C. A. of Hobart, has just taken possession of the new building rented by them, and situated in Bathurst street. The opening ceremony was a very successful function, and interest was attached to it by the presence of Miss Booth, the energetic secretary of the Melbourne Association. The activities of the Hobart Association have been greatly hampered by the incommodious premises they have been occupying. Their new quarters will facilitate their efforts and give them larger scope for holding meetings—classes for young women. Some of the prime movers in this good work are white-ribboners, and temperance and purity subjects are kept well to the fore.

We send to our American sisters loving greetings and heartiest wishes for the success of their coming convention, and pray that at this their first great gathering without our beloved Chieftain's inspiring voice and presence, they may realize in a very special manner that unseen One who is always with "His own," and experience in a greater degree than ever the radiations of His uplifting and impelling love.

(MRS.) JESSIE S. ROOKE,
Colonial Correspondent.
Burnie, Emu Bay, Tasmania.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

News From the Field.

[State reporters are earnestly requested to send no news over two months old. Brief and frequent reports are preferable.—THE EDITORS.]

Western Washington.

THIS state has been rich in help from National organizers this year. In the merry month of May came Isabel Wing Lake and her worthy co-laborer, Dr. Caroline Geisel, with their inspiring plea for "A white life for two." Their selflessness and spirituality gave nobler impulse to every life that came within their influence and shed blessing upon every fireside where they rested. There was but one complaint against them, "they went too soon," Everett, Seattle, Tacoma and Olympia being the only points they visited. A severe illness of Mrs. Lake's delayed their arrival, and other engagements hastened their departure, but we look forward anxiously to the fulfilment of their promise to come again.

Their work aroused more interest in the churches and brought out their more active coöperation than anything else has done here for years; and we are persuaded that this point of close contact should be made the most of. There is great need of purity work in our western towns and if we can get the good people actively at work with us there, we may soon be working shoulder to shoulder all along the line of reform. God hasten the day.

It was in our glad May time too, that A. L. A. Murcutt came to us from the antipodes, she whom we have lovingly familiarized as "Dear Australia." British Columbia held on to her till near the last of May and she was obliged to hurry away to California in less than a month, so we did not have near as much of her as we wanted. She was presented to a Methodist Conference and captured it with one of her bright, enthusiastic speeches, so she had pressing invitations to fill pulpits and speak in churches from all parts of the state, which she could not accept for lack of time. Her stereopticon lectures at the Thurston county annual convention, Olympia, June 7 and 8, were the high lights of the convention and her able support at our state convention, Centralia, June 14–17, was a most grateful service.

We had a galaxy of stars at our state convention, five National organizers and lecturers. That was a red-letter day for us, for many times we have been without any titled folk. But we have never been without earnest, consecrated, cultured, common-sense women, our own officers and our rank and file, and these were in strong evidence this year, too. These, our home women, and the good people of Centralia, paid loyal tribute to our distinguished guests, Maude L. Greene, Hattie L. Henderson (our "Texas"), A. L. A. Murcutt, and we had a real live editor, too, all through the convention, gentle Mrs. Riggs, of the Northwest White-Ribboner (which paper, by the way, was adopted as the organ of Western Washington.) All of our general officers were there except the recording secretary, Mrs. Thayer, who, to her regret and ours, was detained at home. We went through the drudgery and play of the convention, including the rush to finish business at the end; we reported, discussed, reconsidered, amended, elected (re-elected throughout almost), etc., and the public and the very inside home folks looked on and exclaimed again and again, "Behold, how they love one another!" The great ones among us, who have been all round the world and seen the princely gatherings and the glory of them said, "We never saw a more harmonious, spiritually-touched convention," and we stay-at-home, unsophisticated bodies believed every word they said.

The reception and Mrs. Greene's chalk talks were the play of the convention and they were as much enjoyed as May Day by children. There was much solid truth in the chalk talks, but it was pastime, too.

Mrs. Greene and her most faithful ally, Miss Henderson, here began a nearly two months' work in Western Washington, work that has told from the first for great good and will so continue to tell through time and eternity. I can not give the exact figures, but they must have held considerably more than a hundred meetings in all and their loving hands have sowed good seed all along the way that can not be gathered up and counted. Whether before the children, the women, the church or the general public, Mrs. Greene has never failed to make a point for our pending equal suffrage amendment, and she always makes it with a grace that carries it home with a welcome. That is the work that wins. These two choice spirits have gone nearly the length and breadth of our beautiful inland sea, with picture, with precept and example, establishing the great truths of our white-ribbon reform. And the people have heard them gladly. At our summer Chautauqua on the fair island of Vashon, when Mrs. Greene reviewed the Sunday-school lesson on the good Samaritan, distinguished divines followed her chalk and her words with the closest interest, and at the close, Rev. Mr. Van Osdel, D. D., said it was the most perfect Sunday-school lesson review he had ever heard. That was high praise, but no one within hearing thought it too high.

These dear friends go from us working eastward toward that Mecca of our hopes, the National, at St. Paul. May God go with them all the way and may the people throng to hear them that righteousness may grow in the earth.

LAVEINE ROBERTSON SHERWOOD,
State Reporter, Everett.

"A PERFECT FOOD—as Wholesome as it is Delicious."

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
BREAKFAST COCOA
"Has stood the test of more than 100 years' use among all classes, and for purity and honest worth is unequalled."
—Medical and Surgical Journal.
Costs less than ONE CENT a Cup.
Trade-Mark on Every Package.
WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.,
TRADE-MARK. Established 1780. DORCHESTER, MASS.

Indiana.

FREELANDVILLE has forty members, each one with her trust in God, working, ever working, never wavering, never doubting. Thus writes Delana Walker, their press superintendent.

Nappanee union held a two days' chrysanthemum show, serving lunch, and secured a handsome sum for their treasury. Goshen is up to date. Their Y Branch gave a baby social; all babies under seventy-five years of age were invited. The lunch was plain bread and milk, and each baby wore a bib. Greensburg sent a delegate to the meeting of the state board of charities.

Hope union writes of the interest of their young people in the contest work. That means farther on prohibition votes at the polls. Deer Creek union mourns the death of a valued worker, Jessie Edgerton. The company on the other side grows large. Mapleton has enterprise, for they tell of their very successful meeting addressed by Mrs. Emma A. Cranmer, of Dakota.

Wabash calls herself the Josephine R. Nichols union, and has an ambition to become the largest union in the state. Bloomington is very successful with remonstrance under the Nicholson law. Stewartsville L. T. L. has a graduating class of fourteen. We exhort every union to have its L. T. L.

Brazil union, of thirty-three members, sent thirty-three dollars to our Hadley industrial school. Kewanna union had a place on the program of their county farmers' institute.

Westfield union holds a parlor meeting once a month in the home of a superintendent, the hostess reading a paper on the work of her department. Rockport and Brookville are especially interested in their reading rooms for their boys. Colfax avenue union, South Bend, sends THE UNION SIGNAL to the library of the Y. M. C. A. and to the editors of the city dailies. Kokomo union sustains a mission very successfully. Coatsville union writes of their efforts to down the cigaret under our recent state law.

La Porte, Valparaiso, New Albany and others count among their several victories a curfew law. Fairmount union furnished a scientific temperance lecture for every school in their township.

La Fayette union again offers three prizes to the pupils of the public schools for essays on scientific temperance or the effect of alcohol on the body.

Bedford holds a monthly union gospel temperance meeting with Epworth League, Christian Endeavor and Baptist Y. P. U.

Westland netted $31.85 from six silver contests. On each occasion the stage was decorated with our World's and state mottoes and our flag. Miss Eva Rule had charge.

Geneva writes of an addition of twenty-six members and fourteen honoraries from a visit of Mother Trish, one of our state evangelists. Hartford City claims to be alive and aggressive, and writes of special meetings in their churches and their active L. T. L. Sedalia reports The Young Crusader furnished for members of the Sunday-school, with a roll of honor for the wall. Francesville covered the expense of their institute with a suffrage contest. Churubusco drives every saloon from the town, and stands guard to see that no others come in their places. Frankfort union has an L. T. L. nine years old. They spent July 21 in the woods in commemoration of Miss Anna Gordon's birthday. They made an imposing appearance on the streets, singing as they moved on, "Saloons, saloons, saloons must go." Frankfort, Frances Willard union, practices tithing every member. Meridian union gave a grand gold medal contest, September 2, James L. Gipe, president of the Indiana L. T. L., carrying off the medal. Central is the oldest union in the state; it sent three hundred soap wrappers to the National, and sustains a child in our industrial school; sends a temperance pledge chain of Sunday-school children signatures, gathered by our L. T. L's and members of the union, to the state convention. Wallace union has the honor of having Mrs. Rhoda Smith, who is pastor of one of the Indianapolis Congregational churches, serve as their president. They are planning to sustain a mission and teach temperance and gospel to the mothers and children.

The above gives a fair object lesson in our do-everything policy, and our 265 unions are all active and earnest and united in their allegiance to our World's, National and state unions and in our efforts to secure woman's ballot in the Hoosier state. The petitions are already being circulated.

MARY E. BALCH,
State Reporter, Indianapolis.

New Hampshire.

THE New Hampshire women are gathering their forces together in preparation for the convention, to be held in Portsmouth, October 5–7. This will be the twenty-fifth annual state convention. Nearly all the counties have already held their conventions.

From Coos county comes the word that their efficient and wide-awake president, Mrs. Kate H. Brown, has resigned, after eight years of faithful service. The new president is Mrs. Ella Rowell. Reports from the

One thousand styles and sizes.
For cooking and heating.
Price from $5 to $70.
GARLAND STOVES AND RANGES
The World's Best
Often imitated. Never equalled.
Best Cookers. Strongest Heaters.
Last Longest. Use Least Fuel.
Made only by
The Michigan Stove Company
Largest Makers of Stoves and Ranges in the world.
Sold Everywhere.

unions show that better work has been done than usual.

Sullivan county convention was held at Charlestown, with an unusually interesting program. The temperance interest in this county is on the increase; several new unions have been formed during the year, with progressive, earnest officers. Money and supplies were given to the Mercy Home, whose work and wants were presented to the convention by the trustee for that county, Mrs. M. E. Partridge, of Claremont. The evening address by Mrs. Jones, of Manchester, was most enjoyable; she gave delightful glimpses here and there of the National and World's Convention of last year. The union at Lempster celebrated its first birthday by a successful entertainment at the town hall.

Franklin union is to have a tent at the state Grange fair at Tilton, dispensing therefrom baked beans and other good things. They will distribute literature and do anything they can for the temperance cause. This union has taken twenty-five copies of The Young Crusader to be given out among the children in the outer districts of the city. Henniker union reports "new members, money for the Temple, and ten copies of the anti-tobacco leaflet taken for the children."

We gather from the reports of the unions that much of their summer work has been devoted to the needs and relief of our soldiers.

We are looking forward with great pleasure to the coming of Mrs. Hoffman to our state convention, and we shall also welcome another favorite speaker in Mrs. Rice of Boston, National superintendent of L. T. L. work.

ELIZABETH PARTRIDGE,
State Reporter, Claremont.

Official.

Parlor Meetings.

MY DEAR STATE SUPERINTENDENTS:—Reports are coming from the various states fairly well. I shall send my report to Mrs. Stevenson by October 21. If any state superintendent, or state president reporting for her, has not reported, please send to me before October 19.

As the banner presentation for this department may not be quite understood, I will explain more fully. The banner will go to the state which reports the largest increase pro rata in membership for one year. If it is so fortunate as to win it the succeeding year, it will be gladly returned to it at the National Convention. South Dakota has had the honor of keeping it one year. Who will take it home from St. Paul remains to be seen.

I have written a booklet entitled "Why we Belong," giving a history of the department, its methods and aims. This answers the query so frequently made, "What can we do when we cannot have a speaker in our parlor meetings?" It will be sent to any member of a local union if she will send me her address and ten cents. Yours for the good cause,

MARY D. TOMLINSON,
Nat. Supt.,
212 La Grande Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

Anti-Narcotics.

DEAR SISTERS:—The fourth Sunday of October is to be observed by the clergy of the various denominations as Prison day. I hope every one of our W. C. T. U. lecturers will devote at least a part of each lecture delivered on that day to speaking for the unfortunates who are behind prison walls. If our local workers would visit jails and penitentiaries and see that the sanitation and food is good and that no tobacco is furnished to the prisoners, it would be a charity. The new jailer at the St. Louis jail does not allow cigarets to be given to the inmates. This can be brought about in many places. Our workers carry tracts to the unfortunates, and talk about the future, with no thought of this life. Let us show these poor creatures that have slipped in the darkness that we care for their personal comfort, as well as for life eternal.

(MRS.) E. B. INGALLS,
Nat. Supt.
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 4, 1898.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

I am just on the eve of starting for the state conventions of Ohio and Indiana. I am to speak on Wednesday evening at the Ohio convention and on Saturday and Sunday at the Indiana. The whole country is alive just now with our women as they go to and from their annual gatherings. God grant that at each state convention there may be a new outpouring of the Divine Spirit. Word has been received that the convention just closed at Oklahoma has been the very best one that has ever been held there. The same is true of the Wyoming convention. Mrs. Helen Harford attended the Oklahoma convention and rendered valuable service, and Mrs. Telford, of Colorado, was the guest of honor at the Wyoming convention. New presidents were elected in both places. A full list of the newly elected officers will soon be given. From both North and South Dakota come reports of most prosperous conventions and Colorado helps swell the report of a goodly ingathering for the year.

I am sure our white-ribbon women everywhere are rejoicing over the vote in Canada on the question of prohibition. Whether or not the sentiment of the people is incorporated in a law, and we know, alas, how easy it is to evade carrying out the wish of the people, it is still encouraging to think what a majority of the citizens of a great nation like Canada cast their votes in favor of the entire prohibition of the liquor traffic. My warm congratulations are extended to the white-ribboners of Canada who have done such noble work in helping thus to build up public sentiment.

I earnestly hope that the local unions, the country over, will observe the call for a day of prayer, October 26, which appeared in the last issue of THE UNION SIGNAL. As never before we shall need this year to look to God for strength. The delegates to the next National Convention should be women of faith and prayer, and if the whole country is circled by praying bands, asking Divine guidance for the delegates, we shall surely hold such a Convention as will be worthy of the Crusade, the twenty-fifth anniversary of which it will commemorate.

Mrs. Mary E. Teats, state superintendent of purity for California, and National evangelist in the purity department of the National, is about to leave her home in California for residence in the East. The president and secretary of California sent a letter of most cordial endorsement of Mrs. Teats' ability and success as a worker. They say: "She is a good all-around worker, thoroughly equipped, a good speaker and always adds numbers and strength to the unions she visits, and as a specialist in her own department has few equals." I am quite sure that wherever Mrs. Teats may go she will be warmly welcomed by white-ribboners, and that there will be a constant demand for her services.

Miss M. Lena Morrow, who has been for over six years the efficient president of the ninth district of Illinois, is planning to spend the winter months in the South or Southwest, and would be glad to make engagements. Miss Morrow is a splendid worker, and would, I am sure, make for herself a good record wherever she might go. She may be addressed as to terms and dates at Freeport, Ill.

Dr. and Mrs. Whitney, of Brighton, Mass., whose names have often been mentioned in this column, are planning to attend the St. Paul Convention, and would be glad to make engagements en route. They would also be willing to work in the South during the winter months. They are both effective speakers, and wherever they go make a point of adding new members to the unions, usually with marked success. A stereopticon lecture is one of the special features of their work. They may be addressed at 76 Elmira St., Brighton, Mass.

You will remember that one of the brother helpers appointed by Miss Willard about two years ago was W. T. Burdick, of Onacock, Va. Quite remarkable success has attended Brother Burdick's work. He writes: "I spoke from the pulpits of over two hundred churches in my native state. In January and February of this year I spent seven weeks in North and South Carolina and Georgia. I have also spoken in Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and Washington, D. C." Brother Burdick is open to calls from any part of the field and makes very reasonable terms for the W. C. T. U. We bid him Godspeed in his work.

The Honor Roll for this week is as follows:

Mrs. L. E. Bailey, 5.
W. C. T. U., of Lansingburg, N. Y., 3.
W. C. T. U., of Beulah Church, Ill., 1.

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

When washing delicate laces, use liberal suds of Ivory Soap and warm water. If the laces are too delicate to bear rubbing, knead them with the hands, or shake briskly in a bottle of suds, then rinse in clear water. Ivory Soap contains no alkali, and is safe to use for the cleansing of the most dainty fabrics.

IVORY SOAP IS 99 44/100 PER CENT. PURE.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Copyright, 1898, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

Treasurer's Corner.

The rush of the last days of the fiscal year is upon us. Dues are coming in at an encouraging rate, and we are hoping they will continue until a good balance on the right side of the ledger is assured. We have returned to state treasurers as percentage on the $2 fund about $600. The percentage on wrappers will not be sent until the close of the year's contract, January 1, when all returns will be made. The year on labels does not expire until February 10.

We were greatly pleased this morning to receive from Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, an autograph letter from her brother, General U. S. Grant, written September 30, 1870. This letter is sent to be sold for the benefit of the "general temperance work of the National W. C. T. U." This is a courtesy that we greatly appreciate, and we hope to realize a goodly sum for it. Please call attention of collectors to this valuable treasure. Any inquiry sent to me will receive immediate attention.

Plans for National Convention are maturing rapidly, and we confidently expect the St. Paul committees will have everything in "apple pie" order. Indiana steps into Honor Roll beside North Dakota with over five hundred clear gain in membership. Still there is room. Who will come next?

HELEN M. BARKER.

Advertisers like to know what paper pays them best. Always mention The Union Signal when writing.

Face to Face.

Learn about Pearline that way, if you like. Any woman who has been using Pearline in the right way will tell you the truth about it just as strongly as we could. If Pearline has made the washing easy and economical for her, why not for you? Is your case so different from that of the millions of women that are being helped by Pearline? Isn't "washing without rubbing" worth looking into? 574

Millions NOW USE Pearline

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—As was promised last week I now give you the remainder of Dr. J. J. Thompson's letter which he kindly wrote in answer to questions in regard to the use of alcohol. It would be a good idea for the sisterhood to put the two parts together in a scrap-book and then they could lay their hands on these prescriptions in time of need, instead of resorting to alcohol because they know of nothing to take its place. Dr. Thompson continues:

"Another remedy which should be thought of in such cases and which is kept in nearly every household is ammonia. The aromatic spirits of ammonia given in doses of from fifteen to sixty drops in water will often revive patients suffering from collapse, when the lips are blue and bloodless, the face pale and the extremities cold. The carbonate of ammonia should be kept in the house in place of whisky in regions where the rattlesnake or moccasin abound. This remedy is a specific for snake bite; in fact, it is said never to fail to cure the bites of a rattlesnake or moccasin. It should be taken in doses of from five to eight grains every fifteen or twenty minutes until a drachm is taken. The fang wound of the snake should also be freely opened and the wound packed with dry carbonate of ammonia. This is an excellent remedy for bee sting and insect bite, and can not be excelled as a family medicine in the case of delirium from any fever, especially in erysipelas. It is a good family remedy for headache, hives, internal hemorrhages, pneumonia of old people and rheumatism. In cases of colic fifteen or twenty drops of the aromatic spirits of ammonia given every half hour will relieve promptly. Colic of babies will be speedily relieved from putting two to four drops in the baby's milk. In case of felon apply a cloth wet with ammonia, it will often abort it.

"Arsenic is another good remedy for collapse, especially for the collapse of cholera, but should be used in very minute doses, one or two drops of Fowler's solution in half a glass of water, teaspoonful every five or ten minutes, or better yet, a three grain powder of the third or sixth trituration of arsenic.

"Camphor is another remedy which should be thought of in these cases, especially in cholera morbus attacks, where it will often act like magic.

"Musk is still another remedy which may be used in place of brandy or whisky in case of sudden collapse where death seems inevitable. This remedy is said to effect marvelous results in case of exhaustion of the vital parts and giving out of the nerve centers, with extreme degree of coldness of the head; this is best administered by means of rectal injection, putting ten grains of musk in an ounce of mucilage of acacia. Some physicians prefer to combine this with twenty drops of laudanum.

"At the Temperance Hospital we also use strychnine largely in place of alcohol in cases of collapse, giving 1-120 to 1-160 of a grain of strychnine. In home practice, 1-40 of a grain of strychnine given with hot water will act promptly and effectively in most cases.

"There are several other remedies which might be mentioned in this connection which are useful in cases of prostration or collapse, but which space will not permit me to describe. Suffice it to say, however, that it has been demonstrated over and over again that alcohol in any form whatever is not a tonic, but is at best only a temporary stimulant which often leaves the patient worse when reaction takes place than before taking it. In the light of modern medical science, therefore, it must give way to remedies better adapted to the human race."

(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.
1610 Grace St.

Organizers' Corner.

Since the first of June I have lectured twice in Pulaski, Tenn., organizing a splendid W. C. T. U. Afterward I spoke at Frankford, Pa., Newport and Wilmington, Del., and attended the International Conference of Temperance Workers at Prohibition Park, where a number of short talks were made. While on Staten Island I addressed an evening meeting at Stapleton. On my way to the north a visit was paid to Camp Alger, and a meeting held with the soldiers in connection with workers from the Salvation Army. At the temperance campmeeting near Moundsville, W. Va., three addresses were given, one at Ocean Grove, N. J., the Assembly at Round Lake, two at Schenectady, and two at the prohibition campmeeting at Cuba; the last three places all in New York state.

The fourth day of September my work began in New Jersey. I have delivered an address every night since except four, and attended five county conventions. September 29 I am to lecture in Brooklyn for the Kings county W. C. T. U. convention, and next day leave for Virginia to fill a number of engagements; the last being the state convention at Richmond. October 12, I shall speak at the New Jersey state convention, and after visiting other places in this state, I expect to return to New York, and later will fill engagements en route to St. Paul, Minn. Everywhere the workers seem full of hope and consecrated determination. Praise God!

BELLE KEARNEY.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[Bright, newsy items of special interest are acceptable for this column, but do not send detailed reports of unions or conventions to us. Send them to your state reporter.]

THE Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital in Chicago is now free from debt. The trustees are raising funds to build a larger house.

THE call of the National and Miss Greenwood, National evangelist, for prayer in the United States for the plebiscite has been gratefully commented on throughout Canada.

THE Orleans county, New York, W. C. T. U. held a good convention at Knoxville, September 13 and 14, in the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Graham's singing was especially appreciated.

CUYAHOGA county, Louisiana, has nearly as many W. C. T. U. members as the remainder of the state of Louisiana. There were fifty-four voting delegates present at a late county convention.

THE Boston W. C. T. U. has forwarded to the navy 675 comfort bags sent in by the unions. Many more have been sent through the state superintendent of soldiers and sailors. Testaments and literature have also been furnished.

THE twenty-third annual meeting of the Baltimore city union showed 1,152 active members and 200 honorary members, and that the fourteen Loyal Temperance Legions have a membership of 900 children and fifty teachers. Of the active members 352 are Y's.

THE county W. C. T. U. convention at Portland, Ore., received a report on narcotics by Mrs. Kern, which provoked a lively discussion, and a vote was taken requesting the street car companies and the railroad officials to protect the weak heads and stomachs of non-users of the weed against the offense in waiting-rooms.

THE nineteenth Illinois district had a unique feature not down on the program at its late meeting at Marshall. Mr. E. S. Coyle presented the local union with a pair of wall pockets; one for each of the depots. Mr. Coyle has but one hand, yet he had carved the wall-pockets with most exquisite skill. The designing is also his own and is most excellent. After Mr. Coyle had presented them Miss Brehm called him and his wife to the front, and very prettily thanking him for his beautiful gifts, in behalf of the local union, presented him with an elegant volume of "Hill's Manual," and his wife with "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."

FEED CHILDREN

WHEATLET

THEY NEED its rich, flesh-making gluten and bone-making phosphates. As well feed children laundry starch as many white-flour starchy foods. Infant mortality is largely the result of too much starch in the food.

For Children and for Grown Folks is a remarkably healthful food. Wheatlet contains only the nutriment of the whole wheat. Sold in 2 lb packages.

WHEATLET

If your grocer does not keep Wheatlet have him order some for you, or send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied. Avoid substitutes.

Send for booklet.

The genuine bears our label and name and is made only by the

Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y.

THE program of the Massachusetts state convention now in session gives a large number of men as speakers, including Governor Wolcott, Rev. George C. Lorimer, D. D., Mayor Josiah Quincy, Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., and several other ministers. Mrs. Livermore and Mrs. Hunt are also expected to address the convention.

THE Hampden W. C. T. U. and Mount Vernon L. T. L. observed Miss Willard's birthday in Mount Vernon M. E. church, Baltimore, Md., September 25. The children marched in bearing the white-ribbon star-spangled banner and singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." As they passed Miss Willard's picture each deposited a flower upon the altar. There was an interesting program, including selections read from THE UNION SIGNAL.

THE W. C. T. U. of Washington, D. C., has gained numbers through the work for soldiers, sailors and mariners. One of their number writes, "and so it might be throughout the land, if only women who enlist in our cause were put right to work and made to feel that they were necessary to the union. This is the way to keep up the interest and enlist new members, and so all ought to take up that department, because they can find work."

MRS. M. B. PLATT, president of the District of Columbia union, said at a late meeting: "When the W. C. T. U. opened its doors at 910 F street, to the soldiers, and gave them a free lunch, it was the first work of the kind in the city—no free lunch

BAD BLOOD

"CASCARETS do all claimed for them and are a truly wonderful medicine. I have often wished for a medicine pleasant to take and at last have found it in Cascarets. Since taking them, my blood has been purified and my complexion has improved wonderfully and I feel much better in every way." MRS. SALLIE E. SELLARS, Luttrell, Tenn.

CANDY CATHARTIC Cascarets TRADE MARK REGISTERED REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good, Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.

... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...

Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 319

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

being given, except by the saloons. As yet no help has been extended to the W. C. T. U. by the citizens' committee, although many District boys have been among those who have partaken of their hospitality."

THE superintendent of legislation in Arkansas reports that a scientific temperance bill was introduced into the Arkansas legislature and passed the senate, but that before it reached the third reading in the house, it adjourned. During an extra session, called by the governor, a bill called the native wine bill was introduced and while it was pending the temperance people from all parts of the state were heard from, in ringing resolutions from Endeavorers, Epworth Leagues, ministerial associations and the W. C. T. U., which were read on the floor. When, just as the bill was being read for the third and last time, a leaflet was placed upon each desk, Senator Blackburn declared, in his wrath, that "he was sick and tired of seeing these infernal leaflets that were being thrown under the noses of the members by the W. C. T. U."

THE Neal Dow Loyal Temperance Legion of Harvey, Ill., has just held graduating exercises for its first diploma class of five and the teachers' normal class of four. The ten Juniors acted as pages. They wore white uniforms, with red and blue sashes and fancy caps, bearing such names as truth, will, laughter, charity. Miss Mabel Merrill, president of the class, made an address of welcome; Mrs. Laura E. Martin, president of the local union, gave an eulogy on Miss Willard, which was pronounced fine in thought, composition and delivery. Greetings were read from Mrs. Helen G. Rice, Miss Cornelia Dow and Miss Gordon. The program included a flag salute, fine music and a number of other good parts. The diploma class exercise was entitled, "Prohibition, the Triumph of the Ages," the members impersonating Science, Religion, Finance and Pleasure, who each for her kingdom demands prohibition and is promised that it will come. The class appeared in black college caps and gowns, except prohibition, whose costume was white and who was attended by pages carrying a ballot-box and a sword.

National Convention Corner.

RAILROAD RATES FOR CONVENTION NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION, ST. PAUL, MINN., NOVEMBER 11–16, 1898—FULL INSTRUCTIONS.

By action of the Western Passenger Association, a rate of one and one-third fare has been made for the above meeting and becomes effective only when evidence is presented to the joint agent of terminal lines that 100 or more persons are in actual attendance, holding certificates reading for tickets over terminal lines to the meeting point; and when such certificates are stamped by him, with his official stamp, and his written signature affixed thereto.

TAKE NOTICE: No certificate will be honored which was issued to cover the sale of more than one single trip ticket.

Certificates showing purchase of tickets at fifty cents or less, will not be counted, nor will reduction be granted where the rate is fifty cents or less.

An agent of the Western Passenger Association will be in attendance at the National Convention, at St. Paul, Minn., on Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, to act as joint agent in the stamping of certificates issued for this meeting.

Certificates viséd by joint agent will be delivered by such joint agent, personally, to delegates on those days only.

Where the journey is made over more than one line, it is usually necessary for the passenger to buy separate local ticket of each road's issue, and procure certificates thereof for each of the lines traveled over going to the meeting. Passengers should ascertain from the ticket agent what portion of the journey can be covered by the certificate obtainable from him, and procure certificates filled out to correspond with the tickets purchased.

Take notice that failure to procure or to present certificates invalidates any claim for reduction in return fare.

Tickets purchased for going passage may be either limited or unlimited, according to the rate and regulations in effect on the line over which it reads; but the return tickets, sold at the reduced fare, will, in all cases, be limited to continuous passage.

Certificates must show the purchase of tickets not earlier than three days prior to the date announced as the opening of the meeting, or during the first three days of the meeting, and will be honored if presented not later than three days after the date announced as the closing of the meetings, Sunday not to be accounted as a day in any case.

The Great Northern Railway Company grants a rate of one and a third fare on certificate plan, in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota. Certificates to be honored for tickets purchased not more than three days before the opening of the meeting and up to three days after its close.

The Northern Pacific Railway allows one and one-third fare in the states of North Dakota and Minnesota under the certificate plan.

The Central Passenger Association grants a rate of one and one-third fare, certificate plan; also the Southeastern Passenger Association, Mr. Joseph Richardson, chairman, Atlanta, Ga., and the Trunk Line Association in its territory, viz., from Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Dunkirk and Salamanca, N. Y.; Erie and Pittsburg, Pa.; Bellaire, O.; Wheeling, Parkersburg and Huntington, W. Va., and points east thereof, except New England. These associations have the same general rules as given by Western Passenger Association, except, only, that no certificate will be honored issued more than two days (Sunday not included) after the first day of meeting; and that when meetings are held at distant points to which the authorized limit is greater than three days, tickets may be sold before the meeting in accordance with regular tariffs.

Certificates are not kept at all stations, therefore delegates should consult local ticket agents, giving timely notice, so that through tickets and certificates may be ready when required.

Owing to the recent date of rate being declared by the Terminal Association, the New England and Southwestern Passenger Associations have not been heard from, but will undoubtedly grant the reduction. Southeastern Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana are not included in any passenger association, but roads in that territory have heretofore met the rate of adjoining associations. Delegates in this territory will please make immediate inquiry, and any failure to get rate must be reported to me at once, that the matter be arranged.

Dear sisters, none regret more than your committee upon transportation, that we must again work upon the certificate plan, demanding great care and attention to detail, as set forth in the rules, which must be strictly complied with if return of one-third fare is gained.

Yours, cheerfully to serve,
(MRS.) CAROLINE M. WOODWARD,
Transportation Committee.
Nat. W. C. T. U.
David City, Neb.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel.

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers; Third Nebraska, Col. W. J. Bryan; First Texas, Col. W. H. Mabry; Fourth Ohio; First and Third Kentucky; First Wisconsin, Colonel Schadel; First South Dakota, Colonel Frost; Second Missouri; Second Virginia, Col. James C. Baker; Forty-ninth Iowa, Col. Wm. G. Dows; Fiftieth Iowa, Colonel Jackson; One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Indiana, Colonel Studebaker; Third United States Engineers, Rev. Sam Small, chaplain.

Opposed to Canteens.

The following explanatory letters have been received by the W. C. T. U. of Knoxville:

CAMP POLAND,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

To the W. C. T. U.:

I have the honor to say that under no circumstances would I permit a

(Continued on page 16.)

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.
Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money. STOP SMOKING! Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN AND BEAST
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS
84-90 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK 311-313 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright, 1898, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

Conservatory Life
Is most healthful and delightful. The teachers are masters; the students are enthusiasts. Everything in the equipment and environment of the
New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
tends to encourage high ideals and a devotion to art.
GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Musical Director.
Send for our Catalogue to
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

HISTORY OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION
A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00 Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.
AGENTS WANTED
both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address
DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

High Arm

$10 to $25 SAVED in buying direct from factory. 30 days free trial. No agents large profits to pay. No money in advance
$65 Kenwood Machine for.....$22.50
No better Machine at any price.
$50 Arlington Machine for.....$19.50
Other Machines $8.00, $11.50 and $15.00
all attachments free, over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free Write today for special freight offer.
CASH BUYERS' UNION,
158-164 West VanBuren St., B-30 Chicago, Ills.

EVERY LADY SHOULD READ THIS
I will send free a positive cure for all female diseases, irregularities, etc. A simple private treatment, a common sense remedy that never fails. FREE with valuable advice. Mrs. L. HUDNUT, South Bend, Ind.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home, Law College, Lima, O.

canteen in any regiment I had the honor to command. It is not to the best interest of the service, in fact, is a damage to any one connected with the organization and demoralizing to the men, and especially to the boys that are young, loyal and true to their country and flag. My twenty-two years in the service satisfies me that liquor in any shape, except in the hospital, is detrimental to discipline, military courtesies and good behavior. Very respectfully.

J. A. KUERT,
Col. Second O., Commanding
Sept. 14, 1898. Third Brigade.

CAMP POLAND,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

To W. C. T. U.:

Without any reserve I am willing to testify that a canteen where liquor is sold to the men of a regiment is not conducive to the moral or spiritual health of the regiment. As our colonel states, the Second Ohio has had none. Very faithfully,

C. B. CRAWFORD,
Chaplain Second O. Vol. Inft.
Sept. 14, 1898.

W. C. T. U. of Knoxville, Tenn.:

I am decidedly opposed to the use of regimental canteens as inimical to order, discipline, morality and health. After a brief experience with a canteen, this regiment voted to abolish it, and a great improvement in every way has resulted from the disuse of it. The canteen, under the present regulations, is better than the old sutler's stores (where all sorts of wines and liquors were sold), but that is not saying much. The worst class of men frequent the canteen and it is impossible to keep it clean. Unlimited beer encourages the use of unlimited whisky. Men who would otherwise abstain are led on by the example of others into the drink habit from other regiments in the vicinity of ours who have no canteens. Their doors are besieged by crowds of the worst men in the regiments in attempts to get beer. I do not speak from a prohibition standpoint, but from the ground of experience, prosperity and decency. Another great evil is the permission which some regiments have given for unlimited and unrestricted gambling in regimental streets.

C. T. BRADY,
Archdeacon of Pennsylvania and Chaplain First Penn. Inft., U. S. Vol.

CAMP POLAND,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

To the W. C. T. U.:

I am unalterably against the canteen, as in any way to be a part of the Volunteer Army. It is evil and only evil continually; it is always against the best discipline of a regiment. The canteen detracts from the highest efficiency of any body of soldiers, develops bad habits, and is an open door to a brood of evils, and should be wiped from the face of the earth.

T. J. HARBAUGH,
Chaplain Sixth Ohio.
Sept. 21, 1898.

CAMP POLAND,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

To the W. C. T. U.:

I regard the regimental canteen as both a physical and moral detriment to the soldier. In my judgment its abolition would promote more perfect discipline and good morals.

ED. F. COOK,
Chaplain First Ga. Vol. Infantry.
Sept. 21, 1898.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DEAR MADAM:—I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 31st, together with its enclosures, the contents of which have been noted, and to say that by direction of the President it has been brought to the attention of the Secretary of War.

Very truly yours,
J. A. PORTER,
Secretary to the President.
Sept. 8, 1898.

NO. 2045 BLENDON PLACE,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—The Third U. S. Engineers, Rev. Sam Small, chaplain, should find a place on your "Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen."

This I learned at a temperance meeting held at Jefferson Barracks, by Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairnes, president of the Forest Park University, whom you doubtless know well.

Mrs. Cairnes held meetings every Sunday afternoon during the summer, and the day I was there the number signing the pledge was 148.

Chaplain Small said there were many total abstainers in the regiment before the temperance meetings began.

Lieutenant-Colonel Spencer was well pleased with the work. The regiment is now at Lexington, Ky., I think. It has a good many active Christians in its ranks.

Yours truly,
JOHN T. FIELD.
Oct. 5, 1898.

Take Notice.

Miss Cornelia M. Dow, Portland, Me., custodian of the Willard fund for the payment of the Temple trust bonds, will receive all contributions offered by those who are interested in the effort being put forward by the National Woman's Christian Temperance union to help retire these bonds. Miss Dow is a woman of well-known financial ability and does this work gratuitously. As the daughter of Gen. Neal Dow, this loyal white-ribboner has the highest esteem and regard of all connected with the movement, and it was by cordial agreement with Mrs. Carse and at the request of Miss Willard that she accepted the foregoing trust.

A Reading Course.

This year the Bay View Reading Circle offers a course of delightful reading on the theme of the hour—Spain, and also modern France. This Course is making a great reputation with its short and popular studies and splendid helps. For present or proposed literary clubs or private study there is nothing better. Circulars can be obtained of the president, J. M. Hall, Flint, Mich.

Convention Calendar.

PENNSYLVANIA, Reading, Oct. 14–18.

CALIFORNIA, Berkeley, Oct. 17–22.

KANSAS, Horton, Oct. 19–21.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Washington, Oct. 20, 21.

MISSOURI, Poplar Bluff, Oct. 21-25.

Our Memorial Ode.

"Press On and On," our Chieftain's orders, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, music by Mr. O. H. Hawley, is meeting with wide appreciation. The words are tender and effective, the music stirring and martial. It will be sung wherever the W. C. T. U. has voice. The Ode is printed in sheet form, with a beautiful half-tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy; 60 cts. per dozen copies to state, county and local unions. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

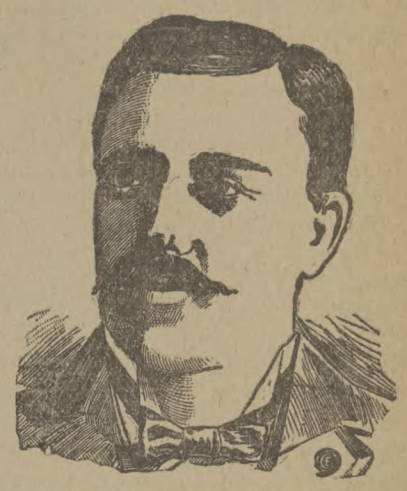
Signal Notes.

THE time for holding the next Christian Endeavor Convention has been selected. The dates are July 5 to 10. Detroit, Mich., is the meeting-place.

SIR GEORGE GREY, the great colonial governor, who died recently, in his eighty-seventh year, when governor of New Zealand, saved Twhiao, a Maori Chief, from drunkenness by becoming a teetotaler himself.

OHIO employs 10,305 male and 14,875 female teachers. The average salary of male teachers is $42 per month, and of female $39 per month. The whole amount paid to the school teachers of Ohio is $12,473,295 per annum. About $70,000,000 is spent for drink each year. Twelve million dollars for education and $70,000,000 for drink.

LEGACIES of £200 each have been bequeathed by the late Miss Grace White, 5 Buccleuch Place, Edinburgh, to the Carrubber's Close Mission and Edinburgh Total Abstinence Society. The residue of the estate is directed to be divided in such proportion as the trustees should see proper among the deserving poor of the burgh who should declare themselves to be total abstainers.



THE total railway mileage in the United States on June 30, 1897, was 184,428.47 miles, there being an increase of 1,651.84 miles, or .90 per cent during the year. The number of men employed by the railways was 823,476. The total number of casualties to persons on account of railway accidents for the year ending June 30, 1897, was 43,168. Of these casualties 6,437 resulted in death, and 36,731 in injuries of varying character. Of railway employés, 1,693 were killed and 27,667 were injured during the year.

THE following resolution was unanimously adopted by the Society of Temperance Ironsides, of England, concerning the attitude of the Wesleyan conference on the temperance question: "That this executive deeply regrets that, through the initiative of the president, the question of whether persons interested in the liquor traffic were eligible for church office was relegated without discussion to the pastoral session instead of being considered in the representative session, and they further regret the persistent way in which Wesleyans are denied space in the official organs of the Connexion wherein to express their opinions on this most important subject."

THE International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations has sent out a prospectus and annual report of educational work in the Associations of North America for 1898. They deal with the various educational features of the Associations, and give special attention to the work of the evening schools operated under the auspices of the Associations in 350 cities, in which 1,250 teachers give instruction to 26,000 young men. These students are on an average twenty-three years old, are employed in the day time, and in the majority of places, but for these facilities, would be denied the educational opportunities they desire. Through the system of standard courses maintained by international examinations, students can prepare for college without further examination. Last year 750 certificates were won.

STARVING
in the Midst of Plenty.

That's what people with poor digestion are doing every day. They have no appetite or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require it does them no good, because the stomach does not digest it and the fermenting mass of food becomes asource of disease, of headache,

MR. JUDSON A. STANION.

sleeplessness, languor and the thousand and one symptoms of disordered digestion. Mr. Judson A. Stanion, the great Church and Sunday School worker and president Christian Endeavor Union, St. Louis, Mo., says:

"I have had to be extremely careful what I ate. Many things were indigestible, and after a hearty dinner I could scarcely keep awake. I never have been sick in bed, but have had a great deal of inconvenience from indigestion. Since I learned of the merits of Stuart's Tablets, I keep them in my desk or carry them in my pocket, and find that I can eat anything at all without discomfort. They were recommended to me by a friend who is enthusiastic in their praise. I can not afford to be drowsy after lunch, and find these tablets just the thing to assist digestion and keep all my faculties wide-awake." Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. They digest the food whether the stomach works or not, and that's the whole secret. At all druggists, 50 cents a box. For book on stomach diseases, giving valuable advice, address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Official Organ of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

(EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY.)

An Illustrated Children's Temperance Paper.

TERMS.

One copy, per year	$ .25
In clubs of ten or more	.20
In clubs of fifty or more, to one address	.12
Sample packages for distribution, 100 to one address	1.00

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The regular issue of the paper contains, aside from illustrations, stories, poetry, etc.

QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON SUPPLEMENT.

Especially for the use of teachers in Sunday-school. Four pages containing temperance lesson helps, suggestions for observance of temperance Sundays, etc. This supplement can be secured w thout the CRUSADER at the rate of 65 cents per 100 copies, $2.75 per 500, $5.00 per 1,000. To regular subscribers the Supplement accompanies each paper free of charge.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers like to know what paper pays them best. Always mention The Union Signal when writing.

Publisher's Notes.

It having been urged by Miss Slack that the W. C. T. U. organizations all over the world should observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of the uprising of the women and present the history of the Crusade movement, it is most fitting to call attention to "Memories of the Crusade," by Mother Stewart. A fuller and more graphic account of that uprising is found in this work than in any other published. As the present generation knows but very little about the Crusade, and have some very erroneous ideas concerning it, it is important that a written account be put into the hands of the people, or it will be little more than a myth in a few years to come. A detailed description of this marvelous movement as found in Mother Stewart's book will be sent to any address postpaid for the price $1.50. It is handsomely bound and illustrated. Orders addressed to M. Campbell, publisher, Apple Tree Place, Springfield, Ohio, will receive prompt attention.

The Responsive Reading for October is upon a subject in which we feel sure every white-ribboner is keenly interested, viz., THE UNION SIGNAL, and the writer is Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, its present managing editor. In the form of questions and answers much information is given concerning the pages of that paper which Miss Willard called so aptly, the weekly "letter from home." Local unions are told what kind of articles and news items are sought after by the editors and how the individual society may speak through its columns. The various departments of the paper are touched upon and methods suggested by which THE UNION SIGNAL may become the "greatest woman's paper in the world."

BIBLE READING FOR OCTOBER. "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit," by Mrs. Addie Webster DeLong. There is no effective service for God without the gift of the Holy Spirit, says the writer truly. The soul for expansion requires the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of Jesus Christ and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost. The baptism of the Spirit, we are told, is for testimony and power, and we may know when we receive it. If we lack this power we shall be held responsible, for all may have it for the asking. How to obtain this baptism is a question this Reading aims to answer.

We ask as a favor that those reading our leaflets, will forward to us their opinions of any particular one which has been especially helpful in their union, their neighborhood or to some friend. This will materially help others in selecting appropriate literature.

Will our friends please bear in mind that in many instances letters are unanswered because the name of the state is not given with the address? All important communications should be signed with the name of the person, the postoffice and the state.

Our friends who order small amounts of literature, promising to remit by return mail, often stating they do not know the price, etc., can not understand the annoyance of carrying these small memorandum accounts or they would be more prompt in remitting.

LARKIN SOAPS AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin Idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample soap if mention this publication.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.
OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN THE UNION SIGNAL, Oct, 1st.

PUBLICATIONS
OF THE
Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
The Temple, Chicago.
For Catalogue of our Publications apply Room 1110, The Temple.

BOOKS BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Glimpses of Fifty Years.
The eloquent story of Miss Willard's eventful life from childhood until the rounding of the half century, given by Miss Willard herself in her own graphic way. It is the record of a life of noble purpose inspired by the simplest but purest motive, combined with a breadth of ability and fervor of consecration rarely seen. This book should be in the hands of all the women of this and every other country.
Cloth $2.25
Half Morocco, gilt edge 3.00
Full Morocco, gilt edges 3.75

Woman and Temperance.
A book of inestimable value to all White-Ribboners, both as a book of reference and as a complete and accurate history of the movement from the days of the Woman's Temperance Crusade.
Cloth $2.00

A Young Woman Journalist.
A life sketch of Miss Julia A. Ames, a young woman of untiring energy, great faith, and devotion to the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. Designed to stimulate young women to noble achievement. This volume can not help but be an inspiration to all temperance workers, and in fact all Christian and philanthropic people anywhere.
Cloth . . . . . $ .75

Nineteen Beautiful Years.
The story of the life of Mary E. Willard, "my sister Mary," as she is tenderly called by the author.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 60

How to Win.
A book for girls.
Cloth $1 00

Woman in the Pulpit.
A strong presentation of the arguments in favor of the organization of women.
Paper . . . . . $ .10
Cloth 50

A Classic Town.
History of Evanston, Ill. Profusely illustrated with views of "Rest Cottage," etc.
Full Gilt $1 00
Plain Cloth 75

A Great Mother.
The Biography of Madam Willard, written by her daughter, Miss Frances E. Willard, and her kinswoman, Mrs. Minerva B. Norton. No work of such value to mothers has appeared for years. It is both an incentive toward and an example of successful motherhood. White-ribbon mothers especially need to learn its open secret. Handsomely bound, elegantly illustrated.
Cloth $1.50

How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle.
This little book is not designed to teach the art of riding the bicycle, but is full of suggestions and thoughts which filled the mind of the writer as she mastered the silent steed. It is well named "A Wheel Within a Wheel." As fascinating as a novel, and an excellent book to place in the hands of lovers of this favorite pastime.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

Do Everything.
A handbook full of instructions and suggestions which make it of inestimable value to White-Ribboners.
Paper . . . . . $ .35

The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard.
Written by ANNA A. GORDON, for twenty-one years her private secretary, with an introduction by LADY HENRY SOMERSET. The book contains 416 pages, 8 inches wide by 10 inches long. Cloth, $2.00; half morocco, $2.75; full morocco, $3.75.

Miss Gordon says in her preface: "We believe this picture of her remarkable and winsome personality will bless and brighten every home that it enters, deepening in the hearts of its readers the desire to hold aloft her white banner of purity and peace, patriotism and prohibition, the protection of the home and the redemption of humanity.

Childhood: Its Care and Culture.
By MARY ALLEN WEST. Bound in cloth, marble edge, and full morocco gilt edge. Carefully written out of a large experience. In a letter to Miss West Madam Willard wrote: "If I could have but one book besides the Bible to help me in bringing up children, I would by all means choose to have this."
Cloth $3.00
Full morocco 4.25

The Temperance Movement; or, the Conflict Between Man and Alcohol.
By United States Senator H. W. BLAIR. The most valuable compilation of statistical information ever offered to the public.
Cloth $1.00

The Year's Bright Chain.
Compiled by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. A gift book of quotations from Miss Willard's works. Illustrated. For young people.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Thumb Nail Sketches of White-Ribbon Women.
Paper . . . . . $ .50
Cloth 1.00

Unanswered Prayer.
By S. M. I. HENRY.
Paper . . . . . Not in Stock.
Cloth . . . . . $ .30

Bright Eyes.
Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised so as to suggest to children by means of outline pictures the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother or elder sister or brother on a Sunday afternoon in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.
Cloth . . . . . $ .20

Columbus and What He Found.
By MARY H. HULL. This is a history of Columbus, told in a most interesting and instructive manner to the writer's own three children and ten of their companions. It is a charming book. It contains 260 pages. It is as entertaining as the world-renowned "Robinson Crusoe," yet every fact is one of history, and goes to improve and enrich the mind of every boy and girl who reads it.
Cloth $1.00

The Junior Partners.
By A. M. RAWSON. Illustrated. Octavo, 410 pages. This remarkable story is strongly written and shows how a generous husband and father may be degraded and crushed by yielding to the demoralizing influence of the appetite for strong drink. The story is well told throughout, manly in sentiment, not narrow in portrayal, scientific in interpretation of argument and facts. The book is illustrated with a number of full page engravings and vignette cuts.
Cloth $2.00

White Ribbon Birthday Book.
By ANNA A. GORDON.
A book of the sayings of over 200 of the wisest and wittiest of women. Useful as a gift book for birthdays, as a guest book, and for a daily memorandum.
Cloth $1.00

Around the World by the Fireside.
Containing 160 photographic views from every quarter of the globe. Size 11x13 inches
Cloth $2.00

Child's Christ Tales.
By ANDREA HOFER.
The sweetest story on earth, in all literature and for all time is the story of the infant Jesus, and His wonderful coming among men. Send for this little book and show it to your friends, for it solves the problem of teaching the Christ-life to children.
Cloth $1.00

Lady Gay and her Sister.
A charming book for children by a well known author.
Cloth . . . . . $ .50

Boys and Other Boys.
Girls and Other Girls.
Two interesting books by Mrs. Lucy A. Scott, who wrote so charmingly for children. Just the books to give needed advice and help to boy or girl in the critical early teens. Not goody-goody, but clear, strong and faithful.
Cloth, each . . . . . $ .25

Bob Gripp's Trophy.
Cloth . . . . . $ .40

GIFT BOOKS
Containing Scripture Texts, Daily Readings for the Year.

Northfield Year Book.
Price $1.25

Gift of Love.

Gift of Peace.
Bound in white, each $1.00

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life.
Bound in white vellum . . $1.00

The Shepherd Psalm.
White and silver . . . . . $ .60
Blue and silver 50

One of God's Lilies.

Story of the Soul of a Child.
Bound in white, each . . . . . $ .30

Kernels.

"So Jack went to the Klondike? How is he getting along?" "Not very well. He writes me that he owes $3,000 for board."

POET—"The poem I sent you, Mr. Editor, contains the deepest secrets of my soul." Editor—"I know it, madam, and nobody shall ever find them out through me!"

"I'D like to hear you play the violin, Mr. Billing," said seven-year-old Tommy, who was entertaining the visitor. "But I don't play the violin, Tommy." "Then papa must be mistaken. I heard him tell mamma that you played second fiddle at home."

"WHAT is a furlough?" asked a Columbus, O., teacher. "It means a mule," was the reply of Mary. "Oh, no," replied the teacher, "it doesn't mean a mule." "Indeed, it does," said Mary. "I have a book at home that says so." "Well," said the teacher, now thoroughly interested, "you may bring the book to school, and we'll see about it." The next day Mary brought the book, and in some triumph opened to a page where there was a picture of a soldier standing beside a mule. Below the picture were the words, "Going Home on His Furlough."

ROSY MCSHANE was a fairly good maid-of-all-work, but like most of her kind, she was wofully slack in caring for her own room. Her mistress was ill for two or three weeks, and on recovering she went up to Rosy's room, and found it in a state of dirt and disorder beyond description. Very indignant, she called Rosy, and said, "Rosy, I don't see how you can stand it to have your room like this!" Smiling pleasantly, Rosy made reply: "Ah, thin, ma'am, but I was iver a patient person."

WHEN the late Neal Dow was a young man, he was chief of the volunteer fire department of Portland, Me. His activity in temperance reform made him unpopular with the liquor sellers, and they tried to get him removed. At a hearing on the matter, one witness testified that Mr. Dow was arbitrary and reckless of the lives of the men. By way of illustration, he said that he was ordered by the chief to take the pipe which he was holding into a place where he refused to go, telling the chief that no man could live there. On cross-examination he was asked: "What did Mr. Dow do then?" "Snatched the pipe from my hands and told me to clear out." "What else?" "He took it into the fire himself." At that point the case against the chief broke down.

THE NORTH-WESTERN LIMITED
Electric Lighted

Is the finest train between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, the Superiors and Duluth. It leaves Chicago 6:30 P. M. daily, reaches St. Paul 7:50 and Minneapolis 8:30 next morning. It is newly equipped with Library Car, Private Compartment Sleeping Car, Palace Sleeping Car, Free Reclining Chair Car, Dining Car and Coaches. Returning it leaves Minneapolis 7:30 P. M. and St. Paul 8:10 P. M. and arrives Chicago 9:30 A. M. Other trains for St. Paul and Minneapolis leave Chicago at 8:30 A. M. daily except Sunday and 10:15 P. M. daily.

Tickets will be sold on the certificate plan of one and one-third fares for the round trip.

All agents sell tickets via THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY. For rates and full information apply to nearest ticket agent or to
H. A. Gross, 461 Broadway, New York.
J. E. Brittain, 368 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
T. P. Vaille, 601 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
C. Traver, 507 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.
E. B. Spain, 210 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.
W. A. Cox, 435 Vine St., Cincinnati, Ohio.
D. W. Aldridge, 127 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio.
W. H. Guerin, 67 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.
A. H. Waggener, 7 Jackson Place, Indianapolis, Ind.
Or W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES! MAKE $100 A MONTH.
easily representing me. Many make more. A great opportunity. Send 2c. stamp fo particulars.
Mrs. Gervaisea Graham, 1250 Michigan Ave., Chicago

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 40. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, October 20, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Declare for Prohibition—Chicago's Patriotism—Educational—About Women—At Home 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, Words. By Marian W. Hubbard 3
The Preacher's Conversion. By Mary B. Tyrrell 3
Methods Must Change. By Chas. E. Bentley 3
Summary of the Summer's Reform News. By Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D 4
Willard Hall Echoes 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
A Joyful Home Coming 5
A Farewell Letter from Mrs. Barney 5
The Chief Cause of Poverty 6
Temperance Entertainment for Travelers 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, Her Awful Dream 7
What Squared Tom's Account 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Queer People 8
Some Lessons from Judaism 8
An Unique Document 8
Give the Sergeant-at-Arms a Rest 9
A Zealous Critic Answered 9
Lo, the Poor Indian! 9
Dr. Banks at the Rock River Conference 9
Personals 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Headquarters in South Africa. By Miss Anna M. Cummings 10
Y's at Work 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
The Secretary's Letter 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Kentucky—West Virginia—Illinois—Connecticut 10, 11
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Sunday School Work—Penal and Reformatory Work . . 12
ORGANIZERS' CORNER 12
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER 13
Important—Sabbath Travel at Convention 13
W. C. T. U. NOTES 13
Regimental Roll of Honor—A New Anti-Canteen Petition 14
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 14
THE HOME 15
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 11-16.

Chairmen of Nat'l Convention Committees.

General Committee of Arrangements, Mrs. C. S. Soule, 105 East Isabel street, St. Paul.

Entertainment Committee, Mrs. C. L. Webber, 1729 W. Minnehaha street, Hamline, St. Paul.

Finance Committee, Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, 37 East Tenth street, St. Paul.

Press Committee, Mrs. L. M. Rich, 1397 Hewitt Ave., St. Paul.

Boarding House Committee, Mrs. Arella L. Phillips, 717 Geranium street, St. Paul.

Decorating Committee, Mrs. T. H. Lyles, 337 St. Peter street, St. Paul.

Notes and Comments.

FROM reports already sent in to the National treasurer, three states, Indiana, Kansas and North Dakota, show a net gain of five hundred in membership during the year, which entitles them to a place on the program and a share in the collections of Benefit Night.

DURING the summer war news has naturally overshadowed every other kind, and most people have read little else. Our readers will therefore be glad to get a concise review of the reform news of the last four months, such as is furnished by Mr. Crafts in our Contributed columns this week.

THE ante-executive session of the National W. C. T. U. Convention is called to meet in Conover Music Hall, corner Sixth and St. Peter streets, at 9:30 on the morning of November 9. State presidents will please note time and place and be in attendance at the first hour if possible. A two days' meeting will, it is hoped, greatly facilitate the work of the Convention.

THE Independent of October 6 gives the report of the prohibition vote in Canada in its department of Religious Intelligence, saying editorially: "Temperance is a good part of religion, therefore we have not thought it amiss to put it there." And may it not be said that every question which affects the welfare of the people is a religious one? We do not want politics in religion but we do need religion in politics.

WOMEN of Illinois! Remember that all of you who are twenty-one years of age, either native born or naturalized, who have lived in the state one year, in the county ninety days and in the ward or school district precinct thirty days, may register and vote for the three university trustees. Any who neglected to register on October 18 have one more opportunity to do so. Electors in Chicago and East St. Louis register on October 25, elsewhere in the state on November 1.

THE question is coming from white-ribbon women in many parts of the country whether or not St. Paul is to furnish free entertainment to the delegates. It would hardly seem as if this point should need guarding. Nevertheless, since past experiences prove that it does, on behalf of our sisters at St. Paul we state that entertainment will be furnished free to all regularly appointed delegates, but not to alternates or visitors. Names of visitors should be sent to Mrs. H. W. Phillips, 717 Geranium St., St. Paul, postage stamp being enclosed if letters need answer.

MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON has been unanimously elected president of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. It has been her purpose not to stand for re-election as National corresponding secretary, indeed, she only did so last year at Miss Willard's urgent request. Knowing this fact and that it was Mrs. Stevenson's intention to return to her home in her native state, the Massachusetts white-ribboners, in view of Mrs. Fessenden's resignation on account of failing health, availed themselves of this opportunity to make her their leader. Mrs. Stevenson's rare abilities as corresponding secretary are universally acknowledged and appreciated throughout the white-ribbon army, and while regretting the loss of her faithful services in that capacity, the National gives her back to Massachusetts with a hearty Godspeed in her new sphere of labor.

WOMAN suffrage is the leading issue in South Dakota's fall campaign. In accordance with a bill passed by the legislature last year the voters of that state will, on November 8, decide whether or not the word "male" in the constitutional clause relating to "elections and the right of suffrage" shall be stricken out. Other states have sent speakers and workers to reinforce the women of South Dakota, and New York has sent an "anti" to counteract as far as one woman speaker can the efforts of the suffragists. Mrs. Crannall, the well-known "remonstrant" leader, is stumping the state in an endeavor to convince intelligent men and women that women ought not and do not want to meddle with politics!

REFERRING to the paragraph in our issue of September 29 concerning the four provinces of Canada which had voted prohibition, Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson, of Danville, Quebec, World's W. C. T. U. treasurer, writes: "They secured a large majority vote, but it was only an opinion and did not enact prohibitory law, more's the pity. In the provincial plebiscite women who could vote for municipal councillors had the same privilege as men. In the vote taken on September 29 women had no part, as they do not as yet possess the parliamentary franchise." This explains why the majorities were so much larger in the Provincial than in the Dominion plebiscite. Such a showing will make the liquor men more strongly opposed than ever to woman's ballot. And it ought to make every prohibitionist of this country eager to put the suffrage plank side by side with that of prohibition in the National party platform.

WE are asked by some of our constituency to explain the meaning of the expression "sacred trust," in the resolution passed by the National executive committee at its meeting of July 15. It has reference, solely, to the fact that inasmuch as Miss Willard pledged her fifty-ninth year to an effort to raise money for retiring the Temple Trust Bonds, her sister officers, together with the members of the executive committee, considered the furthering of that effort to the best of their ability a "sacred trust." This, however, is not equivalent to saying that we consider the retiring of the Temple Trust Bonds a moral obligation resting upon the W. C. T. U. Moreover, our intention does not go further than did hers when she expressly stated that her work for this end would be bounded by the next National Convention. If it be asked why, so far as the money in Miss Dow's hands would allow, the bonds have not been purchased before the meeting of the Convention, as the resolution called for, we answer that we have up to this date been unable to secure a full list of the bond-holders.

(Signed) THE GENERAL OFFICERS.

Current Events.

Declare for Prohibition.

Illinois Methodists Adopt Strong Resolutions Condemning the Saloon.

ROCK River Methodist Conference, the most influential in Methodism west of New York, has taken a bold stand on the liquor question. At its recent session in Chicago, by an overwhelming majority, it adopted positive declarations for national prohibition. One old party preacher denied that the government was in partnership with the liquor traffic, but his action only intensified the feeling of hostility to the saloon. A number of strong speeches were made, and Rev. Dr. L. A. Banks, of Cleveland, was received with greatest enthusiasm by a crowded house. His address was said by them to be the strongest and best prohibition speech ever delivered before the conference. It made many converts. Dr. Henson, of the First Baptist church, in an address to the conference, commented favorably on Dr. Banks' speech and emphasized it with a few pointed remarks on the license system. Prohibition was never more prominent or more popular in the minds of the preachers of this conference. Below is given the sweeping declarations of the conference:

"No question is presented to the moral and Christian people of our land to-day of greater importance than that which is involved in the presence and continuance of the liquor traffic. This organized iniquity is the enemy of good government, the foe of public order and the corrupter of national morals.

"There can be no question but that the first duty of the state is the protection of the individual. Government should stand for the interests of the weak. But under the system of license which has been the policy of our government, the liquor traffic has grown to its present alarming proportions and power.

"And what is license? It is government partnership with this great evil. It is the bartering of state and national honor for an interest in the profits of robbery and murder. It is farming out the highways and byways of the land to its vilest citizens for a percentage in the spoils of crime. It is commissioning bad men to debase, degrade and destroy the citizens of this republic.

"The continuance of a traffic so detrimental, demoralizing and destroying is a shame to the state, a disgrace to the nation and a crime against our Christian civilization. All the material interests of our country, the demands of education, the preservation of morals, the protection of our homes, the progress of the gospel and the general advancement of the race demand the immediate suppression of this most nefarious traffic.

"We therefore protest against the license system as wrong in principle, pernicious in practice, and most demoralizing in its effect. It cloaks this terrible evil with the garb of respectability, benumbs the conscience of men, and perpetuates the rule of the rum power. It makes the government a partner in the business, the voters responsible for its continuance, compromises and cripples the influence of the Christian church. It has utterly failed to mitigate or stay the ravages of the evil. On the contrary they have grown to greater and more alarming proportions. Our nation's drink bill now aggregates the enormous sum of $1,200,000,000 every year.

"Convinced that the licensing, and thus the legalizing, of a business fraught with such enormous evils is a sin against God, and a crime against our common humanity; we affirm its complete legal prohibition as the requirement of morality, the obligation of religion and the duty of civil government.

"Resolved, First, That we most heartily commend all efforts now being made to reach and educate the young to the end that they may be total abstainers from tobacco and alcoholic drinks.

"Second, That we call upon the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy of the United States to at once exercise his constitutional authority and banish the army canteen.

"Third, That we rejoice with our brethren of the Dominion of Canada in the splendid civil and moral victory which has just been won for prohibition, and trust that statesmen will speedily incorporate its fruits into fundamental law.

"Fourth, That we rejoice in the noble work already accomplished by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and that we deeply sympathize with them in the loss of that incomparable leader, Frances E. Willard.

"Fifth, That while we are as much as ever convinced that merely partisan words do not belong to the pulpit, we yet hold it to be the duty of the minister of the Gospel to 'declare the whole counsel of God,' and to set forth the obligation of Christian and moral people concerning this greatest moral issue of the day."

Chicago's Patriotism.

THE national peace jubilee which has been held in Chicago during the present week, was the greatest effort the city has put forth since the World's Fair. Ball, banquet and parade were all conducted on a magnificent scale, while the decorations and illuminations were superb. The presence of the President and Mrs. McKinley, members of the cabinet and other high dignitaries made the occasion a memorable one, and the city was crowded with guests from the surrounding country.

The celebration opened on Sunday, the 16th, with a series of thanksgiving services in six hundred churches. The thanksgiving service committee sent a letter to each pastor in the city and to each jubilee speaker calling attention to the importance of the subject of international arbitration, and asking that it be made a feature of the jubilee sermons and addresses. A mass-meeting for the discussion of the subject was held on Monday afternoon, October 17, in the First Methodist church.

Rev. Dr. F. Gunsaulus acted as chaplain at the welcome meeting at the Auditorium on Tuesday morning, and George R. Peck made the address of welcome. Archbishop Ireland and Judge Emory Speer responded. Speakers, presiding officers, and chaplains were assigned to each of the twenty-four school meetings Tuesday afternoon, and all the public schools were closed to allow the children an opportunity to attend the exercises, and a general holiday was given on Wednesday so that pupils and teachers alike could view the big parade.

Educational.

THE faculty of Miami University, at Oxford, O., has stopped all football games of the varsity team. Brutality and negligence of scholastic duties are given as the reason. The team will have to cancel about twenty dates with leading college teams of the country.

A DONATION of $60,000 has been made to the University of Cincinnati for the erection of a south wing to the university building. The donor is Mr. Briggs S. Cunningham, who gives the money in memory of his wife, always during her life a loyal friend of the institution. The trustees, in accepting the gift, voted that the south wing should be called Cunningham Hall.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER will provide the funds for the erection of a large social settlement home for the Italian district in the east end of Cleveland, O. The building will be called the Alta House, in honor of Miss Alta Rockefeller, one of the prime movers of the kindergarten and day nursery work among the Italian children of that district, and will cost $78,000. Mr. Rockefeller will also provide an endowment fund to insure an income to run the building.

THE Biblical Alliance of Wisconsin, recently organized, has offered to the University of Wisconsin for the year 1898–99, a fellowship and scholarship fund of $1,500, for the encouragement of linguistic, literary, historical and archeological studies, upon a non-sectarian basis, in the department of Hebrew and Hellenistic Greek of the university. Graduate and undergraduate students to hold such fellowships and scholarships are to be appointed by the regents on the nomination of the professor of Hebrew and Hellenistic Greek. The regents of the university decided to accept the offer.

THE public cooking schools of Philadelphia, Pa., opened with a total enrollment of over 2,600 pupils, all of them girls in the sixth grade of the elementary schools. Cooking is not as yet a compulsory study, as the number of schools is not sufficient to provide accommodations for all the girls of the sixth grade. It is estimated that at least twenty-five such schools would be required if the study were regularly added to the curriculum. There are at present but nine. The amount appropriated this year for their maintenance was $4,000. Instruction in cooking is also given at the high school for girls.

Two weeks ago the Clemson Textile school was opened as a department of Clemson college, South Carolina. This is the first textile school ever opened in the south. It looks somewhat like a cotton mill, and is built in a thoroughly substantial manner, with modern systems of lighting, heating, and ventilating. The course of study covers four years, and includes mathematics, English history, agriculture, geometry, chemistry, physics, textile engineering and military science. In practical work, come wood-working, mechanical and free-hand drawing, forge work, drilling, foundry and machine-shop work, and designing. The first two years will be devoted to the study of general principles, and the last two to their practical application.

About Women.

MISS ADA REHAN has, in recognition of her services to histrionic art generally, and to the Memorial theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, in particular, been elected a life governor of the Shakespeare Memorial Institution.

The Frankfurter Zeitung announces that the first women factory inspectors in Germany have been appointed in the cities of Mainz and Offenbach. They are Miss Elise Schumann, of Mainz, and Miss Elise Geist, of Offenbach.

THE commission appointed to select a young lady to christen the battleship Wisconsin, has chosen Miss Elizabeth Stephenson, daughter of former Congressman Isaac Stephenson, of Marinette. It was also decided to use wine.

MISS ELVA HULBURD YOUNG, of Springfield, has recently won the distinction of being the first woman in Western Massachusetts to secure admission to the bar. Miss Young is a Wellesley graduate, and has studied law at Cornell University.

MISS MARGARET A. RICHARDSON was recently sworn as an attorney and admitted to practice at the bar in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. She is the first woman attorney ever admitted in that county, and she was warmly congratulated.

At Home.

THE Rev. Joseph McIntyre, chaplain of the battleship Oregon, has been sentenced by court-martial to dismissal from the service, for publicly criticising his superior officers.

THE German-American Reform Union in New York has indorsed the Democratic state ticket and condemned Colonel Roosevelt for his "tyrannical execution of the excise law while president of the police department of this city."

ELEVEN men were killed and twenty-three wounded at Virden, Ill., October 12. This destruction of life was the result of a battle between striking coal miners and guards on a train bringing negroes from the south to open the mines.

THE annual convention of the Illinois Free Methodist church passed resolutions putting the conference on record as unalterably bound to support the prohibition party, thus placing it in the position of the first church to actively enter politics.

COMMISSIONER-GENERAL PECK announces by cablegram that he has secured twenty-five per cent additional space in several of the departments of the Paris Exposition. Mr. Peck says Paris is enthusiastic over the proposed Lafayette monument.

ONE thousand dinners for Thanksgiving will be sent from Denver for the First Colorado volunteers, now at Manila. The movement was started by the Soldiers' Aid Society of Denver. The dinners are to be inclosed in tin boxes soldered to exclude dampness and mildew. The individual packages will be sorted by companies and sent in huge packing cases.

BY the will of the late W. S. Jordan, of Brookline, Mass., bequests amounting to $19,200 are left to various charitable and missionary organizations. The principal bequests are: American Baptist Missionary Union, $5,000; American board of commissioners for foreign missions, $5,000; missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church, Boston, $2,500.

Contributed.

Words.

BY MARIAN W. HUBBARD.

"Let the words of my mouth . . . be always acceptable in thy sight, O Lord."

LIGHTER than the tiny rose leaf
Stirred in summer air,
Evanescent as the snowflake,
While it seems as fair,
Gone with every flying moment,
Yet, its memory still
Linger in the heart, forever,
With a wondrous thrill.

Just a gentle, loving message,
Just a hopeful word
In the depths of one sad spirit
Has a new ambition stirred.
To be nobler, purer, better,
Rise above the sordid earth,
Have a higher hope of heaven,
Where the soul life has its birth.

Still another word is spoken,
Hasty word of careless scorn,
But it bore such cruel anguish
To a heart that was forlorn.
Echoing still, it travels onward,
Bearing venom in its sting,
Wounding heart and life forever,
Swift as arrow on the wing.

Oh, these words of ours are mighty
To bring comfort or distress,
For each one is born in heaven,
Or in Satan's dark fortress.
Words! they seem of little moment,
Yet just one has saved a soul,
While another, bitter, scathing,
Ruin spread beyond control.

Throw a pebble in the water,
See the circles widening spread,
And remember, words we utter
Will be living when we're dead.
Father! Thou canst make the fountain
Pure from every taint of sin;
Then our thoughts and words will ever
Tell of sweetness born within.

Pitman Grove, N. J.

The Preacher's Conversion.

BY MARY B. TYRRELL.

THE Rev. John Calloway had the courage of his convictions, he was fond of saying, and, because he was a minister of the gospel, the statement was accepted without question. In one who occupied a less exalted office, the convictions would have been called prejudices, and the courage with which he maintained them, placed not at all to his credit.

One of his convictions came to light before he had been in Circleville six weeks. A lady of his congregation, who wore on her motherly bosom a knot of white ribbon, called on the new pastor's bride to ask her to become a member of the W. C. T. U. Little Mrs. Calloway wanted to please everybody (she fancied that was one of the duties of a preacher's wife) so she said, "Certainly, how kind of you," and the good woman went away rejoicing over another recruit won for the temperance army. But when Rev. Mr. Calloway learned of the caller and her purpose he frowned ominously.

"Margaret, my dear, I hope you gave her no encouragement."

"Why, yes, John, I told her I would join the union. Why not?"

"I do not approve. Those women are fanatical in their ideas, often most unwomanly in their methods. They are continually forgetting that a woman's place is in her home. I should be very sorry to see my wife ally herself with them."

That melted the little woman; she had not been "my wife" many weeks, and her ideals as yet were all of submissive obedience. She was wondering how she could escape her promise to her white ribbon friend, when her husband simplified that problem for her. He preached the next Sabbath a sermon on "Woman's Mission," (strangely enough his text was Mark 14: 8) and every white-ribboner who heard him went from church feeling as if she had been through the deluge. No need to ask that preacher's wife to join them, they unanimously agreed. They were few in number, and their indignation at the new pastor's attitude did not affect him in the least.

"Oh, I'm a temperance man," he said good-naturedly, when one of the bravest of the women broached the subject, "but I'm not a woman's temperance man," and there was nothing more to say in the face of his calm content.

But it was not strange that when his wife's sister came some months later to make her home with them, and asked for admission to the W. C. T. U. the good women's curiosity as to how her attitude would affect Brother Calloway, and their sense of the righteous retribution of her behavior, made their welcome especially fervent.

"Dr. Sarah Kenady." The sign was tacked on the front door of the parsonage, and she went in and out before her reverend brother-in-law a living protest against his views on the woman question.

So the contest began. Before the calm, strong young woman, sure of the justice and nobility of her cause, all the preacher's platitudes about feminine fanaticism seemed out of place, and as he watched her influence reaching out to those who stood in need of help in soul or body, he admitted to himself, never publicly, that woman might find a field for usefulness outside her home circle.

On one point he took issue and she felt bound to justify herself. The other physicians of the city were old practitioners, and without exception classed Dr. Kenady as a "young crank" because of her attitude toward alcoholic medication. She argued the point with them and convinced them of her earnestness, if not of the justice of her position, and when they met her in consultation they would defer to her opinion courteously, or if they felt they must urge the use of alcoholics would differ politely. Not so her brother-in-law. She had often felt that when he was deficient in knowledge he exceeded in zeal, and in this she was sure of it.

A little child lay in the valley of the shadow of death, and on Dr. Kenady the burden of anxiety rested. The consultants doubted the wisdom of her strict interpretation of temperance principles, but they told her so and withdrew. She could bear their criticisms; but Mr. Calloway looked doubtful as she stated the case to him in answer to his questions, and then her torture began. Jovially he would inquire after her "temperance baby" in season and out of season, till she felt sometimes that patience and courage must give way.

"John," she said, bitterly, at last, "I hope you will have an experience over this question some day that will convert you." He laughed, and nothing jarred on her overwrought nerves as did that laugh.

Through God's mercy the child recovered. Had he died, the doctor's faith in herself and her cause might have failed utterly. The parents, who had cheerfully submitted to her treatment of their darling, gave thanks with her, and she was strengthened to contend for what she knew was right.

Next the parsonage stood a pretty cottage, where lived Mr. Calloway's right hand man, his best helper in all church work. Robert Carter had come from a northern state to find health for his invalid wife, and had made himself most useful in the few months he had been in Circleville. Superintendent of the Sunday-school, a valued helper in every good work, trusted in all business relations, he was universally honored and beloved, and his tenderness to his wife and little daughter brought the tears sometimes to Dr. Kenady's eyes, for she knew how frail a thread held the idolized wife to earth.

One morning the little girl came running to the parsonage. "Mamma is worse," she sobbed, "and papa has gone to town." Dr. Kenady was not in, but the minister and his wife rushed across the lawn to find the poor woman almost pulseless. The preacher knew one thing he could do, and never doubted the wisdom of doing it. He hurried home, drew from its hiding place a bottle of "fine old brandy," in whose virtue he had all confidence, and very soon had set all his sister-in-law's theories at defiance.

When Dr. Kenady came, half an hour later, there was much to engross her attention and, though she was sure some kindly neighbor had blundered, she did not stop to reprove or investigate. She set the brandy bottle one side and went on with her work. All day the vital power ebbed lower and lower, and it was not until twilight that she could detect any hopeful symptoms in her patient.

Mr. Carter had left the room an hour before, and now she went to find him and share with him the good news. He was lying asleep on a couch in the parlor, breathing heavily, and the brandy fumes in the room told her the story of his downfall.

One moment she stood—stunned, then she ran across the lawn.

"John," she said, "come quickly." And he followed her in fear. At the door of his friend's parlor she stopped him.

"Mr. Carter is drunk, John, but for his sake, for his friends', we must shield him. His wife must never know. We must get him off upstairs."

The minister went in. At sight of the empty bottle on the floor, he started back with a groan.

"I did that! I did it! The Lord forgive me!" For he knew that it was his hand that had placed this poison before his dearest friend.

Next morning, sober, remorseful, Robert Carter told his pastor the story of his life. It was not a strange story, but, for the first time, John Calloway saw a soul in torment, and he never forgot that day.

An appetite inherited, indulged in early manhood, subdued by a severe struggle after his conversion, came upon Robert Carter again that day in his wife's sick room, and as he found the means of indulgence before him, he overstepped all restraints. The battle was on now. Again and again he tried to break away and rush out on the street to ruin, and the pastor, accepting his share of the blame (though his fault was known only to himself), reasoned and prayed with his tempted parishioner.

There were days of anxiety in the little cottage not only for the woman, coming back so slowly to her former strength, but for the man, threatened with moral death. He conquered at last; underneath were the Everlasting Arms, and he could not fall away, but the lesson Dr. Kenady wished came to her brother in those trying times. He has been a "fanatic" ever since, a friend and helper in all temperance work, even woman's work; and the W. C. T. U. of Circleville call the young pastor, who wears the white ribbon now, as does his wife, "our own preacher."

Parsons, Kas.

Methods Must Change.

BY CHAS. E. BENTLEY.

THE necessity of a change in methods is a frequent cause of discouragement in reform work. A vital principle of righteousness planted in human heart and purpose has a natural tendency in its outworkings to separate itself from the worldly ways of the multitude. Sacredly enshrining the soul-germ of a high and noble reform, we are apt to despise the common agencies and practical methods by which we must win. Just as Daniel Boone plunged anew into the untrodden wilderness to avoid the civilization of an approaching settlement, so do reformers cling to the old ways of pioneer effort, rather than accept at once the new and providential methods by which the final victory must come.

The country needed the primary lesson given by Old John Brown at Harper's Ferry; it needed the example of his fearless and stalwart faith in God, but it would have been wicked folly to have prosecuted his plan for the overthrow of slavery. The woman's crusade was a necessity in beginning. It was the planted twig of a mighty tree. To change the mighty organization of to-day into narrow crusade lines would be the attempt to thrust the chicken back into the shell. Twenty-five years of organized effort in prohibitory reform has brought the golden wisdom of experience. Take our party platform utterances along these years and note how much we had to learn by the logic of events. Our first thought was, that a prohibition party would compel one of the old parties, through fear of defeat, to grant our demands for the outlawing of the saloon.

So guileless and serene our faith in this matter, that we frequently picked out the "good temperance" nominees on the license party ticket and gave them hearty indorsement as our own candidates. Our special grievance was the drink traffic. Destroy that, and, like the prodigal son, we would all return to the calf feast in the dear old parties.

Heroic effort was made to tax the saloon to death under a high license law. Senator Douglas' plan of "squatter sovereignty" was applied under the law of local option, to vote the saloon up or down, just as they pleased. With the federal government protecting the traffic, the ruling party a license one, judge, court and jury of the same opinion, the bribe of drink money to support the schools, "local option" found its counterpart proposition of the white man to the Indian—"You may have the owl and I will have the turkey, or I will have the turkey and you may have the owl." In the meantime, we were conducting amendment campaigns in the states. When at infinite pains and great expense we succeeded in securing statutory or constitutional prohibition, we found that the law would be practically nullified because administered by a party whose preferred stock was held by the brewers and distillers.

But we were adding to our store of political wisdom. Our career as a mugwump party of discipline must cease. This much we had learned, first, that the drink traffic was a mighty combination and its ramifications of power could be traced in every department of law and government; second, that the old parties could not and would not champion prohibition, because they could hold their temperance vote under the non-partisan policy of license and would surely lose the strength of the traffic by espousing prohibition beyond its expedient policy, as in Iowa; third, that the voting church in its large majority would never yield its vote to any moral reform until the party so contending had reached the political vantage ground of power and popularity.

And here I will say that the church has missed the opportunity of a century. Though every method we have employed in the past be set aside and classed as unavailable in future effort, the voting church, from bishop to usher, must stand condemned. In the era of unpopular agitation and personal sacrifice, which must antedate every successful reform, these men wearing the Christian's armor refused to enter the conflict or carry in helpfulness aught of its heavy burdens. Their prayers for "God's thunderbolts to smite in death the saloon" could in divine teaching be only as "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Would not the lightning stroke of His judgment have fallen upon the church rather than the brewery?

The present campaign in Pennsylvania may be named as illustrating the advantage of changing methods. Dr. Swallow is accepted as the nominee for governor by all of the reform parties, and for this reason his candidacy is a distinct recognition of the fact, demonstrated by experience, that the saloon can not be isolated in political treatment, apart from its inseparable allies in corrupt government.

His platform of four words, "Thou shalt not steal," is a very broad one. It transcends local issues, for stealing is defined as a crime under all civilized law. Fairly interpreted in American politics it means no stealing by public officials; no stealing by a process of class legislation that appears in protecting the drink traffic, in sex suffrage, in a corrupt tariff law, in a gold standard currency, in the private ownership of natural monopolies, in land syndicates, in corporate control of transportation, the consequent oppression of labor and the increasing struggle for bread and maintenance in every department of honest toil.

A union of reform forces still more distinctive, in Ohio, under the common banner of "Direct Legislation," strengthens our faith in the new and better methods of reform work, which may now consolidate the scattered forces of righteousness into one triumphant army. I have never believed that prohibition in honest enforcement could stand in state or nation until there was added thereto the womanhood conscience of this country under the seal of a full franchise. We may go further and say in all sincerity, as Frances E. Willard said, that our representative government, which is becoming the most colossal of failures, must be replaced by the skillful methods of a real republic where the people originate or confirm their own laws by a popular vote. And in her vocabulary "the people" would include all—both men and women.

Having learned by experience that the rum traffic is an effect more than a cause, in a vitiated and corrupt system of government, and though a huge tentacle, it is but one in the octopus of a wide spreading monopoly, reformers will wisely address themselves to the new methods that must be employed for its overthrow. To base further party effort on the line of temperance agitation and a simple voting protest against the saloon, will be supreme political folly. Henceforth the battle must be joined to all its confederated hosts. A great moral and social upheaval is at hand. Organized labor is mobilizing its forces. Old party lines are rapidly fading and new and stronger ones are being formed under the compulsion of an imperative necessity. There is a determined purpose animating the heart of the great masses, that for themselves and their posterity the guaranteed rights of a free democracy shall be no longer withheld.

On the rising tide of this marvelous opportunity we must thrust our political craft. If our national sovereignty is to be carried into world-wide latitudes, let us give into the outstretched hands of a new citizenship the gifts of a regenerated and disenthralled republic.

Lincoln, Neb.

Summary of the Summer's Reform News.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS, PH.D.

Superintendent of the National Reform Bureau.

EDUCATION.

THE following declaration was made by the Presbyterian General Assembly, after refusing to take any direct action on the Princeton Inn bar:

"The assembly calls upon all parents and teachers to exercise increased diligence and watchfulness over themselves, and those committed to their care in respect to intemperance, in order that our homes and schools may be purged of the evil of intemperance, and the drink traffic be driven from our land, and this without reflection upon any collegiate institution."

MUNICIPAL REFORM.

Since the union of Brooklyn and New York city, the Tammany controller has unearthed gross frauds in the last republican administration of the city works department of Brooklyn, which leads the correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger, to remark: "The scandal shows what the independents have long claimed, namely, that it makes little difference which political machine controls the city government."

Police Director Norton, of Cleveland, under oath to enforce all laws, recently said of the new law procured by clerks for closing stores on Sunday, "Ninety-nine people out of a hundred will not tolerate such laws." Thus do most of our city officers constitute themselves a court of repeals.

IMMIGRATION.

When Congress adjourned for the summer the very moderate Lodge immigration bill, excluding illiterates from sixteen to sixty, except members of families already in part here, which had passed the Senate, was pending in the House, congressmen being unwilling to vote on it before their own re-election. If sufficiently urged by petitions and letters this winter it will probably pass.

SABBATH DEFENSE.

The Omaha Exposition, into which numerous religious bodies merged their annual conventions of this year unconditionally, after getting such support, decided to break the Sabbath and sell rum, and the Christians who might have prevented it by properly conditioning their participation and the state appropriation, have made a belated fight against these un-American features of the fair.

Sunday ball games, as the sporting pages of Monday newspapers show, have been more common this year than ever before, all the League clubs having gone into it contrary to the original rule, except the clubs of Pittsburg and Boston. As a result the game is dying of rowdyism. Ministers, either singly or by committees from their associations, have attempted to stop this law-defying practice in a few places, including Milwaukee, Cleveland, Dayton and Canton. Juries and even judges have often been hostile, and Christian laymen, even Christian women, have been not infrequently outspoken on the side of lawlessness, echoing shallow newspaper sophistries.

Sunday excursions have also increased, every military camp being utilized by railroad and trolley companies for this purpose. Sunday camp meetings have also coöperated with Sunday trains in many cases.

The Retail Clerks' National Protective Association has undertaken to enforce the recent act passed by the general assembly against the opening of places of business on Sunday. The Master Barbers' Association of New York state, in August protested against any weakening of the state law which forbids Sunday barbering except in New York and Saratoga.

Public discussions of the contrasts between the United States on the one hand, and Spain and Cuba on the other, have made too little account of the American Sabbath as a civilizing force which Cuba and the Philippines must have in order to develop the manhood necessary to self-government.

LABOR.

Inheritances taxes have at last been introduced in this country as part of the war revenue bill, applying in gradations to bequests above $10,000.

Mr. Rockefeller has been fighting to reduce his taxes, but Mr. John Jacob Astor, after actual war service, has asked to have his taxes increased.

Another decision against reduced street car fares, this time from Judge Seabury, of the United States Court, nullifies an ordinance of Milwaukee city council for four cent fares, that is, twenty-five tickets for one dollar.

The United States Bureau of Labor has published an abstract of its annual report, which is on the economic aspects of the liquor problem of 7,025 business men interrogated as to whether they made a distinction between tipplers and abstainers in employing help; more than half of those replying said that they did, and 1,284 said they would not employ a man who drank either on or off duty.

The Socialists of Germany, as their vote increases, are disposed to advocate evolutionary rather than revolutionary progress.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

The Indiana Bureau of Statistics has published a report showing that in 1897 there was one divorce to every eight marriages in that state, which is probably not much below the average for the whole country.

NATIONAL REFORMS.

Delaware has abolished the Australian ballot, the first instance of such action. In some states the present law is proving unfavorable to independent action and also to fusion.

Civil service reform, repudiated by the last New York legislature, in which republicans were in control; condemned in the Ohio republican platform, over which its chief opponent, General Grosvenor, presided; defeated in the United States Senate in a recent vote on census employés, will be in yet greater peril, the Postal Record thinks, when Congress reassembles in December, when "many of the soldiers will doubtless want civic positions, and a strong effort will be made to lower the civil service gates to let them in." Civil service ought rather to be strengthened, for, as the New York Times showed on August 8, it was the spoils system in colonial appointments that spoiled the Spaniards at Manila and Santiago. A nearer warning is afforded by the blunders of our war department, whose appointments went by political favor largely, as contrasted with the efficiency of the navy department, where civil service principles prevailed. It is announced that postmasters will be allowed in this administration to take an active part in political campaigns. Another reason why the civil service law should be strengthened is that the United States Supreme Court, on June 31, declined to interfere with executive removals, so intimating that the executive civil service orders of Presidents and cabinet officers have no force against removals made by like authority. Our new foreign possessions also afford arguments for civil service reform in the diplomatic service.

International peace movements, seemingly set back by our recent war, have made a sudden stride to the front of international discussion by the recent formal proposal of the Czar of Russia that the leading nations should hold a conference on disarmament. The deposition of the Chinese Emperor in the interest of Russia as against England has beclouded the peace proposal. The discomfort of our mismanaged camps and the demoralization by drink and otherwise of many of our soldiers has also dampened the undue military ardor which the war had aroused.

The new federal constitution of the united Australian colonies contains an official recognition of God as the ruler of nations.

Except the Czar's proposition for disarmament, the most important foreign news of the summer is the adoption of majority rule in Japan. Hereafter the Mikado's cabinet is to represent the majority in the lower house of Parliament.

AMUSEMENTS WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO PURITY.

A kinetoscope reproduction of a Spanish bull fight, as large as life, was exhibited in Washington, D. C., at the very time we were fighting the nation that has been brutalized by such sports. On August 25, in Brooklyn, Alexander Scott was murdered in strict accordance with the New York state law licensing prize fighting. The surgeon of the "Athletic Club" that gave the brutal sport, had examined him before the fight as by law provided. At the same time a Corbett fight was pending in Buffalo, which Governor Black was in vain asked to stop. The preachers and a part of the press of Buffalo made a strong protest against the fight and it was finally prevented.

The Baal groves, maintained by trolley companies in the suburbs of most of our cities, have this year been nastier than ever, especially on the "Lord's Day." The "big four" vices, drink, lust, gambling and Sabbath breaking, hold high carnival in these resorts.

Usually Police Gazettes and kindred literature are excluded from railway trains and depots, but we found them recently in Rhode Island depots of the New York and New Haven railroad, whose passenger agent the writer informed and they were at once removed.

GAMBLING.

Gambling slot machines are growing more and more common, with almost no opposition from the "scatterated churches," which need a union reform committee that shall, at least, ask the authorities to act in such cases, and create public sentiment to that end.

The autumn fairs this year have been more filled with gambling devices and other vices than ever before.

Race-goers say that respectable women have been unusually numerous this year at race tracks, and very active in the betting, and good patrons of the champagne.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

The triumphant campaign of Gen. Kitchener up the Nile with a total abstinence army that suffered little from disease in the tropics, and nothing from mismanagement, is a wholesome contrast to our "canteen"-poisoned, sickly army. The writer has personally visited a "canteen" and seen its demoralization, seen also that it does not keep the soldiers from "worse places" but only whets their appetites for whisky and gambling and harlotry.

Through unfaithfulness of judges in the Indian Territory intoxicating "Rochester Tonic" is being sold there in great quantities.

There is a proposition pending in the House of Representatives Committee on Territories to repeal prohibition in Alaska.

Instead of that, let us take up the suggestion of the Wisconsin prohibitionists that we extend prohibition to our new colonies.

CHARITY.

In Cincinnati—perhaps elsewhere also—summer outings for poor children have been restricted this year by the large demands for charitable aid to soldiers and their families.

Willard Hall Echoes.

A FRIEND going into Miss Willard's room one day, when she was a girl, saw on a large card opposite the door the word "Think." She asked her what it meant. "Well," was the reply, "I heard Bishop Foster preach the other day and he said if we would think upon life and death and eternity every night we would live better lives, and I thought I would try it, so I put up that word 'Think.'" Who can say that such heaven-born aspirations in the young soul were not welcome in the sight of God? Almighty and powerful as is our God, He has told of His care for even the sparrow, and the past proves that He listened to this prayer of His child. The present everyday testimony in Willard Hall proves that His ear is always open to the cry of His children. As one said, "We do not praise Him enough. Praise Him, praise Him!"

. . . . . .

Two young men beginning business together, and both being prone to take a social glass, came to sign the pledge. They each signed a card and then exchanged them. On being urged to give their hearts to God one of them said, "I don't believe much in prayer, but it won't hurt for you to pray for us. I do believe the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is powerful for good." The other had a praying white-ribboner for a mother and his eyes were full of tears. They said, "Drinking is wasteful, it is a dirty habit, and it robs a man of brain power. We could not do business if we both drank." Oh, sisters, pray for them that they may give themselves into God's keeping power!

. . . . . .

The dear woman with her long-lost daughter, came to shake hands and introduce her treasure. May this be a lesson never to be forgotten to both of them.

. . . . . .

A dear brother whose wife is addicted to drink came asking advice and help. He had tried everything, exhausted all resources, and desperate asked for some new plan. God is all-powerful and willing; urge the distressed to call upon Him, the great Physician.

. . . . . .

A woman, through a friend, asked that we pray that she might find work. She had been without for three months. The next day she hastened to her friend's house early in the morning and said, "Hurry down to Willard Hall and tell them their prayer is answered, for I have found steady work. Oh, thank God for His speedy answer!"

. . . . . .

Prayer was asked that God might send two hundred dollars to help carry on a mission which, opened in the lowest slums, is a light for the lost. Pray for these earnest workers; they need upholding and encouragement. One says, "Willard Hall is a place of refuge for those coming to get rest."

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

A Joyful Home Coming.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The many friends of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt will rejoice with her that her son, Capt. Alfred E. Hunt, commander of Battery B of the Pennsylvania Volunteers, has returned in safety from Porto Rico, his post in the war with Spain. The city of Pittsburg, the home of this battery, went almost wild with joy in welcoming the return of their pet military organization without the loss of a man.

Composed of young men from the best families of one of the largest industrial centers in this country, the hardships and perils these young men heroically endured in that struggle for liberty for another race is evidence that prosperity in our country has not brought decline in the elements of character that go to make heroic defenders of human freedom.

When they enlisted last April, these young soldiers went from homes of comfort and luxury to camp on the snow-covered top of one of the Alleghany Mountains. From that cold, wet exposure they were sent to the notoriously unhygienic conditions of the semi-tropical Chickamauga camp, and after weeks of endurance there, were taken to Porto Rico on the overcrowded, stuffy cattleship, Roumania, to camp in malarial cane-swamps, and at last to face the enemy with guns all loaded, only waiting the command to fire, when a breathless rider shouted, "The war is over! the protocol is signed!"

Hungry and with nothing to eat that day, they had to comfort themselves with the thought that Battery B had the distinction of having loaded the last gun on the Western Hemisphere in the Spanish-American war.

Then came the time of waiting for transportation, and another unspeakable voyage, home. But they all came; not one of their number was left behind to fill a soldier's grave on that foreign shore. There had been sickness among their number—that was inevitable from their surroundings—but this battery, a Pittsburg paper said, had "no canteen because the captain would not allow it and there were not men enough in the organization who drank to support one." Its members were intelligent enough to understand and obey, as best they could under the conditions in which they were placed, other laws of health. Unpoisoned with alcohol, they could resist or throw off other poisons which they could not avoid, and therefore with the blessing of Providence, were able to get well enough to come home.

The soldiers in home camps in the North, who took typhoid fever from the cool well near the vault of the farmhouse where members of the family had been sick with the same disease, point with ghastly significance to one lesson of this war which is emphasized by the condition of our southern camps, viz., the great need of more universal knowledge of all hygienic laws among all our people.

Now let us vigorously enforce the laws that require the study of hygiene by all pupils in all our public schools, and the twentieth century American will show the world that he can if he must, not only hit the mark every time with bullet or shell, but can as well take such care of his own body as will rout and defeat the soldier's worst enemy since the beginning of time, the diseases of the camp, the march and the field.

A WHITE-RIBBONER.

A Farewell Letter from Mrs. Barney.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It has seemed God's plan for me to return to England for another visit, and as I must go immediately I shall miss our National Convention, much to my regret. In thinking of it I am reminded of two other gatherings, one past and one to come. In St. Mark 6: 30, we read, "The apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done and what they had taught."

May the coming together of my dear white-ribbon sisters in native land be "unto Him," to tell Him all, and may their rest from ordinary duties be in His company and beneath His smile. Then the world looking on "will take knowledge that they have been with Jesus."

The other gathering will be in the future. It may be near or far off. No paper can advertise its date. Workers from every land will be there. There will be such wonderful joy of reunion; comrade meeting comrade,

"Some from earth, from glory some,
Severed only 'till He come."

There will be reports of work, but the workers will not need to tell of their own deeds, for "every one's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it." The work will be tested, "for the fire shall try every one's work of what sort it is." There will be rewards for those whose "work shall abide," and grand revelations and surprises for us all, I doubt not. Surely "we shall know each other better when the mists have rolled away."

I can not help the feeling that the veil separating our promoted leader from that platform will be very thin. The chair may look empty, but she will be near. The love of Christ, and the love of one for another will be a congenial atmosphere for her loving spirit, and your sense of loss may thus be changed to the joy of possession, as you realize our oneness in Christ Jesus.

"One army of the living God,
To His command we bow;
Part of His host have crossed the flood,
And part are crossing now."

"The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all."

(MRS.) J. K. BARNEY.
Providence, R. I., Oct. 5, 1898.

The Chief Cause of Poverty.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Inclosed please find an article written by a near neighbor of mine who is in missionary work and who is more surely in Hell's Kitchen than we are here. She is having a good deal of success and is doing good work. I think she strikes the nail squarely on the head.

Yours cordially,
J. FOWLER WILLING.
463 W. 32d St., New York City.

DEAR EDITORS:—When I came to "Hell's Kitchen," nearly two years ago, I wondered why the people were so very poor, why the children were ragged and half starved looking, why the women were half clad and careworn. But one day a woman tried to be neighborly and sent me some apples in a six quart tin pail. In an hour the child returned and said they must have the "kittle" to get beer for dinner.

I said, "Mary, how often do you get beer?"

She laughingly replied, "About four times a day. Pap always has it before breakfast, for he can't keep nothin' on his stomach until he has a pint, anyway. And he has it with every meal and before he goes to bed."

While I was reckoning up the amount spent for beer at thirty-five cents a day, I asked, "How much does your father get for a day's work?"

"Why, he gits $1.50 a day, he does."

And I fell to calculating again. Two dollars a week for rent, and five children to feed and clothe on a "balance" (after the beer and rent were deducted) of about seventy-five cents a day. And then I looked at little Mary's bare feet and legs, and her soiled, ragged dress, and I felt a sense of relief that I did not need to see her underwear.

Next day, and many days since, I have slipped into "Sunshine Mission" window at meal time to watch the men, women and children fairly running in their haste to get their "kittle" filled for the meal. And I found it impossible to wiggle my head fast enough to count the number of "kittles" that went into the six saloons which I could see from my window. I believe two hundred kettles go in those six saloons at every meal time. Very many women drink daily, and I have seen them smash as much crockery as their husbands could on their best holiday drunk. And the children are taught to drink from infancy.

With all this beer in their system, both old and young grow coarse and ill-tempered, with their brains fired for some exciting scene, like the deathly riots of the past two weeks. Why, the finest Fourth of July ever celebrated was nothing compared to this to them happy time; men, barefooted and bareheaded, fairly dancing in their ecstatic glee. Some had a brick or stone in each hand. Others with razors, knives or firearms. And all seemed to say, "This is my kind of sport."

Next morning, after the riot had quieted, and while the police were protecting us from a further outbreak, I sat down in "Sunshine" window again and saw the saloonkeeper sitting outside his door with a good suit of clothes on, well laundried, well shaven, and in good condition. His wife appeared with a pretty morning dress on, and his children had nice brown shoes, and looked well and happy. And I said to myself, how can we teach these people to do without beer and to clothe their own children? I am sure this is the most serious question in New York to-day. If we could do this there would be very little suffering, very few families would need assistance, the naked would be clothed, the hungry fed. There would be no riots on our streets and very little crime or theft. And soon Jesus would come with a "well done."

How can this be accomplished? By education, by persuasion, and by replacing the "beer kettle" with something that will be a benefit to them, something that will help to feed their bodies and bring their souls in closer harmony to the will of God.

When my boy was a little tot he would play with a cat that scratched him every time he came in contact with it; but he thought he couldn't do without it. Well, I just found a pretty white kitten that looked for all the world like the vicious old ratter, and he soon learned to love the gentle, playful thing so well that every time the old one came to him, he simply shouted, "Scat!"

I do wonder if we could do such generous, loving things to these blind minds that they might throw out the beer "kittle" some day, and shout "Scat!"

FRANCES T. GADDIS.
Sunshine Mission, 484 11th Ave., New York.

Temperance Entertainment for Travelers.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—I firmly believe that the W. C. T. U. can find a great field for fruit-bearing labor in the hotel or entertainment question as applied to the general traveling public. To be more explicit, I am convinced that it is the duty of some Christian Temperance organization to establish a Christian Temperance Inn in every city and town in the United States for the entertainment of an existing class of travelers who would, but too often cannot, shun the ordinary hotel of to-day.

No organization is better prepared to establish such an order of things than the W. C. T. U., and I wish to offer what I deem a simple and effective solution of the problem.

My first and greatest reason for desiring these is that if such inns were established they would soon bring about the separation of hotel and saloon, and drive the latter, which is too often cloaked as a hotel, to place over its doors its proper inscription. I think I use the word drive advisedly, because I believe that a large percentage of so-called hotels could not, and therefore would not continue their tables, and the necessary expense consequent thereon, if they were deprived of the support which a certain class are compelled to contribute, for want of cleaner places. I speak from experience in this matter, and I am persuaded that a goodly per cent of the traveling public would very quickly learn to appreciate home-like hotels with home-like cooking, instead of the average hotel where the fumes of tobacco and whisky constantly flavor air, edibles and water.

In connection with this reason, I need not relate at length the many reasons why influences for good can not be found in the average hotel of to-day, for it will suffice if I state that one of the common experiences of the hotel guest who abstains from the use of narcotics is that not too seldom some presuming essence of stink in human form edges up and thereby insists on the guest's inhaling, to his health I suppose, the second-handed fermentation of ancient rye, or that which is equally offensive, the concentrated essence of poison sweetly distilled by calmly chawin' or soothingly suckin' through old clay that weed which only big green worms and big (?) men will eat.

Then again the gambling table, one of the present hotel attachments, would be no longer present were Christian Temperance inns found, and this fact is worthy of much consideration.

Lastly, the influences which would surround the domestics in Christian Temperance inns as compared with those in which they now live in the average hotel would be of infinite value. I will not enlarge upon this thought for my pen can not do it justice.

Now as to the solution of the problem suggested. While it would not be possible to establish temperance hotels in the strict sense of the term "hotel," as patronage would not justify investments to that degree, I am sure that negotiations by the local W. C. T. U. with home owners in all cities and towns, to the end that those who prefer to shun the hotel-saloon-gambling-hotel style of entertainment, might find a better place, would be successful. To be sure, many such homes are already dedicated to this better class of travelers, but this only proves the easier solution of the question. That which would insure the success of such a movement would be the publishing of a pocket directory as a guide to such places of refuge, and the revenue for such a publication is within itself.

In closing let me add that homes so dedicated under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. would receive every courtesy of the law of protection as applied to hotels, and the consummation of the idea would surely result in much good. Much more in support of this proposition might be written, but I have intended this letter to savor of suggestion only.

F. B. DAVISON.
Big Rapids, Mich

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

We have no might against this great company that cometh against us, neither know we what to do, but our eyes are upon thee. Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed . . . There be more with us than with him.—II Chron. 20:12; II Chron. 32:7.

IT is with a sad heart that I report the failure of Illinois, Ohio and New York state conventions to pass resolutions sustaining the Temple trustees in their effort to pay off the $300,000 Temple Trust Bonds. The resolution was lost in each state by a small majority. In fact, it never was brought to an issue in Illinois. As this was the only state convention I attended, I can speak of it from personal knowledge. I know fully three-quarters of the Illinois delegates were in favor of standing by the Temple, but their desires were thwarted by a strict observance of technicalities in parliamentary ruling which they had but slight knowledge of. Others were intimidated from expressing their views, fearing it might be construed into disloyalty to the powers that now rule. For instance, the president of a district who sat at the head of a large delegation sent me the following note a short time before the discussion on the Temple resolution took place: "The —— district is united for the Temple." Yet when the discussion came up not a peep was heard from this district nor its able president. No doubt what is true of the Illinois convention is true of all the other state conventions.

✠

Here and now I proclaim my unalterable determination to stand by the Temple. The Temple Trust Bonds are a moral obligation resting on the W. C. T. U., and must be paid. Moral obligations have no limit as to time, and God helping me I will work while life and strength last to this end. If my sisters in the W. C. T. U. can not see the matter in the same light I do, and will not help—then I must go on alone. As Miss Willard said in her ever memorable speech on the Temple at Buffalo: "We are in debt not legally, but morally, to the bondholders. I shall never rest what time I live till that debt is paid. I speak for one person. I have territory and rights in that person, I do not doubt but what you say the same; I am speaking for one." What she has said I heartily subscribe to, as her words fully express my own sentiments, and the action I intend taking as an individual. I also say with her, "Anybody who wants to follow, follow; anybody who must falter, falter."

✠

Among the unions that have given generous aid to the Temple is the W. C. T. U. of New London, Conn. They have contributed $300 and are now at work raising their fourth hundred. Another brave union is that of Winfield, Kan. It has sent a check for $25 which was secured by sending out fifty subscription cards to friends, and they are at work filling more cards. I notice by to-day's paper that the great city of Chicago is sending out over 100,000 subscription cards to help pay for the expense of the Peace Jubilee which takes place here next week. Surely a plan so good which does not take a cent from the union or its members, should be followed up by all W. C. T. U's holding the cards. The Milford, N. J., W. C. T. U. has disbanded, and from the sale of its organ and furniture, realized $41.54 which they have sent to the Temple. Their gifts to the Temple must not be charged as the cause of their disbanding, as their only gift to the "House Beautiful" was $10 several years ago. The following letter, without name of writer, has been received: "Please accept the inclosed gift ($25) for the Temple fund, in memory of Miss Willard whose consecrated life has been an inspiration to the donor."

✠

All money from Wheels, subscription cards, tablets, pledges from unions, etc., should be sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, and drafts should be made out in the name of Mr. G. B. Shaw, treasurer Temple Trustees. All orders for supplies for the above should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Room 1118, The Temple, Chicago. Also orders for Miss Willard's picture or application for agencies for its sale should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

Our Children.

Her Awful Dream.

A LITTLE maid of tender years
Had such an awful dream!
She came to me almost in tears.
"I just was going to scream,

"When both my eyes come open wide,
And, oh, I was so glad
To find it was a dream," she cried,
"Because it was so bad!"

"What could it be, poor child?" I said,
"Were you pursued by bears?
Perhaps your dolly broke her head,
Or did you fall downstairs?"

"Oh, dear! It's most too bad to tell!
You know in school our class
Are havin' 'zamination. Well,
I dreamt I didn't pass!"

—Our Little Folks Magazine.

What Squared Tom's Account.

TOM sat by the library table working over his arithmetic lesson. He was trying to find out how much seven yards of calico would cost if one yard cost eleven cents, and his paper was covered with figures. Finally he took a new piece and began again:

To 7 yds. calico at 11 cts..... $ .77

And as he finished the last seven his father looked over his shoulder.

"Bills, Tom?" he asked. "That's right. I only hope you will never get as many as I have." And he dropped into the armchair by the fire, tired with the day's work and glad to be at home again.

Tom came over and leaned against his father's knee for the few minutes' talk before dinner that they always had together.

"Papa," he asked, "when a man does any work, oughtn't he to be paid for it?"

"Certainly," was papa's reply, "if he asks a fair price."

Then they began to talk of something else, and papa forgot the question and his own reply long before dinner was ready.

The next day was Saturday, but Tom stayed in the house, working busily at his arithmetic. Mamma told Kate that she was afraid Tom was not well, and she really looked relieved to see him flying down the hill in the afternoon. Wonder of wonders! he was not late to dinner, but came in early, and slipped into the dining-room before any one else had come down. He looked a little conscious when a note dropped out of each napkin, and waited impatiently to see them unfolded. Kate opened hers first and glanced through it, breaking out into merry laughter. Tom looked cross. Kate always laughed at him. He wished he was sixteen and she was twelve, he would laugh at her all the time.

"Why, Tom," she was saying, "what perfect nonsense! Mother, did you ever see anything like this? Tom has sent me a bill for helping me yesterday!"

In the meantime papa and mamma had opened their notes, and had discovered that they, too, had received bills from Tom. Papa's ran this way:

MR. E. W. ELLIS,
In account with TOM ELLIS.

To 2 runnings up stares at 1 ct.....	$ .02
" 3 bringings of papers at 2 cts.....	.06
" 1 finding slipers at 5 cts.....	.05
Sum total.....	$ .13

Received payment,

Mamma's was a little different, but these were the items:

To 1 going to tell Bridget something at 2 cts...	$ .02
" 3 hurryings up when I didn't want to at 5 cts.	.15
" 2 errands at Jones' store at 10 cents.....	.20
Total.....	$ .37

Kate had the worst of all. This is the way hers read:

To 4 going to Mollie Brown's at 5 cts.....	$ .20
" 1 taking note to Profesor at 10 cts.....	.10
" 1 holding wosted (cause I hate it) at 25 cts.	.25
" 2 taking books to Liberry at 4 cts.....	.08
Total.....	$ .63

Papa put his down without saying anything, and mamma looked at Tom with a queer little smile, remarking, "Well, Tom, it seems that the family owes you more than a dollar."

"Yes, ma'am," said Tom, cheerfully; "and papa said if a man asked a fair price for his work he ought to get it. And if you could pay up to-night, I could get that dandy big jack-knife on Monday—the one like Ned's, you know."

The family didn't say whether it intended to "pay up" at once or not, and Tom felt a little doubtful, when he found papa and mamma talking in the study together afterward, just how his plan would succeed.

However, at breakfast, he found beside his plate a dollar bill, a ten cent piece and three pennies, and the three bills waiting to be receipted. He signed "Tom Ellis" in big letters to each one, and pocketed his money thinking of the big knife that he was going to have.

The first thing he did when he came home from school in the afternoon was to run to mamma and show her the four blades—two big ones and two little ones—and she was almost as much pleased as he. At dinner time he was quite surprised to find in his napkin, this time, three little notes just like the ones he had sent to papa and mamma and Kate the night before. He didn't open them until after dinner, because the little doubtful feeling had come back, and he thought he would rather be by himself. When, finally, he did look at them, this is what he found:

TOM ELLIS.
In account with MR. E. W. ELLIS.

To 1 pair skates mended.....	$ .15
" 2 pencils sharpened.....	.02
" 1 St. Nicholas bought.....	.25
	$ .42

The second one was mamma's:—

To 1 pair of trousers mended.....	$ .25
" 10 buttons sewed on.....	.10
" 1 pair mittens mended.....	.10
" 1 geography covered.....	.10
" help with lessons.....	.20
	$ .75

The third was Kate's. "She's forgot some things," Tom murmured to himself as he read it over.

To 1 skate bag made.....	$ .15
" 1 splinter taken from hand.....	.05
" 3 buttons sewed on shoes.....	.03
" finding cap and mittens.....	.10
" picking up school books.....	.10
	$ .43

"She didn't say anything about making candy for the fellows yesterday, or coming to school with my slate when I forgot it, or showing me how to do that ninth example."

Very quietly Tom sat for a little while, and as he sat there he thought it all over; he remembered ever so many things that papa and mamma hadn't put in their bills. Then he took his slate and pencil to count up all he owed.

It was not very hard to do, and soon the answer—$1.60—stared in his face. Slowly he got up from his chair, slowly went over to the closet, and brought out his red bank in which he kept the money he was saving for his share in the big "bob" that the boys were having made. There wasn't any way out of it. If papa and mamma and Kate asked a fair price for what they had done for him, he surely ought to pay their bills as they had paid his.

He wouldn't have cried for the world, but his throat felt very lumpy when the bank was opened, and all the precious dimes and nickels and pennies were in his hand—two dollars and three cents.

Then he took his slate again and did an example in subtraction—$1.60 from $2.03 leaves $0.43. Back in the bank went forty-three cents, and then, dividing the rest according to the bills, he took the money and went up stairs and paid his debts. Kate was going to say, "Keep it, Tom, dear; I don't want your money," but a look at mamma's face warned her. She receipted her bill, mamma and papa signed theirs, and Tom, with a very sober face, kissed the family all good-night.

But the little mother's heart went out after the boy, and when he was safely in bed she came in and knelt down with her arms around him.

"Tom," she whispered in his ear, "mothers and little boys don't ever do things for each other for money, or fathers or sisters, either, Tom. What do they do them for, dear?"

And Tom replied steadily and slowly, "Never for anything but love, mother, dear."—Grace Duffield Goodwin, in S. S. Times.

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—You may be as surprised as I was to know that some of the "grown-ups" read and enjoy our Cozy Corner column. I have such a nice letter from a friend of ours who lives way off on the Pacific coast, that I am going to share it with you. There are three letters from the little folks who go to school to Miss Ansorge and I am printing her letter with theirs, and won't she be surprised?

This letter might serve me as a text for a little sermon on influence and appreciation, if I were a preacher, which I am not; but we can just talk it over by ourselves. When a busy teacher who has many duties outside of her work takes time to talk to her children on temperance, and help them write little letters to the Cozy Corner, that is influence, for they will never forget her teachings; and when she says some very nice things about me, and THE UNION SIGNAL particularly, that is appreciation, which we always enjoy. This kind letter just warmed "the cockles of my heart" and I passed the good feeling right along by speaking encouragingly to the laundress who brought home my linen ironed beautifully. Isn't that the best way to do with a kindness? Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—The children have had so much pleasure in writing to you, and they have talked so much about it to-day, that it has put me in the notion to write you a letter myself, to send with theirs.

I read the children's column sometimes in school, sometimes at home, and sometimes the children do their own reading, but they enjoy it very much any way. They have wondered and wondered "who Aunt Mary is." They know about our workers, and are particularly interested in Miss Gordon, Miss Ackermann and Miss Agnes Slack.

I do not know what I should do without our dear UNION SIGNAL. I read it a little and then I read it again, every word, advertisements and all. It seems to me it is so much more interesting than it used to be, but maybe it is because I am learning more of the work.

Hoping this letter will not be unwelcome to the children's friend,

I am yours for all good work,
Shelton, Wash. (MISS) CLARA L. ANSORGE.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—We had Harvest Home exercises on Miss Willard's birthday. We had speaking and singing in our schoolhouse. We had pictures of Miss Willard, Miss Agnes Slack, Miss Gordon, Miss Ackermann, Lady Henry Somerset and Madam Willard on the wall. The name of my piece was, "Little People."

Your loving niece,
Shelton, Wash. HAZEL ROBINSON.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—There are seven scholars in our school. We live fourteen miles from town. My teacher's name is Miss Ansorge; she is state treasurer of the Washington W. C. T. U. We had Harvest Home exercises on Miss Willard's birthday in our schoolhouse. We had L. T. L. in big red letters on the wall and had a white ribbon on the globe. I spoke, "Crossing the Bar," and my sister spoke, "Little People." Miss Ansorge gave us each a pledge card with Miss Willard's picture on one side. From your loving niece,
Shelton, Wash. EVA ROBINSON.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—When we came to school we saw a hooting-owl sitting on the window, and the teacher put it in a basket and put a towel over the top. We carried it in the basket. When we came to a tree we set the basket down and the owl flew away and then we came back to school.

Yours lovingly,
Shelton, Wash. NEAL EMMOTT.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.
42.

I am composed of 16 letters.
My 3, 15, 12, 8, 2, 7, 13 is several different kinds.
My 1, 6, 5, 2 is to govern.
My 14, 11, 16, 10 is to caution.
My 12, 4, 9, 7 is a foundation.
My whole is a great war.
Harlem, N. D. EDNA SMITH.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 13.

41. Boscawen.

Correct answers to No. 39 were sent by Laura McCarty, Filson, Ill., and Mrs. H. M. Wilder, Chase's Mills, Me.; to Nos. 39 and 40 by Mabel Sechrist, Howard, Pa.; to No. 40 by Ralph E. Rice, Roxbury, Mass., Lucy M. Dean, North Ferrisburg, Vt., and Ethel C. Watts, New York city.

UNION SIGNAL
AND WHITE RIBBON
WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.
OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

Queer People.

THE old Quaker is reported as saying to his wife, "Everybody is queer except thee and me—and thou art a little queer." To be queer is not reprehensible so far as we know, but to be determined to give everybody else our kind of queerness is. That is neither modest nor generous, to say the least. It is interesting and pathetic to see feeble-minded children try to put square blocks into round holes and round blocks into square holes. They won't fit in, to be sure, but the children turn them and pound them all the same, with no result save their own exhaustion.

We have often wondered what kind of a world this would be if one human being could manipulate it for twenty-four hours—one of those queer people, which of course doesn't mean the reader or the writer of this article. Peas in a pod would not be a "patching" to the likeness there would then be in people. We would be as much alike as door knobs and as bald of individuality, and as destitute of moral responsibility. Then, it is to be supposed, we would all eat codfish, or no one would eat codfish; then we would all be Methodists, or all be Presbyterians, or all be followers of Brahma, or of Confucius, according to the controlling mind. There would no longer be a difference of opinion for all would be dominated by a master. If that master mind said, "Confess that I am right and you are wrong," we would all "'fess up" at once.

The world has progressed too far on the highway of freedom to ever again fear the triumph of absolutism in church or state, but neighborhoods and societies suffer in a small but exasperating way from such narrowness. Some "queer" people seem to forget, or never to have known, that the human mind can not be coerced. People's views can not be changed by the dictum of another. It is an inward process, not an outward one.

It should make no one unhappy that another holds diametrically different views from his. Of course, to the first one, certain conclusions are as plain "as the nose on your face." But suppose the second cannot see the nose, what then? Well, some people are color blind, and certainly never would be able to see some noses, so let such not be nagged about it and punched and bullyragged. Especially do not tear up the mire and dirt from the bottom of the sea because of it. Do not keep a neighborhood in a ferment about it. Do not rend the Sabbath-school with dissension, and the church and the social circle. Do not fall into the error of supposing that even the pastor can make the man see the nose. In a reverend way, it may be said that even God Himself cannot make a man see what he does not have the capacity or the willingness to see, for man is a free agent, even to his own damnation if he so chooses. What God has made free, shall man try to bind? What then? Shall the peace and happiness of everybody far and near be rent and torn because the man cannot see the nose? No. No human being should desire to make the man acknowledge that the nose is there. He cannot see it, and he may well retort, "Who made thee a ruler over me?" No one is called upon to accomplish the impossible, and by the teachings of Christ, no one is excusable if he usurp authority over others. Differences grow primarily out of the fact that man is a free agent. To remove all the differences would be to dispossess man of this most Godlike power. Rather let each possess his own soul in patience and find unity even in variety. After all, do we not call people "queer" simply because they differ from us, and more particularly because we can not make them do as we wish or think as we think? Who, then, is queer?

Some Lessons from Judiasm.

AS regards health, endurance and longevity, the Jewish people are far in advance of every other race; and this is undoubtedly due to their observance of the food and sanitary laws of the Old Testament.

The rare occurrence of the disease of consumption among them is a fact that has been frequently noted. "From all quarters comes the same reply," said Dr. Madison Marsh, after a careful investigation of the subject, "not that the Jews never have consumption, but that the disease is very rare among them." Contagious diseases are seldom contracted by Jews. History tells us that the Israelitish people were almost exempt from the black death which ravaged Europe during the fourteenth century, and they were, therefore, accused by the Gentiles of "poisoning their neighbor's wells and were murdered for the calamities which afflicted the people around them." During the cholera epidemic at Toulon, a few years ago, only two orthodox Jews died of the plague, although a large percentage of the population belonged to the Jewish race.

A health officer of London, England, has said that the life of a Jew in the great metropolis is, on an average, double that of a Gentile; and, according to Dr. Levy, the great French physician, the average age of a Frenchman is twenty-six years while that of an Israelite is thirty-seven years. Neuville and Meyer found, as a result of their investigations, that the life of the average Jew in Germany was at least ten years longer than that of the average Gentile. Investigations regarding Jewish and Gentile longevity have been made in the United States, and agree essentially with the conclusions arrived at in other lands.

There can be no doubt that the Old Testament precepts concerning diet, bathing, disinfection, etc., furnish us with the reason for the remarkable health and longevity of the Jewish people. Physicians assert that the Mosaic regulations regarding health are in exact agreement with the best medical teachings at the present day. Says a well-known author: "It was Moses who taught that 'the life is in the blood,' though it was ages before physicians learned to believe it. All flesh, before it is eaten by a Jew, must be examined and pronounced kosher, or wholesome, by the shochet, or killer, appointed for that purpose. Then certain animals are utterly rejected at the outset. The animals which Moses excluded from his dietary are precisely those which are specially liable to parasites, as swine, rabbits, hares, etc., and in proscribing the use of the blood, and requiring the burning of the fat, he was only prohibiting what is especially liable to be the means of communicating disease. The recent discoveries of microscopy, which show that the air is filled with living germs, causing fermentation, decay and disease, was long ago anticipated by the law of Moses, which declared that in any tent where a death had occurred, 'Every open vessel which hath no covering bound upon it is unclean.' Numbers 19:5."

Among all the nations of antiquity, the Jews alone had ideas upon health which modern researches have not shown to be absurd. But with the Mosaic hygienic regulations no fault can be found, but, as has been well said, whenever hygienic "knowledge reaches a firm and settled basis it finds itself occupying the very position held by Moses thirty centuries ago."

An Unique Document.

IT was announced that Bishop Charles B. Galloway, of the M. E. Church South, would be present at the Rock River Conference in Chicago and make several addresses. There was much disappointment, therefore, when word was received that he could not come. This was intensified from the fact that it was intended to take some preliminary steps toward the union of the two great Methodist bodies, which, now that slavery has passed away, would seem to have nothing to keep them apart. Bishop Galloway was detained by the presence of yellow fever in Mississippi and his position as chairman of an important committee relating thereto in Jackson. The bishop is a strong temperance advocate, and was a warm friend of Miss Willard. Lately in examining the manuscript journal of Gov. Winthrop Sargent, the first governor of the Mississippi territory, he came across a most interesting document, of which he says:

"It was the first feeble effort put forth to restrain a great evil in this young country—an evil which grows with the years and which demands the sleepless vigilance of all Christian patriots to arrest its shameless tide of ruin."

The document referred to was this:

By the Governor of the Mississippi Territory.

A PROCLAMATION.

For the preservation of peace and good order, all persons within this territory are hereby prohibited from giving, or vending to any Indian, or Indians, at or within three miles of the town of Natchez, or of any other settlement of white people in the ordinary jurisdiction of the government, any whisky, rum, brandy, or other ardent spirits, upon penalty of being punished with the utmost vigor.

This prohibition to continue in full force and effect to the first day of November, next.

Given under my hand and seal, at Concord House, near Natchez, and territory aforesaid, on the tenth day of October, 1798, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the twenty-third.

[Signed] WINTHROP SARGENT.

In presenting this to the public the good bishop says:

"I call upon every friend of temperance in Mississippi to prepare for another assault upon an intrenched and unscrupulous foe."

Give the Sergeant-at-Arms a Rest.

THE value of a National Convention is not simply its effect upon the work at large nor its influence upon the town or city in which it happens to be held. It is not alone that at that gathering the selections of leaders are made and the scope of the work is defined—cutting off or combining departments which have not yielded large results or which experience teaches can be handled better in some other way, or making new ones as the exigencies of the times seem to demand; but large results should come to the individual member and through her to the home folks.

Every year new delegates appear, to many of whom it is the great occasion of their lives. The experience of one such at a late convention will serve as an example of many, we fear. It was but three years since she entered the work and less than that since she timidly presided at her first public meeting, not able to do anything more than to call off the written program in a feeble voice. She sewed for a living and took care of herself and others. Her union grew in numbers and grace, and the temperance interest of the town in which she lived was largely the result of her consistent faithfulness and educative methods. Out of her meagre income she saved, with the utmost exertion, enough to pay her way to the convention. For all we know she was one of those who lived on bread and tea because of some hitch in the entertainment, and there was no margin in her pocketbook for such emergency. But this would be counted as nothing by her. She was so eager to feast on better things. But, alas! Shall we write that the women just in front of her talked so continuously and irrelevantly that the hungry sister could catch but morsels of what was presented? Day after day she was thus tantalized, and one never having a similar experience, can not begin to appreciate the pangs of bitter disappointment that were hers. All of her sacrifice was for naught, and she so anxious to learn, and the people at home were waiting for her to lead in forward movements.

If one attends the National Convention she should be a tower of strength, a fund of information, a leader and inspirer of many. Unless she puts in practice that which has been revealed to her, the convention is but a pageant, a dumb show; but how can this come to pass unless she be so situated that she can see and hear and then those about her will let her hear? We have every reason to believe that the People's Church of St. Paul is perfect in acoustic properties, and is it too much to hope that the sergeant-at-arms may have a rest? Should she find her occupation gone, and the office purely decorative there are many who would rejoice and she would consider congratulations to be in order.

A Zealous Critic Answered.

THE christening of ships was lately discussed in this paper under the caption, "Wine or Water." These words occurred in the editorial referred to, "as wine was used by Christ in instituting the holy sacrament of the Lord's Supper." One of our readers takes exceptions to the use of the word wine and reviews the history of the Passover and its connection with the sacrament, the present usage of the Jews, the conclusions of modern research on the subject, quotes a recipe of "raisins soaked in water," alludes to the belief of the W. C. T. U., and then to convict us out of our own mouth, so to speak, refers us to an article in THE UNION SIGNAL not long ago which gives the three words used in the original with their meaning, and closes with, "It would seem as if the writer acquiesced with those not up to recent knowledge upon the subject or was not conversant with instructions so recently given in her own paper," and adds a postscript hoping for an explanation of the inconsistency.

We have a wholesome fear of the "millstone" to be hanged about the person's neck that shall offend even one, so we hasten to repudiate the whole charge, both of ignorance and wrong belief. To be more explicit, we here and now affirm even in the face of the great Greek church, in the face of the great Catholic church, in the face of the great Episcopal church, and others of lesser numbers and note, that accept the fermented wine theory, that we do not believe Christ either made intoxicating wine or used it in instituting the Eucharist, and that, if He had done so, we would still not believe it necessary that we use it in the present condition of the world.

But we believe that it was not necessary to descant upon fermented or unfermented wine in connection with the subject under consideration, as standard usage applies the word, wine, to both the fermented and unfermented juice of the grape. Especially was it unnecessary, as the context showed us to be dealing with an "objector" who believed in the fermented wine theory, and the sarcasm of the quoted word "orthodox" was, we feel sure, not lost upon the constituency at large.

Lo, the Poor Indian!

THE untutored savage has been at it again. He has never been able to perceive differences, which perception lies at the very foundation of an education.

An Indian is as big a fool to-day as a white woman. We say this without fear of contradiction. She thinks she is entitled to the privileges and prerogatives of her white brother, and the red man thinks the same of himself. Poor Lo! we sympathize with him, dirty and mean as he is. We have a sort of a fellow feeling for him regardless of his antecedents. Mr. Chief Bush Ear, of Leech Lake, Minn., and all over, is a bad man, no doubt, and he has his limitations. For instance, he can not see why he can not sell liquor to his subjects, especially as he comes of royal blood in his own right, when every pesky nobody that wants to can sell it to these same subjects, down in Duluth, in spite of the same law he violated. Why his men should be jerked up and carried away to trial for selling whisky to their fellow men, and then the whites openly sell it to these same dusky warriors, is past his benighted comprehension. There is just where our fellow feeling comes in.

Temperance women, alike with the untutored child of the wigwam, can not find any line of reason, hair split as they may, for arresting and trying an Indian for the same thing a white man does with impunity. The Indian ought to be arrested. The white man ought to be arrested, but the howl would be like the sound of many waters if he were to be. Poor Indian, he can't get the dead and down timber promised him, the mixed bloods and the white men with squaw wives get ahead of him. He can't get dead drunk without being arrested. He can't even sell fire water without being carried away for trial where he has the aggravation of seeing white men do the same thing, in violation of their own laws, yet without restraint or reproof, much less imprisonment. Poor Mr. Lo! We cannot but have a certain respect for his state of mind. How he must in his philosophical moments long for civilization, that he might understand the mysteries of the license system and the secrets of the spirits that doth enliven the white man, at times and seasons, all law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Dr. Banks at the Rock River Conference.

REV. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, of Cleveland, O., made the address at the Rock River M. E. Conference in Chicago at the temperance rally. It was a telling arraignment of the government, which held a large audience in closest attention till the end was reached. Dr. Banks was logical, pathetic and humorous. It was easy for him to bring his audience into deepest sympathy with the Cuban women and children and to rouse their patriotism to a high pitch, and then to transfer the feeling to the American woman, born under the flag and married in the church, but to one inheriting a tendency to strong drink, to be developed by the licensed saloon. Many thrilling scenes were depicted, and the audience was moved to laughter as he described the two-headed man, with one pair of legs, and wrought out composite pictures of the temperance head and the whisky head. The temperance head resolved well, he said, but when the party whip cracked near election time, it was carried off by the license legs, which reminded him of an inscription on the tombstone of a spinster in Massachusetts:

"She had two bad legs and a baddish cough,
But it was her two bad legs that carried her off."

Dr. Banks had a living issue to handle, and he did it in a masterly way, cutting down through the executive, "who," he remarked, "has plenty of men behind him," and through political parties to the conscience of the individual voter.

Personals.

MRS. C. M. WOODWARD, of Nebraska, transportation committee, was a caller at Headquarters last week.

MISS ANNA GORDON and Mamie Powderly are now seen daily at Headquarters. Miss Gordon has the souvenir badges of the National in hand.

MRS. ISABEL WING LAKE and Dr. Carolyn Geisel have returned from their months of travel in the West in the interest of rescue work. They promise some incidents for THE UNION SIGNAL shortly.

THE White-Ribbon, organ of the B. W. T. A., announces a London crusade, to be conducted by Rev. Leonard M. Isitt, of New Zealand, and says of him: "Mr. Isitt is perhaps the most powerful advocate of temperance and denunciator of liquordom who has graced the platform in recent years, and he has a record at once striking and honorable in New Zealand, while in England his missions have been almost universally successful."

MRS. J. B. HENDERSON, wife of ex-Senator Henderson, of Missouri, in her beautiful home at the head of Sixteenth St., in Washington, D. C., has a charming little "study" dedicated to temperance, where she spends several hours daily in literary pursuits. She might have been seen last summer at Bar Harbor, enjoying an early morning spin on her wheel, and then devoting the bright hours to work on the book she is soon to present to the public on the subject of temperance and kindred themes.

DR. O. B. BIRD, of Ocean Grove, N. J., who is the "Uncle John" of our Children's Page, and who has furnished many valuable contributions to THE UNION SIGNAL, sent us this facetious note: "Seeing the name of Woolley as nominee for legislature, reminds me—or suggests—that 'our folks' might be interested in knowing of my imilar honor. The third district of New Jersey, comprising three counties, nominated me for Congress from said district. I have not yet engaged board at Washington. A Republican editor advises me to be selecting my seat." We understand that the family to which the doctor belongs is a prohibition family of Birds.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Headquarters in South Africa.

BY MISS ANNA M. CUMMINGS.

IN the sunny Southland of Africa, land of the vine and the fig, the orange and the pomegranate, heather and geraniums, land where thousands of calla lilies lift their white cups to receive the dews of heaven, though their roots are held fast in the marshes of earth, here, too, the temperance problem needs clear brains, stout hearts, unconquerable faith, to solve its difficulties.

There's a shadow on the land but a rainbow spans the cloud.

Devoted women, not a few, both young and old, with the help of brothers and husbands are coming to the rescue.

In one of the fairest corners of the land, twenty-five years ago, was begun the Huguenot Seminary and college, by the Rev. Andrew Murray and his helpers, summoned hither from Mt. Holyoke College. Puritan strength and faith were grafted upon Huguenot stock. The Huguenot Seminary celebrates its silver jubilee this year with the opening of the Huguenot College, the first woman's college in South Africa. Cummings Hall is its first building, a monument of answered prayer.

Y's of many states in America have prayed and worked with us for its completion, and will rejoice in its strength, built of solid stone, in its beauty, too, and what a glad welcome would they receive from the one hundred and twenty students who are members of the Y Union, so many they are that regular meetings can not be held in the Y room. They are hoping to carry away the Y banner at the next W. C. T. U. convention, since their membership has increased fourfold during the past year, and hang this banner, with its motto—"The Master Calleth for Thee," beside the pictures of Mrs. Barnes and Miss Willard, of blessed memory, in the Y room which occupies the end of the third floor beyond the towers and stands foursquare to the winds of heaven. Never an hour of the day that the sun may not shine in. We dedicated it with prayer and ask that in that upper room many a soul may be born into the Kingdom and go forth to "follow the gleam."—From the Y Almanac for 1899.

Y's at Work.

PENNSYLVANIA.

IT is time Pennsylvania Y's were heard from again. We have been so glad to read encouraging news from other states and countries, glad we too belong. The state secretary has been busy all the year, taking only two weeks holiday in August. Have visited several counties, and organized new Y's, nineteen in all, organized in the state this year.

Now that we are gathering up our reports we find that much we had hoped to have accomplished has not been, but reports show good work has been done. Five thousand nine hundred and eighty-two pledges have been signed through the efforts of our members, and there have been over 333 public meetings held. Over 200,000 pages of literature distributed besides many hundreds of magazines, many leaflets and a large number of Bibles of which no account has been kept. Several hundred socials and entertainments held with over 900 business meetings. Who can tell the good that has been and will be done through these means? Many of our unions have headquarters and find them a great help to their work.

Nearly four thousand dollars have been raised by our Y's, part of which has been given to help our different outside interests and the remainder has been used at home in good work. Philadelphia is banner county for greatest increase in membership, organizations and in amount of money raised. Dauphin comes first with literature distributed, while Lehigh county comes in number two and is first in pledge signers. Many of our unions have done grand work for the soldiers and sailors, while a number of our honoraries answered to the call of their country and joined the army, and we have rejoiced to know that in great temptation they remained true to their pledge. Much interest has been felt in our missionary, Clara Parrish, as we have read her letters and followed her work, and we hope the result will be a large increase in funds to help her. We are glad to report already 175 Y Almanacs sold, and trust the number will be much larger at the close of our convention. Every one is pleased with them. We are now busy planning for Convention. Our Y Night is October 17. We expect to have Miss Ida Clothier with us, and are looking forward to a good time.

A. ELIZABETH THOMAS,
Philadelphia, Pa. State Y Secretary.

World's W. C. T. U.

The Secretary's Letter.

MY DEAR COMRADES:—I had hoped to be able to give you the dates of the next World's Convention, but we cannot arrive at a final decision yet, as the best time for Scotland would be October, 1899, and our American sisters would attend in much larger numbers in the spring of 1900. They form such a very important part of our Conventions it is advisable, if possible, to fix a convenient time. We hope soon to be able to decide on the time and place.

AUSTRALIA:—We rejoice that Mrs. Kirk, of Victoria, has been appointed Australasian superintendent of the World's missionary department. This means that our world-wide movement will be brought more than ever before the people of Australia, and we look for the best of results. We wish every country would appoint one of its zealous white-ribboners to take special charge of such a department; this would arouse considerable interest in the World's W. C. T. U., and would attract many women to us. A great work is being done by the railway department, which distributes literature to passengers as well as to the employés. Miss Willard's birthday is likely to be widely observed. Mrs. Nicholls has sent out a special appeal for it to be observed as a day for special consecration. Miss Pemell's appeal for September 28 will also emphasize a day sacred to us all.

NEW SOUTH WALES:—Mrs. Nolan's address is now Balmain.

QUEENSLAND:—Mrs. Carvosso has recently been heartily welcomed in New South Wales. The Queensland convention begins this week. New headquarters have been taken. Mrs. Harrison Lee has recently conducted an inspiring mission. Mrs. Harris is now on her way to England and we are anticipating giving her a hearty welcome.

NEW ZEALAND:—Mrs. Schnackenburg is working most ably among the Maoris; she speaks the language fluently. A world's missionary fund is now being organized.

AUSTRIA:—The Baroness Langenau has offered to help to organize in Vienna when I can go there. She has sent valuable information about Bosnia.

FRANCE:—On behalf of the International Temperance Congress to be held in Paris next year, Dr. Legrain, the president, has invited me to give an address and hopes that the World's W. C. T. U. will send a good delegation to the Congress. I trust many white-ribboners will be able to go.

NORWAY:—I spent last month addressing meetings in Norway. Mrs. Espenak, the National secretary, is one of the best workers I have ever met and the meetings were most splendidly arranged. At one meeting in Kristiania, sixty-two new members joined. Please note the president of the National W. C. T. U. is Miss Johannessen, Nordahl Brunsgade 5, Bergen, Norway. The trio of National officers here are such great-souled, earnest-hearted women.

SWEDEN:—On August 30 I organized a W. C. T. U. at Gothenburg, and enrolled thirty members. Miss Duff, the sister of the British Consul, was elected president. There is every probability as our funds are advanced that we shall be able to organize a strong National W. C. T. U. in Sweden.

B. W. T. A.:—The National executive will meet at Hanley (Staffordshire), on November 15. Lady Henry Somerset hopes to be with us. On the previous Sunday we shall have services at several of the leading churches, when many of our representative women will speak or preach.

BERMUDA:—We are hoping soon to send some one to Hamilton to organize. Mrs. Prestwod will give valuable assistance.

ICELAND:—Miss Johannsdottir is working away more vigorously than ever, and writes in glowing spirits of the work.

CANADA:—We are all watching with deepest interest the efforts our W. C. T. U. is making to help on a successful issue at the plebiscite vote, which takes place on September 29. God speed our brave workers. Miss Vincent, Miss Cummins and Miss Murcutt have all been giving valuable help.

SOUTH AFRICA:—The ninth annual convention has recently been held, and amongst other good things we are thankful to know that the much beloved president, Miss Campbell, hopes to attend our next convention. Eighty delegates were present, and the report showed a most satisfactory increase. The convention seems to have been the best the Colony has ever had.

Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson has accepted the superintendency of the Christian Citizenship department. Her leadership will be invaluable in this important branch of our work. The World's Officers have indorsed the action of the U. S. A. National Officers with regard to the Temple.

We shall be so glad if every country will have a penny collection once a year for our funds. I shall be glad to supply wee envelopes for distribution at state, Colonial and national conventions. If every person present contributes two cents quite a revenue will come in.

Miss Willard's great desire was that our work should open out in Europe, and it is a great delight to know this most difficult continent is now opening up to us as it has never done before. I have heard from Fraulein Hoffman that she has organized a W. C. T. U. in Bremen, Germany, and I pass on the good news to you. Fraulein Hoffman is this week attending a woman's conference at Hamburg, and she hopes then to have an opportunity of enlisting further sympathy in our work.

Ever faithfully and affectionately your comrade,

AGNES E. SLACK,
Sec. World's W. C. T. U.
Ripley, Derbyshire, Eng., Sept. 22, 1898.

News from the Field.

Kentucky.

THE eighteenth annual convention of the Kentucky W. C. T. U. was held in Louisville, at the Warren Memorial Presbyterian church, September 30 to October 4. The first evening of the convention was given to the addresses of welcome, on behalf of the mayor of the city, the board of trade, the ministers, Y. M. C. A., Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and the district W. C. T. U. The responses were made by Mrs, Frank Powers, of Grayson, Mrs. Roberta Elkin, of Lancaster, and Miss Irene Patterson, of Franklin.

The morning of October 1, the real business of the convention commenced, with the address of the state president, Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, which was one of her best efforts, and was well received. There were present all the general officers, eight district presidents, one county president, thirteen superintendents and seventy-one delegates. The reports of the district presidents and superintendents were very gratifying as to the work accomplished, especially the report of the district presidents, showing the state to be better organized than ever before, eight district conventions having been held this past year.

At the noontide hour a very touching and beautiful memorial service was held for our lamented Miss Willard, and a long list of those gone before from our own ranks, conducted by Mrs. Sarah West Marshall.

The evening of October 1 was given to an entertainment by the L. T. L., at Library Hall, in

ROYAL
ROYAL BAKING POWDER
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

charge of Mrs. Gates, and was one of the brightest and most attractive features of the convention.

Sunday afternoon, October 2, Mr. George W. Bain gave an address to a large audience at Warren Memorial Presbyterian church, his subject, "The Lessons we may Learn from the Late War." He is always eloquent, and his lectures perfect word paintings, but on this occasion he surpassed himself.

On Monday, the business of the convention was resumed. Those in attendance had the rare privilege of hearing two Bible readings given by Mr. John G. Woolley at the noon hour, on Monday and Tuesday. He also gave two addresses, one Monday evening, his subject, "The Sower," the other Tuesday evening, "Seed Thoughts," both of which were delightful.

On Tuesday, the last day of the convention, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp; vice-president, Mrs. Mary Bender; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Nellie T. Arnspiger; recording secretary, Mrs. Roberta Elkin; treasurer, Mrs. Mary E. Bryan.

The sessions of the convention were very harmonious, the hospitality of the people of Louisville unbounded, and the delegates all returned to their homes feeling it was good to have been there.

September 28, the first birthday of our beloved Miss Willard in heaven, the Central W. C. T. U. of Lexington held a meeting in the Centenary M. E. church. Music suitable for the occasion was selected, one solo being the memorial hymn, "On Heights of Power," and three very excellent papers were read. In her appeal for members Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp made many touching allusions to the life of Miss Willard, and ten new members were added to the W. C. T. U.

MARY ROGERS,
State Reporter, Lexington.

West Virginia.

THE sixteenth annual convention of this state met in Charleston, September 28–30, with the state president, Mrs. N. R. C. Morrow, of Fairmont, in the chair. At roll-call it was found that all the general state officers were present, a few state superintendents, several county presidents and delegates representing nearly every union in the state. The report of the corresponding secretary showed a gain in membership of quite a number of unions, a few new unions and an improvement in general work all over the state, which is very encouraging.

Memorial services, both beautiful and impressive, were held on the afternoon of the first day, in honor of Miss Willard, Neal Dow and departed comrades. Wednesday evening the addresses of welcome were made and responded to in a most happy manner, after which the state president made her annual address, which was even more brilliant and encouraging than usual. At the close of the evening's program a delightful and enjoyable reception was held in the church parlors in honor of visiting delegates.

The second day was devoted mainly to reports of state superintendents of departments and the election of officers for the ensuing year. Our beloved president, Mrs. N. R. C. Morrow, of Fairmont, was unanimously re-elected; Mrs. Josephine Raymond, of Morgantown, was elected vice-president; Mrs. M. M. Love, of Grafton, was elected honorary vice-president for life; Mrs. Belle C. Harmison, of Fairmont, corresponding secretary; Miss Leni McWhorter, Buckhannon, recording secretary; Mrs. M. C. Parsons, Grafton, treasurer; Mrs. Augusta Ackerson, Sistersville, secretary of Young Woman's work.

After the election of officers, Sister Elene, matron of the Florence Crittenton Rescue Home of Wheeling, made a most interesting and touching address, telling many pathetic stories of the lives of girls lost in sin who have been saved by this institution, showing that it should be the pleasure as well as the duty of every Christian in the state to help maintain it, as it is the only one in this state.

The Kanawha Presbyterian church was packed and many turned away to hear that most original and eloquent temperance orator, Hon. John G. Woolley. This wonderful man can but advance the temperance cause wherever he goes with his keen and convincing logic. The Kendall quartet favored the audience with two admirable selections, and Mrs. Belle C. Harmison rendered a beautiful solo at the close of the evening.

On Friday morning, by invitation of the governor, the delegates in a body visited the state house, where, under the efficient guidance of Treasurer Kendall, they were shown through the building, visiting all the offices in turn and the rooms of the Historical Society, after which superintendents were appointed and some new departments were added to the list. Delegates were then chosen for the National Convention. The reports of all the committees were good, but the resolutions were especially so. I have only space for two or three topics; they indorse the Czar of Russia's peace proposition, condemn the canteen system of our camps, also.

"Resolved, That inasmuch as the influence of an educator is so potent for good or evil on the youth of the land, we rejoice that West Virginia has at the head of its leading educational institution a man of uncompromising hostility to the drink habit, the drink traffic and all forms of vice, and we profoundly hope that he may long remain at the head of the West Virginia University."

Mrs. Josephine Raymond, of Morgantown, a gifted and eloquent speaker, gave a lecture on social settlements, which was well received. The session closed with an exceedingly fine recitation by Miss Leni McWhorter.

This closed the most successful, harmonious and instructive convention ever held in our state. The officers and every member of the rank and file may well feel encouraged to press forward during the coming year.

V. E. MOHLER,
State Reporter, St. Albans.

Illinois.

THE quarter century milestone just passed by the Illinois W. C. T. U. was celebrated by the annual state convention, held at Elgin, October 4–7. Though at a very late day the convention was changed from Pontiac to Elgin, on account of an epidemic of disease at the former place, yet we found everything in apple-pie order when we reached there, and all things moved like clock-work in every department of the local work. There were homes enough and to spare; the church was beautifully decorated, with committee rooms galore, and no pains was spared to make everybody at home and happy.

The ante-executive committee meeting was largely attended and the routine of work speedily transacted. Superintendents of departments were appointed and appropriations fixed. The department of Y work was reinstated. Systematic giving was separated from the evangelistic department and put in the hands of Mrs. Lucie B. Tyng, who resigned her work as superintendent of Sabbath observance. Mrs. Mary E. Kuhl was placed at the head of the evangelistic department. The Temple department was suspended until the midwinter executive, and no superintendent appointed.

The first night of the convention was given up to our red-letter days, with Mrs. Rounds, Mrs. Hilton, Miss Brehm, Miss Hood, Mrs. Tyng, Mrs. Brumbach and Mrs. Stewart to explain these days in short addresses.

The convention was in all respects very harmonious. A telegram of sympathy and loyalty was sent Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens and her board of National officers, giving a line from the state song, "Our fealty is to you," and a text from Deut. 31:6. Telegrams were also sent Miss Gordon and the state conventions of New York, Ohio and Indiana, which were meeting at the same time.

The credentials committee reported 270 delegates in attendance, and there were as many more visitors. Chicago sent a special car with seventy. The old officers were all re-elected with handsome majorities.

A proposed change in the constitution making the membership fee one dollar instead of the present one of fifty cents, awakened much discussion, but was finally voted down by a large vote. Also the motion was lost after a long debate, which would have done away with the district organizations leaving the county unions standing next to the state. The report of Willard memorial committee appointed at the midwinter executive meeting was accepted and the committee discharged.

The second evening of the convention the president gave her address which was strong and helpful. A beautiful tribute was paid our translated leader in words true and tender. The Meneley trio entertained the convention Wednesday night with an inspiring musical program. Friday was filled full of reports and routine business.

A resolution favoring the retiring of the Temple Trust Bonds, after a good deal of discussion, was laid upon the table. Although so much time was taken with debate and miscellaneous business, the convention adjourned on time with the program entirely cleared up and every report in. A large picture, framed, of Miss Willard was given by the delegates to the Elgin women for their headquarters, and every one went home feeling that the twenty-fifth annual convention of Illinois had reached its usual high-water mark.

MINNIE BARKER HORNING,
State Reporter, Chicago.

Connecticut.

THE Willimantic union began, on September 11, holding Sunday afternoon gospel temperance meetings in their new hall. Each de-

Let Faces Come First.

If you use Wool Soap for but one purpose, let it be for the face rather than for wool.

When wool shrinks, it means only a spoiled garment. When a soap harms the face, it means a spoiled complexion.

There is a particular ingredient in Wool Soap that prevents it from shrinking wool. That quality makes it especially desirable for toilet and bath.

MY MAMA USED WOOL SOAP I WISH MINE HAD

Other makers haven't our secrets.

It is not necessary to buy woolens so often, nor to buy healing lotions for a soap-injured skin, if you use this pure soap.

WOOL SOAP

is a white, swimming soap. In washing woolens it is a necessity. In any other use it is a luxury, and it is so cheap that it makes luxury economical. It is an absolutely pure soap. It is the only soap so pure that it won't shrink wool.

IT SWIMS.

All Grocers and Druggists sell it.

A Grain of Wheat

Showing the Relative Positions of its Various Parts.

In the manufacture of

Franklin Mills Flour

A Fine Flour of the Entire Wheat

only the outer husk or woody, innutritious part of the wheat kernel is discarded. There is no injury to the grain, chemically or otherwise. This is the only flour in the world containing all the food elements in wheat reduced to an even fineness. It is an invaluable remedy for dyspepsia, indigestion and constipation—no matter of how long standing. If your grocer does not keep it, have him order some for you or send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied. Avoid substitutes.

The genuine bears our label and name and is made only by the

Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y.

Booklet and key to above illustration mailed free on request.

partment superintendent is to have charge of the meetings for a month, preparing programs and presiding at the meetings. A plan similar to this has been tried in other unions:

Mystic union is busy arranging for a medal contest to be held in the near future. They worked earnestly previous to the recent "town meeting" distributing no-license leaflets in the town of Stonington, by means of house-to-house visitation; also an earnest "Appeal to Voters" prepared by one formerly president of New London county, in the name of the W. C. T. U. of Stonington. Mystic mourns the loss of a dear sister, Mrs. Phœbe A. Rathbun. She was one of the oldest members, being eighty-two years of age, and while in health active in every good work.

Our White Ribbon Banner, always good, is particularly bright this month, containing, as it does, the calls for both state and National Conventions, letters from state superintendents, and reports from county conventions and local unions, with bright, brief editorials.

EVELYN P. BURCH,
State Reporter, New London.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

I have just returned from the conventions of Ohio and Indiana, and, though somewhat worn in body, feel wonderfully uplifted in mind as I always do after meeting our dear women in state convention. Both conventions were very large in attendance, and in both states there has been a marked increase in membership during the past year. The old officers were in each case elected with the exception of the treasurer of Ohio, who because of her eyesight refused to allow her name to be used. In both states a strong resolution was passed favoring the action of the mid-year executive with reference to the Temple. In Ohio I was the guest of Mrs. Alice J. Peters, of Columbus, and at the Indiana convention was entertained by Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, Lafayette.

In just four weeks we shall be in ante-executive meeting. There is so much to be done in those four weeks that to one who has never been used to these rushing times it would seem well-nigh an impossibility to accomplish all the necessary preliminary work. I am confident, however, from past experience, that it can be accomplished, but whether it will be done with comparative ease or by the utmost effort is for the constituency to say. If reports come in promptly; if the local unions report to the state corresponding secretaries so they can forward their reports promptly to me; if the local and state superintendents are prompt in forwarding their reports to state and National, then everything will move on easily as if the wheels were greased, but delays at one end of the line mean a great amount of friction at the other. Therefore, I beg of you, dear sisters, to hasten your reports with all possible speed. The moment your eyes fall upon these Notes, will you kindly put to yourself the question: "Is there any human being to whom I should send a report?" and if there is, send it before the sun goes down.

Mrs. Ellen A. Dayton Blair writes to correct a misstatement in a recent number of THE UNION SIGNAL in which it is said that Mrs. Welles will be the only National organizer in the coming Convention who was an organizer when the Convention met in Minneapolis. She states that she was made National organizer at the Detroit Convention in 1885, and has ever since occupied that position, and has missed but two National Conventions since that time. Mrs. Blair also states that her dates are all taken up to the Convention, but that she would like appointments in Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado after the National Convention, en route to Denver.

Mrs. M. L. McLendon, president of the Atlanta, Ga., South Side union, sends a very interesting description of the observance of World's W. C. T. U. day and Children's Harvest Home and Membership Crusade Day (the birthday of Miss Willard). The Atlanta Journal published a very long report of both days. Among the very encouraging items in that report is the reorganization of the L. T. L. of Trinity Home Mission with fifty-one members and ten honoraries. At the meeting held on Miss Willard's birthday, an invitation from Colonel Sibley, of the Good Templars, was extended to the union to visit the tower and a department of mothers' clubs was adopted. The Journal says: "Frances Willard's speaking likeness in a white and gold frame faced the audience and smiled tenderly upon those who loved her so well."

The question has been asked by many if the St. Paul union is to furnish free entertainment to delegates. It has already been answered in another part of this paper, but perhaps it may be well to re-emphasize the fact by saying that entertainment will be furnished free to delegates, but not to alternates and visitors. It seems almost incredible that a white-ribbon woman knowing she was not a delegate, should seek entertainment at one of our National Conventions, and yet I grieve to say that this has happened frequently, probably through some misunderstanding as to the scope of free entertainment. I make the point at this early date in order that our sisters at St. Paul may not be burdened by attempts to furnish entertainment for those who have no right to it.

Our Honor Roll for this week is as follows:

Mrs. L. E. Bailey	5
Miss Helen A. Rollins, Yonkers, N. Y.	1
Mrs. A. L. Young, Sioux City, Ia.	1
Mrs. Mary C. Johnston, Harvey, Ill.	1

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

Official.

Sunday School Work.

DEAR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS: The last quarterly temperance lesson of the year is given for November 27, which date, you will observe, is our Universal Temperance Sunday. This lesson has the title, "Temperance Lesson." The text of the lesson is found in Proverbs 4: 10–19.

The lesson is a statement of general principles, clearly set forth, and is a most excellent temperance lesson. The Way of the Wicked in contrast with the Way of the Righteous will afford ample scope for much direct temperance teaching. Let our united prayers arise to God, the Father, for His blessing upon this temperance lesson, and that the presence of the Holy Spirit, the Teacher of all truth, may be manifest in every Sunday-school throughout our nation and the world.

In your plans for the observance of Universal Temperance Sunday do not forget to advertise the day widely by personal letters to pastors, superintendents and by notices and articles in both the secular and religious papers. The department furnishes you with a printed circular announcement, in which you are given facts pertaining to the day, suggestions for its observance, etc. These should be well circulated. Your superintendent has prepared a program for use in the Sunday-school on Temperance Sunday. It suggests such features as will make the Sunday-school hour interesting and helpful. This program should accompany your letter to superintendents. She has also prepared three new leaflets for distribution on Universal Temperance Sunday, "Why Should I Abstain?" This leaflet gives many reasons, Scriptural and otherwise, for a life of total abstinence. "Questions Answered." As the title suggests, this leaflet answers some questions that are asked by Sunday-school workers. "Facts, Figures and Opinions" is a leaflet giving important facts and liquor statistics, together with opinions of great men concerning the drink evil. Order early that you may be sure to receive them in season.

We call attention again to the opportunity on Universal Temperance Sunday of securing signatures to our resolution favoring the continuance of the quarterly temperance lesson in the International Lesson Series. Send for resolution blanks and secure signatures. Do not fail in this effort as it means much to the future of our department.

Try to have Sunday-school temperance papers distributed on Universal Temperance Sunday. The Supplement to The Young Crusader should be placed in the hands of pastor, superintendent and teachers. We trust that the November Supplement will be very helpful. Mrs. W. F. Crafts contributes to this issue and her thoughts are always valuable. Send for the Supplement to the W. T. P. A., Chicago, Ill., not to me as I only handle samples. (Price 65 cents per 100.)

We will continue our Sunday-school pledge chain. Each year it will be composed of the newly signed pledge cards. Our ambition is to have the length of chain correspond to the pledge statistics of our great department. Begin next year's chain on Universal Temperance Sunday. Send to me for cards. Class pledge rolls and pledge rolls of honor should be used in connection with the red, white and blue pledge cards so that the school may have a record of the pledge signers.

The National Sunday-school pledge chain will be exhibited at the coming National Convention at St. Paul. Be sure that your Sunday-school pledge chain forms a part of it. All chains not already sent in may be sent directly to me at St. Paul. They should reach me not later than November 5.

Another year of work together has been blessed to me and I trust also to you. Reports thus far received lack statistics but show excellent work done. Shall we not rejoice in our glorious opportunities and renew our consecration to Him whom we serve?

Circulars, programs and leaflets are 15 cents per 100; resolution blanks 5 cents per 100; pledge cards 25 cents per 100, postpaid. Address,

Yours in service,
STELLA B. IRVINE,
St. Paul, Minn. Nat. Supt.

may have had a good lamp, good chimney and good oil—but it did not have the

"Marshall Process" WICK

We want to send you a booklet and free sample of our "Brown Wick" which will not clog or creep.

Endorsed by the Standard Oil Co.

Used by all the leading lamp, stove and heater manufacturers, and for sale by dealers everywhere.

NEW JERSEY WICK CO., Newark, N. J.

Penal and Reformatory Work.

The reports for the department of penal, reformatory and police matron work are coming in rapidly. I do not think I need to make a call for them except in some instances where there has been a change in superintendents late in the year and I have not been notified, but to any state superintendents who are waiting to to hear from districts and counties, please remember I must have the reports in my hands not later than October 20, or I can not have them published before the National Convention.

It has been suggested that all our lecturers speak on the topic, "Prison Reform" on Prison Sunday, October 23. All state superintendents know that they have been expected to have special services for several years (ever since Prison Sunday has been established) and I know many have done so, as it is one of the questions asked on the blank sent to all workers.

This is an appeal to all speakers to present the topic on Prison Sunday. I shall be glad to hear from all who do this immediately and I can incorporate it in my report at St. Paul.

There has never been a time when this department has attracted so much interest as now.

Lovingly yours,
JANE M. KINNEY, Nat. Supt.
North St. P. O., St. Clair county, Mich.

Organizers' Corner.

DEAR COMRADES:—Shortly after sending you my spring letter we of this state were shocked, stunned, grieved, as we read of the sudden death of our loved president, Mrs. Mary Towne Burt, who for sixteen years had led this state through its trials and disappointments to its present standard of the largest membership in the National, as well as Babies Thrive On It.

Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk.

LITTLE BOOK "INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE, Should be in Every House.

N.Y. CONDENSED MILK CO. NEW YORK.

its victories along many lines of department work.

Since my last letter I have been in Rhode Island, where I addressed a large boarding school besides holding other services—in Massachusetts, several meetings, in Maine a ten-days' trip arranged by Mrs. H. J. Bailey, speaking on peace as well as temperance, to schools, L. T. L's, Christian Endeavor Societies, Y's and W. C. T. U's. At Portland I met our acting president, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, whose chief concern seemed to be to fulfill the great trust given her by our promoted leader. I also met Miss Dow, and was cheered by her presence at one evening service. Later I visited New Jersey, attending two camp-meetings, where a great deal of interest was shown. I also attended the conference at Prohibition Park, a delightful feature of which was the reunion of workers at the home of Mrs. Ella A. Boole.

I have attended six county conventions this summer, participated in twenty-one memorial services for Miss Willard and sixteen for Mrs. Burt, and have organized two Y unions, one L. T. L., and four W. C. T. U's since last spring. The extreme heat prevented my carrying out many anticipated projects, but I am hoping for an active fall.

I trust we may all meet at St. Paul. With kindest wishes for each organizer,

Your co-worker,
EMILIE UNDERHILL BURGESS.
New York.

National Convention Corner.

SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE PROGRAM, IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENTS, NOTICES, ETC.

All delegates will be entertained free, in the homes of St. Paul. Visitors can secure rooms and board at $1 and $2 per day. The committee requests that all visitors send their names to Mrs. Arella L. Phillips, 717 Geranium street, with stamp if an answer is needed.

All banners and decorations are to be sent to Mrs. T. H. Lyles, 337 St. Peter street. The names of delegates should be sent at once to Mrs. C. L. Webber, 1729 Minnehaha street (state secretaries please take notice).

The twenty-fifth Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet in St. Paul, Minn., in the People's Church, November 11 to 16, 1898. The Convention will be preceded by a two days' meet of the executive committee which will be held in Conover Music Hall, corner of Sixth and St. Peter streets, November 9 and 10, at which several important matters will be considered, which will afterward be presented to the Convention. There will be a one day's meeting of the board of National superintendents and another of the board of organizers, on Thursday, November 10. A two days' purity conference, under the leadership of Dr. Mary Wood-Allen, World's and National superintendent of the department of purity in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will also be held.

On the evening preceding the National Convention the National organizers will address the churches in the outskirts of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and a strong effort will be made to interest the congregations of these various churches and to secure new members for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

This will, without doubt, be the largest Convention held in years. So many matters of grave importance will come up for consideration that each state will make a strong effort to be represented.

The Convention will be called to order at nine o'clock on Friday morning by the acting president, Mrs. Lilian M. N. Stevens. After the appointment of the various committees, at the hour when the president's address usually is heard, a memorial service will be held. This will be a feature of especially sad interest this year. In addition to the great leader of the organization, there will be upon the memorial list the names of Mrs. Mary T. Burt, president of the state of New York, Mrs. Esther T. Housh and Miss Lodie Reed, National superintendents, and Madame Demorest, of New York city, for years one of the strongest allies of the National union. Besides these will be the names of many workers not so well known. Mrs. Stevens will preside at this memorial service.

The afternoon will be given up to reports, and the evening will be welcome night. There will be addresses of welcome from the mayor of St. Paul and other representative citizens, also from the president of the state, Mrs. Bessie Laythe Scovell, and from the local Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the latter by Mrs. Stella B. Irvine. The responses will be made by Miss Mary L. Page, president of the W. C. T. U. of Western Washington; Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, National superintendent of the department of legislation and enforcement of law; Mrs. Mary C. Cartland, president of the W. C. T. U. of North Carolina, and it is hoped by Mother Stewart, of Springfield, Ohio, a veteran leader of the Crusade.

The special features of interest on Saturday will be the Crusade hour from eleven to twelve. This will take the place of the regular evangelistic hour and be in the form of a consecration service. It is hoped that many of the original Crusaders may be present at St. Paul and a place of honor will be given to them on the platform and on the program, this Convention being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Crusade. It is greatly to be regretted that Mother Thompson, leader of the Crusade at Hillsboro, can not be with us, but her own and her husband's failing health render that impossible.

Saturday afternoon will be given up to the introduction of distinguished guests, fraternal delegates, etc., among whom will be Mr. and Mrs. Smith, of the United Kingdom Alliance, Great Britain; Layah Barakat and Mrs. Booth Tucker. There will also be an address by Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek Sanitarium, upon the "Gospel of Health."

Saturday night will be Y night, in charge of the general secretary of the Y Branch, Mrs. Ella A. Boole. The program will consist of the report of the Y secretary and of several of the Y organizers, brilliant speeches and fine music.

The annual sermon on Sunday afternoon will be preached by Miss Elizabeth Greenwood, World's and National superintendent of the evangelistic department. Miss Greenwond is a fine speaker and the annual sermon is looked forward to as a special event in the Convention. White-ribbon women will, to a great degree, fill the pulpits of the various churches of St. Paul and Minneapolis on Sunday morning and evening. The chairman of pulpit supplies this year is Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, one of the National organizers, who will work in connection with the local committee.

The local committee reports the enthusiasm increasing, committees in good working order, the St. Paul press aiding in many ways, and everybody bending to the oar. Only three weeks more and we will again meet in our National Convention.

Reserved seats for the National Convention are selling fast, and all who desire them should write at once to Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, chairman of committee on finance. Seats are reserved only when the money for the same is sent to her. The price per seat is one dollar, and coupons will be returned to the purchasers. Send money order or check, not postage stamps.

Important.

All state presidents, National organizers, lecturers, and other speakers who expect to be at National W. C. T. U. Convention in St. Paul, and are willing to speak on convention Sunday are requested to send their names and place of entertainment to the chairman of the pulpit committee, Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, chairman committee Sabbath services, Schoolcraft, Mich., care Mrs. J. W. Budrow.

Sabbath Travel at Convention.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Through your columns I wish to plead that the committee on Sunday meetings during the National Convention plan to so make the assignments, as to allow the respective speakers time to secure a stopping place near the church in which they are to talk, or to arrange for a private conveyance, in order to avoid using Sunday cars.

A street car conductor wrote the Ram's Horn, in reply to the question, "Why do not men attend church?" that it was impossible for him to attend regularly, because he had to wait on Christian people and see that they get to their places of worship. Any traffic that makes it impossible for men to obey God's fourth command, is wrong, and it hardly seems

Lazy Liver

"I have been troubled a great deal with a torpid liver, which produces constipation. I found CASCARETS to be all you claim for them, and secured such relief the first trial, that I purchased another supply and was completely cured. I shall only be too glad to recommend Cascarets whenever the opportunity is presented." J. A. SMITH.
2920 Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

CANDY CATHARTIC Cascarets TRADE MARK REGISTERED REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.
... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...
Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 320

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

right for white-ribbon women, above all others, to aid in such robbery, even to proclaim temperance truths, for the Bible teaches, "Do not evil that good may come."

I know that the work of the committee is not easy, but it surely were better that fewer pulpits be filled than that representatives of our society, wearing their badges, be seen by the world, hurrying hither and thither on Sunday trains.

If keeping a Holy Day meant so much to the welfare of ancient Israel we can not trample upon the Rest day rights of others, and retain spiritual power.

BELLE H. MIX.
Danville, Iowa.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[Bright, newsy items of special interest are acceptable for this column, but do not send detailed reports of unions or conventions to us. Send them to your state reporter.]

A CHEERY letter from the Howard Lake, Minn., Somerset Y, tells of a dime supper which netted six dollars for their treasury.

THE local union is the power house from which must come the electricity to turn the wheels of every form of beneficent activity in the W. C. T. U.—The Granite State Outlook.

MISS JESSIE ACKERMANN is advertised to speak at the convention of the first Michigan district. She is to be in the district for a week, including two Sundays, and will speak in some of the largest churches in Detroit.

THE superintendent of medal contest work of Illinois reported 404 contests held in the state this last year, average net receipts $8.25. Then there were diamond contests, and more gold and grand gold than ever before.

BEFORE the close of the Illinois state convention the treasurer was able to report the state out of debt and with a small balance in the treasury. This is especially gratifying in view of the fact that extraordinary and unusual expenses had drained the treasury for the past two years.

THE Quebec Provincial W. C. T. U. was in session last week in the pretty town of Westmount, a town so near Montreal that it is generally considered as a suburb of that city, to the great disgust of its inhabitants, who with pardonable pride point out that the corporation of Montreal would never have succeeded in keeping it the strictly prohibition place which it is. The Dominion president, Mrs. A. O. Rutherford, is a guest of the convention.

MRS. HENRIETTA SKELTON is doing heroic work for membership in Minnesota; she is winning laurels wherever she speaks. Mrs. Addie Northam Fields is also in the field, and the state president is untiring. Only a little is lacking to bring the Convention state up to Benefit Night with North Dakota, Indiana and Kansas.

AT the recent territorial convention of Oklahoma a new department was created, that of work among the Indians. The superintendents of jail and prison work, flower mission, distribution of literature and medal contests made very encouraging reports. The Okarche union has defeated an application for a saloon license nine times in nine months.

SOMERSET union, Michigan, had a Sunday-school rally which was participated in by thousands and witnessed by other thousands. One float represented the battleship Kentucky. Under its name were these words: "Christened with Water." There was also a wagon load of children with the motto on horses and wagon, "Tremble, King Alcohol; We Shall Grow Up."

MRS. SHANGLER, of the Wyandotte, Mich., union, who is local superintendent of railroad work, with two young lady assistants, recently spent a whole day at the depot giving out bouquets with Scripture texts to the trainmen as they passed through. They gave out 115, and the men showed much pleasure at this attention. She conversed with a conductor, who said we could not know how much good such things do; that most people seem to think railroad men a hard set and pay no attention to them.

DR. E. G. BRACKETT, agent of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association at Santiago, Cuba, speaks with enthusiasm of the square tin boxes filled with delicacies for the soldiers, sent by the Massachusetts women. Another good thing which the doctor says he had thought in his heart was "kind of foolish," was the little comfort bag. The day after Dr. Brackett took a box of comfort bags to the Second Regiment, the sergeant came to him and said: "Say, the men went crazy over those bags. Why, those are the greatest things I ever saw." Dr. Brackett could have readily distributed 2,000 additional comfort bags, if he had had them.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel.

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers; Third Nebraska, Col. W. J. Bryan; First Texas, Col. W. H. Mabry; Fourth Ohio; First and Third Kentucky; First Wisconsin, Colonel Schadel; First South Dakota, Colonel Frost; Second Missouri; Second Virginia, Col. James C. Baker; Forty-ninth Iowa, Col. Wm. G. Dows; Fiftieth Iowa, Colonel Jackson; One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Indiana, Colonel Studebaker; Third United States Engineers, Rev. Sam Small, chaplain; Sixth Illinois, Col. Jack Foster.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

A New Anti-Canteen Petition.

As it seems unlikely that the President will use his authority to close the regimental saloons, alias "canteens," and as in any case the Ellis bill, favorably reported and pending, will be needed to make such closing permanent and to close the "canteens in soldiers' homes" and the bar in the immigrant station at New York, all the anti-canteen sentiment should now be turned on Congress, and especially on congressmen and senators while they are at home among their constituents, by whom they should be visited, in delegations so far as possible, individually if nothing better can be arranged, to present petitions and ask their active coöperation to pass the Ellis bill early in the coming short session which lasts only from December to March 4. The following petition head is suggested:

To the United States Senate: [Send duplicate to House:]

"The undersigned earnestly petition you to pass the Ellis bill to forbid liquor selling in 'canteens' of the army and navy and of soldiers' homes, and in immigrant stations and government buildings."

Our Library Table.

"Johnny's Job," by Octave Thanet, in the October SCRIBNER'S, is one of this well-known author's short stories of industrial life in the West. The principal scene is laid in a great iron foundry.

Jonathan S. Jenkins, an American miniature painter, lived in Havana during the middle of the century and kept a diary of his experiences. A selection from this journal is published in the October CENTURY.

The October number of ST. NICHOLAS opens with two articles on Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, both of them illustrated from photographs. The articles are written by Annie C. Kniper and Jeannette May Fisher, and contain many pretty stories about the merry girl queen.

The complete novel in the October issue of LIPPINCOTT'S is "Confessions of an Aide-de-Camp," by Captain F. A. Mitchel. It is a rattling tale of the Civil War, and the heroine and hero (especially the heroine) pass through some surprising adventures. Other stories are "Tish's Triumph" and "Grandma's Diamonds." The latter is by R. L. Olbar.

In the October LADIES' HOME JOURNAL Edward Bok devotes much of his editorial page to showing country girls and women the way to make their lives mean more—how they can partake more fully of the true enjoyments of life. He has prescribed a method of country living which can readily and profitably be pursued, and which will go far toward the emancipation of the country woman from much of the drudgery, and lighten the isolation of farm life.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF OUR WAR WITH SPAIN, a series of historical sketches, incidents, anecdotes and personal experiences in Hispano-American war. Written and compiled by John R. Musick, author of "Columbian Historical Novels." The J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company, 57 Rose St., New York.

GLIMPSES OF GOD, and other sermons, by Rev. B. Gwernydd Newton, pastor of the Franklin Avenue Congregational church, Cleveland, O. A rare volume, full of spirituality, eloquent in style, vigorous in thought, broad in spirit, and full of tonic to the soul. Sent to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, $1. Address the clerk, Franklin Avenue Congregational Church, Cleveland, O.

Two short stories, of unusual interest, are published in October numbers of THE YOUTH'S COMPANION. One is "Jessica's Career," a story for girls, by Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, which appears in the issue of October 13. The issue of October 20 contains the story of "The Elihu Primbles," by Mrs. Annie Hamilton Donnell, whose stories of New England character are true to the life and charming in their sentiment and humor.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS for October presents in its department of "Current History in Caricature," a remarkable series of cartoons recently published in the Spanish weekly, Don Quixote, touching various phases of the war and its results. It is believed that this journal reflects the sentiments of the Spanish people with great fidelity. These cartoons should be studied by all who seek to know what the popular feeling just now in Spain really is.

In the October ATLANTIC Professor Liddell renews his vigorous appeals for the study of our mother-tongue, as opposed to the dead language fetich, and he points out how far and how rapidly we have drifted away from the language of Shakespeare, a great part of whose writings now conveys the wrong idea or no idea to our minds, even while we think that we understand it; and he shows the imminent danger that the great master of all literature may eventually become as strange and as obsolete as Piers' Plowman or Beowulf are to-day.

"Sanitas" Means Health.

How to have thoroughly sanitary surroundings is told in a pamphlet by Kingzett, the eminent English chemist. Price 10 cents. Every household should contain this little help to comfortable living. It will be sent free to subscribers of this paper.

THE SANITAS CO. (Ltd.),
636 to 642 West 55th Street, New York City.
Disinfectant and Embrocation Manufacturers.

READ

FREE TO WOMEN I suffered for 10 years with uterine troubles, painful periods, leucorrhœa, displacement & other irregularities, and finally found while traveling in Europe the original & genuine simple, safe home treatment, that cured me without the aid of medical attendance. This is natures own remedy for women. It costs nothing to convince yourself of its merits for I send it free with full instructions to suffering women.
MRS. E.H. PAINTER, 126, 33rd St., Chicago

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Drinking Fountains
FOR
MAN and BEAST
Manufactured by
The J. L. Mott Iron Works
81-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.
311-313 Wabash Av. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
Copyright 1896, by the J. L. Mott Iron Works.

HISTORY OF THE
WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION
A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00 Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.
AGENTS WANTED
both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address
DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF
OUR WAR WITH SPAIN
ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.
STOP SMOKING
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

CANCER

The following and many other reliable persons testify that I thoroughly cure Cancer without the knife. Hon. E. W. Jackson, President Board of Education, Lima, Ohio, was cured seven years ago of lip Cancer. Prof. H. McDiarmid, Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio, cured seven years ago of face Cancer. Had undergone several operations before with knife. Address, Dr. C. Weber, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, for further particulars and free book.

740 Silk Fringe Cards, Love, Transparent, Escort & Acquaintance Cards, LAUGHING CAMERA, Prize Puzzles, New Games, Magical Illusions &c. Finest Sample Book of Visiting and Hidden Name CARDS Biggest list of Premiums. All for 2c. stamp. OHIO CARD CO., Cadiz, Ohio.

LADIES! MAKE $100 A MONTH,
easily representing me. Many make more. A great opportunity. Send 2c. stamp for particulars.
Mrs. Gervaisea Graham, 1250 Michigan Ave., Chicago

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home. Law College, Lima, O.

The Home.

The School Luncheon.

The school luncheon, remarks Harper's Bazaar, is a matter upon which the girl and her mother find it difficult to agree. The desire that her child should eat nourishing, digestible food, leads the parent to frown upon such indigestible and toothsome dainties as tarts, fruit cake, doughnuts, and cruilers. Too often when the girl's lunch-box does not contain that which her sweet tooth craves her mid-day "snack" is supplemented by a piece of pie from the nearest baker's, or by a handful of nuts and raisins from the corner grocery, which are indeed very indigestible.

The mother and daughter should learn that, to be digestible, an article of food must not of necessity be unpalatable, and that there are many things that do good and taste good. One can fully sympathize with the rebellion of the girl whose lunch for five days of each school-week last winter consisted of three thick slices of buttered Graham bread and, what Miss Woolson calls "a large, cold apple." We understand how even the healthy young appetite revolted at this fare, so that the mother was informed that if the lunch-box must contain "Graham bread and apples or nothing," the owner "would prefer nothing."

A little forethought and planning on the part of the mother will lead to a vast improvement in the contents of her daughter's lunch box. Among the many articles of food which can be readily transported to school come, first of all, sandwiches. These are of so many varieties that one can not weary of them. In days of old the filling for these popular dainties usually was of ham, tongue, cold chicken or cold meat. Now fish, flesh and fowl, vegetables and fruit are used in their preparation.

Salmon sandwiches are easily made and eagerly eaten by the average schoolgirl. They are of Graham bread, cut very thin, and spread with cold boiled salmon which has been picked fine, then rubbed to a soft paste with salad oil, the yolk of an egg, a little lemon juice and salt and pepper. This mixture is made particularly delicious by the addition of a few chopped olives, and will be keenly relished.

Although the girl in her teens seems to cherish a prejudice against sensible, nourishing food, she may be persuaded to eat sandwiches made of whole wheat bread cut into wafer-like thinness, and delicate slices of rare roast beef spread lightly with French mustard or with cream horse-radish.

Occasionally in the lunch-box can be put a joint of cold roast chicken or a slice of turkey. As the meal taken during the noon recess can not be hot, it should be as nourishing and tasteful as maternal love and ingenuity can make it. In some schools hot chocolate can be bought by the scholars at noon. Our girl must be urged to drink this with the lunch she brings from home. The desire for sweets after eating is a natural craving of the stomach, to satisfy which plain cake, cookies, and fruits of various kinds may be supplied. Pastries, rich cakes, fried sweets, nuts, and raisins are as much out of place in the lunch-box as in the stomach of a growing, studying girl.

Buy of those who advertise in The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

Attention, White-Ribboners!

"Your Mother is Loving You Yet," is a beautiful and pathetic temperance song, words and music by Emmet G. Coleman and is fast becoming the favorite with the W. C. T. U's as is demonstrated by the many orders and kind words we are receiving daily from the white-ribboners. We are determined to place this song in every temperance home in the land, it makes no difference what the sacrifice on our part may be. Mothers, your nome is not complete without this song if you have children to be warned of strong drink.

"Your Mother is Loving You Yet," is a true history of a boy, eighteen years old, who killed a very old man. The cause of the crime was whisky. The boy was sentenced to death, and while awaiting his doom he received a message from his old mother, two thousand miles away. This was the message: "In spite of your crime, your old mother is loving you yet."

OUR OFFER.

Send us forty cents, stamps or post-office order on Danville, Va., the latter preferred, also the name of your best W. C. T. U. friend, and we will mail you two copies of the song, postpaid, and we will also send you free a copy of "Marching Onward," a rousing temperance chorus by the same author. "Your Mother is Loving You Yet" is full sheet music size, on best music paper, and retails for forty cents per copy. You get two pieces for the price of one. This offer is unlimited.

White-ribboners in Canada should remit silver, as Canadian stamps are of no service to us.

Address,

THE TEMPERANCE MUSIC CO.,
Kentuck, Va.

N. B.—At the above rate this song will surely find its way into every W. C. T. U. home in the land.

The Responsive Reading for October is upon a subject in which we feel sure every white-ribboner is keenly interested, viz., THE UNION SIGNAL, and the writer is Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, its present managing editor. In the form of questions and answers much information is given concerning the pages of that paper which Miss Willard called so aptly, the weekly "letter from home." Local unions are told what kind of articles and news items are sought after by the editors and how the individual society may speak through its columns. The various departments of the paper are touched upon and methods suggested by which THE UNION SIGNAL may become the "greatest woman's paper in the world."

BIBLE READING FOR OCTOBER. "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit," by Mrs. Addie Webster DeLong. There is no effective service for God without the gift of the Holy Spirit, says the writer truly. The soul for expansion requires the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of Jesus Christ and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost. The baptism of the Spirit, we are told, is for testimony and power, and we may know when we receive it. If we lack this power we shall be held responsible, for all may have it for the asking. How to obtain this baptism is a question this Reading aims to answer.

Advertisers like to know what paper pays them best. Always mention The Union Signal when writing.

Gleanings.

The Cigaret Evil.

In a recent issue we gave our readers a glimpse of the cigaret evil among boys in New York. Since that time a vigorous campaign has been instituted and carried on with a degree of success that is encouraging. For instance, in many stores, where tobacco is sold, there now appears a sign giving notice that no cigarets will be sold to boys, nor to any person under sixteen years of age.

Rev. Dr. Miles has made a tour of part of the city and reports, however, that many boys still smoke and that to excess. As many as twenty cigarets a day are accredited to some lean, nervous, young creatures. Dr. Miles also says that cigaret smoking is gaining prevalence among the little girls who steal away to the docks and there smoke cigarets to their mental and physical hurt. Of this Dr. Miles says:

"To my great surprise I learn that little girls have the habit of cigaret smoking. An intelligent little girl said to me:

"'Why, sure they smoke. They go to a store and say that they want some cigarets for their father, and they go on to the dock with the boys and smoke.'

"The evil of cigaret smoking is most pitiful—the parents as well as the children are wishing that relief might come."

A policeman in speaking to the doctor upon the subject of the habit told of his observation in one incident as follows:

"I arrested a young man some time ago for a crime. As soon as I put my hand on his arm he trembled nervously. He asked me to let him take a whiff to brace him up. When he did so his nerves were steadier for a little while."

Significant Statistics.

Mr. Nelson, the most distinguished of English actuaries, after long and careful investigations and comparisons, ascertained by actual experience the following astounding facts:

Between the ages of fifteen and twenty, where ten total abstainers die, eighteen moderate drinkers die.

Between the ages of twenty and thirty, where ten total abstainers die, thirty-one moderate drinkers die.

Between the ages of thirty and forty, where ten total abstainers die, forty moderate drinkers die.

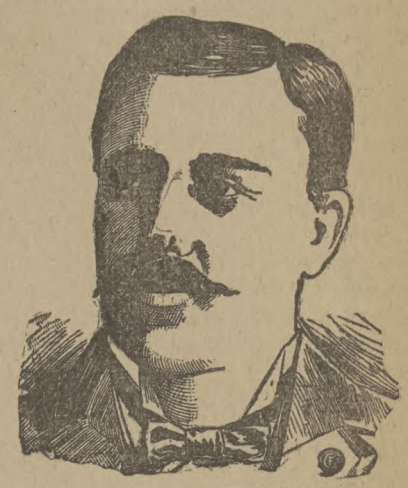
Or, expressing the fact in another form, he says:

A total abstainer twenty years old has the chance of living forty-four years longer, or until sixty-four years old.

A moderate drinker has the chance of living fifteen and one-half years longer, or until thirty-five and one-half years old.

A total abstainer thirty years old has the chance of living thirty-six and one-half years longer, or until sixty-six and one-half years old.

A moderate drinker thirty years old has the chance of living thirteen and one-half years longer, or until forty-three and three-fourths years old.



A total abstainer forty years old has the chance of living twenty-eight and one-fourth years longer, or until sixty-eight and one-half years old.

A moderate drinker forty years old has the chance of living eleven and two-thirds years longer, or until fifty-one and one-half years old.—New York Witness.

STARVING

in the Midst of Plenty.

That's what people with poor digestion are doing every day. They have no appetite or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require it does them no good, because the stomach does not digest it and the fermenting mass of food becomes a source of disease, of headache,

MR. JUDSON A. STANION.

sleeplessness, languor and the thousand and one symptoms of disordered digestion. Mr. Judson A. Stanion, the great Church and Sunday School worker and president Christian Endeavor Union, St. Louis, Mo., says:

"I have had to be extremely careful what I ate. Many things were indigestible, and after a hearty dinner I could scarcely keep awake. I never have been sick in bed, but have had a great deal of inconvenience from indigestion. Since I learned of the merits of Stuart's Tablets, I keep them in my desk or carry them in my pocket, and find that I can eat anything at all without discomfort. They were recommended to me by a friend who is enthusiastic in their praise. I can not afford to be drowsy after lunch, and find these tablets just the thing to assist digestion and keep all my faculties wide-awake." Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. They digest the food whether the stomach works or not, and that's the whole secret. At all druggists, 50 cents a box. For book on stomach diseases, giving valuable advice, address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

Our Memorial Ode.

"Press On and On," our Chieftain's orders, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, music by Mr. O. H. Hawley, is meeting with wide appreciation. The words are tender and effective, the music stirring and martial. It will be sung wherever the W. C. T. U. has voice. The Ode is printed in sheet form, with a beautiful half-tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy; 60 cts. per dozen copies to state, county and local unions. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Our friends who order small amounts of literature, promising to remit by return mail, often stating they do not know the price, etc., can not understand the annoyance of carrying these small memorandum accounts or they would be more prompt in remitting.

Signal Notes.

THE cabmen of Paris are forbidden to smoke pipes while driving a fare.

THE Chinese Y. M. C. A., organized only a year ago, in San Francisco, has now one hundred and sixty-five enrolled members.

THE Christian Endeavorers of the Reformed Church in America have contributed money through the regular denominational channels to erect twelve mission churches.

THE Queen Regent of Spain is a woman of the strictest morality and of many noble and womanly qualities. She has never attended a bull fight and declared them cruel and barbarous. No wonder she has never been popular with the Spaniards.—Ex.

THE late Mr. Hubert Howard, son of Lord and Lady Carlisle, who was killed at Omdurman, was, as is well known, his mother's constant helpmate in her charities and her labors for social reform. Like his sisters, also, he was early a convert to teetotalism, and Lady Carlisle—herself a lifelong abstainer—has now sent to the north of England Temperance League a check for £500 to be spent on Bands of Hope. "I give this money as a thankoffering," she writes from the house of mourning at Naworth, "because I have the blessing of knowing that my son Hubert was, during his short but eventful span of life, faithful to the total abstinence pledge he took when he was ten years old."

THE Medical News for September 3, 1898, contains an article by Dr. Albert B. Hale, on "Tobacco-Intoxication—Locally and Systemically Considered; Report of a case of Tobacco-Amblyopia." Dr. Hale gives a case of irritation of the conjunctiva by tobacco dust in a cigar-maker. The conjunctiva was red and injected, and there was constant lacrimation. He also reports the case of a man who had smoked excessively for ten years. He developed dimness of vision, which when measured was found to be six thirty-sixths for the right eye and six-eighteenths for the left. Lens and retina seemed normal. There was no error of refraction. The man was treated, the tobacco stopped, and in the course of three months his vision again became normal. Dr. Hale believes that this was a case of toxic tobacco optic neuritis.

THE thirtieth anniversary of the planting of Good Templary in England by Joseph Malins (on September 8, 1868), has been celebrated in Liverpool by great open-air and indoor public meetings, processions, Sunday services, and a special session of the Grand Lodge of England, at which one hundred past officers received the Grand Lodge Degree. Representatives attended from all parts, and the proceedings included gatherings at the Wesley Hall, the Norwood Congregational Church, and St. Peter's Church, where the vicar conducted the service, and Rev. G. H. Lunn, District Chaplain, preached. It was reported there were now 220,000 adult and junior members of the Order in the British Isles, the majority being in adult lodges. In recent years there has been a general increase all round, but especially in Scotland, where the increase during the last two years is 11,038.

TO SAVE DOCTORS' BILLS.
Use "Garland" Stoves and Ranges.

LARKIN SOAPS AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin Idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample soap if mention this publication.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.
OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN THE UNION SIGNAL, Oct, 6th.

TO ST. PAUL

FOR THE

ANNUAL CONVENTION

OF THE

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

November 11-16, 1898

THE CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY

offers unequalled train service for all Delegates, and Special Reduced Rates. Choice of Day or Night trains.

DAY TRAIN

Leaves Chicago at 8: 30 a. m., arrives St. Paul 10: 10 p. m.

"THE PIONEER LIMITED"==

(the only perfect train in the world)—leaves Chicago at 6: 30 p. m., arrives St. Paul 7: 50 a. m. Electric lighted throughout.

NIGHT EXPRESS

leaves Chicago 10: 15 p. m., arrives St. Paul 11: 30 a. m. Electric lighted throughout. This train gives day view of the Upper Mississippi River.

FOUR TRAINS DAILY ST. PAUL TO CHICAGO

Ticket Office... 95 Adams Street, CHICAGO

All trains from Union Passenger Station, Canal, Adams and Madison Streets.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION AT ST. PAUL, November 11 = 16.

We beg to call the attention of members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to the fact that first-class service is always maintained via

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

Fast trains leave Chicago daily for St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland and Duluth, with unexcelled Sleeping, Dining and Café Cars attached. For further information address your ticket agent,

GEO. K. THOMPSON, G. P. & T. A., 230 Clark St., CHICAGO.
H. F. WHITCOMB, Gen'l Mgr., JAMES C. POND, G. P. A., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

WEBSTER'S

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

Hon. D. J. Brewer, Justice of U. S. Supreme Court, says: "I commend it to all as the one great standard authority."

It excels in the ease with which the eye finds the word sought; in accuracy of definition; in effective methods of indicating pronunciation; in terse and comprehensive statements of facts and in practical use as a working dictionary.

Specimen pages, etc., sent on application.

G. & C. Merriam Co., Publishers, Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

TEA SET FREE

56 PIECES.

Full size for family use, beautifully decorated & most artistic design. A rare chance. You can get this handsome china tea set & one dozen silver plated tea spoons for selling our Pills. We mean what we say & will give this beautiful tea set absolutely free if you comply with the extraordinary offer we send to every person taking advantage of this advertisement. To quickly introduce our Vegetable Pills, a sure cure for constipation, indigestion & torpid liver, if you agree to sell only six boxes of Pills at 25 cts. a box write to-day & send 10 cts. & we send Pills by mail, when sold send us the money less the 10 cts. you sent with order & we send you one dozen Silver plated tea spoons together with our offer of a 56 piece china tea set same day money is received. This is a liberal inducement to every lady in the land & all who received the spoons & tea set for selling our Pills are delighted. American Med. Co. Dept. V 30 W. 13th St., N. Y. City.

VICI Leather Dressing

The best Shoe Dressing in the world
The genuine is made only by Robert H. Foerderer, Philadelphia, manufacturer of the famous

VICI KID

Ask your dealer for Vici Leather Dressing, and be sure the trademark with the name of the maker, is on each box or bottle. Imitations may ruin your shoes.

A book about buying, wearing and caring for shoes, mailed free. Address
ROBERT H. FOERDERER, Philada., Pa.

Burlington Route

BEST LINE TO ST PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS

"OF course you have to be careful to trim your sails?" After a moment's thought, the woman in politics shook her head. "No," she replied, "but I have to be very particular in trimming my hats. It is so easy to prejudice the electorate against you, don't you know?"

White Ribbon Special Trains to St. Paul, Nov. 10, 1898.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

On Thursday, November 10, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. will run two White Ribbon trains Chicago to St. Paul for Delegates and others attending the annual meeting of National Meeting of the W. C. T. U.

The Daylight special will leave Union Passenger Station, Chicago, at 8:30 A. M., arriving at St. Paul evening of same day, passing through Milwaukee, the summer resort towns of Wisconsin, and along the Mississippi River from La Crosse to St. Paul. The whole route is one of most delightfully varying scenic beauty.

The evening train leaving at 6:30 P. M. will arrive in St. Paul at 7:50 A. M. Friday. It will be electric lighted throughout, with Dining Car, Sleepers, Day Coaches and Free Chair Car.

An additional train with like equipment will leave at 10:15 P. M., arriving in St. Paul at 11:30 A. M. Friday. For return trip, four trains daily St. Paul to Chicago.

The Route of the Pioneer Limited—the only perfect train in the world.

The route of the United States Government Fast Mail.

Reduced rates and further information may be had on application or by addressing C. N. SOUTHER, Ticket Agent, 95 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NORTH-WESTERN LIMITED

Electric Lighted

Is the finest train between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, the Superiors and Duluth. It leaves Chicago 6:30 P. M. daily, reaches St. Paul 7:50 and Minneapolis 8:30 next morning. It is newly equipped with Library Car, Private Compartment Sleeping Car, Palace Sleeping Car, Free Reclining Chair Car, Dining Car and Coaches. Returning it leaves Minneapolis 7:30 P. M. and St. Paul 8:10 P. M. and arrives Chicago 9:30 A. M. Other trains for St. Paul and Minneapolis leave Chicago at 8:30 A. M. daily except Sunday and 10:15 P. M. daily.

Tickets will be sold on the certificate plan of one and one third fares for the round trip.

All agents sell tickets via THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY. For rates and full information apply to nearest ticket agent or to
H. A. Gross, 461 Broadway, New York.
J. E. Brittain, 368 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
T. P. Vaille, 601 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
C. Traver, 507 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.
E. B. Spain, 210 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.
W. A. Cox, 435 Vine St., Cincinnati, Ohio.
D. W. Aldridge, 127 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio.
W. H. Guerin, 67 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.
A. H. Waggener, 7 Jackson Place, Indianapolis, Ind.
Or W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 41. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, October 27, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, Autumn Clusters. By Joel Swartz 3
The Making of Dick. By Adelaide L. Rouse 3
An Australian Garden. By Amelia J. Pemmell 4
The Initiative and Referendum. By A. A. Brown . . . 4
Willard Hall Echoes 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Miss Willard Started the Mission 5
Fair Work Pays 5
Not the Men Alone 5
"Is This All You Can Do for Me?" 5
The War for Canadian Prohibition 5
In Our Homes 5
Minnesota Soldiers' Home Without Liquor 6
LOCAL UNION: 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, The Lost Glasses 7
Sliding Down Toward Deep Hole 7
With the Children. By Amy Leonard 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Liquor Traffic in Atlanta 8
The Union Reform Party of Ohio 8
Pending Bill to Abolish "Canteens" and Other Government Rumselling 9
The Importance of Our National Convention 9
National Perils and Hopes 9
Personals 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
New Honors for the National Secretary—Y's at Work . 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
New South Wales 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Ohio—Alabama—Oklahoma—Montana—Louisiana . . 10-12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 13
W. C. T. U. NOTES 13
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER 14
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Sunday-School—Soldiers and Sailors 15
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 15
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 16

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 11-16.

THE regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association was called for Wednesday, October 19. As the necessary quorum was not present, the meeting was adjourned until Friday, November 18.

RECENT results of this government's policy anent the North American Indian do not augur well for its success with other inferior races. It is to be hoped that if Uncle Sam decides to appropriate the Philippines, he will remember, not the Maine, but the admonition of Solomon—"Wisdom is the principal thing"—and that with all his getting, he may get understanding.

SPEAKING of the election of Miss Margaret Evans as a corporate member of the American Board of Foreign Missions, at its annual meeting in Grand Rapids recently, a leading church paper calls it "a woman's step forward." It is this without doubt, but it is also a decided step forward for the Board, and one in conformity with both justice and expediency.

CHICAGO people will, we feel sure, appreciate the privilege offered them in the Monday noon lecture course now in progress in Willard Hall under the auspices of the National Christian Citizenship League. The general topic is, "Present Day Social Problems in the Light of the Teachings of Jesus." The first lecture, on October 10, was given by the Hon. S. M. Jones, mayor of Toledo, the second by Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, and now Prof. George D. Herron, of Iowa College, is giving a series of six addresses. The topic for next Monday's lecture (the second of Professor Herron's series) is, "Public Resources and Spiritual Liberty." Other topics will be announced from week to week in these columns.

WE hasten to correct a mistake which appeared upon the first page of last week's issue, and are more than usually glad to do so. We learn that it is not because of "failing health" that Mrs. Fessenden resigns the presidency of Massachusetts, but for the reason that she may avoid failing health. She is, as she expresses it, "nerve-tired," and desirous of a respite from the routine work of the official position which she has so ably filled for eight years. She is planning to give herself to the lecture platform, and we are confident that, though Massachusetts grieves to surrender so tried a leader, the larger field of the National W. C. T. U. will cordially welcome Mrs. Fessenden in the capacity of National lecturer.

DESPITE the difference of opinion which exists in our ranks concerning the Temple, we are greatly cheered by the reports which reach Headquarters from the various state conventions. The majority of the states report an increase in membership, six of them up to the present writing having secured 500 or more new members during the year. Department work also has been pushed vigorously. The National Convention promises to be one of the largest in our history. Fifteen out of the twenty state conventions thus far heard from indorse the action of the mid-year executive regarding the Temple, several of them without a dissenting vote. Among the indorsing states are New York, Pennsylvania and the Crusade state, Ohio.

(Signed) THE GENERAL OFFICERS.

THE November Bible Reading in the monthly series issued by the W. T. P. A. is one of Miss Willard's beautiful Bible talks never before given in this course. The title is, "The Master Calleth." It was first prepared for a young women's Sunday afternoon meeting in Boston during Miss Willard's work for Mr. Moody in 1877. The words of the foundation text, "The Master is come and calleth for thee," spoken by one sister to another nearly twenty centuries ago, came also to the young women of Boston from a sister's lips, and to-day our publishing house sends them out to white-ribbon women everywhere as a message from a sister in heaven, one who herself always responded, and, we believe, still continues to respond, with glad alacrity to every call of the Master. It is a Bible Reading particularly fitting for the Convention month—the first without her—and we trust it will be used by every local union in the country.

CHICAGO, with characteristic go-aheadativeness has celebrated its peace jubilee in advance of the signing of the permanent peace treaty by the high contracting parties. But what matter? When Chicago says "I will," that which she wills must come to pass! And in this matter it may be taken for granted that the city has spoken for the nation—for did not the president and his cabinet and all the dignitaries of the federal government give official backing to the celebration of last week? Anyhow the jubilee was a success despite the contrariness of the weather man, who, by the way, was told by the Chinese Minister that in his country, under like circumstances, his head would have been cut off. The spirit of the demonstration, underlying all its pomp and pageantry, was grandly suggestive of paths of glory leading, not to the grave, but to those higher planes of thought and endeavor which the nations of the world shall some day attain.

THE Frances E. Willard public school building, architecturally the finest in Chicago, is situated in the residence portion of the South Side and cost something over $80,000. Its dedication, October 21, was of interest to white-ribboners. The assembly room was crowded with an interested audience of parents and pupils, patriotic decorations graced the walls and a varied program of speeches and music was rendered. The chairman of the meeting, Mr. Joseph H. Strong, member of the board of education, in his welcome to the parents and friends paid a high tribute to Miss Willard, and proposed that her natal day be observed by all the schools throughout the United States. A magnificent picture of Miss Willard, framed in oak and gold, the gift of the Chicago Central Union to the school, was presented by Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, who was appropriately introduced by Mrs. Matilda B. Carse. The unveiling of the portrait called forth much applause, and a warm expression of thanks. President E. Benjamin Andrews, superintendent of schools, said in his address that the building was so thoroughly well constructed that it could reasonably be expected to be essentially the same one hundred years from now. It is eminently proper that school houses and churches should be named for our leader and that her head should be carved in marble upon our capitol buildings, for no other woman has made more valuable contributions to the welfare of the people and thus to the perpetuity of the government and the advancement of the church.

Current Events.

Temperance.

AT the demand of the ministers of Denver, Col., the chief of police says he will enforce the law against wine rooms in connection with saloons.

THE Presbyterian synod of Illinois, in session at Bloomington, passed a resolution pledging the Presbyterian church to prohibition as the most effective plan for dealing with intemperance.

THE Paducah, Ky., city council refused to vote to close the saloons from eleven o'clock at night to five o'clock in the morning, but passed instead an ordinance prohibiting women from going into saloons.

IOWA druggists are being assessed the regular saloon license tax of $50 per month in some towns. Sioux City insists on this rule, because the saloons of that place sell less whisky than the drugstores.

DURING the World's Fair there were over 7,000 saloons in Chicago. Since then they have been gradually declining, and the numbers are not much over 6,000. Over 200 have gone out of business during the last quarter.

THE Catholic University of America, located at Washington, has a "Father Mathew Chair," under the auspices of which noted lecturers deliver temperance lectures in the university extension courses throughout the country.

THE churches of Windfall, Ind., are conducting a fight against the three saloons now in operation there. The proprietors have all applied for new licenses, and the church element has entered a remonstrance signed by 400 residents, which constitutes a majority of the voters.

PUTNAM HILL, of Medicine Lodge, Kan., was convicted in the district court of selling liquor on July 4, and sentenced to thirty days in jail and to pay a fine of $100 and costs. Fifty cases of beer seized last summer were publicly destroyed on October 8, by order of the county sheriff.

AT the recent meeting of the National Advisory Board, appointed by the late temperance congress held on Staten Island, it was decided to appoint a committee to lay before the war investigating committee evidence showing that the regimental canteens contributed much toward the sickness and troubles of the army.

THE Moville, Ia., city council has enacted a rigorous ordinance against drunkenness. For the first violation the culprit may be fined not less than five dollars, and for the fourth or any higher number not less than $100, and the mayor has no authority to suspend or remit the fine after it has been made a matter of record. Those who cannot pay must be imprisoned until the fine is liquidated at the rate of $3.33 per day.

EVIDENCES of fraud in the recent vote on the plebiscite in Canada are coming to light daily. In the Province of Quebec, which cast a majority against prohibition, nine prohibition ballots were suppressed in one polling place. In another, forty-five liquor ballots were stuffed in the box after the vote. A personator has been traced who voted forty times. The investigations by the Alliance are likely to lead to the imprisonment of a number of the offenders.

THERE is an old law in North Carolina, passed in 1879, which has never hitherto been in force, forbidding sale of liquor within two miles of any political speaking during the day on which it occurs. It is reported that the old act has been unearthed by republicans for campaign purposes. It certainly was never intended to apply to cities, and yet no exception is made. The saloon men claim that the law could be used to enforce complete prohibition during a campaign to their great injury.—Mida's Criterion (liquor organ).

CHANCELLOR JAMES R. DAY, of the Syracuse University, took occasion, in his opening address to the students in the hall of Crounse College, to warn them against frequenting places where liquor is sold. In the course of his talk the chancellor used these words: "There are places in the city below us that you must shun as you would the open mouth of hell. If any one of you are caught lurking near the door of one of these places, you give notice that your relation with the university shall terminate."

THE Wisconsin Grand Lodge of Good Templars at the recent state meeting adopted the following report regarding the introduction of prohibition in Hawaii:

> The question as to whether the curse of the saloon shall be fastened upon these islands by the authority of the United States government, and upon whatever other territory may come under the jurisdiction of the United States, is one of the greatest interest and importance, not only to the inhabitants of these lands but to the people of our own country.
>
> Your committee would most cordially indorse the recommendation of the grand electoral superintendent as to making an effort to secure petitions to Congress and by individual letters to our representatives in both houses asking for the incorporation into the code of laws for the government of the Hawaiian islands a provision forbidding the manufacture, sale and importation of intoxicating beverages in those islands.

About Women.

MRS. MARY D. HALL, of New York, for some time president of Sorosis, has resigned, and Mrs. Dimies T. S. Dennison has been elected in her place.

MISS BELLINGHAM, a Scotch lady, has contributed $1,000 to open a training school for native preachers in Penang. Dr. West will have charge and work will be done in Malay, Tamil and the Hokkien and Hakka dialects of the Chinese.

MISS ETHEL C. ZIMMERMAN, daughter of Rev. C. H. Zimmerman, of Evanston, Ill., has gone to Honolulu, where she expects to teach for two years in the Kamahameha school. She was graduated in 1895 from Northwestern University.

MRS. S. A. R. FISH, Flint, Mich., publisher of the Monthly Lesson Leaf on missions, has recently been re-elected president of the Flint district W. F. M. S. for the twenty-fifth consecutive year. In all this time she has only been absent from one annual and one semi-annual meeting.

MISS LOIS KNIGHT is a practical engraver on advanced lines. For two years she worked eight hours a day, being the only woman among seven hundred workmen. Last year her name was attached as engraver to seventy thousand illustrated catalogues, representing wholesale and retail silver houses of New York.

MISS REUBINA WALWORTH, one of the heroic nurses in Camp Wikoff, died at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York on October 18, after a five weeks' illness of typhoid fever. Her mother is Mrs. Ella Hardin Walworth, doctor general of the Women's National War Relief Association. Miss Walworth was a Vassar girl and at the beginning of the war with Spain she left her position as teacher in a private school to take a course in nursing.

MISS JOSIE A. WANOUS, of Minneapolis, was elected third vice-president of the American Pharmaceutical Association at its annual meeting in Baltimore, in September, the first time in the history of the association a woman has been given an office. Miss Wanous is of Bohemian descent. She has a drug store in Minneapolis on the second floor of the Syndicate Block, a building filled with doctors and dentists, and her energy and tact have made her very successful. She is a member of the Political Equality Club of that city.

Educational.

DREW Theological Seminary has received from a friend or friends, whose names are not to be made known, $100,000, to be used to erect a new chapel and administration building.

THE executive officers of the National Educational Association, President Lyte, Secretary Shepard, and Treasurer McNeil, are on a tour of inspection of the cities that have applied for the meeting of 1899, Los Angeles, Portland, Tacoma and Salt Lake City.

ONE of the noteworthy incidents connected with the recent peace jubilee in Chicago was the conferring of the degree of LL.D. upon President McKinley by the University of Chicago, with imposing ceremonies. The President is the first person upon whom the university has bestowed the honor of this degree.

THE grand jury of Webb county, Texas, has found nearly twenty indictments against men for school census frauds. More than 1,000 fraudulent names have been discovered on the rolls of the public schools of Laredo, the result of importing Mexican children across the Rio Grande. These indictments are the result of charges made by Barrett Gibbs, Populist candidate for governor, that during the last seven years over $3,000 of the state school fund had been paid to southwestern Texas political tools of the state administration.

At Home.

THIRD Assistant Postmaster-General Merritt, in his annual report, recommends immediate negotiations with the postal administrations of England, Germany and France to reduce the international postage rates to two cents a half ounce or fraction thereof.

THE Peace Commission has been in session at Paris for two weeks, without arriving at any agreement. The main point of discussion so far is the Cuban debt which the United States government positively refuses to assume or to allow it to be saddled upon the Cubans.

CAPTAIN GABRIEL REYNAUD, a French cavalry officer, has arrived in New York for the purpose of establishing a carrier pigeon service on the French Line steamships on this side of the Atlantic, such as he has completed since last June on the French side. Messages can thus be sent immediately from a vessel meeting with an accident.

Abroad.

THE powers have accepted Italy's proposal to call an international conference to devise measures of common action against anarchists. Venice has been decided upon as the place of its meeting.

THERE are said to be 80,000 men out in the strike at Paris, and it is thought that the exposition in 1900 may have to be postponed in consequence of the delay. Troops have been called in from all parts of France to prevent rioting and bloodshed.

A DISASTROUS wreck occurred off the coast of Cornwall, Eng., October 14. The liner Mohegan, bound from London for New York, went ashore on the rocks. Of about 200 who were on board only fifty were saved. No explanation has yet been found for the accident.

NATIVE chiefs to the number of 100 have been arrested and are waiting trial at Freetown, capital of the British colony of Sierra Leone, for the murder of American and other missionaries at Kwelu in May last. A number of the chiefs implicated have already been convicted.

CAPTAIN-GENERAL BLANCO has formally acceded to the request of the American commission to permit the free entry of Red Cross supplies at the ports of Havana, Cardenas, Cienfuegos, Sagua la Grande, Caibarien, Bahia Honda and others of less importance in Cuba.

DISPATCHES from Trondhjim, Norway, state that the searching expedition which was organized to seek tidings of Professor Andree and his polar exploration party has returned to Spitzbergen, having penetrated the ice to within about 600 miles of the pole. The highest latitude reached was eighty-one degrees. No trace of the Andree party was discovered, and little doubt obtains now that the explorer has perished. The searching party collected much valuable zoological material.

A DESPATCH from Toronto, Canada, says: "At the tourist fête at Halifax, one of the unique sights, and one which gave intense satisfaction, was a human pyramid of two hundred soldiers, rising to six men in height, the whole party waving stars and stripes and union jacks. The imperial war office, on being asked for permission to use the stars and stripes, promptly cabled the permission. This is the first time in the military history of Halifax that the soldiers or sailors have been allowed to use, even at a fête, the flag of another nation!"

Contributed.

Autumn Clusters.

BY JOEL SWARTZ.

The new wine is found in the cluster. . . . Destroy it not, for a blessing is in it.—Isa. 65:8.

SEE! what wealth and beauty shine
In the clusters of the vine,
Filled with autumn's sweetest wine!

Ah! what hues of beauty drape
Every full, distended grape,
And how perfect is its shape!

How the microscopist dwells
On the many-chambered cells
Where the ripening vintage swells!

Every pendant of the vine
Seems to him a thought divine
Hung in clustering crystalline.

Such as these sweet clusters hold
In unbroken cell and fold,
Luscious, liquid, pure as gold;

Such, I trow, was that "good wine,"
Which the Saviour, all divine,
Made at Cana's wedding shine.

Not of fermentation bred,
Lust-inflaming, poisonous, red,
Filling home with woe and dread;

Not such wine as Bacchus sang,
Source of many a woe and pang,
Praised with shout and loud harangue.

. . . . . .

As I sit beneath the eaves
Which the vine-clad bower weaves,
Listening to the rustling leaves,

Dreaming half, I seem to hear
Song of psalmist and of seer,
Stealing on my drowsy ear;

Song of gratitude divine
For the heart-enlivening wine,
Sung of old in Palestine,—

Sung in Palestine no more,
As in happier days of yore,
When they gathered autumn's store.

Devon, Pa.

The Making of Dick.

BY ADELAIDE L. ROUSE.

"I TELL the tale as 't was told to me." It all happened long ago, so long ago that the boys who went to school with Dick are among the oldest inhabitants now.

It is a rough town, that seacoast village, and they say it was rough then, only it was much smaller. Nowadays they have a good school system, a superintendent, and special teachers; but Miss Mary taught in a low, one-room schoolhouse. Nowadays they have janitors to take charge of the buildings and furnaces to warm them, but Miss Mary swept her schoolroom and made her own fires.

There were other pupils in the school, of course, but my story deals only with Dick, or, rather, with Dick and the teacher.

"Kinder puny looking and innercent-like," Dick had "sized her up" on the first day of her term, as he artistically expectorated at the fence during recess. "Innercent and easy to get around. I don't calculate to do much studying this term."

A shout of derisive laughter went up from the other boys. The idea of Dick's studying was funny, to say the least.

Dick appreciated the laugh against himself, and went on, "Yes, them higher mathematics and furrin languages are a-wearing me out. See how flabby my muscle is."

He held up an arm which might have won him a laurel wreath in classic Athens, and as expert in throwing the discus as at quoits, which, as I understand it, is the same thing.

"It is great fun not to have a man teacher this winter," said another boy, and all assented. Usually the winter term, when all the "big boys" attended, was taught by a man.

The puny teacher came to the door just then and rang a hand-bell, and the pupils went in. The first day with a teacher was apt to be interesting, and they were in a mild state of excitement as to what Miss Mary would do next.

Instead of calling a class, she stood on the platform in her nervous way and told a story. She couldn't tell why she told the story of the Greek runner and the lesson drawn from it by St. Paul, to these stolid looking girls and boys, but she felt impelled to tell it, and she told it well. For the first time in his life a dim idea came to Dick of something great and noble. He felt his chest swelling, and involuntarily he straightened himself. He could not have explained the sensation for his life; perhaps he thought he was chilly, but a thrill crept from his feet to his head.

The teacher finished the story with some poetry, so the old fisherman told me, but he "disremembered what it was." I wish I knew. Had she lived later she might have closed with Browning's lines, beginning,

"One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward."

When Miss Mary went to her boarding place that night, and was eating her supper of clam chowder and codfish, she knew why she had told that story, and to whom. It was to Dick Devine. It was long before the days of scientific child study, but Miss Mary was trying to know the children in her care, to know their depths and shallows, and the rocks in their characters, as the sailors knew the waters beating against the old town.

Dick was sketched for her in a few words by Cap'n Esau. "Father drank himself to death, his father drunk himself to death before him, and his father drunk himself to death before him. What's bred in the bone has got to come out in the flesh. Saltpeter won't save Dick, and he knows it."

It was not the first time the teacher had struck this belief in heredity, as she worked among these fishing towns. Perhaps it is more common among coast people than among inlanders; I have often thought so. She resolved that she would fight this idea as a drowning person fights for his life; she would save Dick from the fate of his "forebears"—there was a Scotch strain in Miss Mary—if she did nothing else with her life. But how to begin?

"What of the boy's mother?" Miss Mary asked Cap'n Esau. "Yes, his mother and his grandmother?"

The captain took his pipe from his mouth. "Shiftless, wore-out women, every one of 'em," he said laconically, "not that they didn't have enough to make 'em so."

"Does Dick drink now?"

"Yes; hard, at spells. Sometimes he is sober for weeks. But it will come. He says there ain't any use fighting what's born in you."

Dick had one of his spells not long after. A schooner came home after a successful fishing trip in deep water, and as a result, nearly every man in town was more or less intoxicated.

The little teacher met Dick the next day. He had not been to school for more than a week, which was the ostensible reason for her stopping him. But she kept him till she had said, "Richard"—she always gave him his full name—"Richard, I want you to promise me that you will never drink another drop of liquor."

"What good would it do to promise?" he asked gruffly. "It is only a question of time with me. Every man jack of us as far back of me as I can go, was a drunkard. It is in me, and what is bred in the bone must come out in the flesh."

"Richard, there is no sense in a being made in God's image talking that way. I grant that you have fearful odds to battle against, inherited tendencies, handed down from generation to generation, and your environment is against you, for your old associates will help you down. I grant that you will have a tremendous struggle, but you can conquer if you will. And the fiercer the struggle the more glory to the victor. Tell me that you will fight this appetite as if you were fighting for your life. It is a more serious battle than if it was for your life."

"I'd like to please you, Miss Mary, but if I was to do all I could I would end as the rest have done. It is more than one fellow can do—to fight an enemy that has been growing strong on generation after generation. If some of my folks had made a show of fighting the drink devil before it had grown so strong, there might have been a show for me, perhaps. I have studied the thing again and again, and it's fate, that's all. We are strong and promising enough, we Devines, till about twenty-five, then we go all to pieces, and it don't take long to finish us. I'm the strongest and sturdiest of the lot, they tell me, but I'm beginning earlier than the others. I wish you wouldn't feel so bad, Miss Mary. You feel worse than I do; I wonder why."

"Because I do not believe in heredity, if one will use one's will against an appetite. Besides, I see great possibilities in you."

"In me, Miss Mary?"

"Yes; in you. What do you mean to make of yourself, Richard Devine? God will demand a return for the life He gave you."

Miss Mary turned and walked rapidly away, leaving Dick standing with his hands in his pockets, and an astounded expression on his face.

"Well, I am beat," was his only comment.

Miss Mary did not talk to Dick again, for she had a hemorrhage soon after, and her friends took her away, and the seaport people supposed they would never see her again.

Three years went by, and the fishing boats came and went, and the people lived and loved and sinned and suffered, and the teacher was forgotten by nearly every one except Dick. Sometimes in his worst moments, and he had them oftener now, she would come before him as she stood on the shore, the wind blowing her cloak away from her slight figure, telling him to fight as for his life. And sometimes he did. How much faster he would have gone down but for her, how many times he won a brief victory over the Devines, none but the recording angel knew.

At the end of three years Miss Mary came back to the school. Dick was no longer there; he was one of the fishermen. She saw at once that he had lost during the three years, but she saw also that it had not been without a struggle. She had come back to help him fight it out, though she knew that in so doing she took her own life in her hands. But the end in view was worth the sacrifice. "He that saveth a soul," rang in her ears above the noise of the loudest breakers.

Dick had come now, as he told Miss Mary in one of their rare talks, to look upon the fight as between two outside people. He had ceased to consider himself as particularly concerned, but he knew very well which side would win in the long run. Sometimes he wished that it was all over. Perhaps he would fall overboard some dark night, and go—"Where?" asked the little teacher in a whisper, but Dick started as if she had thundered the words. He took his cap and went out, down to a saloon, and before long the Devines had the upper hand.

The ocean seemed to mourn more than usual that night, and Miss Mary tossed restlessly on her bed under Cap'n Esau's low roof. The moan of the sea seemed to voice the unrest of the whole world. Usually she loved the sound of the water, but to-night she felt that it would drive her mad. And, although it wearied her, it wooed her; she dressed and went out, walking toward a bluff at the upper end of the town. She beat her way along with difficulty, for the wind was high. Why she went she did not know, but she felt driven toward the bluff. She stood there a few moments, watching the breakers come in. Her eyes caught sight of an object out in the surf, and in a moment she made out a human form. Whose it was she did not know, but she feared, she hardly knew what, and the form was walking out into deeper water.

What object could any one have in going to sea in that style? Unless, God help him, he were bent on suicide. And if one were only half responsible, and tired out with fighting the Devines—she was sure now. Just below the bluffs were boats—Cap'n Jacob's or Cap'n Aaron's—and the teacher knew how to use the oars. She hadn't rowed in a long time, and any violent exertion was sure to bring on a hemorrhage, but she could guide a life boat for once. The little boat was gliding over the water none too soon, for Dick had plunged in now, and all was black. The moon shot out from behind a cloud for a moment, and her strained eyes made out a black curly head. As he was about to go down for the third time, he heard Miss Mary cry. The instinct of self-preservation awoke within him, and he caught at the boat.

. . . . . .

The morning broke as mildly as ever, and the sea lay smiling in the sunlight. Miss Mary was not at Cap'n Esau's, nor was she to be found anywhere in the town. The only clue to her absence was Dick's story—that he went to drown himself and end the struggle with the Devines, and that as he was sinking for the last time, Miss Mary was there with a boat. He thought she was in the boat until he got to land, but then it was too late to look for her.

The sea gave her up the next day, and again her friends took her away, this time not to return.

And Dick? The Devines were conquered once for all. Henceforth he was sacred in his own eyes, such a price had been paid for him. He did not follow the sea, but turned to books, and afterward to the study of young men. He was one of the best-known college presidents of a generation ago, and if I were to tell you his name you would be surprised.

Athens, N. Y.

An Australian Garden.

BY AMELIA J. PEMELL.

World's Superintendent of Flower Missions.

ONE morning last July I left home early to pay a long-promised visit to an old school fellow who was married to a country squire, and lived many miles away in the interior.

It was our midwinter month, and therefore the time of our shortest days; so it was nearly dark when I reached my destination. From the gate to the house was a long carriage drive, at each side of which I noticed a row of trees. I wondered what they were, being too compact for oaks, too large for laurels, and not tall enough for elms, and was about to ask my host, who was driving me, when we drew up at the door and my dear old friend rushed out, and her warm welcome made me forget everything in the joy of our reunion.

The next morning I woke to find the sunlight flooding my room, and looking out of the window I beheld a scene of great beauty. The house was built on the brow of a hill, and spread before me was a magnificent garden, which extended fully half a mile. At the foot of this a river danced in the sunshine, and was bordered on either side by thick clusters of wattle trees covered with their golden blossoms. The garden consisted of plants, flowers and shrubs from many lands, and every here and there was an orange tree, covered with white, fragrant blossoms, and bearing also small green oranges as well as ripe golden fruit. And now I discovered that the trees between which we had passed the evening before, and which looked so dark and solemn, were grand camellia trees of unusual height and proportions. They were so thickly covered with flowers that only a few of their green leaves were visible. Directly in front of my window rose a magnificent Alba Plena fimbriata, which was so full of bloom as to be almost dazzling in its whiteness. Next to this was a coral pink wrightii; then again a lovely striped red chandleri, and further on a Waratah-Lilifo-rum, or great eastern, which was almost black in its deep red color.

Altogether the scene was extremely beautiful, and I thought it a great pity there were so few persons in this sparsely populated district to enjoy it. As I gazed I thought that was just what the dear Lord expected of us, His co-workers, viz., to bear blossom and fruit even in the wintry season, and to be always sweet and beautiful, even when there are no eyes but His to look upon us!

When at breakfast I expressed my delight at the beautiful view from my bedroom window, my host laughingly said, "Wait till you see Ethel's special plantation," and shortly afterwards they took me through a gate at the side of the house, and introduced me to the most extraordinary garden I had ever set eyes upon. At the right, on the high fence surrounding it, grew in luxuriance the Indian jessamine, so noted in homœopathy for its anti-neuralgic properties, while that on the left was brilliant with the belladonna, and another vine, covered with lovely purple bells. Along the wall at the top ran a low shelf, on which stood several beehives of the newest, and if one might judge from the busy scene, of the most approved style. And the ground at our feet was like a perfect nightmare of horticulture. The common milk thistle, marshmallow, and other weeds, thyme, sage and other kitchen herbs, raising their heads as proudly as some stately standard rose bushes covered with gorgeous, magnificent blooms. At short intervals were large beds of many colored verbenas, while every spare foot of ground appeared to be a perfect mass of common yellow marigolds.

"Whatever does it mean?" said I. "Relief from pain, the saving of limbs and possibly of lives," answered my host. "This is Ethel's materia medica and the bees' laboratory. She brews all sorts of medicines from these weeds and simples and the bees provide her with honey and wax for her ointments and other emollients. She must take you to see some of her patients, and to-morrow I will drive you to interview an old shepherd whose life she was the means of saving." Then we passed on to Ethel's bush-house and fernery, for me to inspect some splendid plants which were shortly to be exhibited at a horticultural show.

But graceful and perfect though all these were, they did not appeal to my sympathies like their humbler sisters, for the latter reminded me of the many men and women in lowly ranks of life who are performing the duties allotted to them with far more bravery than is often exhibited on a battle field, and are continually bringing healing, comfort and peace to others by their gentle ministrations, keeping themselves meanwhile unspotted from the world, though in the midst of privations, temptations and other environments utterly uncongenial. And I thanked God from a full heart for the knowledge that He accepts the faithful services of His lowly ones, as well as the highest tribute of the great and noble of the earth.

Newtown, New South Wales.

The Initiative and Referendum.

BY A. A. BROWN.

UNDER the above title an issue has arisen in American politics, that promotes more or less confusion in the ranks of the two major parties. As a political factor it is especially peculiar in that it appeals to the good judgment of every elector regardless of his political faith; but as parties are organized, it can not well be adopted by either of the majority organizations as a prominent issue, for upon its success at the polls the office of the lobbyist, corruptionist and political boss would be abolished and his usefulness terminated; and yet it is fundamental in the principles of both of the two great parties, viz., representation by the people. It can not be denied, however much we desire to conceal the fact, that political organizations have gotten away from the people, and have been subsidized by the boss, who controls the ward caucus, dictates the selection of the convention delegates, makes up the "slate" and constructs the "platform" upon which each party must "go to the country." "The people" then choose between the candidates and platforms, the success of either of which means a victory of a machine. So flagrant is the corruption under the present system, that we frequently hear the prediction of "political revolution" and of violence from the lips of men, who but a few years ago would have denounced as treasonable language such as theirs of to-day. They seem to feel a sense of helplessness that feeds the spirit of revolution against the system that controls the entire political interests of the nation.

Democrats recognizing the doctrines of Jefferson, that "the people are capable of self-government," and republicans acknowledging the teaching of Lincoln, "that this is a government of the people, by the people and for the people," alike unite in approval of such a democracy as would follow the adoption of the "initiative and referendum;" of the people making and unmaking the laws in obedience to the will of the majority.

Political parties can only be strong in a republic in proportion as they voice the will of the people. By trickery, corruption and perfect organization they may exist as an excrescence on the body politic, but in time the vengeance of the people will be aroused, and in the exercise of their constitutional prerogative, they will strike down the monster that would destroy the institutions of government in the interests of a few who would control by corrupt and wicked means.

By the employment of the initiative and referendum, the political organizations cannot get away from the people, "the fountain of power," the passage of a law forcing it for discussion in the legislative body and before the people. If the legislative body declined favorable action, the measure would then go to the referendum, or to a vote of the people. By the latter, a reasonable minority of the people can by petition force any law passed by the lawmaking body to a vote of the whole people, so that every law (although all may not have been voted for by the people) will be constructively or actually approved by the government by the people indeed. It would stop the use of political bodies for private money making ends. When it is possible to submit any project of legislation to the people, the purchase of the Congress, the most prolific source of corruption and demoralization in our political system, would be impossible and the temptation to enrich trusts and corruptions and rob men would be eliminated. The adoption of the initiative and referendum simply means implicit confidence in the people and less in the professional politician. It means that the greedy and selfish would no longer enter the halls of legislation and corrupt the people's representatives into enacting laws for their pecuniary gain, for the people will have the power to veto corrupt legislation. It would strike terror to trusts and monopolies, whose interests are antagonistic to the people. It means that this government will be a democracy, representing the will of a majority of ballots instead of a majority of dollars.

It is popularly known as "direct legislation" and as a political measure for the purification of modern politics, is heartily indorsed by the great thinkers of the age.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

MANY times the thought has been brought forward that as Saturday is a reckoning day in the business world, so it is good for us to stop and consider our ways. Paul says, "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Thus men come in to Willard Hall who know that through the Sabbath will be multiplied temptations, and they need to renew their spiritual strength.

. . . . . .

"I was knocked down seventeen years ago when voting, and I immediately became a prohibitionist," said one. Many wives need the prayers of women who are protected in their homes. "Pray earnestly," is the cry. "My husband has left his home and children all through drink. Oh, that he may be converted and turn toward God, then he will come back to us!"

. . . . . .

One father said, "I never thought before of my especial influence over my boys, but your saying that every boy has some hero to look up to, has made me wish I might be a hero in my boy's heart. I want to sign the pledge. Liquor has ruined our home, and it is all my fault. I will sign a pledge card and send it to my boy with one unsigned; maybe he will send it back signed. Pray God for this."

Two weeks later this man came in with eyes all aglow. "My boy has sent me his name on that pledge card, and he says I was always to him all he could desire in a father except for the drink, and he is so glad I sent him the cards." Since then both father and son have been in, and they are both praying for an older brother.

. . . . . .

A wife asked prayers for her husband, who feared he "could not hold out if he reformed." But he has been gone a month and is still firm. Rejoice with her.

An enthusiastic young man said: "How can a man stand still and see the abominations of the liquor traffic and not preach of Christ who can take away the appetite and keep from falling those who put their trust in Him?"

. . . . . .

In one day seven raised their hands, asking Christians to pray for them. God is never slow with His answer. A singer said as preface to his gospel song, "A little boy, seven years old, came to me one day after I sang this hymn and said, 'When you sang that song I said to myself I will be kind to the poor and serve the Lord with all my heart.'" Such hymns melt all hearts and make them as one in God's sight.

A man came for another pledge card; his friend took his yesterday, and signed it, and would not let it go, fearful of his newborn resolution if he did not have the card with him. Pray earnestly for these tempted ones.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

Miss Willard Started the Mission.

[Hearing of a Willard church within the bounds of Presiding Elder Caldwell's district in Chicago, a letter was addressed to him for information, to which he kindly sent a reply, as below.—THE EDITORS.]

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—Willard Methodist Episcopal church is beautifully located upon one of the most attractive lots on the West Side of Chicago, at the corner of Douglas Park Boulevard and St. Louis Avenue. The church is the outgrowth of a movement started five years ago by Miss Willard herself. She knew of the needs of the locality and at her own expense sent a young preacher from Evanston to preach there. A church was soon organized and a Sabbath-school started.

It was named at first, the Willard M. E. church, so this name is no recent thing to gain advantage from the interest resulting from her death. This society is now erecting a chapel upon the rear of the lots, and hopes in the near future to be able to build upon this most attractive site, such a church as would be a fitting memorial to this eminent woman. The church membership is small and not represented by any men of great wealth, however, so the erection of the church proper will depend largely upon the interest manifested by the friends of Miss Willard, otherwise it must be several years before they can have the church they desire and need. She herself sent contributions to the work of the church and promised more, which she would gladly have given had she lived.

The present pastor is George H. Studley. The lots are upon St. Louis avenue, about half way between Twelfth street and the Ogden avenue cars. This fully answers all your questions, I think, and I thank you for the opportunity of giving yourself and readers the information.

Yours heartily,
JOHN M. CALDWELL.
57 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Fair Work Pays.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—When the state fair was located at Syracuse, N. Y., the state and Onondaga county W. C. T. U. began work on the grounds, and through all these years the most patient, persevering effort has been made, for all that is lovely and of good report.

The state W. C. T. U. building is a standing monument for temperance, and Onondaga County White-Ribbon Hall, with its name on the roof, so near the West Shore railroad, pleads for the protection and purity of the home all the year round. Onondaga county has a standing fair committee of nine, three retire and three elected each year. Mrs. Emma R. Merriman has been the efficient chairman of this committee from year to year, with increasing success. Our hall is 70x30 feet, piazzas front and back, with large dining hall, kitchen and store room below, and an upper hall of the same size, with private rooms for the workers.

Each fall the halls are prettily decorated with bunting, mottoes, flags and flowers. The lower hall is used for lunch tables, and the upper one is a rest room and dispensary, where all who wish can bring their lunch baskets and get a cup of tea or coffee, and all who are sick or tired can come for rest, get family remedies and motherly kindness and care, which are greatly appreciated. The writer has charge of the upper hall, and is very glad to give this missionary work for the cause we love. Our White-Ribbon Hall is all paid for and a nice surplus in the treasury. That is the financial side of the work. When cyclones and storms have caused failures all about us, Onondaga county has never come out in debt a single year. The full results of the evangelistic side can only be known at the last day. Much Christian and temperance literature is distributed every year.

A stranger came in one day and threw down a dollar again and again on the cashier's desk. "Is that all right?" he said. The cashier thought it was. "No, it is a counterfeit," he replied. "I came in here to ask for change and cheat you out of a dollar, but when I looked around this room I could not do it. I don't want your money." "Oh, this seems like home," said a young man, "my mother is a W. C. T. U. woman." Another said, "I am thankful to go to a fair where I feel safe and no drinking and carousing allowed on the grounds." A whisky man was heard to say on the train one night, "I would give $1,200 for a license to sell liquor on the fair ground." But no such privilege is given. Why not? The Woman's Christian Temperance Union on the fair grounds, with their nice buildings and banners answers the question. Marching onward is our motto, till there shall be no legalized saloon in all the land from ocean to ocean, and every mother's boy and girl safe from its snares. ANNE S. D. BATES.
Fabius, N. Y.

Not the Men Alone.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—I have been thinking of what is included in Isaiah's words, "Woe unto them which justify the wicked for reward." When we consider all the phases of this subject, we will find it goes much more deeply into the lives of us women than many of us think.

We temperance women can see very plainly that the wickedness of the rumseller is justified by our townsmen for the sake of the license money received! and when we see the low ebb of religious life, and the few additions to our churches, what a gigantic illustration of the truth of the prophet's words, "it takes away the righteousness of the righteous." But it has other applications that may well make us daughters who are at ease in Zion look after our own safety.

The woman whose husband cares for his family either plainly or luxuriously, and does it by means of justifying the wicked in court; those lawyers who take "bad cases" for the money, take a reward for wickedness, and his wife justifies him and his course for the sake of his love and his support.

The wife of the physician who has a suspicious practice, either in low or high life, justifies him for a part of the proceeds. Alas! how many women laugh carelessly and pretend to know nothing of their husband's evil practices that they may live at ease!

Even the farmer's wife is often a participator in this crime. If her husband cheats in buying or selling, or overreaches or oppresses his hired helpers, she is generally a partner in violating God's law, and justifies his scrimping and saving for a rainy day, with little thought for the more certain judgment day.

The living furnished is the reward for justifying a wicked husband, and the wrath of God often overtakes them in this life; "As the fire devoureth the stubble and the flame consumeth the chaff, so their root shall be as rottenness and their blossom go up as dust, because they have cast away the law of the Lord of Hosts."

How surprised we will be on the last great day to see beside the rumseller and those who upheld him in evil, an army of women upon whom the woe of God rests because their whole life has been an attempt to justify wickedness in some form for the sake of a home or a husband!

(MRS.) N. E. NEWMAN.
Edwardsville, Ill.

"Is This All You Can Do for Me?"

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—Those words were overheard by a white-ribbon listener in the home of a city missionary, between ten and eleven o'clock one night. The doorbell rang and a poor inebriate stepped in asking for help. He was found to be the same person sent in the morning by the missionary to the home where such were taken in. As the man was drunk the missionary knew well why he was not admitted and after admonishing him to refrain from drink with gentle reproof he sent him to the police station. As the homeless man was leaving, in forlorn accents he said, "Is this all you can do for me?" The white-ribboner's sympathy being aroused by the despairing tones of the drunkard, she soliloquized thus: Men of thought, men of action and profession, men with happy homes, men with votes, you have the power to put out of reach this soul-and-body destroying beverage, which is so easily obtained at the present time. It stands out in broad relief upon every corner to entrap the unwary and lead them on to poverty and ruin. Many a noble heart has been ensnared by its power and driven to despair. And yet if those who have the power to vote would vote for God and home and humanity, the taxes would be less, the mother in her extremity, the widow and orphan in their poverty would be comforted, the jails and poorhouses would be vacated, and the friendless drunkard would no more be heard to say, "Is this all you can do for me?"

(MRS.) LYDIA F. WILLSON.
Hudson, S. Dak.

The War for Canadian Prohibition.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—The prohibition plebiscite is still the subject of much controversy in Canada. "Humiliating defeat," "glorious victory," "encouraging vote," characterize the result, according as the speaker is an antagonist, an enthusiast, or a cool-headed friend. One thing is sure, the war for national prohibition is only well begun, but if the campaign be wisely and energetically continued Canada may have a prohibitory law within a few years. The fight will soon be transferred to the House of Commons, and its fate will depend on whether the country will send men, on both sides of politics, who are known to be reliable and in favor of prohibition. The vote for prohibition, as is now well known, would have been much larger but for the failure of the Province of Quebec. The French element went almost entirely against it. The idea that it was a Protestant movement, and that heavy direct taxation would follow immediately, had much influence upon the election. For the prevalence of such temperance sentiment as there is in Quebec, much is due to the high moral tone which the Daily Witness of Montreal, edited by John R. Dougall, takes, not only in temperance matters, but in all that tends to raise the standard of public morality. Especially effective work was done by the Witness during the campaign. MARGARET G. URE.
917 Dorchester St., Montreal, Can.

In Our Homes.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—A dear old lady lately said, "My son sees no peril threatening his young children in permitting them to read as they choose the daily newspapers. George and Lettice have gained a knowledge of and familiarity with crime from daily reading the reports of crimes, tragedies and suicides contained in the newspaper reports that I am convinced is not for their future good.

"Now, I would not exclude from our home the daily news. It is only that we need to learn how to read and to teach the young people how to read. Specialists on nervous diseases inform us that nervous troubles are on the increase; the young people suffer from nervous ailments. I have observed that Lettice, a sensitive, nervous little girl, does not sleep well when particularly interested in a sensational crime that is for the hour everybody's theme. Lettice is the first to unfold the evening paper; she eagerly absorbs its contents. And we elder folks have fallen into the habit of talking at table and in the evenings of the tragedy of the hour.

"My grandson, George, is of the opinion that only the weak and easily impressed are affected by what they read, but certainly all are impressed by what they read. With the many and splendid helps in Bible study, no one need lack Christian culture. Alas, that the mind may be cumbered by the accounts of brutal sports, sensational reports of crime, tragedies, many forms of evil doings, and the ability to remember the good and helpful be impaired by the reading and discussing of that which is not helpful."

Men and women must come in contact with evil since it exists in so many forms, yet it would seem a stern duty the guardians of boys and girls owe to the tender, impressionable souls that they endeavor to fill the child lives full to the brim with good things, simple pleasures, and exclude as far as possible all that is exciting and disturbing.

One person alone can not bring about a reform, but every guardian of a boy or girl can endeavor to cultivate a wholesome interest in something satisfying and uplifting that will leave no evil to cultivate a morbid curiosity.

A newspaper lately roundly scored the hundreds of visitors who, inspired by such curiosity, walked the corridor of a jail in the endeavor to get a look at a notorious prisoner under the death sentence. The reporter stated that women held up little children bidding them "look and see the bad man." Our boys and girls will see numbers of "bad" folks in their future; there is no assurance that the opportunity will be lacking.

Many middle-aged women can remember that in their own childhood ghosts walked, rioted, and flitted about at will in their home. In the evenings guests and entertainers exchanged thrilling tales of the supernatural, of ghosts, omens, the death watch and warning. The stories were fascinating. Children reveled in the wild and weird tales told at the family fireside, then crept shivering and frightened into bed, starting at every sound. Woe to the nurse who should now inspire fear in a little soul by gruesome tale, but how about the awful stories in the daily papers?

EDITH ALGER.

Kansas City, Mo.

Minnesota Soldiers' Home Without Liquor.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I understand that the Minnesota Soldiers' Home, at St. Paul, is the only one in the United States that is free from the use of intoxicants, but, whether it is the only one or not, surely all will rejoice that for seven years there has not been a bit of alcohol administered, medicinally.

The surgeon, Dr. D. R. Greenlee, has gotten out a pamphlet on the subject of "Alcohol—Its Use in the Soldiers' Home," which is right up to W. C. T. U. doctrine. In it he says:

"The writer of this article has, after seven years' experience in the Minnesota Soldiers' Home, become firmly convinced that alcohol as an internal remedy is of no practical therapeutic value. This statement has been received by many, and I may almost say by all who have heard me make it, as rather an exaggerated one. Some are inclined to think that I am somewhat of a crank on this subject. But I beg to assure them that I am not in any sense of the word. I have been in the active practice of medicine for thirty-six years, and during that time I have learned to use any remedies which I can reasonably expect to aid me in my efforts to alleviate pain or to overcome disease independently of any particular creed or school. I confess at one time to having used alcohol, but I have never done so as a routine practice, and I can now look back and wonder why I ever did so at all. I have heard many say: 'The old soldiers have always been used to whisky; why not give it to them now, and let them die happy?" . . . . The happiness experienced in dying full of whisky is, I should imagine, very slight, and at all times open to doubt. No doubt it will kill them, but the happiness is a question in my mind, unless it depends on one's leaving this world and their senses at one and the same time."

The Soldiers' Home can be reached by street car, and doubtless white-ribboners will wish to visit it at Convention time.

Yours truly,

ANNA C. MCCURDY.

Minneapolis, Minn.

Local Union.

"MOTHER Experience," if such be the name still appertaining to her who controls this column, feels moved to say something in this week's issue concerning the National Convention which will be upon us so soon after this paper shall reach your hands. Throughout our great constituency there will be a certain number of women to whom this Convention will mean more than it possibly can to the members as a whole and those are the women who, either as ex-officio members or as elected delegates will make up the Convention. To some of you it will be the very first National Convention you have ever attended. I look back upon my own first convention and remember the wonderful revelation it was to me, and from my heart I congratulate you.

It is to the new delegates that I want especially to speak, but those who have borne the burdens of many National Conventions will, I am sure, bear with me. Possibly they may need the "word of exhortation" even more than the others. What are the requisites of a delegate to a National Convention? THE UNION SIGNAL gave you several most important ones in a recent editorial, but there are two others which I want especially to emphasize. These are: an adequate knowledge of the duties of a delegate and a trained conscience in the performance of those duties. What are the duties of a delegate? First and foremost, to be a delegate. One woman is sent, often at the expense of her county, district, or state, to represent the many women who must remain at home. How can she represent them unless she makes it a point, from the beginning to the close of the Convention, to be in her place as a voting delegate? It may be that she greatly desires to see the beauties of the city granting us hospitality. Shall she, therefore, be excused from the Convention? Did she attend that convention to go sight-seeing, or to learn all in her power on the various questions discussed there in order that, when the time came, she might cast an intelligent vote? Surely the answer to this question is not far to seek.

A delegate whether elected or ex-officio, goes to a National Convention not to represent herself, but the women back of her. It is her duty to look carefully into the merits of every question brought up for discussion, to vote conscientiously and to be in her place whenever there is need for action. Indeed, she should be in her place from the opening of the session till its close, for, in those days she is in no sense her own mistress but belongs, as faithful servant, to the women who have placed upon her the high honor of service. If a white-ribbon woman would keep the eighth commandment, she must not "steal" one moment of the time which belongs to others, to spend upon her own pleasure. Many important questions have hung upon the votes of two or three. Do your duty at St. Paul, dear sisters, and be in your places even though you get tired and want a little relaxation.

The duty of a delegate to her hostess may well occupy our thought for a little space. Perhaps that duty may all be summed up in the two words written so long ago, "Be courteous." We surely owe it to the homes so kindly opened to receive us that no unnecessary demands be made upon their hospitality. It would doubtless be very pleasant if each delegate could take an especial friend with her—but that would mean a doubling of the number asking entertainment, and if the majority must be denied this concession can any one ask to be made an exception?

Have we a right, either, to ask our friends in to a single meal when the house is not our own? Ought we to go in and out at our own pleasure, at any hour we choose without consulting the hostess? Ought we to do anything which we would not desire our own guests to do in our own homes?

Perhaps all this may seem to you superfluous, and yet the birds of the air sometimes bring strange tales from a National Convention. Let us each, for the sake of the dear St. Paul women and for the sake of the organization as a whole, "be instant in season" and "be courteous." St. Paul will entertain the delegates and ex-officio members only, and the National, like England, "expects every woman to do her duty."

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

We may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me. Because thou hast been my help, therefore, in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.—Heb. 13:6; Psa. 63:7.

NEBRASKA, Iowa, Vermont and Utah have held their state W. C. T. U. conventions, and I am happy to say have redeemed the good name of the W. C. T. U. in their respective states by passing resolutions to stand by the Temple in the effort now being made to pay off the $300,000 Trust Bonds. Iowa passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we consider it a sacred obligation to take up the unfinished work to which Miss Frances E. Willard pledged the fifty-ninth year of her life, and to do all that is possible towards paying the Temple Trust Bonds."

One of the resolutions passed by the Nebraska W. C. T. U. in regard to the Temple was as follows:

"Resolved, That we regard the retirement of the Temple Trust Bonds as a sacred moral obligation, and we pledge our financial support and coöperation to that end."

✠

Mr. John Madison, Irving Park, Chicago, is not, because God took him, "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." No need of preparation for him, he was one of God's own and was so ripe for heaven, earth had no fetters that would hold him. His noble wife, a leading white-ribboner, has our deepest sympathy in her sudden and great bereavement. In the death of Mr. Madison the Temple has lost a noble, generous friend. He was a Temple Trust Bond holder, and has given largely to the Temple. He audited our accounts last year, and Miss Johnson wrote him a few days ago asking that he serve again this year. She had just received a letter from him saying he would do so, when the sad news of his death reached us. Mrs. Abbie F. B. Church's name has been so long connected with "Willard Hall Echoes," that white-ribboners have learned to love her. They will be grieved to know that a great bereavement has come to her also, in the death of her noble husband. Let prayers ascend for her in this time of desolation.

✠

The beautiful souvenir teaspoon, with the Temple in the bowl, and a fine profile of Miss Willard on the handle, which we have used as a premium for filling Wheels and mite-boxes, we have now decided to put on the market for general sale. The price of the spoon is $1.75. Mrs. Margaret L. Howell, a member of the Chicago Central W. C. T. U., is trying to raise $100 for a name on a tablet; we told her we would allow a dollar for every spoon sold on this basis. With but little effort among her acquaintances she has sold a large number of spoons, and has just sent in a check for $40. One lady considered them so beautiful she purchased half a dozen. Are there not other friends that would like to aid the Temple by the sale or purchase of these beautiful spoons?

✠

If all state presidents had entered as heartily into raising funds for the Temple this year as the brave and unselfish president of Montana, Mrs. Alice N. Barnes, there would be now no question of the payment of the Temple Trust Bonds. In the early part of the summer she wrote: "I have felt from the moment I heard of our dear Chieftain's death, that if we would be true to her, we, as white-ribboners, must redeem the pledge she made for retiring the Temple Trust Bonds, so I have been trying to enthuse my women and have each one stand responsible for $2, to get it in any way she best can. To this end I have visited nearly all the unions in the state, pleading for the Temple as a memorial to Miss Willard." In a letter received from her a short time ago, she says: "Since last March Montana has raised for the Temple at the rate of $2 per member. Had all states worked as we have this year, the Trust Bonds would have been retired before this."

Our Children.

The Lost Glasses.

"OH, Johnny, my laddie, your eyes are young—
Use them for grandma, dear.
My glasses, alas! are lost again;
I've searched for them far and near.
For lack of my glasses, I cannot find
The glasses I lack—'t is true!
Look well, and some one, when you are old,
Will do the same for you."

"When I am old, dear grandmamma,"
Said Johnny, with roguish eye,
"I s'pose I shall read with glasses, too,
And sometimes lay them by.
But when they're lost, I shall never search
On window-sill, or shelf;
I shall just put my hand on top of my head,
And find 'em there for myself."
—Mary A. Gillette in October St. Nicholas.

Sliding Down Toward Deep Hole.

"BUZZ—z—z—z!" went the old sawmill, and Grandpa Jameson ran it. As the sharp saw buzzed away, the heap of sawdust below grew steadily. There was another heap that grew, though at intervals, as the first heap was transferred to it, and this was behind the mill. It was an immense heap, sloping down to the river below, and not far from the base of the heap was "Deep Hole." Grandpa Jameson was careful to cut down this big heap and cart off a section every month, but sometimes, when he was very busy, the removal might be delayed a few days.

The miller knew this might bring to somebody a danger, for if a person should venture out upon the unstable pile, it would let him down further and further, and what about Deep Hole below waiting to receive him?

"I had a tech of trouble myself," he would say, "for one day I got out there and began to slide down, and might have gone into Deep Hole, if a customer had not seen me, run a pole down to me, which I grappled, and then he drew me up."

And the morning of this story, whom did he see playing about the summit of that heap?

His grandson, Henry Jameson.

"Good mornin', Henry!"

"Good mornin', grandpa!"

"Come in, won't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, Henry," asked grandpa, when the boy was in the mill, "what's the news?"

"Nothing, unless you mean my invitation to Mr. William Rogers' dinner party to the boys and their friends to-morrow afternoon."

"Then you're goin'? Wall, look out for Mr. Rogers' punch bowl. They say he has it out every chance he can get. Does he offer it to the boys?"

"Oh, only sips."

"Sips! Don't you tech it. You get a-goin' and you may not be able to stop."

"But, grandpa, a sip, what harm will that do?"

"But a sip starts. You get a-goin', and will you stop so easy? Every sot once was jest a sipper."

"Oh, grandpa, you—you're too particular."

"Buzz—z—z—z!" went the old saw just then, and it cut through the words of the talkers, and the conversation came to a sudden end.

In a few minutes work was interrupted again, and in the hush of the sawmill, Grandpa Jameson heard a shriek:

"Help—p—p!"

"My!" exclaimed Grandpa Jameson. "It is that boy, I know, in the heap back of the mill!"

He seized a rope lying on the floor, rushed to the rear of the mill, and, looking down the slope of the big heap, he saw a boy with scared, staring eyes, clawing at the heap with his hands and trying to plant his feet firmly, but all in vain! Below was Deep Hole, black and threatening!

"Here, Henry," shouted the miller, "grip this fast!"

Oh, how good looked the rope that came sliding down the slope of the heap and touched Henry's outstretched hands, eagerly clawing away. How he gripped that rope!

"Hold on tight, and I'll haul ye up!" Grandpa Jameson assured him. "I've got some help."

It was Mr. Rogers who, passing by, heard the shout, and came just in time to pull on the rope.

Up—up, slowly came the frightened boy, and he finally stood in safety in the mill.

"Look out, Henry!" said Mr. Rogers. "Look out another time."

"There, Henry, I am going to cart off that stuff to-day," said grandpa, when alone with Henry. "And you, when you go to Mr. Rogers' dinner party, don't sip any punch. When one starts, they may go sliding down towards Deep Hole—the drunkard's Deep Hole."

The morrow came. The dinner party assembled. The host was in excellent spirits.

"I welcome the boys and their friends," said he, "and I want you all to take with me a little—a little of this punch."

A number of the boys thoughtlessly lifted and sipped the proffered glass.

Henry shook his head.

"Henry," called out Mr. Rogers.

"No, I thank you, sir."

"Why—why not?"

"You saw me back of the mill, sliding down, yesterday. What, if I begin now, and should slide down, and—"

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Rogers, pettishly.

He looked mortified though, and did not further press the matter, which should not have been pressed at all.

Henry Jameson told his mother the whole story when he went home.

He was busy telling it to her, when the outside door opened and somebody came into the little entry leading to the sitting-room where Henry and his mother were seated.

"That was the reason, mother, why I did not take that punch—"

"I am glad you did not, Henry."

"Why, I seemed to see Deep Hole right before me, and I had begun to slide toward it, I thought. I stepped back quick, I tell you; I suppose I offended Mr. Rogers. I am sorry for that."

"Oh, don't be sorry!" said the person in the entry, now coming forward.

It was Mr. Rogers himself.

"Excuse me! Nobody came to the door when I knocked, and I thought, Mrs. Jameson, you would excuse an old neighbor for entering, as I wanted much to see Henry's mother, and tell her about Henry's excellent stand yesterday. I have thought it over, and I, too, am going to stop this business, give up my punch and everything else in that line, for what if I should get into Deep Hole?"—Presbyterian.

With the Children.

BY AMY LEONARD.

NORA came in with a bright face, saying, "It will be done; mother says she'll finish my dress to-night, anyway; she wants me to have it for the party."

"She'll have to work late to do it, I should think."

"Yes, I s'pose so, but she won't mind, and I should feel mean to have to wear my old one. My new one is a beauty; I don't believe there will be so handsome a one there. I shall have a splendid time, I know. Mary Brown has got to wear her old muslin, and she seems to think it is all the style. She don't seem to know but what old things are as pretty as new."

"She wears the best she has, and seems as happy as any of you."

"Yes, but I am not like her; I want to look as well as any of 'em, or a little better."

Nora's dress was finished, and she went to Evaline's party quite pleased, but she told me the next day that Minnie Reed had a dress just like hers, and the girls were all admiring it and took no notice of hers until she said hers was just like it; then Jennie Dole said, "Yes, but yours isn't all trimmed with lace like Minnie's." Then she said hers looked real mean to her after that.

So poor Nora found there was a "fly in the ointment," trouble even with a new dress on. If we want to be happy, we must remember the beatitudes. We do not read, "Blessed is the one who has a new dress."

Raynham, Mass.

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—This is the week of the great Peace Jubilee in Chicago, which will have passed into the history we make so rapidly these days before my letter reaches you. The big city is beautifully decorated, and from my window, high up in the Temple, I can see the flutter of "Old Glory" in every direction. My heart responds with patriotic fervor to the strains of martial music in the streets, and I wish all my boys and girls were here to see this magnificent demonstration of devotion to our country and the dear old flag. It is the emblem of victory, floating triumphant over every foe that has assailed us except the one dread curse which we perpetuate by our laws. Some day, please God, that, too, will be laid low, and the stars and stripes will proclaim a new emancipation proclamation. And my boys are going to have a hand in the battle that will bring this about, are you not?

Lovingly yours,
AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I have been reading the letters of the other cousins and thought that I would write. I would like if some of the cousins would correspond with me. I always like to crack the Soft-Shelled Nuts.

Lovingly your niece,
Howard, Pa. MABEL SECHRIST.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I live in Roseland, La., a small town in Tangipalma parish, which I suppose you never heard of. I will be thirteen years old next May. My mother takes THE UNION SIGNAL, and I like the Children's page very well. I like to read the letters from the children.

Yours truly,
Roseland, La. TOMMY HOYT.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a temperance girl, thirteen years old, and wish to become a member of the Cozy Corner. My papa and mamma both belong to the W. C. T. U.; my mamma is president of it. I can ride the bicycle; I learned to ride during vacation. I would like some of the nephews or nieces to write to me.

Your niece,
Dollarville, Mich. WINNIFRED FYKE.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I have written to the Cozy Cozy Corner once before, and to two of the cousins; I would like to hear from some of the others. I live with my aunt and uncle most of the time, because the school is so near. I am in the Easthampton high school.

Lovingly,
MARY E. HENDRICK.
Easthampton, Mass.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—It is great fun to work out the answers to the Soft-Shelled Nuts. I sing in the Episcopal choir, and I took music lessons last winter. My brother Park plays the mandolin, my brother Harry plays the guitar, my father plays the violin and my mother can play the piano. My sister is too small to play anything. With all of our love to Aunt Mary.

Union City, Pa. HELEN BOYD.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.

43.

I am composed of thirteen letters.
My 10, 9, 8, 7 is a small insect.
My 11, 8, 7 is something children like to do.
My 7, 3, 9 is a heavy weight.
My 2, 12, 13 is a measure.
My 4, 8, 9, 1 is used in the kitchen.
My whole is a man noted for his kindness.

LUCY M. DEAN.
North Ferrisburg, Vt.

Correct answer to No. 40 was sent by Helen L. Boyd, Union City, Pa.; to No. 41 by Maxwell C. Lang, Barnet, Vt., and Helen Boyd, Union City, Pa.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 20.

No. 42. Revolutionary War.

UNION SIGNAL
HAND WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Liquor Traffic in Atlanta.

WE learn from the Atlanta, Ga., papers that the public mind in that city is being stirred up on the subject of the saloons. It is not prohibitionists this time who are to blame for disturbing the peace of the community, but the saloon people themselves. It seems that after the last fight for prohibition in that city, about ten years ago, when the whisky element carried the day by means of the most extensive and barefaced frauds, a "compromise" was effected between the warring elements, which in substance amounted to this: In order to preserve the "peace" so desirable for the business interests of the city, both parties agreed not to raise the question again, and, in consideration of the prohibitionists refraining from an investigation of the methods by which their opponents had carried the vote, the liquor people agreed to abide by certain restrictions of their trade. Among these restrictions are the closing of the saloons on Sunday and at ten o'clock at night. It is said by some resident prohibitionists of Atlanta that these restrictions are observed fairly well; that so strong is the prohibition sentiment of the state, more than three-fourths of the counties of Georgia being "dry," that the saloon men fear that flagrant violation of the laws will provoke another prohibition contest. The restrictions, being enforced, are irksome, and the saloon is restive under them. At the time of the Cotton States Exposition, a determined effort was made to secure a modification to allow saloons to remain open during the exposition until midnight. To the credit of Atlanta be it said this effort failed. But "the battle is on once more" to extend the ten o'clock limit.

The Atlanta Constitution has declared itself against the change, and published interviews with many prominent business men on the subject and the replies of the two candidates for mayor. With the exception of one of the latter, who dodges the question, all the persons quoted unite in opposing a lengthening of the hours. All, too, except two or three prohibitionists, express themselves satisfied with the existing laws and deprecate agitation of the question in any form.

The fact that so many upright business men, many of them professing Christians, can declare themselves satisfied to allow such an iniquitous and ruinous thing as the liquor traffic to continue to flourish under the protection of the law, and the reasons given therefor, open up all the questions of the moral obliquity with regard to this traffic, the lack of faith in God and in the power of right which are characteristics of this commercial era. Each would serve as a text for a temperance sermon. Not one of these men discusses the question from the standpoint of righteousness and morality. If such considerations have weight with them in this connection, they evidently think that they would have little or no weight with people in general, and hence are not worth mentioning. One and all utter the same cry, business in Atlanta is prospering, there is nothing like an agitation of the liquor question to stir up bitterness and excitement and interfere with business, therefore, at all hazards, let the question entirely alone. "I am opposed to any agitation of the city's liquor laws, no matter which way the agitation looks," is the consensus of opinion. But with all this we are sadly familiar. Any temperance worker could tell beforehand the substance of the objections. There is one man, however, who has the honor of departing from the beaten paths and expressing an opinion which borders upon originality. He says, "The saloons, in my opinion, ought to be run in such a way that they will not be conducted to the injury of the morals of the people, but yet long enough to allow the business to be profitable." Surely a Daniel is come to judgment!

He neglects (perhaps for lack of space) to suggest how his wise and original plan is to be carried out and we fear, should the Solons of Atlanta undertake to wrestle with the problem, they would find themselves confronted with difficulties before which the "impossibilities" of prohibition become Lilliputian. So far as we are informed, no other king beside this "uncrowned king" of America and his great predecessor Nebuchadnezzar, ever asked of any "magician, astrologer, Chaldean" or of any body of legislators, municipal, state or national, such an impossible feat as this, to make the liquor traffic profitable, yet not injurious to the morals of the people. The most that has been asked of our rulers is that they place the liquor traffic under such limitations that it do the least injury to the morals of the community consistent with reasonable profit to the business. Even this moderate aim has never yet been secured. The liquor business proves unreasonably profitable and its ravages exceed those of war, famine and pestilence combined. Yet this is the goal which "calm-minded" men are still laboring to reach.

What has become of the much vaunted reasoning powers of the "logical male mind" that it does not perceive the inconsistency of such an attempt? How can the mere expression of such a necessity fail to open their eyes to the character of this thing which they falsely call a "business"? What is the recognized basis of business? Service to others. Every other business beneath the flag but the liquor traffic exists because it benefits the community. The profit which the individual engaged in it receives is his wages for his service to the community. There was a time when robbery was recognized as a legitimate method of getting a livelihood provided you did not rob the wrong people. At one time all outside of one's own family were legitimate prey, then the limits widened and those within the clan were exempt, then those within the nation. Now, in the illumination of Christ's gospel, mankind are opening their eyes to see that the same laws which govern individuals in their dealings with one another are also binding upon nations. The evolution of society has consisted largely in widening the limits which include those who are not legitimate subjects of spoliation and those limits now include all mankind.

But in glaring contradiction to the standards set by the awakened conscience of mankind, the liquor traffic rears its head. In an era when not even one nation may openly rob another, those engaged in this trade, under the sanction of law, rob their fellow citizens. And not alone of money, but of health, of life, of honor, of intellect and of moral character. The liquor traffic is the anachronism of the age. It is the giant of our nursery days stalking through nineteenth century civilization crying, "Fee, fi, fo, fum, I smell the blood of an Englishman!" It is time we had done with talk about "regulating" him, restricting his injuries to society within the smallest limits consistent with his continued health and prosperity. It is high time that the edict for his destruction had gone forth as by far the worst of his fellow outlaws, the train robber and the midnight assassin.

The Union Reform Party of Ohio.

OUR attention has been called to the fact that in the platform of the Union Reform Party of Ohio no mention is made of prohibition or woman suffrage. Upon investigation we find that the platform declares for three principles, viz., (1) direct legislation under the system known as the initiative and referendum, (2) the honest and effective enforcement of all laws, and (3) the honest and economical administration of government. This policy is presented by its formulators as "the only method by which the people can secure relief from existing evils," among which they mention the denial of the right of suffrage to one-half of the citizenship of the country, and the corrupting power of the liquor interest in society and politics. So that while the two political issues in which the W. C. T. U. is specially interested, prohibition and woman's ballot, are not incorporated by name in the platform itself, both are specifically mentioned in the "statement" which accompanies it, and both have been brought into the platforms of some of the local organizations.

This, therefore, seemed to warrant our saying some time ago that this party stood for these two principles. If it doesn't, more is the pity that it is simply masquerading that way! It is safe to say that no man or woman can predict what any political party will do or how even its own explicit declarations may be interpreted as time goes on, and this is, if possible, truer in the case of a new party. But the "brethren" ought to know by this time that the W. C. T. U. has a "do-everything policy" and that it is simply "keeping in the middle of the road" to "wabble" straight toward any of our many principles wherever it appears, and commend it, and that is all we can do as yet. This we consider to be an "inalienable" right, with which no one should find fault, much less a reformer. One such accuses us of patting the new union reform party on the back and thus "backhandedly discounting the only prohibition party of that state," because we reported its organization in six lines and said "among the principles which this party stands for are prohibition of the liquor traffic and equal suffrage."

It is strange reasoning that to recognize a forward movement beginning at a new center, no matter how feeble, is to give a backhanded lick to the same principle where it exists in a more advanced or permanent state. With such a policy we would inquire how long it will be till reformers get together. If reform parties propose to follow in the footsteps of the old parties in this matter the outcome is easy to predict.

We would suggest to any of that mind as a subject for meditation, "The Party Lash;" (a) as used by the old parties, (b) as used by the new parties, (c) as used against innocent women denied a party.

Pending Bill to Abolish "Canteens" and Other Government Rumselling.

BELOW we give the text of what is known as the Ellis Bill. It is on the calendar with favorable report, and is bound to come up for action early in December, on call of the committee. It needs no special order, and has a good chance to pass if the proper work is done. That which would be most telling would be for societies and individuals to call on senators and representatives personally, before they return to Washington, and urge their vote in favor of the bill. At the same time it would be well to speak of the age of protection bill for the District of Columbia, and the other reform bills. If it is impossible to see your congressmen personally then use the form of petition given in another part of this paper.

When one thinks of the debauchery of the canteen in the army, the saloons at the Soldiers' Homes and in government buildings, it is worth a supreme effort by churches, the W. C. T. U., the young people's societies, by every patriotic man and woman, to secure the vote of every man in the United States congress for this bill. Its passage would solve more difficulties, and save more men perhaps than any other pending measure. Call on your congressman at once if possible. If not, write to him personally, and start a petition before you sleep by cutting out our form, found on another page, sticking it on a sheet of paper for a heading, and writing your name underneath. Then do not rest till all your town or neighborhood has signed and it is sent off on its mission. The following is the text of the bill:

H. R. 7937 [Report No. 1629] pending in the House of Representatives, with favorable report:

A Bill to Prohibit the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors on any Reservation or in any Building Under Control of the United States Government, and for other Purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to sell, give away or otherwise dispose of any kind of intoxicating liquors on any reservation under control of, or in any building owned or controlled by, the United States government.

SEC. 2. That any violation of this Act shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall, for each separate offense, be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

SEC. 3. That the federal courts shall have jurisdiction of all violations of this act.

The Importance of Our National Convention.

PERHAPS it is not too much to say that in all the history of the organization no more important Convention was ever held than will be the one at St. Paul. The change in officers will, perhaps, be greater than at any other time, as, necessarily, there must be several. The Temple will be carefully considered, and it is hoped that whatever the action is, it may be final and satisfactory. The usual routine of important business will come before the Convention, and it will be the first time in the history of the organization when Miss Willard will not be a visible, moving spirit throughout all the harmonies of the hours. But these conditions will only serve to bring out the reserve force of the great body. We have no fear of the decided and profound success of the annual meeting. Women have not sat together with receptive minds and hearts for ten and twenty years without being ready for such a time as this. The women of our organization have not simply theorized along the lines that tie God and man together all these years without being able to practice what they preach.

Our society is democratic and theocratic. It believes in the rights of the individual and in majorities. It believes in the freedom of conscience, and has respect unto every conscience. It is a philanthropic organization, with a history behind it which attracts the attention of the world, and this history, we believe, will not be dimmed by any unthoughted, untoward or impassioned word or act at St. Paul, no matter how severe the strain upon personal preference may be. We are sure that the Golden Rule will seek expression in every possible way.

This above all should be a Convention of which the world should say, "See how these Christians love one another." It is an opportunity for a great object lesson to sinners, to the intemperate, to the saloonkeeper, to the churches even, and one which will not return; therefore, while we mourn, let us be comforted, and while we contend, let our hearts be kept in perfect peace and our warfare be only that of Christian soldiers.

National Perils and Hopes.

TWELVE cyclonic clouds of moral evil darken our national sky: The pro rata increase, since the Civil War, of liquor consumption, murders, divorces, lynchings, labor riots, municipal misrule, Sabbath-breaking, impurity, corrupt journalism, brutal sports, criminality and respectable lawlessness.

These clouds should be the chief concern of Congress and the churches alike, for they are more perilous to the nation, in the light of history, than any foreign foe. To remove or reduce these clouds we must remove or reduce the causes, which are, in part: The Civil War, for war, however just, always increases intemperance, impurity and Sabbath-breaking, and lowers the sacredness of life and property; the lager beer invasion, which came under cover of the Civil War; immigration, excessive commercialism; impersonal business, the "soulless corporation," that in public thought can neither cheat nor be cheated; luxury; the relaxation of belief in future retribution, which always multiplies hells on earth.

These evils are as much weaker than the moral forces of the churches as Spain is weaker than the United States, and will be defeated whenever the united churches really attack them. First, the churches must recognize that the gospel has to do with personal and social ethics as much if not more than with theology; and, second, the forces now divided into one hundred and fifty sects must be sociologically united to save society as well as souls. That these clouds can be dispelled is betokened by the fact that clouds as dark have been dispelled in this generation by the united action of Christian citizenship—dueling, slavery, Mormon polygamy, the Louisiana lottery, the spoils system, to which may be added three other reforms so nearly complete that we may count them as done, which are, scientific temperance education in the public schools—but four states are out of the Union on that—and the Australian ballot—only three states have not that in some degree—while the Anglo-Saxon international treaty of arbitration is now practically assured, and promises to be the beginning of the end of international war. The other clouds also are to be dispelled when the churches unite their forces, a grand army of 23,000,000, which becoming really the "church militant" will become the "church triumphant."

Personals.

MRS. MARY E. SANDERSON, of Quebec, treasurer of the World's W. C. T. U., was made a life member of the World's Union by her sisters of the Provincial W. C. T. U. at their recent convention in Montreal. The payment of one hundred dollars constitutes a life membership in the World's organization.

ON November 4, Miss Agnes Slack will meet the executive committee of the Glasgow (Scotland) W. C. T. U., when it is expected some decision will be arrived at with regard to the next World's Convention. The World's officers will, if possible, fix the Convention to meet in Glasgow in the spring of 1900.

MRS. LYDIA F. WILLSON, from Montreal, Canada, was a caller at Headquarters lately. She attended the noon meeting in Willard Hall and reported the work in eastern New York, which she had also visited, as progressing well. Mrs. Willson spends part of her time in Minnesota, and is one of the old-time workers.

MRS. MARTHA M. ALLEN, National superintendent non-alcoholic medication, wishes her superintendents and other friends to note the fact that her address is changed. Her husband is a Methodist Episcopal minister, and having served his five years in Newark, is now stationed in Syracuse. Mrs. Allen's address is therefore 809 S. Geddes St., Syracuse, N. Y.

MRS. SARAH A. MCCLEES, of Oakland, Cal., one of the old-time Crusaders, is still active in the work. As evangelist for her local and county unions she gives a Bible reading or conducts a religious service each week, and as National evangelist for the soldiers' and sailors' department she has been active in exposing the evils of the canteen system and in securing signatures to petitions. Mrs. McClees will be remembered as an occasional contributor to THE UNION SIGNAL.

JOHN H. HILL is the prohibition candidate for representative in the Illinois legislature for the fifth district, which comprises the third, fourth and thirty-second wards of Chicago. Mr. Hill is a young man of ability, consecrated to clean politics, patriotic and Christian citizenship. He is against the saloon, and its accompanying evils. We understand that there is a non-partisan movement in favor of him, and that clean men in all the parties will be asked to cast their three votes for him. The W. C. T. U. in the wards named could now pull an oar or two for a rising young man representing their own principles.

MRS. CHARLOTTE G. GRAY, at one time a National evangelist of the W. C. T. U., lately received the degree of B. D. (Bachelor of Divinity) from the Chicago University. After losing her husband seven years ago, Mrs. Gray came to Chicago, having previously pursued Hebrew with Dr. Harper at Chautauqua. She studied first for an A. B. and having secured that, entered the theological department and took the degree of B. D. One half of the white in the hood of her college gown is now scarlet to show the divinity degree. We congratulate Mrs. Gray, but at the same time must detract from the glory given her by a Chicago daily as "the only woman in the world" having secured such an honor. Anna Oliver and Anna Shaw long ago received B. D. from the Boston University School of Theology, and others have followed after them, as this and other theological schools of the Methodist Episcopal church are open to women, degrees and all, the same as to men. The attendance of women upon these schools has, however, been small in number since ordination was denied them by the church.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

New Honors for the National Secretary.

OUR young women will be personally interested in the fact that Mrs. Ella Alexander Boole, National Y secretary, has been elected state president of the New York W. C. T. U., to succeed the late Mrs. Mary Towne Burt. Mrs. Boole was vice-president of the great Empire state and has been acting president since the death of Mrs. Burt. Her formal election to the presidency is a fitting recognition of the ability with which she has filled the office temporarily.

Y's at Work.

VIRGINIA.

THE Y's of Virginia met in annual conference at Richmond on Tuesday, October 4. There were fifty-two regular delegates present and many visitors. The workers' conference brought out many helpful questions that were freely discussed. Three most excellent papers were read. First, "The Individual Responsibility of the Y Girls." Second, "The Y. W. C. T. U. as a Social Factor." Third, "The Y. W. C. T. U. and Kindred Societies."

A minute's long letter from Miss Clara Parrish to the young women of Virginia was read. Mr. W. R. Walker, an honorary member of one of the unions, led the noontide devotions. Just as the bell struck twelve he asked for sentence prayers for Clara Parrish and her work; many such prayers ascended to the throne of grace for the young sister who is doing so much for the young womanhood of Japan. The blessedness of this noontide hour will remain with the young women for a long time.

The Y's decided to continue to send twenty-five cents for each active member to the state Y fund as they did last year. This year they report 502 active members and 433 honorary members. Two years ago they had only 257 active and 288 honorary members in the state. The state secretary has sent out to the unions 32,664 pages of total abstinence and department literature. Has written to the Y's and about Y work, 1,766 letters.

Pledges were taken for the Clara Parrish fund that will help her materially. They decided that the L. T. L. was the best work they could do to advance the temperance cause. Many other inspiring and helpful recommendations were made. Thus closed the best Y conference ever held in the state.

(MRS.) G. M. JOBSON,
State Y. Sec.

World's W. C. T. U.

New South Wales.

THE sixteenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in St. George's church, Castlereagh street, Sydney, on September 1, 2, 5–7, 1898. One hundred and twenty-four delegates, representing sixty-two unions, were present on the first day of the convention. The proceedings opened with devotional exercises by Mrs. J. A. Nolan, Colonial president, after which committees were appointed on credentials, resolutions, courtesies, pages and plan of work. The minutes of all executive meetings held since the last convention were read by the recording secretary, Mrs. Greenstreet, after which the delegates were welcomed by the Colonial president. The following ladies responded: Mrs. Buckland, Penrith; Mrs. Kline, Noura; Mrs. Warton, Young; Mrs. Norwood, Bathurst; and Mrs. McKey, Grafton, for the country; Mrs. Courtney Smith, city; and Mrs. Wise, Petersham, for the suburban unions.

Mrs. Pottie moved, and Miss Rice seconded "That the New South Wales branch of the W. C. T. U., in convention assembled, respectfully conveys to the Czar of all the Russias the sincerest congratulations and heartfelt gratitude of its members for his noble proposal of international disarmament, and prays Almighty God that the rulers of all lands may be graciously led to accept and act upon the suggestion of His Imperial Majesty." The resolution was carried unanimously, and it was resolved that a copy be sent to the Russian consul for transmission to the Czar.

At the afternoon session the president delivered her annual address, which was a very excellent and comprehensive one, and for which she was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks. Mrs. Masterman, corresponding secretary, read her annual report which showed that there were sixty-two unions in New South Wales with a membership of 1,337, and 170 honorary members. The seeming decrease from last year is due to the fact that the names of a large number of members have been expunged from the various union rolls for non-payment of dues. The annual balance sheet was presented by Mrs. Rea, Colonial treasurer, which showed a balance in hand of £22, 17d, 9s.

At 6:15 P. M. a conference on evangelistic work was held. The annual public meeting was held in the evening, the Colonial president in the chair. Congratulatory addresses were delivered by the Rev. Dill Mackay, Mr. J. B. Mercer and Mr. G. E. Ardill, interspersed with music and recitations.

Friday morning Mrs. Turnbull presented her report on anti-opium and Mrs. Ward on evangelistic work. Miss Pemell's report on flower mission showed good work done, as also Miss Fletcher's on Sabbath observance, and Mrs. Allen's on "enlisting the sympathy of ministers." At this stage several ministers were introduced and addressed the convention.

Mrs. Roseby, the first Australian president, was also welcomed. Reports of franchise by Mrs. Finigan, literature by Mrs. Vaughan, unfermented wine by Mrs. Lucas, were received and adopted. At the afternoon session reports were read by the following ladies: Narcotics, Miss Watkinson; grocers' licenses, Mrs. Donaldson; press work, Mrs. Lemaire; THE UNION SIGNAL, Miss Donaldson; drawing-room meetings, Mrs. Wesley-Watkin; scientific instruction, Miss Hartshorne; cab and trainmen, Miss Marwick; hygiene, Mrs. C. Smith. Gospel meeting held in the evening at 7:45. On Saturday afternoon a large number of delegates and friends attended a garden fête at the grounds of Mr. Wilson, Mosman Bay. A very pleasant afternoon was spent, and a short open air meeting was held and speeches delivered by the Rev. F. B. Boyce, Rev. J. A. Nolan, Rev. E. Moore, and the Rev. S. Paterson. On Monday, September, 5 the delegates again met in St. George's Hall to continue the sessions. The report on peace and arbitration was read by Mrs. Pottie and discussed; also on legislation by Mrs. Ward (for Mrs. Ardill, who is absent in England); on coffee rooms and boys' brigades by Mrs. Crozier; on juvenile work, by Miss Price; and work among sailors, by Mrs. Marley. Dr. Alice Newton read a paper on "The Human Body: How to Keep it in Perfect Order." Rev. J. McKey and the Rev. A. J. Griffith were introduced, and each spoke congratulatory words to the convention. At this stage a basket of flowers was handed to the president by a tiny child from the Petersham Band of Hope. Greetings were received from Mrs. Harrison Lee, a report on purity by Mrs. Wilson. The report on membership and pledge crusade was read by Miss Dudley, the remainder of the evening being devoted to L. T. L's, Bands of Hope and Y members.

On Tuesday morning several reports of departments were read, and the Colonial and local constitutions read and adopted. It was resolved, "That we pay one half-penny direct to the World's treasurer for this year, in addition to the penny paid to the Australasian treasurer, and intend giving notice of motion to the Triennial Convention, that in article 6 it be altered to one half-penny." It was also resolved, "That those women who cannot pay the fee should wear the white bow, but be called members of the W. C. T. U. mothers' meetings."

The election of officers resulted as follows: Colonial president, Mrs. J. A. Nolan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Masterman; assistant secretary, Miss Miller; recording secretary, Mrs. Lusby; honorary treasurer, Mrs. Rea. A very beautiful bouquet of flowers was presented to the president by Miss Pemell. Mrs. Nolan replied in feeling terms, and made reference to the loyalty and harmony that pervaded the meetings. Mrs. Ward presented the "plan of work" for the year, which was adopted. At 6:15 an interval meeting was held, when Mrs. Wilson gave an address on purity.

In the evening a lantern lecture was delivered by Mrs. Pottie, Colonial superintendent of peace and arbitration department, on "The Horrors and Devastations of War," with lantern illustrations by the Rev. W. H. Beale, of Ryde.

On Wednesday morning a memorial service was held when Mrs. Nolan spoke on Miss Willard, Miss Pemell on Neal Dow, and Mrs. Ward on several of our New South Wales sisters who have gone home. The report of White Ribbon Signal was read by Miss Watkinson and discussed. Mrs. Wise moved "that a special effort be made to pay off the debt on the White Ribbon Signal, and that each union be asked to contribute toward the same." Carried.

"Resolved, That the money collected for Miss Willard's memorial be left in the hands of Miss Marwick until further news be received from America regarding the Temple."

"Resolved, That our New South Wales paper, The White Ribbon Signal, be worked as a department, Mrs. George to be Colonial superintendent and financial secretary, Mrs. Masterman editor, with an editorial staff."

On behalf of the convention Miss Lucas presented a beautiful autograph quilt, worked by Y members, to Mrs. Nolan, who thanked them for their beautiful gift. Mrs. Finigan, on behalf of the convention, presented Mrs. Greenstreet, retiring recording secretary, with a silver cake-basket, suitably engraved, for which she feelingly thanked the members.

"Resolved, That we send loving greetings to Lady Henry Somerset, with our loyalty."

Miss Lucas read her report on "Our Federation." Mrs. Lusby was appointed press correspondent for this paper to succeed Miss Lucas, resigned. Mrs. Wesley Watkin replied to the questions in box. Program and advertising committee having been appointed, numerous votes of thanks were given, and the New South Wales convention of 1898 closed without, we believe, one jarring note, by all joining hands round the church and singing, "God be with you till we meet again."

E. J. WARD,
Official Reporter, N. S. W.

News from the Field.

Ohio.

ALL over the state come the reports of good county conventions being held. The department reports show that aggressive work has been done and our women will be able to report a year of well rounded efforts. The membership contest is growing in favor as a means of securing new members. The union at New Concord was a small union before July 1. At that time they decided to hold a membership contest. Their time limit was ten days; at the close of that time they found Mrs. Paden's division had secured twenty-five new members, Mrs. Kenedy's twenty-two, and Mrs. Wilson's fifteen, making a gain of sixty-two new paid up members. It was a happy crowd that gathered at their reception where an impressive initiatory service was held, after which ice cream and cake were served.

Coshocton county has been unusually busy; one new union has been organized at Warsaw. The Keene union have established a public library. Coshocton union held a June rally with Miss Frances Ensign as speaker and made a nice gain in membership. Dresden sent a contribution to Miss Dow for the Temple. Asbury had Mrs. Trego for two lectures and secured several new members.

Clinton county is one of the best organized counties in the state, having thirteen unions and three Y's and four L. T. L's. At their convention Mrs. Annie Clark, state president, was very helpful. At the close an autograph quilt was presented to their re-elected president, Mrs. Emma Unthank, who has been their county president for the last ten years. In the afternoon, the district convention was held; Mrs. Mary D.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

Lacy gave "Old Soapy" in a pleasing manner, and Prof. Bessie C. Todhunter, of Wilmington College, gave a paper on "School Suffrage." The evening meeting was especially arranged for the children. The Wilmington L. T. L. gave an exercise which was followed by a splendid address by Mrs. Frances Beauchamp, of Lexington, Ky. Mrs. Beauchamp remained over Sunday, speaking both morning and evening.

Trumbull county held their convention September 21 and 22. Although the weather was unfavorable it did not affect the attendance or mar the convention. A fine program had been arranged and every woman was present to carry out her part. Mrs. Annie W. Clark conducted a question box which proved very beneficial. In the evening Mrs. Clark spoke on "An apology for the W. C. T. U." Others on the program merit praise but especial mention should be made of the address of Mrs. Ella P. McConnel, subject, "Dawning of the Twentieth Century;" also a paper, "W. C. T. U. Methods," by Emma I. Dana. Thursday a gold medal contest was held; a fee of ten cents was asked at the door, which gave the treasury $13.18. There were six contestants. The prize was given to Miss Mabel Clemments, of Bristol township. Each of the other members was presented with a book.

Franklin county held its convention at Reynoldsburg. Mrs. Hattie B. Adams was re-elected president. Much attention was given to the resolutions and plan of work, which are to be printed and distributed to each local union and to each superintendent of a department. Resolutions were passed that Sabbath-school work, Loyal Temperance Legion and scientific temperance instruction be given special attention throughout the county the following year. Also that county superintendents correspond once a month with the local superintendents of their departments. In the evening Mrs. Clark made a very able address to a full house. Columbus unions had our work well represented at state fair. Franklin county has a dining hall, and Columbus unions a lunch hall. Several hundred dollars were realized, and much temperance sentiment disseminated.

Last March, in a terrible rain, Miss Marie C. Brehm organized a union in West Columbus, of six women. Never did women seem more ready to be organized, and to take a more comprehensive view of our work. To-day they have a paid up membership of fifty—the largest in the city, and when there is work in our federation of unions that requires extra care it is given to the baby that was christened "Willard union." They recently held a membership contest which extended their membership. At the close a large reception was given when the constitution was explained. Mrs. Mary Castle gave a department talk and Literature, Sabbath-school and Loyal Temperance Legion work was emphasized by their superintendents. The Columbus unions are now very busy getting ready for what promises to be the largest convention ever held in the state of Ohio.

(MRS.) LILLIAN BURT,
State Reporter, Columbus.

Alabama.

THE reports of the various unions that have come to me tell of efforts made and work done, so I gladly pass the word along. Selma has entered enthusiastically into rescue mission work, with all that it implies. On the first of July, at the same hour the corner-stone was laid for the new Mercy Home at Birmingham, hitherto the only open door in the whole state. The W. C. T. U. opened a mission and held their first meeting. There were eight "unfortunates" present; the meeting was a deeply spiritual one, and they have been steadily growing ever since in interest. The different ministers take charge of the services and otherwise manifest their desire to help. Three have been rescued, and one came voluntarily and threw herself upon their mercy. They found her a position and put her little child in the orphanage; another bright, intelligent young girl was saved, and is now happy in the home of one of the ministers. Were this all that had ever been done by the white-ribbon women of Selma, these four or five souls would be shining stars in their crown of glory. Surely there is no other work like unto this.

Huntsville has done noble work on this line, too, through our women. Though they have no mission the Florence Crittenton circle meets weekly. They have sent two girls to the Home in Chattanooga, making arrangements for the third elsewhere; one whom they had hoped to win went back to the old, sinful life. There is much encouragement in the knowledge that there has been a great awakening among our women this year, and we hope that this note of alarm will arouse them to new efforts in purity work.

Collinsville says they are a weak little band, but an acknowledged power for good in their community. "We never fail to find out, and remove, any immoral influence that enters our territory," says the president. Who can not read between these two lines courage, faith, prayer and victory, for these things are not easily wrought.

Mobile union claims our deepest sympathy in the loss of their beloved president, Mrs. La Prade, last May. She was known throughout the state for her ability and work in our cause; sickness among the other officers, with removals, and no leader, the union has almost dropped out of the ranks. While we deeply regret this, we are not discouraged, and believe that brighter days will soon dawn upon them.

Florence, through its district president, is working the way for an organizer and helper among the new unions. Mrs. Elder, of New Decatur, has been holding meetings there and elsewhere for three weeks, work not yet reported.

Prattville has a small union of faithful Christian women, but most are too old, too feeble, or too busy to do much; they have no saloons, and have finally ousted the "blind tiger." Their best work is the L. T. L. They have fifty-six pledged members, who proudly wear the

"A PERFECT FOOD—as Wholesome as it is Delicious."
WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
BREAKFAST COCOA
"Has stood the test of more than 100 years' use among all classes, and for purity and honest worth is unequalled."
—Medical and Surgical Journal.
Costs less than ONE CENT a Cup.
Trade-Mark on Every Package.
WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.,
TRADE-MARK. Established 1780. DORCHESTER, MASS.

L. T. L. pins and tri-color badges. They use a great variety of literature very freely, having temperance lesson manuals in six grades. Company C is a self-improvement society, their motto being, "Our aim is high. For solid education, social usefulness, moral purity and Christian excellence." They keep always before their eyes the words, "Thou God seest me."

As the "hope of the future is in the future," Plattville and Bridgeport are raising an army of temperance boys and girls to carry on the work of the future. Some of the prejudice and persecutions which a few of our new unions have encountered in regard to woman's work remind us forcibly of the Crusade days; some old towns in our "goodly land of Alabama" have not yet reached the nineteenth century, and to them the W. C. T. U. is a northern innovation, not to be tolerated. But here and there a brave spirit is doing judicious work in scattering broadcast our literature. There's many a barren hillside waiting for the precious seed, but with . . . "liberal hands and spirits free,

We will aye be true to thee,
Alabama, Alabama."

(MRS.) MARIA K. DOUGLASS,
State Reporter, Bridgeport.

Oklahoma.

THE ninth annual convention of the Oklahoma W. C. T. U. was held in the Congregational church at Okarche, September 27 to 29. Mrs. A. B. Mentz, vice-president, presided over all our meetings, as our president, Mrs. Susie R. Jackson, could not be present. A letter expressing our regret at her absence, and appreciation of her faithful labors during the past year was sent to her at once. Our old time workers, Emma Miller, president of second district, and Sue Uhl Brown, reporter for THE UNION SIGNAL, were absent because of sickness in their families. Letters of sympathy were sent them and others who could not be present.

Convention was not so large as some have been, but was pronounced by those who have attended former conventions as the very best in our history. This was due in part to the enthusiastic conventions held in second district, and in Logan county the week preceding our annual; but it also hindered some in being present at the latter. The gracious results in our convention were mainly due to the wisdom and devotion of our vice-president and to Mrs. Harford's presence with us. She had been with us a little over a month, visiting many places and organizing fourteen new unions, four since convention, and adding new members, active, honorary and pledged to old unions, and greatly increasing our membership. She has been tireless in her efforts to advance the work in the Territory and her help was sought everywhere in convention and was acceptably given. Hope we may have more helpers just like her!

Constitution and by-laws were improved some and much good accomplished in plans and provisions for pushing the work the coming year. Much work reported for the closing year. All hearts were drawn nearer each other, and a prayerful, Christ-like spirit pervaded the atmosphere. Pledges to the amount of fifty-five dollars (much more than ever before) were taken from unions and individuals for territorial work, Mrs. Harford giving five dollars besides her hard work with us. After all bills for the year were settled, the treasury contained twenty-eight dollars; last year it contained twenty-six cents. We believe all hearts said, "Praise the Lord, that means greater advance still in the year to come."

Our women gave evidence of renewed zeal and consecration to our cause, inspired by the life and works of our great leader, whose birthday occurred during our convention, and for whom memorial services were held. Expressions proved that Miss Willard's influence instead of being less is greater than ever before.

The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Kelsey, a Congregational minister of Okarche. She welcomed us to everything their town contained, and she said they did not have to import anything but men to sign petitions for saloon license. (By some such trick saloons were opened in their town a short time before.) Mrs. Mentz made a happy response.

On Wednesday evening the lecture was preceded by exercises of the L. T. L. of Okarche. These reflected credit upon Mrs. Sherman, the faith-

The Delicious Flavor of
WHEATLET
Is a Natural Property of the Entire Wheat.
Compared with all other grain foods Wheatlet is unquestionably the best in the World. It is delicate but substantial, rich in gluten and phosphates; for weak stomachs or healthy appetites. Try it. Sold in 2lb packages.
If your grocer does not keep Wheatlet have him order some for you, or send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied. There is only one Wheatlet. Avoid substitutes.
The Genuine is made only by the ful superintendent of the L. T. L. Mrs. Harford's lectures on Wednesday and Thursday evenings were inspiring and instructive and greatly enjoyed by all. We could hardly have gotten on without her. There was good attendance at all hours, and quite a number of active and honorary members were added to the local union. Two delegates were mothers who brought their babies with them. They were encouraged by the president introducing the babies to convention, pinning the ribbon on them and saying the pledge over them.
Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Catharine E. Ferguson, of Norman; vice-president, Mrs. Amelia Mentz, of Perry, corresponding secretary, Nannie E. Oliver, of Yukon; recording secretary, Rachel E. Woodrow, of Pond Creek; treasurer, Mrs. Cinderella L. Kelsey, of Okarche. Letters of appreciation to retiring officers were written. Convention voted to ask each union to pay one dollar toward expenses of our president to the National Convention. Mrs. Reynolds, of Kingfisher, was elected delegate to National; Mrs. Dorothy Cleveland alternate. So the president, corresponding secretary and delegate expect to be present at National Convention.

A post-executive meeting was held Thursday evening after services closed. Also on Friday morning and afternoon. The general officers and Mrs. Harford remained until Friday evening and were given a reception at the home of Mrs. Kelsey. Mrs. Harford was requested to tell the women about our National women; refreshments were served and it was a very pleasant occasion.

Our vice-president, Mrs. Mentz, at the close spoke of our convention being historic because of its date, Miss Willard's birthday, and the plebiscite in Canada occurring during the time. Prayer was offered for the latter at the noontide hour of prayer the 29th, and a letter of sympathy and hope written to our Canadian sisters. Three invitations were received for the next convention.

With renewed hope and faith and love our women separated, and one of the most pleasant and helpful of conventions closed.

In the absence of our press reporter, Mrs. Sue Uhl Brown, the corresponding secretary was authorized to report convention.

NANNIE E. OLIVER,
Cor. Sec., Yukon.

Montana.

THE fifteenth annual state convention with its records of another year's work has passed into history. A small band of our earnest women re-enforced by Ada Wallace Unruh, of Oregon, and Rebecca Mitchel, of Idaho, were gathered in counsel in Great Falls, September 13-16. President Alice S. N. Barnes met her executive at 7 P. M. Tuesday, in the First M. E. church, which was beautifully decorated for our enjoyment. By eight o'clock a large audience had assembled to participate in and enjoy the program of "Welcome Night." Mrs. Barnes, at the tap of the gavel, announced the convention open. Beautiful and appropriate music was rendered by a select quartet, solos and congregation. We were favored to have with us several ministers of note. Addresses of welcome were given by Rev. John Reed, of Vancouver, in behalf of the city, he having been the earliest resident minister in Great Falls and at that time pastor of the First Presbyterian church, then in its infancy. Rev. N. A. Chamberlain, D. D., pastor of First M. E. church, extended welcome in behalf of the clergy in his own hearty, cheering way, throwing in bits of eloquence that won frequent applause. J. W. Frizzell, M. D., homœopathic, in behalf of the medical fraternity, had gracious and pleasing words of courteous welcome for the white-ribbon women, and Anna A. Walker spoke for the local union words of warmest greeting. The response by Callie O. Price, of Helena, was given in happy strain and delightfully pleasing manner.

Our president's most able and interesting annual address followed, which was listened to with rapt attention throughout.

Wednesday morning was given to routine work. Reports and an excellent paper on Social Purity, by Lulu Harvie, a member of Great Falls union, which called forth words of hearty appreciation from all present. At 2 P. M. we held a memorial service, led by Mrs. I. N. Smith, which was an occasion of deep feeling and resulted in a renewed consecration of our women to the work so dear to the heart of our beloved, translated Chieftain, who held a warm place in the hearts of the women of Montana.

A paper on "Humane Education," by Rebecca Mitchel, ably presented the mercy department, which was adopted by the convention as a part hereafter of our state work. A union prayer service Wednesday evening, led by Rebecca Mitchel, inspired the people who had come in and again filled the church.

This was our last occasion for meeting Mrs. Mitchel, who left on the midnight train for Idaho. Her weeks spent in Great Falls, where she had supplied on Sundays the pulpit of the First Baptist church, were busy ones. She had labored also with the W. C. T. U. and endeared herself to all. Mrs. Unruh's lecture on "That Old Bachelor," followed the prayer service and made a deep and lasting impression on the audience who were enthusiastic in her praise. On Thursday evening she gave "Our National Sin," no less attractively, and the interest was unabated. There was such evident arrest of thought that good alone can result. Pledge cards were passed, and a large gain in membership came to the Great Falls union. A Miss Baldwin, of Chicago, a graduate in elocution, was with us and gave a most beautiful recitation which chimed in with the lecture as a complement.

At the election of officers and superintendents on Friday morning, a few changes were made, but our faithful president, who has served us two years, was unanimously re-elected. A vote had so amended our laws that a vice-president-at-large was elected; the office is filled by Mrs. E. W. Patterson, of Bozeman; Anna A. Walker was re-elected corresponding secretary; Callie O. Price, Helena, re-elected recording secretary; Miss Mary E. Jackman, treasurer. At the noontide hour the members of the convention clasped hands and sang, "Blest be the Tie," and fervent prayer was offered, adjourning to meet in Bozeman in 1899.

Mrs. Unruh gave a lecture to women only on Friday afternoon, and her bright, deep searching words were listened to with eagerness. We held her with us over the Sabbath, to "clinch" the work of convention. On that evening her talk was addressed to young men. There must be fruitage from this precious seed-sowing. May God bless our dear sister as she goes on to aid other unions in other states.

In a summary of the year's labors in Montana, it is found there has been zealous, prayerful effort, especially put forth by our noble, self-sacrificing state president, Rev. Alice S. N. Barnes, who, while attending to the duties devolving upon her as pastor of the Congregational church in Castle, found time to visit during the past year all but one of the local unions in the state, which, though few in number, are widely scattered. The one exception is in a remote corner of our large state, doing noble, faithful work by itself. All honor to Kalispel!

Mrs. Barnes was particularly eager, after the death of Miss Willard, to raise Montana's share, $500, toward retiring the Temple Trust Bonds. This entire sum was secured through the inspiration of Mrs. Barnes and efforts of our consecrated women, many of whom have labored unceasingly year after year in the Temple work. Much depression has followed the decision of the National Officers, but Montana women will rise above this great disappointment, realizing there are "human temples" to be saved, and "in the work of God no man may turn or falter."

Early in 1898 we accepted a department in the Northwest White-Ribbon, published in Portland, Ore., and the vote of the convention was to continue our relationship with that organ as a means of advancing the interests of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union through our own and these entire northwestern states. This coöperation seems timely and necessary, as our work is not sufficiently strong in either of these states to independently support a state organ. It is hoped Montana will be more fully organized before the close of another year. We believe it can and should be done.

ANNA A. WALKER,
Cor. Sec., Great Falls.

The full economy of using Ivory Soap may not be apparent after one wash, but in time it will be noticed that the clothes last longer.

The cleansing action of Ivory Soap is very different from that of soap powders and soaps containing alkali. Ivory Soap has no weakening effect on the fibre of the material; but alkali, gradually, and often rapidly, destroys it.

Copyright, 1898, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

Louisiana.

WHITE-winged messengers from different parts of the state have brought me the following reports:

The quarantine against yellow fever has debarred Mrs. H. C. Pharr from attending the meetings of the W. C. T. U. at Morgan City. She says in a letter to a member of her union: "As writing is our only means of communication, I avail myself of it, to say that I am glad to be missed, but I am sorry to be absent. I am more convinced than ever that the successful working of the W. C. T. U. does not depend on any one woman or set of women, but can be carried on by any faithful woman or set of women. And while God removes by various causes His workers, still He carries on His work. Take courage, dear sisters, and pass the good word on; and, while I pray, I hope you will continue to work." Under Mrs. McArthur's management the second medal contest at Morgan City was so successful that another class for boys is contemplated in a few weeks. The medal was won by Julia Landry, and the receipts for the evening's entertainment were $15.65.

Mrs. Jolley has again taken up the superintendency of the L. T. L. For some time she has been unable to attend to it on account of sickness in her family. The L. T. L. of Morgan City is among the best in the state.

Mrs. Emma A. White, state recording secretary, has suffered from ill health, and the state treasurer, Mrs. Lily F. Blanks, is in the far west with her son who is not well.

Biliousness

"I have used your valuable CASCARETS and find them perfect. Couldn't do without them. I have used them for some time for indigestion and biliousness and am now completely cured. Recommend them, to every one. Once tried, you will never be without them in the family." EDW. A. MARX, Albany, N. Y.

CANDY CATHARTIC Cascarets TRADE MARK REGISTERED REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe, 10c, 25c, 50c.

... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...

Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 321

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

Both the worker and the work languishes during the heat of summer in the South.

Miss Brown, from Alabama, made a tour of the fifth district in May and June and she delivered one temperance address at Delhi. Here the faithful few have held one parlor meeting and a gospel meeting, and from an evening entertainment the ladies realized nineteen dollars for local work. The spirit of the Crusade has been revived at Delhi. Although Richland parish had secured a prohibitory law it was openly violated by the sale of an intoxicating drink called cider. A notice was posted denouncing the wrong and calling for a mass-meeting. This was largely attended by the best citizens, both men and women, and the minister of the Presbyterian church presided. It was the sense of the meeting that the sale of the cider should cease and a committee was appointed to wait upon the dealer of this intoxicating beverage. He resorted to the usual argument and subterfuge of the saloonist, but finally agreed not to order any more of the stuff. The committee in a few minutes raised money enough to buy what he had on hand, and in the presence of a large concourse of people, both friends and foes, emptied it all out into the street. An object lesson at least, if it fails to be an effectual remedy of the evil.

The Floyd union is especially blessed in its devoted president, Mrs. Mitchinor. In proportion to its size this union is very liberal and it donated ten dollars to state expenses.

Colonel David Zable has donated a handsomely framed portrait of Miss Willard to the new headquarters of the Central union in New Orleans.

The wide prairie in the western part of the state is a fruitful field for labor. It is also a laborious field, for long distances must be traversed over muddy roads and unbridged, sluggish streams of water. Mrs. Kate E. Wilkins, president of the third district, has sufficient courage and grace to undertake and carry on this work successfully. The middle of September she began a series of meetings with Mrs. Dimmitt as her helper.

Four meetings were held in the school house at Evangeline. Then followed a week of meetings at Jennings, which accomplished a great deal of good for the local union there. Mrs. Wilkins, unaided, held meetings for a week at Grand Chennier. A Y. W. C. T. U. with fourteen members and seven honoraries and an L. T. L., with fourteen members, were organized.

Thirty-four signatures to the social purity pledge, and sixty-six signatures to the total abstinence pledge, were secured. The people were interested and enthusiastic for the cause of temperance when she left for Leesburg. Here she was joined by Mrs. Dimmitt, but on account of the heavy wind and rain storms they were unable to accomplish much, and as the quarantine against yellow fever was then established they were obliged to return home.

As soon as practicable Mrs. Wilkins intends to resume the work thus ended by the epidemic.

(MRS.) LURY GOULD BALDWIN,
State Reporter, Baldwin.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

A most encouraging letter comes to us from Minnesota concerning the enlisting of the Welsh people in our country in our W. C. T. U. work. In Tracy, Minn., there is a large Welsh union, and the minister who is pastor among the people, writes urging us, when our speakers come into Welsh settlements to try to have them get appointments in the Welsh churches or schools. "We have many Welsh women in sympathy with your work. There are large settlements of Welsh people in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wisconsin and Minnesota and you ought to have many unions among them." It is greatly to be hoped that this suggestion may be acted upon and that we may soon have many Welsh unions in the United States.

A letter from our noble veteran, Mother Stewart, bearing date of October 14, although written from a sick bed tells us that she is still active in the interests of her beloved temperance work, whenever able to be about. We had hoped she would be with us at the National convention, but this she finds impossible. Within the last few months, however, she has spoken at the Methodist centennial at Delaware and roused the entire audience with one of her old inimitable talks. She has also been sending out petitions against the canteen and has been working for the aid of the soldiers. She went to the Cincinnati conference and there made a strong appeal for the soldiers. She also presented her petition to the Center Street and St. Paul churches in her own city and secured the signatures of the entire membership. She has solicited aid for the soldiers at Tampa through an appeal in the public press. Only three weeks ago she addressed the largest Sunday-school in Springfield on the temperance question. Surely our soldiers do not leave the battlefield until they are finally mustered out. It is greatly to be regretted that we shall not see some of these foremost leaders of the early days at the St. Paul convention, but we are more than glad that there will be so goodly a number of Crusaders present.

Work for the Convention goes on apace and without doubt in the next issue of THE UNION SIGNAL a résumé of the program can be given.

With this mail I am asking the state presidents to bring their state banners to the Convention. It occurs to me that possibly there may be some districts or counties which have especially beautiful banners which they desire to have at St. Paul. If so, will they kindly bring them with them to the Convention or see that they are sent to the chairman of the banner committee, Mrs. T. H. Lyles, 337 St. Peter street, St. Paul.

Mrs. Soule, chairman of the general committee, desires me to say that entertainment can not be furnished to delegates previous to the evening of November 10. We had hoped that this year the executive committee and the boards of superintendents and organizers might have entertainment a few days in advance, but since the local committee feels that it will be too great a strain upon the people entertaining, we must adjust ourselves to local conditions and I am sure those who attend the conferences will be willing for a short time to bear the expenses of entertainment. Boarding-house rates have been secured at one dollar per day in places near the church.

Everything seems moving off grandly in St. Paul and all the signs indicate that we shall have one of the largest Conventions ever held.

I am writing on October 18, and not one-third of the reports of the state corresponding secretaries have as yet been received and only three of the reports of the National superintendents. Please, sisters, be as expeditious as possible; else it will be very difficult for us to get through the accumulation of work necessary before the Convention. Please remember no report can be published if it does not reach us before the 25th of October.

Yours for a good Convention,
KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[Bright, newsy items of special interest are acceptable for this column, but do not send detailed reports of unions or conventions to us. Send them to your state reporter.]

ESSEX, Conn., has voted no-license. The W. C. T. U. and pastors formed a strong combination that the liquor people could not combat successfully.

MISS ELLEN MORRIS carried greetings to a convention of 1,000 colored Baptists meeting in Kansas City. They gave her a cordial reception, and the convention passed a resolution pledging the pastors to use only unfermented wine at the sacrament.

REV. ALICE BARNES, the president of Montana, and an ordained minister in Congregational church, also an active pastor of a church at Castle, Montana, is one of nature's noble women, withal she is consecrated to the Lord's service. Mr. Barnes is a nominee for the state legislature. He is interested in his wife's work, and stands loyally by her.

MISS JESSIE ACKERMANN has just finished a week of work in Detroit, Mich., Plymouth, Wyandotte and Flat Rock. She addressed eight great audiences; three of them filling to overflowing three of the largest churches in the city. Her grip upon the people was marvelous: they were enthusiastic, delighted. At her last meeting fifty new names were taken for the union, making 125 in all, and the white-ribboners are cheered as they seldom have been. They begged her to come again, and she has promised to do so.

MRS. ISABEL WING LAKE and Dr. Carolyn Geisel have just returned to Chicago after a ten months' trip. They visited fifteen states, returning to four the second time. Traveled 14,499 miles and visited 194 cities and towns. They were successful in establishing ten Rescue Homes in as many different states and in putting 304 women into active rescue work. The tracts and books on the subjects of purity and temperance distributed by them is almost innumerable. Their many friends rejoice in the good work they have been able to accomplish in this trip.

Don't use an imitation—especially imitations of Pearline. Many are dangerous. And dangerous washing powders can never be cheap—no matter how little you pay for them. Peddlers and untrustworthy grocers will tell you the stuff they offer is "Pearline," "same as," "as good as," "made in the same factory," etc. It's false. Pearline is the standard washing compound; never peddled; gives no prizes; simply stands on its merits as the best, safest, and most economical. 575

Millions NOW USE Pearline

THE work of Mrs. Marion B. Baxter, our financial agent, was commended in a resolution passed by the Oregon synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, held at Walla Walla, Wash. The resolution also pledged them to open their churches and tender her their pulpits, giving her such encouragement and support as is in their power. The resolution passed unanimously.

NEW JERSEY has had an increase of 168 in W. C. T. U. membership this year. One of our best speakers was offered free to the five unions making the largest increase. Bordentown, Midland Park, Atlantic City, Deerfield and Sharptown were the winners, and Miss Belle Kearney was the prize. She gives them dates from November 1–8, at the state's expense, the unions having the collections.

OHIO voted at the state W. C. T. U. convention to dispense with district presidents. The secretary reported 487 unions in the state. Editor of the state paper reported all debts paid and a balance of $61.10 in the treasury. The state dairy and food commissioner, Hon. Joseph E. Blackburn, was praised in the resolutions for putting the stamp of his disapproval on the use of dangerous narcotics masquerading as medicinal compounds.

MRS. L. E. BAILEY, of Prohibition Park, N. Y., state organizer, has been in the lecture field constantly the past year. Her work has resulted in establishing eighteen new unions. She has given 351 addresses, secured 565 new members. Mrs. Bailey won the prize for securing the largest list of subscribers to the State Temperance Work, has sent many subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL, and worked up two life memberships to the state. She was a delegate to Buffalo National Convention last year and will be a delegate to St. Paul.

THE Montana state convention held in Great Falls, September 13, was a great success. Mrs. Unruh writes: "The corps of general officers would grace one of the older states where, with the many advantages, one expects to find women more in touch with the work. They seem to have as broad a grasp and thorough comprehension of the situation and needs as those who are nearer 'the hub' of things. The delegates were women of unusual ability, and altogether things are promising in this part of the W. C. T. U. vineyard."

THE Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oakland, Cal., have opened a free library and reading room for women, and a lunch room for self-supporting young women at Nos. 64 and 65 Playter Block, Oakland. The birthday of Frances Willard was observed by this union with appropriate exercises. Dr. Maxon, a prominent lady physician, lately spoke at a regular meeting on the subject, "Heredity from the physician's standpoint," and Dr. Alice Bush gave an address upon the "Influence of food, air and water upon the health and morals." Many practical helps were given to the audience by each of these women.

A PETITION addressed to the commanding officer of the troops stationed at Alcatraz Camp, Cal., requesting him to abolish the canteen, or governmental beer house, has been answered by Captain Baldwin, who sent a courteous reply to the ladies and promised to give the subject his serious consideration. This petition was sent out in the name of the three thousand women of the W. C. T. U. in California, signed by Mrs. B. Sturtevant Peet, president of the W. C. T. U.; Mrs. H. B. Harrington, president of the Red Cross of the state, and Mrs. Granville Abbott, president of the Oakland Red Cross, and Mrs. S. A. McClees, representing the National department of soldiers and sailors.

National Convention Corner.

Cut this out; It will not Appear Again.

RAILROAD RATES FOR CONVENTION NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION, ST. PAUL, MINN., NOVEMBER 11–16, 1898—FULL INSTRUCTIONS.

By action of the Western Passenger Association, a rate of one and one-third fare has been made for the above meeting and becomes effective only when evidence is presented to the joint agent of terminal lines that 100 or more persons are in actual attendance, holding certificates reading for tickets over terminal lines to the meeting point; and when such certificates are stamped by him, with his official stamp, and his written signature affixed thereto.

TAKE NOTICE: No certificate will be honored which was issued to cover the sale of more than one single trip ticket.

Certificates showing purchase of tickets at fifty cents or less, will not be counted, nor will reduction be granted where the rate is fifty cents or less.

An agent of the Western Passenger Association will be in attendance at the National Convention, at St. Paul, Minn., on Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, to act as joint agent in the stamping of certificates issued for this meeting.

Certificates viséd by joint agent will be delivered by such joint agent, personally, to delegates on those days only.

Where the journey is made over more than one line, it is usually necessary for the passenger to buy separate local ticket of each road's issue, and procure certificates thereof for each of the lines traveled over going to the meeting. Passengers should ascertain from the ticket agent what portion of the journey can be covered by the certificate obtainable from him, and procure certificates filled out to correspond with the tickets purchased.

Take notice that failure to procure or to present certificates invalidates any claim for reduction in return fare.

Tickets purchased for going passage may be either limited or unlimited, according to the rate and regulations in effect on the line over which it reads; but the return tickets, sold at the reduced fare, will, in all cases, be limited to continuous passage.

Certificates must show the purchase of tickets not earlier than three days prior to the date announced as the opening of the meeting, or during the first three days of the meeting, and will be honored if presented not later than three days after the date announced as the closing of the meetings, Sunday not to be accounted as a day in any case.

The Great Northern Railway Company grants a rate of one and a third fare on certificate plan, in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota. Certificates to be honored for tickets purchased not more than three days before the opening of the meeting and up to three days after its close.

The Northern Pacific Railway allows one and one-third fare in the states of North Dakota and Minnesota under the certificate plan.

The Central Passenger Association grants a rate of one and one-third fare, certificate plan; also the Southeastern Passenger Association, Mr. Joseph Richardson, chairman, Atlanta, Ga., and the Trunk Line Association in its territory, viz., from Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Dunkirk and Salamanca, N. Y.; Erie and Pittsburg, Pa.; Bellaire, O.; Wheeling, Parkersburg and Huntington, W. Va., and points east thereof, except New England. These associations have the same general rules as given by Western Passenger Association, except, only, that no certificate will be honored issued more than two days (Sunday not included) after the first day of meeting; and that when meetings are held at distant points to which the authorized limit is greater than three days, tickets may be sold before the meeting in accordance with regular tariffs.

Certificates are not kept at all stations, therefore delegates should consult local ticket agents, giving timely notice, so that through tickets and certificates may be ready when required.

Southeastern Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana are not included in any passenger association, but roads in that territory have heretofore met the rate of adjoining associations. Delegates in this territory will please make immediate inquiry, and any failure to get rate must be reported to me at once, that the matter be arranged.

Dear sisters, none regret more than your committee upon transportation, that we must again work upon the certificate plan, demanding great care and attention to detail, as set forth in the rules, which must be strictly complied with if return of one-third fare is gained.

Later Instructions from Mrs. Woodward.

Mr. N. E. Weeks, chairman New England Passenger Association, advises the committee on transportation that a rate of one and one-third fare upon the certificate plan is authorized upon the following lines, viz: Bangor & Aroostook R. R.; Boston & Albany R. R.; Boston & Maine R. R.; Central Vermont R. R.; Fitchburg R. R.; Grand Trunk Ry.; Maine Central R. R.; New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R.; Portland S. S. Co.

The same general rules apply as in other associations. The rate is made to cover from November 9 to 16, and tickets for going passage may be sold only within three days (not counting Sunday) prior to the agreed opening date of the meeting (November 9) or three days after (including) such opening date; except that, when meetings are held at distant points to which the authorized limit, tickets may be sold before the meeting in accordance with the limits shown in regular tariffs.

Certificates will be honored for return passage three days (Sunday excepted), after the adjournment of the meeting. Return tickets will in all cases be closely limited to continuous passage, by the route over which the going journey was made, to the destination. Delegates and visitors from the Pacific coast, who may find, that owing to lateness of the season, special tourist rates are not available, will consult local passenger agents of the Southern Pacific Railway, who will be instructed as to rate by Mr. T. H. Goodman, general passenger agent, Southern Pacific, San Francisco.

Tickets via Great Northern Railway may be purchased as early as November 5, and certificates will be honored for return up to and including November 19.

(MRS.) CAROLINE M. WOODWARD,
Transportation Committee.
Nat. W. C. T. U.
David City, Neb.

Purity Conference.

DEAR WHITE-RIBBONERS:—I trust you are all bearing in mind that the Purity Conference precedes the National Convention. It will be held November 9 and 10, in the Plymouth Congregational church, corner of Wabasha St. and Summit Ave., St. Paul, Minn., and will be of great interest. The different divisions of the work, that is, the legislative, rescue and educational, will be presented by the different secretaries of the department. The evening of November 9 will be devoted to rescue work; the addresses will be made by Rev. George E. Soper, of St. Paul, Mrs. Isabel Wing Lake, Mrs. Charlton Edholm and Mrs. Mary Teats. The second evening will be devoted to the public discussion of the various phases of the work by the National superintendent and others. The state president of Minnesota, Mrs. Bessie L. Scovell, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Mrs. Helen Harford, Mother Prindle and others interested in dif-

One thousand styles and sizes.
For cooking and heating.
Price from $5 to $70.

GARLAND STOVES AND RANGES
The World's Best

Often imitated. Never equalled.

Best Cookers. Strongest Heaters.
Last Longest. Use Least Fuel.
Made only by
The Michigan Stove Company
Largest Makers of Stoves and Ranges in the world.
Sold Everywhere.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN AND BEAST
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS
84-90 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK
311-313 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright, 1893, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

THE LADIES' WORLD

is the best, cheapest, brightest and most practical ladies' magazine published in America. Each issue contains from 24 to 32 large pages, size of Harper's Bazar, and is enclosed in a handsome cover, printed in colors. Its departments embrace Fiction, Poetry, Special Helps, Housekeeping, Out-of-Doors, Artistic Needlework, What to Wear, Family Doctor, Boys and Girls, Mother's Corner, Etiquette and Home Decoration. It publishes original matter only, and its contributors are among the best of the modern writers. In order to introduce our

3 MONTHS FOR 8 Cts.

magazine into thousands of new homes where it is not already taken, we will send it three months—including Thanksgiving and Christmas issues—to any address, prepaid, for 8 cents in stamps. This small sum will not pay us for the advertising, to say nothing of the magazine, but we are so firmly convinced that if you will give it a trial you will want it continued, we take this means of placing it before a large army of new readers, and expect to reap our reward in the future. Send along the stamps and give it a trial. You will be more than pleased with your small investment. Address
S. H. MOORE & CO., 23 City Hall Place, New York.

HISTORY OF THE WORLD'S
COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00 Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.

AGENTS WANTED

both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address
DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

High Arm

Warranted Ten Years.

$10 to $25 SAVED

in buying direct from factory. 30 days free trial. No agents large profits to pay. No money in advance
$65 Kenwood Machine for.....$22.50
No better Machine at any price.
$50 Arlington Machine for.....$19.50
Other Machines $8.00, $11.50 and $15.00
all attachments free, over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free
Write today for special freight offer.
CASH BUYERS' UNION,
158-164 West VanBuren St., B-30 Chicago, Ills.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

ferent phases of the work will be represented on the program.

I desire it to be understood that the conference is not so much for public addresses as for the presentation of practical phases of the work, with opportunity for asking questions and the discussion of the same. In reality, just what the name implies, a conference between workers in order to further the work of the department. The two days of the conference, as I understand it, are included in the time of reduced railroad fares, and I trust that many will take advantage of this and come early, so as to attend the conference.

MARY WOOD-ALLEN,
Nat. Supt.

Ann Arbor, Mich.

Entertainment.

Delegates whose names are sent to Mrs. C. L. Webber, chairman of the entertainment committee, will be provided with homes from November 10 through November 16, but earlier or later than that it will be necessary for them to provide for themselves. Entertainment can not be furnished free to visitors, secretaries, husbands, etc. Visitors can obtain rooms for fifty cents per day, two in a room. Room and board can be had for $1.50 per day.

Hotel Windsor, room and board, per day, $2.

Hotel Metropolitan, room per day, two in room, fifty cents each. Board and room, two in a room, $1.50 each.

The Astoria, same rates as Metropolitan.

Important.

All state presidents, National organizers, lecturers, and other speakers who expect to be at National W. C. T. U. Convention in St. Paul, and are willing to speak on convention Sunday, are requested to send their names and place of entertainment to the chairman of the pulpit committee, Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, chairman committee Sabbath services, Schoolcraft, Mich., care Mrs. J. W. Budrow.

The ante-executive session of the National W. C. T. U. Convention is called to meet in Conover Music Hall, corner Sixth and St. Peter streets, at 9:30 on the morning of November 9. State presidents will please note time and place and be in attendance at the first hour if possible. A two days' meeting will, it is hoped, greatly facilitate the work of the Convention.

Reserved seats for the National Convention are selling fast, and all who desire them should write at once to Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, chairman of committee on finance. Seats are reserved only when the money for the same is sent to her. The price per seat is one dollar.

Where Our Speakers Are.

MRS. ADA UNRUH will be in Nebraska until the National Convention. Her address is Ord, Neb., care Mrs. M. M. Claflin. After Convention it will be 11 East Seeley St., Adams, Mich., until January 1.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.
Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Advertisers like to know what paper pays them best. Always mention The Union Signal when writing.

Official.

Sunday School.

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY.

The movement to secure the observance of a World's Temperance Sunday originated in the London Sunday-school Union. The International Lesson Committee has helped the plan greatly by placing the fourth quarterly temperance lesson on the date of World's Temperance Sunday. In the United States the movement has had the indorsement of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, the general assembly of the United Presbyterian church, the Congregational Council, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, etc.

The Sunday-school department of the W. C. T. U. of the United States through its indefatigable superintendent, Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, has rendered efficient service in securing cooperation from Sunday-schools, but it is not yet so generally observed in the United States as in Canada and other British provinces. The sad facts that have come to view in the United States during the past year in connection with colleges and canteens should convince us that all possible effort should be made to entrench our youth against the drink evil, which is so rapidly increasing. We can not begin too early to warn the children against it. The children in our cities are in special peril, as many of them are sent to the saloons for the family beer. Begin in the primary department of the Sunday-school and pledge the children to temperance. If they can not write their names to sign a pledge, pin temperance bows of ribbon upon them to wear as a pledge. Let W. C. T. U. workers in other lands make a very special effort to secure the observance of the World's Temperance Sunday.

SEVERAL THINGS TO DO.

1. Call personally on Sunday-school superintendents and urge them to make a specially interesting program for the day, additional music, and, if possible, some interesting speaker, who will tell something about the World movement.

2. Have individual pledges printed to give to Sunday-schools. If possible have a large pledge made which can be framed after officers, teachers and scholars have signed it.

3. Let W. C. T. U. workers prepare themselves to teach interestingly the quarterly temperance lesson for November 27. It is to be found in Prov. 4: 10–19, and the Golden Text is, "My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not."—Prov. 1: 10.

4. Let a temperance banner be prepared by W. C. T. U. workers, and let it be offered to the Sunday-school that ranks highest in the following points: (a) Largest number of pledged members; (b) Best selection of temperance books in the library; (c) Regular monthly distribution of some temperance paper.

5. Let W. C. T. U. workers urge the appointment of a temperance committee in the Sunday-schools.

6. Let W. C. T. U. workers themselves be regular teachers in the Sunday-schools.

I would be especially glad to receive reports from W. C. T. U. Sunday-school superintendents in regard to World's Temperance Sunday. Address,

(MRS.) W. F. CRAFTS,
World's Supt.

210 Delaware Ave., Washington, D. C.

Soldiers and Sailors.

DEAR COMRADES:—I have been too busy to write about the magnificent work done by our department in the last six months. I began a letter, but was laid aside for ten days—I could not move without help, from overwork—and I have not found time since to finish it. I am holding my report open, but can not do so much longer. I shall soon go to Jacksonville to help the tired and worn out workers there, and will not be able to send my report to the National for printing in the minutes if detained longer. So, dear state superintendents, please forward your reports at once. Do not wait for your state convention. Again I say, send immediately and oblige

Yours to serve,
ELLA M. THACHER,
Nat. Supt.

Florence, N. J.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec.—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—It is with pleasure we note the recommendation of Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of New York state, at the recent convention held in her state, "that a Mary Towne Burt memorial bed should be placed in the Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital in Chicago, and that Mrs. Burt's birthday, in April, should be known as Non-Alcoholic and Hospital day, and that the unions should on that day hold public meetings and take collections for that purpose." What an inspiration this is to feel that friends are being raised up all over our country to do what they can to help on this great principle of non-alcoholic remedies for the sick, and thus help arrest the physician's thought on this vital question of putting away entirely all alcoholic remedies, which purpose has been one of steady growth ever since the opening of our Hospital, whose life work is to educate, and thus benefit all mankind.

I wish to call the attention of the friends particularly to the marking of packages and boxes intended for the Hospital. None should be directed to Mrs. Hornby, as she has no connection whatever with the institution. Please write name of Hospital, number and street plainly, sending, if convenient, a card at the time of shipment to the same address; noting these simple directions often saves great annoyance at time of delivery.

The new ward, with its white beds, comes in for its share of attention; by some it is more to be desired than single rooms, "because it is not so lonesome." The superintendent says we are having a great many operations for a small hospital, and a considerable number are of major character. Thirteen nurses are in training this month, the largest number we have ever had. The L. T. L. room has its two little occupants, one very ill, an unusually patient little girl, who has been in the little white bed for many weeks with pneumonia, and a little boy of six years, who has had a slow fever since July. A week ago

STARVING
in the Midst of Plenty.

That's what people with poor digestion are doing every day. They have no appetite or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require it does them no good, because the stomach does not digest it and the fermenting mass of food becomes a source of disease, of headache,

MR. JUDSON A. STANION.

sleeplessness, languor and the thousand and one symptoms of disordered digestion. Mr. Judson A. Stanion, the great Church and Sunday School worker and president Christian Endeavor Union, St. Louis, Mo., says:

"I have had to be extremely careful what I ate. Many things were indigestible, and after a hearty dinner I could scarcely keep awake. I never have been sick in bed, but have had a great deal of inconvenience from indigestion. Since I learned of the merits of Stuart's Tablets, I keep them in my desk or carry them in my pocket, and find that I can eat anything at all without discomfort. They were recommended to me by a friend who is enthusiastic in their praise. I can not afford to be drowsy after lunch, and find these tablets just the thing to assist digestion and keep all my faculties wide-awake." Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. They digest the food whether the stomach works or not, and that's the whole secret. At all druggists, 50 cents a box. For book on stomach diseases, giving valuable advice, address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF
OUR WAR WITH SPAIN
ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance. for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.
STOP SMOKING!
NO-TO-BAC from
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

EVERY LADY SHOULD READ THIS
I will send free a positive cure for all female diseases, irregularities, etc. A simple private treatment, a common sense remedy that never fails. FREE with valuable advice. Mrs. L. HUDNUT, South Bend, Ind.

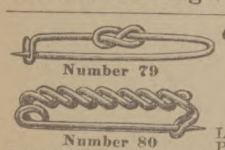
25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

he was put in the other little white bed, and his mother tells us she can "just see him get well." Thus we see two sides to hospital life. Sad it surely is that people are sick and have to come here. Then the glad side, that there is such a warm, comfortable place where sick people can be so cared for and cured.

Several dainty little bundles have arrived for the holiday sale; early in December it will be held. One came from a lady in Maryville, Mo., a pretty doylie, made by the willing fingers of Mrs. G. Bradley; we hope it will sell for a good price, repaying, in a measure, her kindness. Several pairs of dainty baby socks have traveled through the mail waiting for little feet to make them travel farther on. Reports of our last year's work are in the hands of the printer and we hope will be ready by the first of November to send out. Many of the states sent dolls last year, some of them were truly ladies of society, with costumes sufficiently fine to grace a jubilee ball, such as Chicago gave last night to President McKinley. Perhaps some one will read this who did not contribute last year, and will feel able to help along this time. To any such we would say your donation will be gratefully received, and we will endeavor to do our best with whatever you may send.

Hoping and trusting that this year's work may be crowned with much greater success than ever before,

I am sincerely yours in the hope of a new hospital.



(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.

A New Anti-Canteen Petition.

As it seems unlikely that the President will use his authority to close the regimental saloons, alias "canteens," and as in any case the Ellis bill, favorably reported and pending, will be needed to make such closing permanent and to close the "canteens in soldiers' homes" and the bar in the immigrant station at New York, all the anti-canteen sentiment should now be turned on Congress, and especially on congressmen and senators while they are at home among their constituents, by whom they should be visited, in delegations so far as possible, individually if nothing better can be arranged, to present petitions and ask their active coöperation to pass the Ellis bill early in the coming short session which lasts only from December to March 4. The following petition head is suggested:

To the United States Senate: [Send duplicate to the House:]

"The undersigned earnestly petition you to pass the Ellis bill to forbid liquor selling in 'canteens' of the army and navy and of soldiers' homes, and in immigrant stations and government buildings."

"BEAUTY" BREAST PINS.

These are gold plated Ladies' "Beauty" Breast Pins and are the very latest fashionable fad. Sample by mail ONE CENT in postage stamps. Address,
LYNN & CO., 48 Bond St., New York City.

New England CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC Unequalled advantages in all departments of Music and Elocution. The Conservatory home for young women provides every comfort and safeguard.
George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.
Pupils received at any time. For prospectus address
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home. Law College, Lima, O.

Advertisers like to know what paper pays them best. Always mention The Union Signal when writing.

LARKIN SOAPS AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin Idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample soap if mention this publication.
The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N.Y.
OUR OFFER FULLY EXPLAINED IN THE UNION SIGNAL, Oct. 6th.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION AT ST. PAUL, November 11 = 16.

We beg to call the attention of members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to the fact that first-class service is always maintained via

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES

Fast trains leave Chicago daily for St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland and Duluth, with unexcelled Sleeping, Dining and Café Cars attached. For further information address your ticket agent,

GEO. K. THOMPSON, G. P. & T. A., 230 Clark St., CHICAGO.
H. F. WHITCOMB, Gen'l Mgr., JAMES C. POND, G. P. A.,
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Publisher's Notes.

Attention, White-Ribboners!

"Your Mother is Loving You Yet," is a beautiful and pathetic temperance song, words and music by Emmet G. Coleman and is fast becoming the favorite with the W. C. T. U's as is demonstrated by the many orders and kind words we are receiving daily from the white-ribboners. We are determined to place this song in every temperance home in the land, it makes no difference what the sacrifice on our part may be. Mothers, your home is not complete without this song if you have children to be warned of strong drink.

"Your Mother is Loving You Yet," is a true history of a boy, eighteen years old, who killed a very old man. The cause of the crime was whisky. The boy was sentenced to death, and while awaiting his doom he received a message from his old mother, two thousand miles away. This was the message: "In spite of your crime, your old mother is loving you yet."

OUR OFFER.

Send us forty cents, stamps or post-office order on Danville, Va., the latter preferred, also the name of your best W. C. T. U. friend, and we will mail you two copies of the song, postpaid, and we will also send you free a copy of "Marching Onward," a rousing temperance chorus by the same author. "Your Mother is Loving You Yet" is full sheet music size, on best music paper, and retails for forty cents per copy. You get two pieces for the price of one. This offer is unlimited.

White-ribboners in Canada should remit silver, as Canadian stamps are of no service to us.

Address,
THE TEMPERANCE MUSIC CO.,
Kentuck, Va.

N. B.—At the above rate this song will surely find its way into every W. C. T. U. home in the land.

Our Memorial Ode.

"Press On and On," our Chieftain's orders, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, music by Mr. O. H. Hawley, is meeting with wide appreciation. The words are tender and effective, the music stirring and martial. It will be sung wherever the W. C. T. U. has voice. The Ode is printed in sheet form, with a beautiful half-tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy; 60 cts. per dozen copies to state, county and local unions. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Frances Townsley Calendar

for 1899 will be ready early in November. It is composed of a sentiment for each day in the coming year, the material being garnered by the request of friends from Rev. Miss Townsley's sermons, lectures, and addresses, with a few entire poems of the author published in such standard publications as The Youth's Companion, the New York Independent, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Baptist Standard, etc. Miss Townsley is a National evangelist of the W. C. T. U. and at present is pastor of the Baptist church, of Vassar, Mich. The calendar is gotten up on neat paper with clear type, arranged for daily use, and the proceeds are to be devoted to Christian and reform work. There are many suggestions to young men and maidens; some to the aged; and not a few have felt that the preparation of this souvenir might be a means of real good to those who shall own a copy. It is expressly suitable as a Christmas gift. For terms address

REV. FRANCES E. TOWNSLEY,
Vassar, Mich.

It having been urged by Miss Slack that the W. C. T. U. organizations all over the world should observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of the uprising of the women and present the history of the Crusade movement, it is most fitting to call attention to "Memories of the Crusade," by Mother Stewart. A fuller and more graphic account of that uprising is found in this work than in any other published. As the present generation knows but very little about the Crusade, and have some very erroneous ideas concerning it, it is important that a written account be put into the hands of the people, or it will be little more than a myth in a few years to come. A detailed description of this marvelous movement as found in Mother Stewart's book will be sent to any address postpaid for the price $1.50. It is handsomely bound and illustrated. Orders addressed to M. Campbell, publisher, Apple Tree Place, Springfield, Ohio, will receive prompt attention.

On page 1 will be found an announcement of the November Bible Reading. We feel sure that white-ribboners will be glad we give them this month the words of our promoted leader. The Reading will be plated so that copies may be ordered in any quantity and at any time. Price, single copies per year, 12 cents; 10 copies, per year, to one address, $1.

Burlington Route

BEST LINE TO ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS

White Ribbon Special Trains to St. Paul, Nov. 10, 1898.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

On Thursday, November 10, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. will run two White Ribbon trains Chicago to St. Paul for Delegates and others attending the annual meeting of National Meeting of the W. C. T. U.

The Daylight special will leave Union Passenger Station, Chicago, at 8:30 A. M., arriving at St. Paul evening of same day, passing through Milwaukee, the summer resort towns of Wisconsin, and along the Mississippi River from La Crosse to St. Paul. The whole route is one of most delightfully varying scenic beauty.

The evening train leaving at 6:30 P. M. will arrive in St. Paul at 7:50 A. M. Friday. It will be electric lighted throughout, with Dining Car, Sleepers, Day Coaches and Free Chair Car.

An additional train with like equipment will leave at 10:15 P. M., arriving in St. Paul at 11:30 A. M. Friday. For return trip, four trains daily St. Paul to Chicago.

The Route of the Pioneer Limited—the only perfect train in the world.

The route of the United States Government Fast Mail.

Reduced rates and further information may be had on application or by addressing C. N. SOUTHER, Ticket Agent, 95 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NORTH-WESTERN LIMITED
Electric Lighted

Is the finest train between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, the Superiors and Duluth. It leaves Chicago 6:3 P. M. daily, reaches St. Paul 7:50 and Minneapolis 8:3 next morning. It is new ly equipped with Library Ca, Private Compartment Sleeping Car, Palace nSleping Car, Free Reclining Chair Car, Dining Car aed Coaches. Returning it leaves Minneapolis 7:30 P. M. and St. Paul 8:10 P. M. and arrives Chicago 9:30 A. M. Other trains for St. Paul and Minneapolis leave Chicago at 8:30 A. M. daily except Sunday and 10:15 P. M. daily.

Tickets will be sold on the certificate plan of one and one-third fares for the round trip.

All agents sell tickets via THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY. For rates and full information apply to nearest ticket agent or to
H. A. Gross, 461 Broadway, New York.
J. E. Brittain, 368 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
T. P. Valle, 601 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
C. Traver, 507 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.
E. B. Spain, 210 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.
W. A. Cox, 435 Vine St., Cincinnati, Ohio.
D. W. Aldridge, 127 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio.
W. H. Guerin, 67 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.
A. H. Waggener, 7 Jackson Place, Indianapolis, Ind.
Or W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

EDITOR—I shall want about 500 words on the subject I mentioned. New Reporter—Yes, sir; about what size do you want the words?

SQUILDIG—I don't approve of calling the prevailing tension a "war fever." McSwilligen—What would you call it? Squildig—"Rumortism."

"WHAT'S this new patriotic order Smith has founded?" "Cousins of the Revolution. You see, Smith's great-grandmother promised to be the sister of a man who afterwards fought in the War of Independence."

THERE was a deacon in a certain church, into whose pew one Sunday a drunken man staggered and sat down. The preacher discoursed about prevalent vices. Soon he exclaimed, "Where is the drunkard?" The drunken man thought the case personal, so rising heavily he exclaimed, "Here I am!" A few moments later the preacher reached another head of his discourse and asked, "Where is the hypocrite?" Gently nudging his neighbor, the intoxicated man said, in an audible whisper, "Stand up, deacon, he means you this time; stand up and take it like a man as I did. It will do you good!" The deacon was fairly doubled up. He would have given twelve months' takings of his drink shop to have been a clear mile away just then.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 42. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, November 3, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Treaty of Peace in Sight—Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poems, Nature's Trinity—To the Fringed Gentian—The Night Blooming Cereus 3
Meg's Wish. By A. J. R 3
A City's Girl Protege. By George Milton Hammell . . 4
The Fruit of the Vine 4
Willard Hall Echoes 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
The New York Christian Home 5
Miss Parrish Leaves Japan 5
On a Collection Plate 6
Progress in India 6
Origin of Christening Vessels 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, How the Mill Grinds 7
Phil's Experiment 7
The Tease 7
Our Cozy Corner 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Spiritual Life of the W. C. T. U 8
Sunk By Its Own Weight 8
After the Grasshopper Saloons 9
"Her Works Do Follow Her" 9
To Enforce Law Becomes a "Special Case" 9
A Greeting From Christian Endeavorers 9
Personals 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Y's at Work—World's Wave Crests 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
New York—North Dakota—Minnesota—Colorado—New Hampshire 10-13
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 13
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER 13
Entertainment—Chairmen of Nat'l Convention Committees—Important Change of Address—Notice 13, 14
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Peace and Arbitration 14
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 14
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 15
W. C. T. U. NOTES 15

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 11-16.

RED-LETTER DAY.

PEACE DAY.—The third Sunday in December.

Notes and Comments.

THE subject of Professor Herron's lecture next Monday noon in Willard Hall is, "The Democracy of Power." This is the third lecture in a series of six, on the general subject of Christian sociology, given under the auspices of the National Christian Citizenship League.

MR. MOODY did not go to the front during the war, but he kept in close touch with the various camps in this country and in Cuba through his corps of Christian workers. When asked in Chicago recently what influences had been most detrimental to the morals of the soldiers, he replied promptly, "The canteen; it was infernal, no more, no less." Asked further if there is any close connection between Christianity and the physical welfare of the soldier in camp and field, he said: "Righteousness preserves a man from many things that hurt him in the army and elsewhere," and gave illustrations in support of this proposition.

"DO you know that the church, directly or indirectly, influences at least 9,000,000 of votes in the United States? We Christian organizations hold the balance of power, and if we would stand shoulder to shoulder at the ballot-box as the saloon stands shoulder to shoulder we could win any reform and demand any right." These are pulpit words of the Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, of Chicago, uttered in the course of commendatory remarks concerning Dr. J. Q. A. Henry's crusade against vice in this city. Christian voters throughout the land would do well to think more earnestly and more honestly on these things.

THE third Sunday of December will be observed as Peace Sunday by the various peace societies of the world. The W. C. T. U. department of peace and arbitration has issued four programs for this occasion which may be obtained of the National superintendent, Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Me. On page 14 of this issue will be found a program prepared for the use of local unions at their last meeting previous to Peace Sunday. We give it at this early date that it may reach as many of our World constituency as is possible before that meeting. Mrs. Bailey suggests that unions request their pastors to preach special Peace sermons on December 16, also that W. C. T. U. prayer-meetings be held in the interests of peace.

REPORTS from the Pennsylvania campaign are most encouraging. Friends of "good government" from the different political parties are flocking every day to the standard of the Rev. Dr. Swallow, prohibition candidate for governor. The platform upon which Dr. Swallow stands is expressed in the prohibition, "Thou shalt not steal." The suppression of the liquor traffic is a part of the platform only by inference. This single issue is susceptible of wide and liberal interpretation. Ideas of honesty vary with the individual conscience, and this we know to be a very elastic thing. If Dr. Swallow is elected, as all reformers hope he will be, the supreme court of Pennsylvania may be called upon to define the word "steal" as used in the vocabulary of politicians.

IT has been decreed, so say fashion writers, that in winter millinery the corpses and plumage of song birds will be conspicuous chiefly by their absence. Two reasons are assigned for this closer conformity of la mode to Christian civilization, viz., the growing scarcity of the songsters themselves, and the growing agitation in opposition to their slaughter for purposes of ornamentation — agitation prompted by considerations both humane and utilitarian. Let us protect the birds even if that means the enactment of sumptuary laws.

APROPOS of the cost of armies, the United States and Switzerland are the only nations which spend more for education than for military purposes. France spends $8 per capita annually for its army and 70 cts. for education; England $3.72 for war, 62 cts. for education; Prussia $2.04 war, 50 cts. education; Russia $2.04 war, 3 cts. education; Italy and Austria, each, about $1.50 for war and 35 cts. for education. Switzerland spends 82 cents for its army, 84 cents for its schools, and the United States—to the honor of its people be it said—30 cents for its army, and $1.35 for its schools. May this nation always continue to act upon the principle enunciated by Edward Everett: "Education is a better safeguard of liberty than a standing army!"

THE president of the Italian Council, M. Pelloux, says: "The man who will succeed in inducing the nations to decrease their armaments will have deserved well of humanity; his glory will be lasting and much more solid than that of great conquerors." No one human individual will ever have that honor. There is but One who has power to thus bless humanity and attain such glory. His name is the "Prince of Peace." He is the Christ-man who works in and through all men. The disarmament of nations—to be an accomplished fact some day—will be the result of the steady growth of a sentiment which is a combination of common sense, moral principle and religious conviction. It will be the Christ idea manifesting, the Christ kingdom advancing, the Christian becoming, through Him, "more than conqueror."

DR. FREDERICK D. EVELYN, of San Francisco, whose experiments with alcoholized subjects we have before called attention to, announces a new and sure cure for inebriety, namely, inoculation. The human race, he says, can be made alcohol proof by arming all children against intemperance as they are now armed against smallpox. He claims to have administered, with marked success, a preparation called equisine, made from the blood of a horse which has been fed upon alcohol until it has become a confirmed drunkard. The doctor is reported as having "no patience with prohibitory enactments as applied to the drink traffic." He regards alcoholism as a plague or pestilence, to be removed only by removing the cause, viz., the appetite for intoxicants. We warmly welcome any and every scientific method looking toward the prevention and cure of intemperance, but the history of the temperance reform shows that legal suasion and moral suasion are immense supports to scientific suasion. And moreover, it will not be denied that the growing public sentiment against the use of intoxicants, consequent upon the efforts of prohibition advocates, has been chief factor in bringing about the investigations of Dr. Evelyn and other scientists, resulting in the discovery of causes and the application of remedies.

Current Events.

Treaty of Peace in Sight.

President McKinley Determines to Retain the Philippine Islands.

THE latest news concerning the sessions of the peace commission in Paris is to the effect that President McKinley has decided to keep all the Philippines. The United States will assume $40,000,000 of the Philippine debt in consideration of a quitclaim by Spain.

The stars and stripes will wave over an island empire in the Eastern seas. Oppressed races, numbering 8,000,000 persons, will be freed and civilized. The islands number 1,200 to 2,000. They extend north and south 1,000 miles, east and west 600 miles. Their area is 114,000 square miles, about as much as that of New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut combined.

The Spanish commissioners at Paris have been trying to drive a financial bargain with the representatives of the United States. They have not offered serious objection to the abandonment of Spanish territory, but they have sought to make every loss of that kind the basis for a claim for cash. During the war it was asserted by Spaniards in official life that the bare proposition to cede Spanish territory would provoke a revolution at home, but the people of Spain gave up Porto Rico and Cuba without a dollar of indemnity and without a show of concern except a feeling of relief. In abandoning their claims in connection with the so-called Cuban debt, the Spanish commissioners threw themselves on the mercy of the Americans.

The President has decided that the United States can afford to be generous with Spain in the settlement of the fate of the Philippines. Instead of asking Congress for an appropriation to give the Spanish the cash for which they are crying, he has determined to assume the debt of about £8,000,000 created in 1896.

In administration circles it is thought the revenues of the Philippines will enable the government to meet the interest and principal of the bonds without burdening the United States proper. A speedy settlement and the dismissal of the peace commission now seems assured.

Temperance.

THE Grand Lodge of California, I. O. G. T., in session in San Francisco, has voiced its protest against the army canteen in a stirring resolution, as has also the Grand Lodge of Maine.

THE statement is made that the next legislature in Michigan will be asked to enact a law, regulating the sale of liquor by drugstores, and to make it so strict that it can not be evaded.

THE Schlitz Brewing Company of Milwaukee, Wis., in a letter to the battleship commission concerning the christening of the Wisconsin, makes the following statement as an argument in favor of the use of beer instead of champagne: "Only a few weeks ago nearly half a million bottles of this 'beer that made Milwaukee famous' were shipped to the men behind the guns at Manila—the largest and most noteworthy shipment of beer that ever left America."

THE W. C. T. U. of Dover, Del., has passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That we, the members of Dover's W. C. T. Union, believe it inconsistent and unwise to patronize, in any way, directly or indirectly, either the liquor-dealer or those who make his business possible by signing applications for license to sell intoxicating liquors.

As a number of the leading business men have been in the habit of signing these applications, and the women have inaugurated a vigorous boycott, the effect of the resolution is far-reaching.

A YEAR ago last spring the city council of Chicago imposed a fee of $100 a year on all dealers who wished to sell cigarets and prohibited the sale within 100 yards of a schoolhouse. The cigaret dealers started a test suit but lost in the lower court. Then the council was asked to cut down the license to $10 a year pending the result of the appeal to the supreme court, which was refused. The supreme court has now sustained the decision of the lower court that the ordinance was legal and the big fight against the license has been lost by the cigaret dealers.

MAYOR QUINCY, of Boston, in his address before the recent convention of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., said: "I have always believed in woman's work and influence, not only in the home, but in the larger affairs of the community, in the body politic and social. It has been my privilege to call more women into the service of the city than were there when I first entered office, particularly to work among the poor and unfortunate. We are coming to recognize the importance of studying the sources of all these evils rather than the cure when people have entered the walls of an institution. The work of this organization concerns the body social and the body politic. One depends on the other. I hope I appreciate the far-reaching evils of intoxicating liquors, and if you can decrease intemperance and bring back to the paths of decent living those that have strayed from them, then surely your work is deserving the encouragement of those in office, and it has my support."

About Women.

IT is announced that Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, will wed her second-cousin, Prince William, of Wied.

ON November 8, South Dakota will vote on the question to strike out the word "male" from the state constitution.

DR. CHARLOTTE LEVANWAY, octogenarian physician, who was the first woman member of her profession to enter the field of work at Chicago, died at Battle Creek, Mich., October 24.

MISS MARY HOFFMAN, daughter of United States Judge Ogden Hoffman, has begun a course in the Bellevue Hospital, New York, from which she will graduate a professional nurse, with the intention of devoting her life to charities.

MISS LULU MACKEY, court stenographer of Trumbull county, O., has been admitted to the practice of law in the state of Ohio. Miss Mackey is self educated. She is a member of the Political Equality Club of Warren, O.

WOMEN did not vote in the late plebiscite in Canada, as they do not possess what is called the parliamentary franchise. In the former provincial plebiscites, women who could vote for municipal councilors were permitted to vote the same as men.

THE result of the local option votes of October 3 shows a net gain of four towns for the no-license column in Connecticut. The town of Griswold changed from "no" to "yes," while Chester, Essex, Woodbury, Kent and Stratford changed from "yes" to "no." There are now seventy-seven "wet" towns, and ninety-one that are "dry."

MISS CHANLER, of New York, has received great praise from Lieutenant-Colonel Nicholas Senn, chief of the operating staff of the army, who has just returned from Porto Rico. He says this Red Cross nurse worked night and day with untiring zeal, ministering to the sick and wounded soldiers. Miss Chanler is a niece of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe.

THE Dominion Alliance executive of Canada has asked the Dominion government to fix a date for the reception of a national prohibition deputation to interview the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and his colleagues in the administration. The prohibitionists desire to place before them the unanimous demand of the prohibition conference for the enactment of a prohibitory law. It is expected that the government will agree to receive the deputation at the federal Parliament buildings during the first week in November when the Dominion W. C. T. U. will be in session at the capital, and which will unite with the other prohibition organizations. The sweeping victory of the prohibition cause with a substantial national prohibition majority will be emphatically pressed upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as demanding a law in conformity with the verdict of the electorate at the polls.

Educational.

THE superintendent of schools at Cleveland, Ohio, has decided that teachers may wear bicycle dresses in school providing they are not "shorter than is proper."

THE woman's department of the University of Illinois is increasing rapidly in size, two hundred and five women now being in attendance, a gain of fifty over last year.

TWO Southern Methodist institutions of Missouri, the Howard Payne college and the Central college, are to be consolidated this year, and open to both men and women.

THE school children of Philadelphia, Pa., have collected $2,305.55 for the benefit of the various hospitals in the city which have taken care of sick and wounded soldiers.

A BERLIN astronomer claims to have discovered a new planet between Mars and the earth, which he thinks has come into the solar system through the attraction of one of the superior planets. Its orbit about the sun is very elliptical and takes 645 days.

A HOUSEKEEPERS' ALLIANCE has just been organized in Philadelphia, which proposes not only to start a training school for domestic service and open an employment bureau, but is also to create public sentiment and arouse interest among the housekeepers of the city in the educational, sanitary and moral issues at stake in the proper solution of the servant-girl problem. Miss May Higgenbotham is president. The Alliance has nearly 200 members already, and $1,000 has been subscribed toward the training school.

At Home.

TWELVE of the Pillager Indians who were engaged in the recent outbreak in Minnesota, have been fined and sent to jail. The fines ranged from $25 to $100, and the terms of imprisonment from sixty days to ten months.

UP to September 30, the number of lives lost in the war with Spain was 2,906. The statistics show that the percentage of deaths in camps from disease was much less than during the Civil War, and that under far more terrible climatic conditions.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has issued his formal Thanksgiving proclamation, naming Thursday, November 24, as the day in which the nation shall give thanks for the blessings of the past year, particularly the speedy and successful close of the war.

SPAIN has protested against the battleships Oregon and Iowa going around Cape Horn to the Philippine Islands and demands their return to the United States, claiming the action in sending these ships to Manila is a violation of the terms of the protocol.

MR. AND MRS. H. DARWIN MCILRATH, who left Chicago on April 10, 1895, for a trip around the world on bicycles, have just returned home. They wheeled through Japan, China, Burmah, India, Persia, Russia, Turkey, Austria-Hungary, Germany, France and Great Britain, covering 28,000 miles, exclusive of journeys by boat.

Abroad.

A DISPATCH from St. Petersburg announces that all the powers have accepted the czar's invitation to take part in a conference looking to the disarmament of the nations. Each power will be represented by three delegates.

PIERRE PUVIS DE CHAVANNES, one of the greatest masters of mural and decorative painting, died at Paris, France, on October 25. This country has a notable example of his art in the public library at Boston and France abounds in magnificent specimens.

THE bubonic plague, that has caused much devastation in India, has appeared in Vienna. The source of contagion was the cultivation of plague germs by a medical professor for experimental purposes. There have been two deaths, and six cases are at present reported.

FRANCE is again riven by internal dissensions, which have grown out of the Dreyfus case and the controversy with England over the holding of Fashoda. The entire cabinet resigned October 25, and a new one is in process of construction, headed by M. Dupuy. It now seems quite probable that Captain Dreyfus will be released without further trial.

Contributed.

[While Miss Anna Gordon was ill in the home of Mrs. Stevens, and not allowed by her physician to sit up, flowers in great variety were sent by sympathetic neighbors and friends, from the exotic of the conservatory to the little wayside blossom. As her eyes rested upon them in their beauty it is not strange that her poetic soul broke forth into song. Three of these little songs a friend sends to THE UNION SIGNAL and we give them here, feeling sure that their tender, trustful tones will find quick response in the hearts of all white-ribboners. —THE EDITORS.]

Nature's Trinity.

THE early blossoms of the spring
Are delicate and frail,
The snowdrop, harebell, daffodil,
The swaying windflower pale.

Could proof more perfect or more sweet
Have come to us from God
That winter's cold and icy hand
No longer holds the sod?

Blossoms of Faith spring's flowers are
With lifted, tender eyes
In trust that sheltering love is theirs
Under the brightening skies.

. . . . . .

Led by these harbingers all fair,
The dainty, daring things,
A host comes gaily trooping on,
And soon the summer sings

Of life and light in earth and air,
In busy bird and bee,
In field and wood, on mountain top,
And by the mystic sea.

Blossoms of Love in summer bloom
With sunlit eyes and wide,
"'Tis summer always," is their song,
"In her warm heart we hide."

. . . . . .

When hint of autumn chills the air,
How brave the blossoms grow,
How bright the leaves in glade and glen,
What courage strong they show.

The north wind bids them say farewell,
They see the coming snow,
Yet richer still in rainbow hues
Their gorgeous colors glow.

Blossoms of Hope 'neath autumn skies
To cheer and bless—and then
Kissed by the sun to fall asleep
Saying, We rise again.

To the Fringed Gentian.

THOU art half human, gentle flower,
On sturdy stem and true;
To wake and sleep thou hast the power,
With eye of heavenly blue.

A sylvan deity thou art,
Thy head uplifted to the sun,
In nature's psalm thou hast a part
From dawn till day is done.

Thy fringed petals as they fold
To sleep until the light,
Enclose a heart of purest gold,
Thou meadow blossom bright.

Bloom for us ever, gentian fair,
And when our spirits rise,
Still bloom for us in clearer air,
Flower of Paradise!

The Night Blooming Cereus.

SUPERNAL is thy beauty
Spirit flower,
Slow gliding into earthly night
From out the realm of radiant light,
Thou openest wide thy fragrant petals of
Ethereal white,
A wondrous vision of delight
But for an hour.

Alas, I can ot hold thee
Flower divine,
To meet the dawn thou canst not stay,
Thy gentle spirit hastes away
To bloom neath angels' tender, watchful eyes
In endless day,
There in thy beauteous array
Forever mine.

Meg's Wish.

BY A. J. R.

IT was the close of a dreary day in November at the East End of London. A dense, chilly, penetrating fog hung over the city. So dense was it that the usually busy thoroughfares had scarcely a vehicle, and the few foot passengers, whom necessity compelled to be on the street, jostled each other; while the lights, which at other times shone so brightly, looked dim and uncertain in the semi-darkness.

The clang of the great factory bells sounded, and from beneath the high, gloomy walls poured forth motley throngs—old men and young, women and children, the latter walking with slow, weary steps from which had disappeared every trace of the buoyancy and elasticity of childhood, while their pale, pinched faces told pathetic tales of the struggle of life into which they had been forced. A dismal crowd; the pallid, sunken cheeks, tired, dull eyes and wasted forms, in scant, begrimed garments, formed a picture which none but the most thoughtless could behold without a thrill of pity or indignation.

The throng separated, some going homeward, others tarrying at the brilliantly lighted gin palaces, where too often, alas! they found light, warmth and a degree of comfort which was not contained in their miserable homes.

Two children, a boy of about twelve and a girl some two years younger, brought up the rear of the gradually lessening procession. One would easily determine them to be brother and sister. The girl might have been pretty under happy conditions, but the tired eyes and the listless expression on the pinched face told the story of a wearisome struggle for existence. She lagged behind her brother and often stopped as if to gain breath.

"I am so tired," she cried, "I can't see you through the fog; oh, when shall we get home?"

"Soon," answered the brother cheerily. "Let's make haste or granny will be cross," and turning into the narrow street they soon entered a court composed of miserable tenements, before one of which they halted, and climbing the dark, rickety stairs entered the one cheerless room which constituted their home. It was a strange travesty on the name. Dark, dirty, scantily furnished, its one window looked out over a dreary area of chimney pots, roofs and leaden sky. An old, bent woman was preparing the evening meal of bread and dried herrings, and after tea the two children crouched before the scant fire too tired to talk, almost too tired to rest, and sat with closed eyes listening to the sounds in the street below.

Meg and Joe were orphans. Their parents had been factory hands, also their grandparents and greatgrandparents. The family heritage, a life of privation and toil, had left each generation weaker and less able to sustain its part in life's struggle, until it seemed as if the battles of the Merton family must soon end by the defeat of the two children, its present representatives.

The grandmother, bent, feeble and nearly blind, had long ago been unfitted for work, and upon the death of their parents, some two years previous, Meg and Joe had entered the factory where their ancestors had spent so many wearisome hours.

The evening wore on; Meg with a sigh, laid her aching limbs on her hard bed. Joe rejoicing in the thought of the long sleep to-morrow (for to-morrow would be Sunday) soon fell asleep, but poor Meg tossed restlessly all night, and when she did sleep she dreamed that the great wheels of machinery had caught her in their teeth and were carrying her in their ceaseless revolutions.

Sunday dawned clear and fine, the city looking brighter by contrast with yesterday's fog. It was late when Meg, with a thrill of terror from the memory of her dreams, awakened, and after a scanty breakfast, upon suggestion of Joe, the two took a walk in the quiet street. They had not gone far before they were attracted by the sound of singing in a little mission hall. As they approached a kindly-faced man invited them to enter. Meg shyly hung back at first, but Joe on the alert for anything new prevailed, and they were soon in a bright, cheerful room. The walls were hung with brightly colored mottoes and Scriptural pictures. Children were seated in groups, some neatly dressed, some in the attire of the street arab. Meg and Joe were placed in a group of youngsters of their own size. Meg had never before been in such a place, and her open-eyed, open-mouthed astonishment as she gazed at pictures, teachers, singers and all was so irresistible that a fat boy laughed outright. Joe was in a strange place, he might not know everything, but he knew enough to resent any affront to his family; so quickly but emphatically he closed his right fist and administered therewith a reminder of the boy's impoliteness, accompanying it with an injunction to refrain hereafter from laughing at his betters.

The singing recommenced and Meg sat transfixed, her wistful eyes shining with pleasure. She had never heard such music. One song particularly charmed her and she repeated the words softly to herself:

"He'll know the way was dreary,
When Jesus comes;
He'll know the feet grew weary,
When Jesus comes."

The lesson of the Good Shepherd which followed was as new to them as the song.

As they trudged home, they talked it over. The story of our Lord had been unknown to them. They wondered if He would come soon. "The song says He will come," said Meg. "I wonder if He'll come to Whitechapel. Oh," with a sob in her voice, "how I wish He'd come and take me away from the factory, I am so tired."

"Them words was pretty," said Joe. "What was it about rest in His arms?"

"He'll know what griefs oppressed me
When Jesus comes;
Oh, how His arms will rest me,
When Jesus comes."

She repeated them slowly. "Oh, if He will come soon!" she cried.

That evening as they sat by the fire she said, "Granny, do you 'spose the Lord Jesus will come to Whitechapel?"

"What!" exclaimed Granny, "come to Whitechapel? No indeed, little He's to do with the like o' us."

"Are you sure, granny? I was hoping He'd come. 'Oh, how His arms will rest me,'" she whispered.

"Best go to bed," said granny shortly. She did not favor the turn of the conversation. Her vague ideas of religion being that it was one of the various good things for the exclusive benefit of the rich.

The next day as the children walked to work Meg seemed much more cheerful than usual. She hummed the Sunday-school tune and shyly said, "I can sing it, Joe," and the thin little voice quavered out:

"He'll know the way was dreary,
When Jesus comes;
. . . Oh, how His arms will rest me,
When Jesus comes."

All day the words rung in her ears, mixing with the roar of the machinery, and as she repeated them to herself at work there was a restful feeling of hope down in the weary little heart.

"Tired, sis?" asked Joe as they left work at night.

"Not now," returned Meg. "Joe, I'm very sure He's coming to Whitechapel."

They were crossing the street. "Look out for the carts," cried Joe. But Meg's foot slipped and the hoofs of a horse struck the prostrate little form.

Pitiful hands carried her to a hospital, but nothing availed; Meg was dying. She lay motionless on the white bed. The pale lips quivered and slowly opened, and with a feeble smile at tearful Joe she whispered,

"He'll know what fears oppressed me,
. . . . . .
Oh, how His arms will rest me,
When——"

but the voice failed, the lids slowly closed over the wistful eyes, and poor, tired Meg was at rest.

"Accident—Child killed," said the daily papers, giving a brief notice of the event, and the careless and busy passed and repassed the spot with never a thought of what had happened there. But you and I know that Meg's wish had been fulfilled. The Lord Jesus had come to Whitechapel.

Denver, Col.

A City's Girl Protege.

BY GEORGE MILTON HAMMELL.

AT a special meeting of the House of Refuge directors, held recently in the city of Cincinnati, Lizzie Rump, a thirteen-year-old girl who had been an inmate of the house for one month, was released on parole. This is beginning at the end, it seems, but it is the development of a case whose features exhibit anomalies.

Lizzie Rump's commitment was the outcome of her trial for "drunkenness" before his honor, judge of the city police court. It was wholly unwarranted, and as vicious an abuse of authority as the exile of a Russian suspect to Siberia. Publicly, however, or through the medium of newspaper reporters, the judge justifies his action on the ground that Lizzie Rump was "beastly drunk," that all the evidence in the case was against her, and that he decided adversely to her for fear of making other parties "sore." Upon being asked if this report were true, the judge maintained significant silence.

The "case" is this: Together with two other girls, employés of a Third street factory, Lizzie was asked to remain after working hours for the purpose of "sweeping up." For "fun," or mischief, Lizzie was forced against her will to drink, at the request of a young man, son of her employer. So potent was the draught, that before she emerged from the building she became partially blind, and before walking two squares was helpless and unconscious. The two girls who accompanied her, seeing a policeman, abandoned her, and Lizzie was taken to the city hospital, where she was treated for alcoholism. The internes testify that she frothed at the mouth and was delirious until midnight. Her mother, a charwoman, was notified and came at once, having been engaged in hunting for her daughter since six o'clock.

Lizzie was then arraigned in the infamous police court on a charge of "drunkenness," and her mother, upon her statement, swore out a warrant for the arrest of Lester B—, on the charge of furnishing liquor to minors. The cases were consolidated; Lizzie pleaded guilty to the charge, although she might easily have entered a plea of not guilty, compelling the city to prove the fact of her intoxication. Lester B—, of course, sustained by council, pleaded "not guilty," and the case proceeded. Lizzie told a plain, straightforward story, impressing unbiased hearers by her manifest simplicity of character and modesty. Two girls testified that Lester B— did not give her drink. Lester B— denied that he had ever offered her beer or whisky. An attaché of a saloon testified that he had missed two sample bottles of whisky and testimony was promptly adduced to show that Lizzie Rump was seen with one of the bottles. Therefore she stole it! It was also testified that she had once requested the saloon attaché to give her alcohol for an aching tooth. Therefore she was guilty of "drunkenness." The prosecuting attorney closed with the young witnesses, and attempted to break their testimony by forcing confession of perjury, instead of analyzing the testimony. Having failed in this process, the case was closed, and Lizzie Rump was summarily committed to the House of Refuge. No opportunity was offered her to say good-bye to her mother. She was led out of the court-room, and for one entire month was not permitted to converse with any member of her family (her father was with his regiment in the Spanish-American war).

Instantly the prosecutor approached the writer, and in a state of great excitement exclaimed, "I have been sworn out of court!"—a statement which meant that the witnesses against Lizzie Rump were guilty of perjury. Later in the day he averred his belief that Lester B— had given Lizzie Rump an intoxicant of some character; that his purpose was evil, and that it was the design of the court to confine Lizzie Rump in the "house" for a short time only, because she was not a girl of good character. Now, the judge and prosecutor knew, or should have known, that they had no authority to commit for any period less than the number of years necessary to attain majority. Under law Lizzie Rump was committed until the attainment of her eighteenth year. Nothing in the trial proved that ground existed for her removal from the care of her mother, who stood at her side during the trial, and deported herself with perfect self-control and dignity when her daughter was so summarily taken from her. She had confessed to the charge of "drunkenness." There was no evidence to show that she was an habitual drunkard, or that she was the inmate of an improper home. Prejudiced by Lester B— and his hirelings, the court permitted itself to be biased against a helpless, friendless girl. The prosecutor privately declared that Lester B— had been brought by cross-examination to the point of "breaking," but the prosecutor released him in time to prevent that catastrophe!

The weeks passed. Lizzie Rump was placed in the "dungeon," then subjected to examination from time to time, but treated, on the whole, kindly, and the authorities reported that she behaved herself modestly and docilely. But her mother pressed for release, and the case was placed in the hands of a lawyer. At this juncture, but wholly without purpose of collusion, a prominent German minister was interested in the case. He addressed a letter to the police magistrate requesting a statement of his authority for committing the girl to the "Refuge." This letter has never been answered, except indirectly. Reporters were told that such a letter had been received. Another letter of inquiry was also sent, but this also was ignored. Appeals were made to the board of directors, affidavits prepared for presentation, and then it was that a special meeting was held, and Lizzie Rump released on parole.*

Secure in his seat, the police magistrate declines to explain his decision, and the board of House of Refuge directors collude with him in insinuating that Lizzie Rump is not a "good girl." The fact remains, that the police magistrate assigned no such cause for her commitment and the girl denies that she made a self-condemnatory confession in contradiction of her sworn testimony in court. Stigmatized by a decision which baselessly, cruelly discriminated against her, Lizzie Rump came out of the "Refuge" a branded girl, but the bitter disgrace of all the "case" rests, not upon her, but upon the city with 1,997 saloons protected by the police power, and blackmailed by the state under terms of the Dow tax license law—hundreds of dark houses "certificated" by the police and scores of gambling houses taxed for "protection."

As the result of a modest effort to scrutinize the action of the court in cases of infant drunkenness, instructions have been issued to the police not to arrest drunken boys and girls—"beastly drunk" on the pavements—but to immure them in the nearest station house until they become sober. This will save the police from further effort to "discover" the saloonkeeper who sold the drink, and also prevent that exposure of the court's subserviency to the liquor power which is so irritating to the dominant parties in Cincinnati, Columbus and Washington—and the "voting church."

Cincinnati, O.

*Under conditions of the "parole," this girl is required to report once a month at chapel service on Sunday afternoon. Her mother accompanies her, and for the first time in her life, was spectator of the famous House of Refuge Sunday afternoon service.

The Fruit of the Vine.

[From a sermon delivered by the Rev. Samuel M. Bernard, of Louisville, Ky.]

Text: "But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom."

SPECIAL attention is invited to the expression "this fruit of the vine." When we approach a subject like this it should be with the greatest reverence. Some men spill the blood of their fellows with impunity, but when we come to speak of that emblem which brings to mind the shedding of the world's most precious blood, it should be a time of deepest solemnity.

First, let us notice the use of the word "wine" in the Bible. The word and its derivatives occur more than one hundred times in the Old Testament. The Hebrew word which most frequently expresses the idea is yayin, and this term expresses a liquid which produced intoxication. Noah drank yayin and it made him drunk. It is also well to note that yayin was used at Jewish feasts. Another word which is used in the Old Testament to express the idea is tirosh. This word also represents a substance which produces intoxication, as is seen from Hosea 4:11: "Whoredom and yayin and tirosh take away the understanding." The evident meaning of this passage is that each of these indulgences will cause a man to lose control of his mind.

There are at least eleven other words used in the Old Testament which express the idea of wine but the two already named are representative words, and a further investigation of Hebrew words would not result in material profit so we will pass on to the examination of the word in the New Testament. In the Greek the word oinos represents all kinds of wine. It is a generic term. Glenkos is another Greek word which is used in the New Testament to express the idea of wine. It means new wine. The apostles, on the first Pentecost after the resurrection, when the establishment of the church took place, were charged with being filled with glenkos which the rabble claimed made them drunk. Glenkos evidently produced intoxication.

But a different term is used when speaking of the fruit of the vine used at the observance of the Lord's Supper. The Greek word there used is genema, meaning first fruit. Its closer real meaning is the natural product of the vine. The close Bible student will observe that this is the expression which is always employed when referring to the liquid which is used to symbolize the Saviour's precious blood.

Let us now leave the consideration of technical terms and proceed to give some prudential reasons why unfermented grape juice should be used upon the sacred board.

First, it is altogether possible to get the pure grape juice. There are certainly enough grapes on the market to procure a plentiful supply at a very small cost.

Second, the unfermented grape juice is more appropriate than the fermented liquor. The emblem represents Christ's blood which was shed in order to take away sin and give new spiritual life to His people. It had a renewing, healthful influence. Intoxicating liquor has a destroying influence.

Third, we should banish intoxicants from the Lord's table for the sake of the weak brother. We should take a lesson from the recent reply of Governor Tanner on the question of christening the battleship Illinois. He gave as one reason for favoring the use of wine on that occasion that it is used in the observance of the Lord's Supper.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

HISTORY repeats itself. The burden of one heart is many times repeated in the lives of others. Many times friends say to us, "Do not tell where this request comes from." Dear ones, we never do. God knows where the souls are to be found for whom we are yearning, and He finds them for us.

. . . . . .

A mother six weeks ago asked that through prayer in Willard Hall she might find her boy. Now she has heard from him. He is repentant, and she has been to visit him and all is well, for he has given himself into God's keeping.

. . . . . .

A young man in the thirties, with three little boys, a wife and mother, claims our attention. Nothing but strong drink can make him forget his dear ones. Oh, pray that he may be made to see his own waywardness and turn to God for help!

. . . . . .

"God is a refuge and strength." How the emphasis on strength makes the heart bound and the eye grow steady! The father who asked for his daughter's life; the wife who asked for her husband's return; the brother who asked for his sister's and her husband's soul salvation; the mother who asked for her two sons; the man who asked for his own salvation—all feel the rest and assurance of faith that God Almighty is holding each and all in His loving knowledge.

. . . . . .

A lad rose in the back part of the Hall and said: "When a little boy my mother described a Temple Beautiful which she said the temperance people were going to build in Chicago, and all these years on the farm I have been thinking about it, and I made up my mind that when I came to Chicago I would see this building the first thing. It gives me great pleasure to be here and to hear the testimonies of these men and to know the good that has been done in these meetings, the good that is going on and on from day to day. Thank God for the thought that made this Temple a reality and brought these meetings to the people who needed them."

. . . . . .

An old man over seventy, who has come day after day, stopped us in the hallway and said he had no work; was sleeping in an empty house, and had not taken off his clothes for six weeks. He was a carpenter by trade and knew how to do nothing else. We told him we would make it a subject of prayer that day in Willard Hall. In the afternoon came a call for two carpenters from a man who was not in the meeting that day. He wanted a steady, temperance man—no other need apply. How much better God is to us than we deserve or even expect sometimes!

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

The New York Christian Home.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—The New York Christian Home for Intemperate Men was established and incorporated in the year 1877, through the efforts of Charles A. Bunting. Mr. Bunting became an earnest, active Christian under the teaching of Dwight L. Moody, and for twenty-one years devoted all of his talents to the advancement of Christ's kingdom among men heavily burdened with the sin of intemperance. His efforts were crowned with great success in saving souls, and to-day the Christian Home is firmly established under the management of officers and trustees, who are all men of highest standing, widely known for ability in various professions and lines of business and for their Christian philanthropy.

The Rev. George S. Avery, at present resident manager, by his "walk in the light" and his genial fellowship, has gained the respect and affection of the men under his charge, whom he has earnestly labored to firmly establish on the rock Christ Jesus, and daily is the Lord answering his prayers for the salvation of souls and advancement of the kingdom.

The location of the home is at 1175 Madison Ave., corner of Eighty-sixth St., New York city. The building is admirably adapted to the work, having excellent accommodations for upwards of one hundred men.

Here are being, or have been cared for, men of nearly every profession, business and trade, from clergymen to liquor dealers, and from men of wealth to the poor fellows literally taken from the gutter. The example of the Saviour is the rule of action, and no one is turned away who comes seeking Him.

The rates for board are arranged to suit all. Deserving men, who have no money, are received on their promise to pay a moderate sum when their circumstances permit. Men who can afford luxuries are furnished with all that any reasonable person could ask. Separate dining-rooms, reading-rooms, parlors, etc., are arranged so that all may find congenial surroundings.

While comfort for the body is well provided for, the paramount object of the home is not for a moment forgotten. It is, the cure of men who have become intemperate in any soul-killing habit.

The treatment is that of the Great Physician who, by the power of the Holy Spirit, gives renewed hope, strength, life, to those who earnestly seek, forgiving iniquities, healing diseases, redeeming life and renewing youth. Medical care is provided for those whose physical condition demands it, but no drugs are given for the purpose of "tapering off," and he who enters here, leaves whisky, tobacco, opium, or whatever his pet vice may be, behind. Intemperance is here recognized as nothing but sin, and for sin but one cure is known. The man who is "soundly saved" is alone secure in time and eternity.

Members of the home are treated with the most kindly consideration, and every liberty which does not conflict with the end in view, is allowed. Religious services are held three times each day. In them the members take great pleasure and many men have, in these meetings, accepted Christ and found their burden of sin taken away.

Probably no hospital in this country has received more desperate cases than have been treated in this home; and yet, out of over five thousand men received, only six have died. Of the total membership, during the past twenty-one years, about sixty per cent have been restored to their families, friends and society, saved men. And surely, none have fallen who have kept in the path in which their feet were set while members of the New York Christian Home.

The writer had wandered far from his Lord, and for love of drink had sacrificed business and home, had brought sorrow to his family and was rapidly sinking to a miserable end. But now, he gives thanks to God that his steps were turned to this home where he found his Saviour ready to welcome back the wanderer and to give rest to his weary and heavy laden soul. Many other men to-day lift their voices in praise to God and testify to blessings received in the New York Christian Home.

AN EX-MEMBER.

Miss Parrish Leaves Japan.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—We have been passing through busy days of late. Our foreign auxiliary held its annual convention, September 28 and 29, instead of November, as formerly, for several reasons, chief among which were our desire to make the natal day of our late loved leader our day, and in order to have Miss Clara Parrish with us.

I can write of all that has transpired in a general way only. Our convention was well attended. The grand rally in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on the evening of the 28th, at which Hon. Sho Nemoto presided, was a great success. A large audience, largely from the student class, met the speakers of the evening, who held their close attention to the end. Our prayer service the morning of the 29th, led by Japanese and foreigners in turn, for the friends in Canada, that their efforts might be crowned by success; the Bible reading on prayer and the memorial service for Miss Frances E. Willard and Miss Maud E. Simons were precious seasons. But through all was the ever present thought, each day is bringing nearer the hour we would put far from us, when we must bid goodby to Miss Clara Parrish, in whose hands this work has progressed so wonderfully, and who has been such a power in uniting all interested in temperance work.

During the convention Mrs. Coralyn Davidson, on behalf of the members, presented Miss Parrish with a gold watch as a small token of the love for her personally and the appreciation of her work.

One action greatly desired by Miss Parrish was taken by the convention by which the Foreign Auxiliary becomes in fact, what its name implied, auxiliary to the Japan National W. C. T. U., in which we now have a place and a name. Realizing that "in union there is strength," the convention felt this to be in the interests of the work. The Florence Crittenton Home, basis for coöperation with our Japanese sisters, was discussed and adopted, and Mrs. Large formally requested to open the work, though the details have not all been arranged; one young woman, bought with a great price, whose sad story must appeal to all hearts (of this we shall write later) has been taken charge of. What is wanted now is funds with which to carry on this needed work, which only those who know the circumstances of this class, in this land, can understand. There is no choice for these girls, they are sold like mere cattle, and to many the life is a burden intolerable to be borne, yet from which there is no escape.

October 1 was a red-letter day in the history of the temperance cause in Japan, for on that was accomplished the formation of the different temperance societies into a National Temperance League. For this Miss Parrish had worked without ceasing from the time of coming to Japan. When others said, "impossible," she said, "it can be done." The reward of this faith and patient work came on this first day of October, when delegates from Hiroshima, in the far south, from Kobe and from Sendai in the north, met with those of Yokohama, Tokyo and the regions round about, numbering in all over thirty, and with one accord helped to usher in this day of better things. It did those present good to hear Miss Parrish say, though her face showed what was in her heart, "Now I am happy."

A garden party late in the same day by the Japanese W. C. T. U. where Miss Parrish, by request, wore the Japanese costume her Japanese lady friends had presented a few days previous, the strangeness of her attire giving her the shy, quiet air of the typical woman of the land; and a banquet in the evening, by the National League, at which forty-five sat down, completed the day. Time would fail me, and THE UNION SIGNAL could not contain all the beautiful tributes borne to Miss Parrish that evening. Just a few for a sample. Hon. Taro Ando, president of the National Temperance League, said: "The secret of her success was not in her eloquent addresses, nor in her exceptional executive ability, nor in her untiring zeal; but it was by her humble spirit and her love that all hearts had been won, that through this same spirit we could still conquer." Mr. K. Ito, in an eloquent speech, presented Miss Parrish with a pair of Japanese flags, in silk crepe, than which no gift could have been more acceptable. In future days many readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will no doubt have the pleasure of seeing these flags, for by promise they are to be unfurled at every National and World's Convention.

This would be incomplete were I not to give you something of Miss Parrish's reply: "I would endure many more times of trial and suffering for the joy of this hour." "I thought a year ago it would be easy to leave Japan, now that the time has come I do not want to go." "It is hard to say goodby; yet I believe God wills it so, and some sweet time I hope to come again." And a hearty assurance was given that not only the country's door, but the doors of their hearts would be open to receive her.

To celebrate the formation of the League a mass-meeting was called for Sunday afternoon, when a large audience assembled to hear convincing addresses from Revs. Dr. Soper, and K. Miyama, the chairman, Hon. Taro Ando, and Miss Parrish, after these Mr. Ito so effectually pressed home what had been said that over fifty names were enrolled at the close of the meeting.

And now I come to the time so long looked forward to with dread, when one ought to be brave and smile, though the tears are nearest, the farewells, first in the home she was leaving, then at Tokyo station, where as the train moved out "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung by trembling voices, Miss Parrish leaning from the window to wave the flags of Japan and America as she passed out of their sight. The Yokohama friends, including a large representation of school girls, were waiting at the station to escort her to the Union church, where a short prayer service was held, and yet once more, "God be with you till we meet again" was sung. Then, accompanied by loving friends the steamer was reached; at the head of the gangway an officer of the Japanese steamship company was waiting to receive her, and see that everything was done for her comfort. The ship was beautiful, friends were loving and thoughtful, as the many telegrams, flowers and other tokens proved, but in spite of all the parting was hard.

The goodby's were said, we wended our way home, thankful that we had come in touch with this bright, hopeful young life. Our last sight was of her on deck, the flags of her own and this land floating in the breeze.

Many a "God bless her" was said, and loving hearts will remember her in prayer.

ELIZA SPENCER LARGE.
Japan, Tokyo, 4 Tsukiji, October 6, 1898.

On a Collection Plate.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—And it came to pass that on a March night, the bejeweled guest of a certain sanitarium sat by the side of the humbler one in the luxurious parlors, while the writer spoke of the work in the wide, wide world, and the splendid victories won by our white-ribbon toilers everywhere.

The meeting was attended by no unusual signs, men and women listened attentively, gave a little of their treasure and passed out. I have long ago ceased looking for results; the business of the sower is to sow.

Early the next morning there came a gentle tapping at my door, and in walked a little woman all in gray, with this salutation:

"I am Dr. Geisel of Tekonsha. I heard you last night, and put a dollar on your collection plate."

"Thank you."

"But that's not all. I put myself on the plate."

"You did! What in the world do you think I can do with you?"

"That's what I came to talk about. How can I begin this rescue work for girls?"

"Have you an income?"

"Just a little."

"Are you willing to suffer much, to be spoken ill of sometimes, to stand on the street in heat and cold?"

"Yes."

"Then two weeks from next Monday report to Mrs. Isabel Wing Lake, of Chicago, and may the God of the heartbroken lead you to His glory."

I spent several days in Salt Lake City recently. Such happy days, such royal comradeship, such glimpses of the truest and best that is in human hearts, the memory of it will make glad the days that wait.

Two women preceded me. They came without much announcement, but went through the place like a whirlwind of the Lord. They asked little, but prayed much. Women in good homes, lifted far above want, told me their lives were changed since their coming. These two stood on the streets at midnight; they got inside the houses of death, and spoke to the sin-tossed ones, and then passed on, but no one ever stirred Salt Lake City like these two, and people are speaking of them still.

One secret came to light, however, and it made me walk the floor the latter part of the night, and I said, "O Lord, when you make women so mighty to work, why don't you plan so they won't get hungry, or tired, or their clothes wear out, for you see how we hug our treasure while with the same breath we bid them forth?" And then I sat down and cried great big, honest tears and said, "O Father, dear, the angels will be talking about Isabel Wing Lake and Dr. Geisel, talking much about them around the throne, and no one will speak of me," and then something like a whisper stole deep into my soul, saying, "Child, I will make you like a voice, disturbing those that are at ease and peradventure, some glad day, the women will hear and answer, and will bring their treasure into the storehouse, that the work may go on by the hand of thy called ones, and wait not."

MARION B. BAXTER,
National Financial Agent.

Progress in India.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—My hands have been full of work, and are so still, but I must take a little time to write and tell you how our work is progressing in this great land.

From all sides come words of encouragement, though, compared with what remains to be accomplished it would be counted but little by those whose faith is less than that of white-ribboners. Yet, even the skeptical allow that the temperance movement is gaining power in India.

The soldiers' branch, through change of regiments, had to be built up anew, but is now larger than ever, and many of the men have joined the weekly Bible class, held by one of our ladies, and for several weeks in succession there were conversions among them.

We have a joint meeting of the ladies and the soldiers' union occasionally, and this is a great help to them in more ways than one, and it is a help to our union financially, for the soldiers' union always has funds to help us out in any project.

The Hindustani union has some new members and is doing a good work. We have mothers' meetings which are very helpful, a mercy and help department for visiting the poor and sick, and this department is caring for a consumptive who is literally penniless. Sunday-school and evangelistic work is carried on by the Hindustani sisters, and they have a Dorcas class which turns out a good supply of garments, to be sold at a nominal price to the poor, or given to the very indigent.

Social purity has been mooted among us, and a number of soldiers and others have taken the pledge. We need literature on this and other subjects connected with our work.

The anti-narcotic department is making headway, especially among women. It is a very common thing for Indian women to use opium to still their children, and, indeed, many English children in this country have been injured by the wicked use of opium by their Hindu wet nurses and Ayahs. Many pledges against opium and tobacco have already been received. I am trying to get returns from different stations to see how general this has become.

Our rainy season is over, and October is the month of conventions, or rather the beginning of conventions. First, during the Hindoo holidays a Christian gathering for a week at Lucknow, a yearly feast, then comes a Sunday-school convention at Agra; following that, the Northwest Provinces and Oudh division of the W. C. T. U. meets in Bareilly, and then our National W. C. T. U. at Madras. Our N. W. P. division is making an effort to have a full "delegates' fund," so that we can send delegates to the national. We are entitled to five or more, besides officers of the national, i. e. divisional superintendents.

Our bright little paper, The White Ribbon, is in difficulty, because of a deficit. A circular came to us stating the difficulty, and we called a special meeting. To the query, shall The White Ribbon be given up, we gave a unanimous and emphatic no! I proposed that we each pay full subscription price, one rupee a year, and pay now for this year. I handed over my extra eight annas, and every one present followed my example. Then one of our musical ladies proposed that we assume the deficit, and get up a concert to raise it, and this was unanimously adopted. Next, we resolved ourselves, individually, into a committee of one to secure new members, and to this end we decided on a W. C. T. U. social with a few short speeches, songs, and a report of our work. We did not ask people to join, but the friend or friends that each member had invited were invited in the hope that they would become interested, and we gained six (voluntary) new members and five subscribers to our paper.

I do not know if others take as much pains to get money for our work as this Cawnpore union does. We say sometimes that we dream finance, but we grow in spirituality, and our regular monthly meetings, at which we have always a devotional half hour led by different members in turn, are most profitable. Our native union pays the same amount into the general fund, as the English, a part of which goes to the W. W. C. T. U.

We have now a temperance hospital, a temperance hotel, an inebriates' home, for which we are working, in addition to all our other work.

Yours most cordially,
CHARLOTTE L. R. HOSKINS.
Cawnpore, India.

Origin of Christening Vessels.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The following clipping taken from the Farmer's Review I thought you might republish in THE UNION SIGNAL, to the advantage of the water christening side of the subject:

"Breaking a bottle of wine on the bow of a new vessel is a survival of a sanguinary custom of our savage ancestors, paralleled by the practice at an officer's funeral, of leading his charger to symbolical sacrifice at his grave. When a ship was launched by the Vikings it was the custom for victims to be bound to the rollers over which the war galley was run down to the sea, so that 'the stem was sprinkled with blood,' for which in a modern launch red wine is substituted. This was called the hlunn-rod, or 'roller-reddening.'"

Marengo, Ill. (MRS.) JOSIE CURTISS.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Be strong and of good courage, and do it; fear not, nor be dismayed, for the Lord God, even my God, will be with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the Lord.—I Chron. 28: 20.

NOW that the most beautiful public school building in Chicago has carved over its stone portals Frances E. Willard, and has hung in its assembly room her pictured face, would it not be an uplift, and a reminder of her beautiful life if her picture could find a place in every school in the land? We will give this handsome picture, gold framed, at a very low price to any union who desires to place it in the public school or Sunday-school of their town.

Union Park Congregational church Sunday-school, of Chicago, on September 25, took up a collection for the Temple which amounted to $12. Five dollars of this amount they used in the purchase of the trustees' beautiful picture of Miss Willard in one of their handsomest frames. Some one proposed to the pastor, Dr. Noble, that it should be placed in the ladies' parlor. To this he objected, and said it must be placed in the large Sunday-school room so that the children may be constantly reminded of her noble life.

✠

Massachusetts, at its state convention last week, passed a resolution to stand by the payment of the Temple Trust Bonds. We would not expect this grand old state, with its splendid record, to do less, especially as it has so many bondholders within its borders.

✠

Mrs. A. G. Rice, Santa Ann, Cal., writes; "Please tell us through THE UNION SIGNAL if the $300,000 Temple Trust Bonds when paid, belong to the W. C. T. U. Will it then have so much interest in the Temple? Many seem to think it will be paying a debt, and the W. C. T. U. will then have nothing to show for the outlay." The Bonds are a debt, but they are secured by $300,000 worth of stock held by the American Trust and Savings Bank as trustee, when the Bonds are all paid off the Temple Trustees will hold $300,000 worth of Temple stock for the W. C. T. U. and quite a large block of stock beside, which will give the society the control of the stock without any incumbrance upon it.

✠

We call upon the Temple Praying Band to be much in prayer from now until the Convention, for the preservation of our House Beautiful. One hour of the day of prayer, October 25, in Willard Hall for the National Convention, was devoted to prayer for the Temple. Mrs. C. M. Craise and a little band of praying women, assemble every morning (five o'clock mountain time) at Denver, Col., to pray for the Temple, until the meeting of the Convention.

✠

The president of Queensland (Australia) W. C. T. U. writes that the news of the abandonment of the Temple brought consternation to them. She closes her letter by saying, "We shall pray that deliverance may come. I think at this forthcoming National Memorial Convention for the Temple to be abandoned is not to be thought of." From Chandboli, India, a letter comes from Mrs. E. L. Caldren full of loving sympathy, enclosing a money order. She closes her letter by saying; "I do hope and pray the money may be forthcoming so fast for the Temple before November, that the Convention will decide to go on with the raising of the necessary funds." From Natal, South Africa, a letter comes from its president, Mrs. Mary F. Fernil, full of deep regret at the turn things have taken, but still hopeful, she says: "Possibly by November you may have had such liberal support from the Willard memorial fund, that there will be no great need to give up such magnificent property and ultimate source of revenue." She also speaks of money having been sent by them to Lady Henry Somerset for the Temple and that they are all hard at work raising more.

Our Children.

How the Mill Grinds.

THE fellow at the ladder's top, to him all glory goes,
And the fellow at the bottom is the fellow no one knows.
No good are all the "had beens," for in country and in town
Nobody cares how high you've been when once you have come down.
When once you have been President and are President no more,
You may run a farm, or teach a school, or keep a country store,
No one will ask about you, you never will be missed,—
The mill will only grind for you while you supply the grist.

—Burlington Hawkeye.

Phil's Experiment.

"HAVE I got to rake up these leaves every day?" said Phil, with a whine in his voice.

"Yes, every day."

"But what is the use? They keep on falling, and make just as big a litter as before."

"Your room has to be set in order every day," said his mother, smiling.

"I wouldn't care much if it wasn't," said Phil.

"And your shirts have to be washed every week. And the dishes you eat from have to be washed three times a day. You keep on eating, you know."

Phil could not forbear as mile, as he slowly raked away at the leaves.

"Seems to me I have to do a good deal of work for other folks," he went on, mournfully. "I have to pile wood and cut kindlings and drive the cow and water the flowers—and things."

"Do you have more to do for others than others do for you?" asked his mother.

"Yes, ma'am; I guess so. Anyway, if I could stop doing things for folks, they might stop doing things for me."

"Do you really mean that?"

"Yes, indeed!" said Phil, eagerly. "May I try it, mamma?"

"If you like. You may try it for one day."

"Remember then, mamma, nobody's to ask me to do a single thing; and I'll remember my part. Hurrah!" Phil dropped the rake over the small pile of leaves, and rushed away to look at his fishing-line; for he had made up his mind to go fishing in the afternoon and have a pleasant time.

Running hastily to the barn, he fell and tore a hole in his trousers.

"Mamma," he cried, picking himself up and going toward the house. But he suddenly remembered that mamma was not to be called upon. He ran up stairs to change his torn garments.

"Ah! Two buttons off my other pants, and I forgot to tell about it. Never mind! I can sew them on myself. I often have. It's easy enough to sew on buttons."

It took him a long time to thread the needle, and hen every stitch was a separate trial. But, as he sprang to put on his trousers, he found that they were sewed to the skirt of the coat he had on. The schoolbell was ringing, and he rushed away with the torn trousers on.

But he was late, to his regret; for he had begun school with a resolution not to have one tardy mark during the year.

The tear in the trousers kept catching in things and tearing larger, until he was very much ashamed of it, and was glad at length to hurry home. As he again sewed on the buttons, he could not help wondering if mending one's clothes were not a little harder than cutting kindlings.

"Never mind!" he said to himself. "Nobody will ask me to do anything after dinner, and I can do just what I please all day when I get out of school."

This task finished, he went to the dinner table with a boy's appetite.

"Where's my place?" he asked, seeing no place ready for him.

"Have you forgotten our agreement?" asked his mother.

"Why, no, mamma. I said nobody need do anything for me. I am going to wash my own dishes when I'm done."

"But do you expect any one to cook for you?"

Phil stared at her a moment, then gave a rather blank look at the roast beef and sweet potatoes.

"I did forget, that's a fact!" he said, with a laugh, as he turned and went out.

But there was little spirit in the laugh, and mamma looked after him with a sober face.

"I can't see him miss dinner," she said. But his father said: "Let him learn his lesson well. It will not hurt him."

Phil went out to the orchard and ate apples, not troubling himself to think whether any one had raised them for him, and rejoicing in the reflection that when picking time came he would not have any part of that work to do.

He went fishing, and on the way home he had the satisfaction of sitting on the fence to watch his brother Ben drive the cow home. Ben hailed him,—

"The Pratts have come to tea."

"That's jolly!" shouted Phil, springing from the fence and running home, leaving Ben to plod along with the cow.

He hurried to his room. The bed was not made, and everything he had touched that day lay just where he had left it, which did not trouble him.

"Hello!—no water!" he exclaimed, as the empty pitcher flew up in his hand. But, bethinking himself, he ran for his own water.

"Now for a clean collar." But his face fell as he saw none in his drawer. What did he want of a collar, anyway? No one would expect to see him at the tea-table.

But, as he lay awake after going to bed, restless and a trifle hungry, he began to wonder if his bargain was altogether a satisfactory one. He recalled something he had heard his mother say about it being impossible for any one to live unto himself or to escape the duties and responsibilities owed by each to others, and that all peace and harmony and happiness depend upon the good-will and cheeriness and loving kindness with which these duties are performed.

Next morning he awoke, at the sound of the breakfast bell, to a keen perception of the delightful smell of mutton chops, buckwheat cakes and other good things.

"Well," he exclaimed, jumping up, "I'm not going to live another day on apples, if I know myself! After all," he went on, as he dressed himself, "it's a mean, sneaking thing to try to shirk things. I get all I want to eat, and good, too!" And he sniffed eagerly, as the appetizing smell came stronger. "And it's a pity if I can't do a little to help on."

He went out, and had the leaves raked before breakfast, at which he appeared with a glowing color and a sidelong glance at mamma.

"I think I've tried it long enough, mamma," he said, with a smile. "I believe I'll do chores and board with you, if you'll take me back."

"I will," said mamma, passing him the hot cakes.

The Tease.

AN English paper recently told the story of a cat named M'liss. M'liss was a tease. When the other cat curls herself up for a sleep, M'liss will get in a position near her, and when she is sure her friend is asleep M'liss gives her a quick tap on the head to waken her, and then she crouches out of sight, or runs away. Then when puss curls down again and falls asleep, she is roused in the same way, until she catches M'liss, and there is a fight. But this ending does not cure naughty M'liss of her teasing tendencies. The next day she repeats her offenses in evident enjoyment.

I wonder if you have ever known any boys and girls like this teasing cat.

MOURN not for vanquished ages,
With their great, heroic men,
Who dwell in history's pages
And live in the poet's pen.
For the grandest times are before us,
And the world is yet to see
The noblest work of this whole earth,
In the men that are to be.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I am beginning to feel quite "sot up" over the letters that come to the Cozy Corner from the older people, expressing their interest in the Children's page. Our puzzle this week comes from a friend who is seventy years old, and I hope some of you will solve it. I did not imagine that our little talks were so generally read by the fathers and mothers, but I am very glad it is so. Whatever interests the children ought to interest the mothers, and out of that statement you can make a nice little sermon for yourselves.

The relations of parents and children have been set forth in a very practical manner by the stories on our page, one last week and one this week. I wonder how many of you realize what a very small return you can make to father and mother for your board and clothes and education during the years you are growing up! Read the stories very carefully, and I am sure that the next time you are asked to clean up the yard, bring in wood, take care of the baby or wash the dishes, you will count ten before you say, "Oh, dear! I don't see why I have to work all the time." Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little girl five years old. My mamma is a member of the W. C. T. U., and I am in the second reader. I will be six years old the first day of December, and I want to join the Cozy Corner.

Your little niece,

Staunton, Ohio. LULU PEARL DRUMM.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—As I have never seen a letter from Racine in the Cozy Corner, I thought I would write. I am sorry to say that there are so many saloons here I could not begin to count them all. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and I like to read it very much. I should like to be one of your numerous nieces and belong to the Cozy Corner. Is there room for one more? DOROTHY N. KASTLER.

Racine, Wis.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a little girl eleven years old. I live in Hindsboro, Ill. Mamma and papa are members of the Christian church, and I am a member of the Junior Endeavor. Mamma is vice-president of the W. C. T. U. and we take THE UNION SIGNAL. I like to read the Children's page. We keep hotel and mamma is quite busy, but always takes time to attend the W. C. T. U. There are no saloons here.

Yours lovingly,

Hindsboro, Ill. GRACE SIMPSON.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a new girl to the Cozy Corner. I am eleven years old. Mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and I like to read the stories on the Children's page. I like to read the letters too. I always try to get the answers to Soft-Shelled Nuts. I would like to write to some of the cousins. I like your letters the best of all. I have one sister and two brothers. My sister's name is Barbara. My brothers' names are Park and Harry. Mamma belongs to the W. C. T. U. She wears a white ribbon.

Your niece,

Union City, Pa. HELEN S. BOYD.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.

44.

I am composed of 15 letters.

1 T, 1 E, 2 N's, 3 H's, 2 P's, 1 Z and 5 A's.

Am found only once in the Bible and is the name given by Pharaoh to Joseph.

Warsaw, Ind. THOS. WOODS.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 27.

No. 43. George T. Angell.

Correct answer to No. 41 was sent by Thos. Woods, Warsaw, Ind.; to No. 42 by Maxwell C. Lang, Barnet, Vt., Lucy J. Stinchcombe, McKean, Pa., Ethel C. Watts, New York city, Robert Harrington, North Amherst, Mass., and Bessie Cannon, Argos, Ind.

UNION SIGNAL
HAND WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.
OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

The Spiritual Life of the W. C. T. U.

THERE is very little of the W. C. T. U. except its spiritual life. If that goes out, it is a corpse, and nothing remains to be done but to send for the undertaker, and notify the relatives.

Like Briarius, it has a hundred hands; but what are they good for if the soul is gone? It has done a deal to unify the women of the nation for their enfranchisement and uplifting; but that is not its specific work. It has shown what women can do in managing a large organization, holding great conventions, building pyramids of facts and figures to set forth feminine activity and achievement; but this is not what it came into being to do.

What then is its raison d' etre? It is the suppression of that sum of all iniquities, the liquor traffic, and that by Christian means pure and simple. It must keep itself up to that mark, if it would turn a straight furrow, or run a winning race.

The needle gun conquered France in the Franco-Prussian war. The range finder shortened our recent war and won our victories. It gave the people of our coast cities sound sleep o' nights when the Spanish phantom squadron was flitting about like a ghost in a graveyard, or supposed to be. It riddled Cervera's magnificent fleet. It helped Dewey plant Manila harbor like a cornfield with Spanish wrecks. What is this wizard range finder? It is the simplest bit of geometry. A line between two points on the ship or the fort forms the base of a triangle. The enemy is sighted from each end of the base. The angles formed by both ends of the base line with the lines to the enemy, determine the third angle, the vertex. So it can be told with mathematical exactness just where, and how far, a shot must be sent to do its work.

In the range finders that must make our war effective, one point of the base line is "Christian," the other is "temperance." They must be fixed and immovable, and from them we can find the enemy, and make every shot tell on his fortresses or ships.

A few facts may make this clear. The W. C. T. U. was born of the Crusade, which was simply the result of an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on little companies of consecrated women who thus received courage and wisdom to assault the traffic in strong drink. Origen said, "Begin and end all things with prayer." Those Crusade women carried all that they attempted by prayer and faith in God. They patrolled saloons, and knelt on sidewalks with loaded guns bearing down on them. They faced terrors against which of themselves they had no courage. They sang, prayed and spoke before great audiences with an eloquence inspired only of the Lord Himself. They endured cruel mockings and imprisonments. They toiled night and day like the builders of Strasbourg Cathedral,

"All for love, and nothing for reward."

An organization born of such a divine impulse must hold steadily to its original purpose or become an utter and outright failure.

It was a favorite text of the Crusaders, "The battle is not ours, but God's." Only by faith that brings the Almighty upon the field, can temperance women hope to win in their fight. The liquor traffic is the heaviest moneyed monopoly on the continent. It has millions with which to defend any member of its tremendous force that any of us might have the temerity to attack. It has an outpost in every town. Its fortresses command every city. It cows legislation. Its grip is on the throttle valve of all political enginery. It is foolhardy to go into such a war without being sure that God is planning, managing, supplying and making successful every campaign.

This war is upon the most unscrupulous, terrible, and dangerous foe this side of Perdition, the archenemy of Christianity. It breaks down the Sabbath. It destroys the marriage tie. It ruins the family. It is the doorkeeper of the theater, the race course, the gambling den, the house of death. It nerves the burglar, whets the assassin's knife, twists the hangman's rope, and tolls the drunkard's damnation. Its overthrow will be the dawn of the millennium and will send Satan to his prison in the pit. It is a high honor to be chosen of God for such desperate service, one that will count so tremendously on the coming of Christ's Kingdom. The woman who sees in it only her own little living, her petty self-puffing, would better go straight back to her knitting, and leave her work for a truer heart and cleaner hands.

Every one who prays and hopes for the success of the W. C. T. U. ought to wait before God till she has the old Crusade enduement of power so that she counts all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus.

God's hand has been heavy upon us. Our Chieftain has been taken to the higher ranks. Other leaders have fallen. We must, every one, let God kindle anew on our altars, the old Crusade fires. We must let Him give us new faith for final victory. We have the promise, "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." When that promise is fulfilled, there will be no liquor selling or drinking in all the wide world.

An old colored woman in Chicago said to the temperance women who had been mobbed while visiting the city council to secure Sunday-closing, and who quite naturally were somewhat downhearted, "Now, honey, don't yo worry. De Lord's a-goin' to take hold purty soon. He stood it with slavery as long as ever He could; an' den didn't He send it a-whizzin'?" Let us have faith in God.

Sunk By Its Own Weight.

IT is a great day in the history of a new city when it is accorded the dignity of a "write-up." Usually, a local paper is pressed into service or the book form is used to set forth in glowing terms the progress and attainments of the community in question. The earliest settlers are sure to receive honorable mention, not forgetting a vivid account of their privations and possible adventures with wild beasts and wilder men. Pictures of the first schoolhouse, the first church and the first store are brought into telling comparison with later and more imposing structures. With pardonable pride the local historian exploits the natural, social, educational and religious advantages of the place, always, however, laying special emphasis upon commercial and manufacturing interests. The portraits of leading merchants and capitalists grace the positions of honor, and altogether the impression is left that "business" has absorbed the best thought and energy of the people.

Perhaps, under the circumstances, this impression is inevitable, but surely there is a city within the city, an unwritten history, involving the conflict of opinion and the exploitation of moral and spiritual issues that far surpass in ultimate value all material things. One of our most attractive and prosperous inland cities recently treated itself to a local history, very creditable from the standpoint of bank accounts and brick and mortar, that also brings to mind its still more wonderful record in the triumph of the cause of gospel temperance.

The facts, briefly stated, are as follows: The city of —— was founded fifty years ago by a colony of German political refugees who, in addition to their ardent love of liberty, brought with them a pronounced infidelity and a quenchless thirst for their favorite beverage. In a surprisingly brief period of time these talented people began to prosper; a weekly journal in their own language was launched, a "liberal" church organized, a turn hall built, and several saloons opened. And now began a round of amusements, Sunday parades and picnics, drinking bouts and festivals, hitherto unheard of. The annual gatherings of turners and Sangerbunds were memorable occasions, when song was spiced by bitter blasphemy and athletic sports ended in excessive drinking. Bacchus and rationalism reigned supreme.

Meanwhile many American Christians with a sprinkling of other nationalities, had quietly come in, planted their standard of faith and total abstinence, and lived a life the very antithesis of that of the freethinkers. The latter were soon up in arms. Not content with being in the majority and enjoying perfect liberty of opinion and conduct, they must needs go out of their way to compel others to be like themselves or incur their most scornful displeasure. The weekly paper hurled such epithets as "bigot" and "Mucker" (whatever that may mean), at the heads of temperance men, claiming that all who did not openly drink, did so, of course, in secret, and were therefore hypocrites. On the occasion of a great gathering of turners, in their own picnic grounds, these people went so far as to burn Christ in effigy, outdoing everything hitherto attempted in impious pride and reckless revelry. The saloon power was overwhelmingly in control of public opinion. "They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walked through the earth."

And now, after many years, what a complete change has been wrought in that community. From being a despised and maltreated minority, Christian temperance people are in the ascendency, holding the sceptre of power, wealth and influence. Infidelity hides its head, the Freie Gemeinde has long since ceased to exist, the saloon, though not crushed out, has lost its prestige, while even the newspaper is beginning to speak respectfully of the Almighty; and early this present year, the local W. C. T. U. that once would have encountered a storm of vituperation, succeeded among other things, in having a curfew law passed and enforced, without a word of opposition.

How account for the radical change for the better? Separated as were the opposing camps by language and modes of living, the sharpest arrow of argument and invective was liable to fall short of its mark, thus leaving to the hand of time the outcome of the remarkable state of affairs. It was simply a question as to which side possessed the greatest amount of inherent vitality and worth. There could be but one result. The breath of unwasting health and hope was in the cause of temperance, while the cause of Bacchus sank by the weight of its own inherent corruption. Death speedily claimed some of the brightest minds, money and time were squandered, and sin left its mark on brain and nerve, so that the second generation could not make near so good a showing as the first. Scientific temperance instruction is also doing its part, leading many young German-Americans shrewdly to conclude that total abstinence is best.

After the Grasshopper Saloons.

THE Kansas State Temperance Union, with headquarters at Topeka, Kas., has published a new law enforcement pamphlet, which is a good thing. It gives full information in regard to the prohibition law and duties of officers, cites cases and gives exceedingly practical directions to citizens as to how they can secure the enforcement of law in their communities. Some of the topics discussed are just the things all reformers want to know, such as "Encouragement and Assistance to Officers," "Procuring Evidence," "Verifying Informations," "Proceedings in the Police Court," "Proceedings in the District Court," "Injunctions," etc.

The state union is doing telling work against the encroachments of illegal selling. Some of the things which their law does for Kansas are formulated in this wise:

1. It pronounces the verdict of the state's disapproval upon a ruinous and baneful traffic, and thus brands it with public disgrace.

2. It relieves the state of the sin and responsibility of turning its sober children into drunkards by virtue of an act of the legislature, and for a money consideration.

3. Where the law is strictly enforced it puts away all public temptations to drinking and drunkenness, and thus makes it as easy as possible for all to grow up into sober and honorable citizenship.

4. It prevents men, whom no moral consideration seems to influence, from making it their sole business to induce their fellows to tipple and drink, so as thereby to live upon their degradation and ruin.

5. It elevates law into righteousness, and thus makes it a continual teacher and supporter of sobriety and justice.

Kansas can do more for prohibition just now by the good enforcement of her law than could be accomplished by new laws in other states. To strengthen the fortifications that are builded is often more important than to extend the lines. Let the enemy be routed from its last ditch, "prohibition don't prohibit," and the great army of "on-the-fence" citizens will come down on the prohibition side. Let Kansas thrash out her grasshopper saloons, and other states will take heart to put up a sign to the trade, "No grasshoppers wanted." "Keep off of our grass."

"Her Works Do Follow Her."

MISS GORDON gets many lovely letters from the quiet workers who have this year redoubled their energies in W. C. T. U. work in tender loyalty to the memory of their beloved leader. We believe it would be helpful and encouraging to the sisters to pass this thought on to them. Here is an interesting instance, which shows that "her works do follow her":

Miss Willard urged a young Kentucky woman when she was in that state two years ago to try public W. C. T. U. work, and begged her to organize ten new unions, if only with an average of ten members, "thus adding one hundred women to our great cause." That young lady has since August 27 organized seventeen unions, with 185 women and 115 honorary members, making a total of 300. She has also organized five L. T. L's, with a total membership of 131.

The following extract from a letter from Mrs. Alli Trygg, of Helsingfors, Finland, expresses so much more in broken English than if it were perfectly phrased, that we venture to give it in her own words:

"DEAR MISS GORDON:—There is of no use to speak about it [Miss Willard's death.] I scarcely could write those few words in our woman's paper, which I now send you. I did not know what she was to us before now. It is just as the world would have got empty. I can not say it in other words.

"I thought I should begin in this autumn work only for the World's W. C. T. U. Until yet I have been traveling about from town to town organizing the children's temperance work, and I have been looking forward as to some great happiness in the coming autumn. I had an article I would sent to THE UNION SIGNAL. I was always imaging what she would say when she were reading it. It is now as if I would not more care to send it.

"She was the greatest human being in the world. I like her more than Gladstone. She was everything, Gladstone is only *some*thing, that is—no—I can not say that in English. I must tell you that my and my husband's home did burn down, but I did not care a bit for that in comparison with the news about Miss Willard's death."

Thus did the dear woman quaintly and pathetically try to tell of her reverent love, and of her work and her thought of what the leader would say.

To Enforce Law Becomes a "Special Case."

THE keynote of the election in November was declared by the annual convention of the New York State Liquor Dealers' Association, held recently at Syracuse, to be to secure a modification or repeal of the "most obnoxious and tyrannical provisions" of the Raines law. The correspondent of the liquor paper from which we quote then proceeded to detail the arraignment before Magistrate Crane, of a bartender of a Third avenue "Raines law" hotel in New York city, on a charge of selling drinks without sandwiches at 2. A. M., and says, "the magistrate suspected that it was a 'special case' and intimated pretty broadly that if the police had not been 'fixed' there would not have been a prosecution."

The magistrate discharged the policeman's "victim" and is made to say in justification of his act that the excise law is being violated every day and every night by thousands and thousands of saloonkeepers and that the policeman could go around the city any night and arrest one thousand saloonkeepers, that everything is wide open and liquors are sold without the slightest pretense of conforming to the law. This was, of course, saying that because all were not arrested for violation this one man should not be prosecuted, and if the magistrate is correctly quoted as saying, "if the police had not been fixed there would have been no prosecution," he was accusing a policeman of being bribed to enforce a law. What next? May it not come to pass that those who try to enforce law will not only be regarded as criminals, but that they will be arrested and punished for their temerity. Why not? If the liquor power is strong enough to defy every restriction put upon it, why may it not inflict punishment upon those who oppose their wishes? Nero stabbed, burned, tore to pieces, crucified all who opposed his lawless will, accusing them of the very crimes which he committed. The liquor traffic has but one step further to take to place it upon a twin pedestal with Nero of old. When that is taken, if not before, we shall see a tremendous revolution which will "fix" the traffic in history as the most gigantic, unscrupulous, lawless, dishonest and cruel evil of the world—but, as dead and buried.

A Greeting From Christian Endeavorers.

"ALL one army we," are words that echo significantly as we read the announcement of the twenty-fifth annual Convention of the W. C. T. U., at St. Paul, November 11–16. Earnest and loyal are these sisters, whose greatest leader will be a sad, sweet memory in the coming gathering. A hearty Godspeed from all the Endeavor hosts greets them at their quarter-century milestone. When we shall be "one in victory" large will be the meed of praise belonging to the W. C. T. U.—The Christian Endeavor World.

AN Episcopalian white-ribboner writes: "I saw a young man at communion a short time since whom I had persuaded to sign the triple pledge, and he partook of such strong wine that it gave me a headache when I took it. I did not know fermented wine was to be used, and I tell you it made my blood grow hot when I found what it was. I thought how useless it was for us to labor with children and then have them go to the communion table and there find what we had condemned so strongly." This is only another word of testimony in favor of our department of unfermented wine.

Personals.

MAJOR GEORGE HILTON looked in upon us on his way east, after his successful work in California.

DR. AMELIA YEOMANS, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has resigned her office as Dominion vice-president-at-large.

MRS. HANNAH BAILEY, of Maine, superintendent of our peace department, was a visitor for some days in Chicago and at Headquarters. She goes from here to the National.

MRS. MARY SANDERSON, president of Quebec W. C. T. U., writes that the Quebec temperance people do not look upon the plebiscite vote as expressing the real sentiment of the French on the question. They were told that if prohibition was adopted it would put Sir Wilfrid Laurier out of office; that each child would be taxed to make up the revenue, and that their priests would be unable to perform mass!

MRS. ANNA M. VAIL, one of the district presidents of Illinois, speaking of that which ought to be done and of the few W. C. T. U. women to do it and their efforts to cover so much ground, says she sometimes appreciates the feelings of the old man who when dying charged his friends,

> "Don't mourn for me now, don't mourn for me never,
> I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."

But as usual with our workers, she followed this with an exhortation to all women to join in the effort to bring our nation to that righteousness which will exalt it.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Y's at Work.

MINNESOTA.

MINNESOTA Y's have this year paid to the state treasury for 109 more members than last year. Twenty new organizations were started during the year, but from the reports received I can say of only twelve that they are flourishing. "Some are dead and some are dying"; rather some are disheartened, and choose to send no report instead of a poor one. Dear Y girls all over the world, cultivate the courtesy of returning report blanks and of replying to those whose duty and desire it is to ascertain just those who need help and just how they need help.

To return to Minnesota, our wideawake Somersets in Mankato, Howard Lake and Anoka High Schools are doing business in a businesslike manner, including reports to state secretary. The best business meeting I have attended this year was with the Mankato girls. They have the state banner since convention, have sixty-one active and eighteen honorary members. They meet twice a month in one of the schoolrooms, have a program partly musical, news items from THE UNION SIGNAL and other temperance papers. Their honoraries meet with them and take part in the program. They keep THE UNION SIGNAL on reading table for the students.

Of the older Y's, Balaton takes the lead in work accomplished and money raised. They have the departments of L. T. L., Sunday-school, literature, flower mission, narcotics, medal contest and White Shield. They have sent ten dollars to the Temple, one to each of the following: County work, state work, and for state minutes.

Nearly all our unions have the flower mission, and several of them have done work for the soldier and sailor boys. They are studying the question of narcotics and of purity, and some of them are tunefully winning their way and the way of their cause to the hearts of the people. None of us have done great things this year, but all of us have tried to do something.

LOUISE E. HOLLISTER,
State Secretary Y Branch.

OHIO.

REPORT OF CLEVELAND WEST SIDE Y. W. C. T. U. FOR YEAR ENDING 1897-8.

PAID members.—Active, forty; honorary, fourteen.

Held twelve business meetings, seven public meetings, birthday party, bazaar, concert, New Year reception, reception to new members, four socials.

Departments of work.—Social, flower mission, press, petition, public meetings, Sunday-school. Have a club for the state paper, take state minutes, and individual members take and have access to THE UNION SIGNAL.

While called upon to mourn the loss of our faithful flower mission superintendent, Mrs. J. L. Pierce, we observed flower mission day in connection with Willard union, and have distributed 264 bouquets, some fruit and jellies; expended $6.80 and have attended to some charity work. Have paid for organization, $16; on Temple pledge, $25, and our union bears its own expense throughout, for officers' and department expenses, materials and delegates' fare.

Sunday-school superintendent has reached seven Sunday-schools, meeting with pleasant cooperation. Furnished three temperance talks for the Junior Epworth League, on invitation of their superintendent.

Assisted Willard W union in one public meeting, one gospel temperance meeting, and one church prayer-meeting where our work was presented, and with petition work. We shall miss its former president, Mrs. S. P. Adams, almost as much as they. The cordial relation between this mother union and ourselves has been a source of help and strength.

Thirty-five have signed our pledge this year, but not all have paid dues.

Distributed 6,178 pages of literature.

Sent delegates to state convention at Newark; county convention, Bedford, Broadway, Gordon avenue, and Berea; one district convention; one L. T. L. conference.

While we have planned more, we have met a fair measure of success, and close the year with many opportunities for the future, for aggressive work, and with a small balance in our treasury.

EDA L. FRENCH, Sec.

World's Wave Crests.

THE Central W. C. T. U., Montreal, Canada, at the monthly prayer-meeting last week devoted the time to the World's missionary work. Addresses were given by Mrs. Sanderson, Miss Dougall and Mrs. Foster, also a sketch of Miss Clara Parrish and her work in Japan. The collection of over five dollars was donated to the World's W. C. T. U.

THE Quebec Provincial union, Canada, at the recent convention in Montreal, voted that Mrs. Sanderson, president of the union, should be made a life member of the World's W. C. T. U. The same union last year honored itself by making Mrs. Middleton, of Quebec, a life member of the World's W. C. T. U. (one hundred dollars), a well deserved tribute of respect to one of the veterans of temperance work in Canada, and who has since, full of years and honors, gone to join Miss Willard, whom she so loved and prized. Mrs. Middleton was the first woman life member of the World's W. C. T. U.

MRS. ROSE E. PETERS, president of the W. C. T. U. of Newfoundland, writes that on September 28 they invited the newsboys to a meeting, where dinner was served them and where 125 newsboys signed the pledge. There were 200 present. Later in the afternoon an "At Home" for the white-ribboners was held, and a public meeting in the evening was largely attended. Many beautiful flowers were contributed, and these were taken on the next day in small bouquets to the General Hospital. The proceeds of the collection at the public meeting are to go toward the World's W. C. T. U. Memorial Fund.

News from the Field.

New York.

THE twenty-fifth annual convention of our state union was held at Johnstown, October 4-7. The shadow of a double bereavement hung over the opening day. The chair of the state president was vacant for the first time in sixteen years, and we knew that this year no kindly message would come from our world-beloved leader, Frances E. Willard.

The acting state president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, proved herself fully equal to the duties devolving upon her under such trying circumstances. Her address the first morning was as appropriate as it was eloquent. The opening sentences touched and quieted every heart, and as the situation was calmly reviewed, the needs and the work for the coming year plainly outlined, all within sound of her voice realized that the "Joshua" of our white-ribbon host stood before them. The closing words, like a tender refrain, repeated themselves in each heart through all the following days of what proved to be one of the best conventions ever held in our state: "A great responsibility is ours, but our captain is the mighty God."

The daily papers of Johnstown printed the address in full and the convention voted to have it printed in leaflet form for general distribution.

The first afternoon was almost entirely devoted to a memorial service, conducted by Mrs. Frances D. Hall, president of Clinton county, who has been associated with Mrs. Burt in our state work from the first. Just before this service large portraits of the two great leaders were unveiled upon the platform. These were free-hand crayons done by a white-ribboner of Prohibition Park, Mrs. A. M. Stocking. The picture of Mrs. Burt was presented by the artist to the state union, and later it was decided that it should be hung in the W. C. T. U. room of the Kellogg memorial building on the grounds of the Chautauqua assembly. Fitting remarks on the character and work of the two leaders were made by comrades who had been most intimately associated with them, and Mrs. Boole spoke in loving memory of the three hundred comrades and friends of our cause who have gone to their reward during the past year. Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Tenney sang several appropriate selections.

Of course, the first evening was devoted largely to welcomes by the local and county presidents, the ministers, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and what is not always "of course," by the mayor of the city. To all of these Dr. Lavinia Davis, state superintendent of franchise, responded eloquently, likening the W. C. T. U. to a great ship on an Arctic expedition "bound for the (polls) poles."

The corresponding secretary's address showed no falling off in any part of the organization, but increased membership and successes along all lines. The report of our state paper proved that the step taken last year, which put the editing and publishing in the hands of the corresponding secretary, was a wise one. The subscription list was largely increased and a handsome surplus paid into the state treasury. The treasurer's report showed a larger balance on hand than usual. Fourteen life members have been added to the list.

Mrs. Cora E. Seberry reported great activity and an increased membership in the Y Branch. Wednesday evening was in charge of the Y's and an admirable program rendered which will be reported in the Y column.

The L. T. L. Branch is growing, especially in the Senior division. There are now more than nine hundred Senior graduates in the state, and several counties have a county Senior L. T. L. "Young People's Societies and the Temperance Cause," was the title of a paper giving the evolution of the Senior L. T. L. from the first "Juvenile" society of the W. C. T. U., and showing that the L. T. L. antedates all other "young people's societies," by several years; that it is doing a work no other society of young people does or can do, and that it has a claim upon the support of white-ribboners and temperance workers generally, second to that of no other young people's society, and should therefore not be crowded out by the Y. P. S. C. E. of any denomination, under the mistaken impression that the temperance committees of the church young people's societies could if they would, do the work of the trained temperance specialists of our L. T. L.

The superintendents' reports were of more than usual excellence, so that to mention one or two and not the others would be inexcusable but for the fact that this year special interest has centered in our army and navy and the department of soldiers and sailors may therefore claim a few lines of this brief report. Mrs. M. D. Ferguson's extended report of the immense amount of relief work done by locals in the way of sending "comfort bags," hospital supplies, clothing, dainties and reading matter, was supplemented by Mrs. Burdick, of the seamen's Mizpah Mission in New York city, who gave a vivid description of visits to warships in the harbor and to the camps in the vicinity, while Miss Emma Alexander, of Prohibition Park, told of the sick soldiers at Dr. Kellogg's sanitarium there, who were treated without alcohol and denied tobacco, and yet in spite of this supposedly unpopular mode, his hospital was filled to overflowing. A telegram of appreciation was sent to Miss Helen Gould for her aid in this department. I may state here that the department has been divided, and the coming year Miss Alexander will have charge of "Work Among Seamen," Mrs. Ferguson retaining her place at the head of "Work Among Soldiers." In fact, the whole department work was revised and several other important changes made, "Curfew" being made a separate department for as long as agitation of the matter shall be necessary to the securing of curfew laws in the state. Three cities have already passed such a law and others are trying to obtain one.

The election of officers resulted in the almost unanimous choice of Mrs. Boole, for president. Miss Celia Hutton was made vice-president; the other officers and secretaries of the branches were re-elected. A telegram was sent to Mrs. Boole's daughter announcing her mother's election.

A resolution was adopted indorsing the action

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

of the National executive in regard to the Temple.

Many visitors came and went bidding us Godspeed in our work. Among them was Mrs. Ida H. Reid, president of Vermont W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary H. Hunt and Mrs. Woodward, of the board of National superintendents, and many clergymen.

Mrs. E. U. Burgess reported for the resolutions committee an admirable declaration of principles and resolutions with a beautifully worded preamble. After their adoption Mrs. Boole presented to Mrs. Burgess, in honor of her birthday, a bouquet of twenty-four white carnations, the number representing Mrs. Burgess' years of service in the W. C. T. U.

The last evening's program was made up of short addresses by several of our bright women, with music by the quartette of the M. E. church, and several solos by Mrs. Frances W. Graham "of ours." The state song being sung by the convention, a recitation was given by Mrs. Seberry in response to several requests.

Thus closed a memorable convention. Anticipated with dread, begun in sadness, it was a triumphant refutation of the pessimism which feared the W. C. T. U. had seen its best days and done its best work. Another year's work "for God, and Home and Native Land" lies before us, and we enter upon it with our new president's words impressed upon our hearts: "No, our war is not ended. No peace commission has been appointed in the war against the liquor traffic. The W. C. T. U. stands for total abstinence, for prohibition, for purity and equality, and not until the principles for which we strive are imbedded in the hearts and consciences of the people, and engrossed in the constitution and laws of our country, will the W. C. T. U. be mustered out."

MAY MORGAN MCKOON,
State Reporter, Long Eddy.

North Dakota.

THE ninth annual convention! What tongue or pen can report to those who were not there, the blessedness of this meeting!

From the opening Crusade anniversary service to the closing "God be with you" the esprit de corp was love. The oneness of purpose was evinced in the close attention, the unanimity of ayes and noes, and the giving of the white salute to the loved president.

The delegates, 170 in number, were welcomed to the beautiful little city of Park River by a smiling group of white-ribbon sisters, and this welcome was repeated by pastors, and in every home as well as by the mayor, in gracious words and baskets of red apples.

The decorations of the church, executed by the gentlemen, were unique; especially fine was a grouping of flags, on standards, of many nations, behind a shield on which was emblazoned "For God and Home and every Land," and over all floated our own stars and stripes.

The report of the president always shows good work and corresponding results. North Dakota stands first in all the states in per cent of white-ribboners, one to every ninety-two of population. Twenty new unions are in line; two Scandinavian unions at Grand Forks, and in Fargo promise of a grand work among that portion of our commonwealth. The announcement of the treasurer of a gain of 500 this year after the same gain last year—a paid up membership of 2,675—and a surplus of $300 in the treasury was cause for rejoicing.

The Y's had charge of the first evening. They are five hundred strong and not weary in their well-doing. In the regretted absence of the Y secretary, Mrs. Pierson, their conferences were ably led by Miss Cora W. Larimore. The Y song composed by Mrs. Pierson was sung grandly, the papers were good, and a Japanese letter from Miss Parrish were pleasant incidents of the evening.

The reports from the local unions revealed a vast amount of work done, and the superintendents of twenty-four departments showed how effectively their efforts are crowned with success. One new county organization, Cavalier, was welcomed, and several new departments adopted, viz., non-alcoholic medication, peace and arbitration, soldiers and sailors.

The convention sent a letter to Governor Devine asking him to use his official authority to prevent the sale of intoxicants and gambling at the state fair, to which the governor responded cordially, and refused to attend the state fair, as he had been advertised, upon learning the law was being violated.

The president's annual address was an admirable review of the times, and evoked unstinted applause. In her "political outlook," she announced that the candidates for governor expressed themselves in favor of enforcing the prohibitory law and in favor of equal suffrage. The address contained many good things, but space does not allow us to quote.

The first grand gold medal matrons' contest in the United States furnished, with very fine music, an excellent evening program. The medal was awarded Mrs. Della Hyde, of Fargo. Mrs. Barker, the National treasurer and former president of the Dakotas, was welcomed with genuine pleasure. Her grand sermon on Sunday morning, and evening address was a stirring inspiration to every one of that large audience. Her presence was a benediction all through the convention. Sabbath evening those who could not gain entrance to hear Mrs. Barker filled the Lutheran and Presbyterian churches and listened to sermons by Dr. Janette Hill Knox and Mrs. M. A. Garry.

The memorial service for our promoted comrades at home and our beloved leader, Miss Willard, was led by Dr. Knox, and was touchingly beautiful. A Willard Memorial Association was perfected, Mrs. Mattie Meacham, president, Mrs. Van de Bogart, secretary, and Mrs. H. C. Ruth, treasurer.

An excellent paper on "The Mother and the Public School," was read by Mrs. Mattie Davis, the efficient superintendent of public schools of Cass county. The mothers' hour, led by Mrs. Calderwood, followed, full of tender helpfulness. On Sunday afternoon there was a children's mass-meeting, when Mrs. G. W. Ryan, the superintendent of L. T. L. Branch, presided.

There was a county presidents' conference to help these vice officers to a sense of their duties and responsibilities; how to prepare for conventions, programs, etc., and report them, with similar topics were exhaustively discussed. It was voted to change the ratio of representation from 1 to 20 to 1 to 30, the large increase in membership making the entertainment of conventions a difficult matter. However, before that was done, Grand Forks had invited the convention next year, an invitation that was gratefully accepted. Grand Forks county boasts of five hundred members, and so elected their own delegate to the National Convention.

The president of the board of directors of the home, Mrs. Benedict, gave many interesting incidents of the year, and the treasurer showed a good financial condition, the money being in sight to finish the laundry, an improvement long needed.

The resolutions supported the National officers in their judgment it is unwise to make further effort to own the Temple; advised effort for good legislation in securing a temperance commissioner's bill; for better divorce laws; to work for Sabbath observance until the day is kept holy throughout the nation; opposed the re-election of state superintendent of schools, and gave profuse thanks to Pastor Strachan and his people and every one else who had so lavishly contributed to the success of the convention.

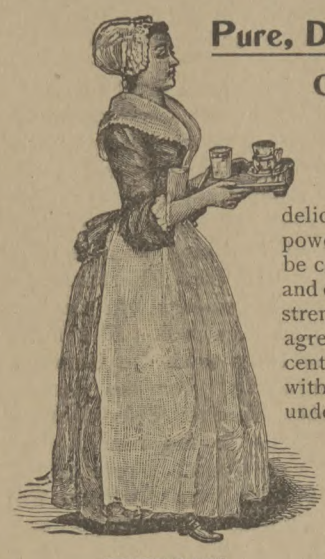
John G. Woolley's address on Monday evening was a wonderfully clear presentation of civic righteousness; it scintillated with the keenest sarcasm, and the great audience was thrilled with the unique power of his oratory.

The old officers were all re-elected unanimously, and we start out upon a new year of labor in the Master's vineyard with fresh vigor, and desire to deserve His commendation, "She hath done what she could."

(MRS.) EMMA F. VAIL,
State Reporter, Towanda.

Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS unions are beginning the year—the W. C. T. U. year—with renewed activity, and the inspiration they expect to derive from "Mother National" in St. Paul will doubtless enable them to go successfully through the year.



The Lucy Hayes union has adopted a new plan of program. Hitherto a printed program has been prepared for the year, the superintendents of the various departments being expected to care for the meeting given to the interest of their department without further notice. This year a committee of two is appointed to prepare the programs for a month, two others to succeed them at the end of that time. The superintendents will still be given charge of the meeting if they so desire, but if they have "forgotten," or are away, some one is responsible for the meeting and the program. Special attention has also been given to inviting those members who seldom or never attend, as well as outsiders.

The eighth ward union of this city lately held an "ideal parlor meeting."

ESTABLISHED 1780.

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S

Breakfast Cocoa

TRADE-MARK.

Pure, Delicious, Nutritious.

Costs Less than ONE CENT a Cup.

Baron von Liebig, one of the best-known writers on dietetics, says:—

"It is a perfect food, as wholesome as delicious, a beneficent restorer of exhausted power; but its quality must be good, and it must be carefully prepared. It is highly nourishing and easily digested and is fitted to repair wasted strength, preserve health, and prolong life. It agrees with dry temperaments and convalescents; with mothers who nurse their children; with those whose occupations oblige them to undergo severe mental strains; with public speakers, and with all those who give to work a portion of the time needed for sleep. It soothes both stomach and brain, and for this reason, as well as for others, it is the best friend of those engaged in literary pursuits.

"Walter Baker & Company, of Dorchester, Mass., U. S. A., have given years of study to the skilful preparation of cocoa and chocolate, and have devised machinery and systems peculiar to their methods of treatment, whereby the purity, palatability, and highest nutrient characteristics are retained. Their preparations are known the world over and have received the highest endorsements from the medical practitioner, the nurse, and the intelligent housekeeper and caterer."—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

Be Sure that the Package Bears our Trade-Mark.

WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED,

DORCHESTER, MASS.

Three weeks previous only seven members were present at the regular weekly gathering. They planned the "ideal" meeting, and began to work for it. Each one of the seven was given a copy of an unique invitation, which she was asked to duplicate as many times as possible and give out to friends. Light refreshments were prepared by these seven and one or two others not present. The day of the meeting was truly ideal, and as the presidents of the unions throughout the city had been invited to come and bring their members, a goodly sprinkling of sisters from all over the city was present. The meeting opened promptly by repeating the Lord's Prayer in concert and singing "Some Glad Day." A paper by Mrs. M. E. Hoover, "Some of Our Workers," gave a brief review of a few of our World's, National, state and county workers. Miss Hendrix' paper, "Who are They?" was a most convincing argument against the whole drink business. Mrs. B. M. Welsh gave a reading, and Mrs. Hendrix, state recording secretary, recited "Dorothy Primrose" in costume. The pledge was circulated, and three new members decorated with the white ribbon. The program was followed by a delightful social hour, the treasury was replenished, also, and the educative effect, it is hoped, will be far-reaching. About thirty-five were present.

Mrs. Henrietta Skelton has been in the state for some three weeks, and needless to say, has been working actively and successfully. The most of her time thus far has been given to the eleventh district. A series of meetings was held in St. Cloud, where Mrs. Skelton addressed the Normal students, who were greatly delighted with her. She held several meetings with the German people, winning them so thoroughly that Mrs. Kercher, district president, now hopes to organize a German union very soon. From St. Cloud Mrs. Skelton went to New Paynesville, Kimball and other points. Returning to Minneapolis she spoke several times here and addressed our conference of unions at its last meeting. Here Mrs. Skelton was among "our own" and discussed ways and means to carry on the work. She began with inimitable drollery, telling some of her own experiences, advising us in a way to show she had not been in Minnesota three weeks without learning some of our difficulties. Going on she became serious and lovingly earnest, and ended with a short, hearty prayer. From here she went to Lake City and other points in the southern part of the state.

Mrs. Addie Northam Fields, who came to us at the time of our state convention, has been in the fifth district busily at work almost ever since convention, and has her time pretty well taken until the National. No report of her work has been sent in, and I am hoping some of the workers will stop long enough to tell us all about it soon.

(MRS.) AMY B. GREEN,
State Reporter, Minneapolis.
2208 Oakland Ave.

Colorado.

AFTER three beneficent missions to the smaller cities of the state, the annual state convention was again welcomed by our metropolis on September 21–23. The meetings were held in Asbury M. E. church, North Denver, which was decorated with American flags, state, local and department banners and exquisite potted plants. A portrait of Miss Willard, decorated with white ribbon, occupied the place of honor upon the platform.

Promptly at half-past nine Wednesday morning, the convention was opened by President Telford, the devotional exercises having been led by the state evangelist, Mrs. Reichenbach, of Denver. After the usual routine business, memorial services were held for the promoted ones. A list was read of thirty names of National, state and local workers, who had during the year passed from human sight to the blessedness of life eternal. Miss Willard and Mrs. Mary T. Burt headed the list. Included in it was Mrs. Ridley-Trenholme, of Quebec, mother of our state recording secretary, Mrs. Hicks; Nathan Jewett, brother of state president, Mary Jewett Telford; W. H. Wrigley, of Denver, husband of our state superintendent of Christian citizenship; Henry S. Balcomb, of Colorado Springs, husband of Mrs. Hattie Balcomb, for several years state superintendent of literature; Mr. John Steele, of Denver, husband of Mrs. Anna Steele, former superintendent of temperance and labor; Mr. Shapleigh, of Denver, husband of our lamented state treasurer, Carrie M. Shapleigh; Mr. Geo. Henderson, of Leadville, Rev. S. R. Dimock, of Denver, and Alex. Furguson, of Canada. The rest of the list was composed of white-ribbon women from the various local unions of the state.

Vice-president's hour consisted of reports from the various districts of the state, of which seventeen out of nineteen are now organized, and all but one of these have held conventions during the year. The reports were quite encouraging, and seemed to show that for so large and sparsely populated a state as Colorado, the district system is peculiarly adapted.

From the reports of credentials committee, corresponding secretary, treasurer and finance committee I glean the following items, which show the general status of state work, as reported. Alas! for the unreported work which makes the annoying "might have been" of our annual statistics:

Present at annual meeting, 130 officers and delegates; total membership in state, 1,585; new members, 496; new unions organized, 16; number of Y unions in state, 14; number of L. T. L's, 18; membership in L. T. L's, 825; number of department superintendents, 30; UNION SIGNALS taken, 88; number of meetings held, 1,985 (average of five per day for year); money expended by unions, $9,361; money expended by state, $1,110; money raised for Cottage Home, $301; money raised for Temple, $898; money raised for Hospital, $18; banner union, Grand Junction.

It would be impossible in a report of limited scope to give even a complete summary of the department work done along some thirty lines, but a brief mention of some noteworthy methods may be of value. Owing to the difficulty of coming in close touch with so widely scattered a constituency, the reported work of state superintendents is often of a somewhat local character. The systematic work of the press superintendent is, on that account, to be especially commended.

She made a complete list of newspapers published in the state. From this list she compiled one of the publications of each district. These she had sent to the respective districts with the request that they correspond with local unions, and an organized effort be thus made to furnish every available paper in the state with temperance items and news.

The department of legislative and petition work has protested to the proper bodies against army canteens, sale of liquor in Congressional Library, bill to establish the traffic in Alaska, existing conditions in Princeton and Yale colleges and prize fights. They have petitioned for better protection of girls, anti-cigaret laws, curfew ordinances and anti-screen laws. Many local matters have also received attention.

The flower mission department has so enlarged its field of beneficence, that such things as goggles, groceries, sheets and pillowcases, fruits and carpet rags, etc., find their way into the lists of things distributed by the young women in charge.

On the whole, the department work for the year was quite encouraging.

The tedium of balloting for state officers was somewhat relieved by interspersing reports, etc., from program while ballots were being counted. Last year's officers were re-elected, with the exception of the vice-president, Mrs. Cassell, who expects to be absent from the state most of the year. These elections were practically unanimous, and showed high appreciation of the past services of our chosen leaders. The L. T. L. was, by amendment to constitution, made a branch instead of auxiliary, as heretofore, and Mrs. Latilla Bailey elected secretary.

A symposium on direct legislation was one of the entertaining and instructive features of the first afternoon. There was a paper by Miss Mitchell, representing the reform department of Denver Woman's Club, and discussion led by Mrs. E. R. Meredith and Mr. Herrick, of the state liberty party.

There were two evening meetings. The first consisted of the usual addresses of welcome by the mayor, pastors and local unions, response and annual address by the president. In beauty of diction, as well as value of subject matter, this address distanced, if possible, Mrs. Telford's

Don't Put It Away on the Shelf.

You are right in using Wool Soap for woolens. All careful people must do that. But you are wrong in putting Wool Soap away until the next washing day. You lose nine-tenths of its value.

It is impure ingredients that make other soaps shrink woolens. But these do more than shrink wool. Used on fine goods of any kind, they eat the fabric. Used on the skin, they roughen it and redden it. Used on the face, they spoil the complexion.

MY MAMA USED I WISH MINE HAD.

Other makers of soap haven't our secret. All soaps except Wool Soap have some injurious ingredient—enough to shrink wool; enough to harm the skin.

Whenever soap touches the skin, or fine fabrics, or wool—there's where you need

WOOL SOAP

IT SWIMS.

All Grocers and Druggists sell it.

GAIL BORDEN
EAGLE BRAND
CONDENSED MILK.

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE FOR THE "EAGLE BRAND"
THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS TESTIFY TO ITS SUPERIORITY.
"INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE. NEW YORK CONDENSED MILK CO. N.Y.

former efforts. The second evening there were addresses on Christian Citizenship by Mr. Willsen, chairman of prohibition party, and Miss Ida Clothier, recitations and songs by the members of Miss Hicks' "Band of Mercy," and departmental display under the able management of Mrs. Boggus, of Grand Junction. The music on both evenings was very fine.

Captain McAbee, of the Salvation Army, made a touching address at one of the evangelistic hours, and with a comrade, sang a beautiful duet to guitar accompaniment.

Among the distinguished visitors at convention were Dr. Carolyn Geisler, Isabel Wing Lake, Mrs. Anna Holiday, corresponding secretary of Wyoming state union; Mrs. Banks, treasurer of Louisiana; Mrs. Agnes Porter, vice-president of Westmoreland county, Pa., and Mrs. Caroline Woodward, of Nebraska.

The convention did not indorse the recommendation of the executive committee to "follow the lead of the National Union" in regard to the Temple matter, but left itself free to adopt any future policy regarding it that it might see fit.

Many delegates visited the North Denver reading-room, which is but a block or two from the church where the convention was held. This room is supported by two local unions, North Denver and Highlands. It is admirably located so as to be easy of access to a large number of working men. A counter bearing the familiar sign, "Take one," is filled with miscellaneous pamphlets and periodicals donated by the patrons. These are for free distribution. Everything on this table passes through the hands of a committee, who see that no objectionable matter is circulated.

All went home from convention feeling that the outlook for the ensuing year had never been brighter than now.

ELLA BEECHER-GITTINGS,
Reporter pro-tem, Monument.

New Hampshire.

THE state convention of New Hampshire W. C. T. U. which was held last week at Portsmouth was, perhaps, the most interesting in the annals of our organization. With twenty-five years of constantly growing interest behind us, with the impress of all Miss Willard was to the temperance cause upon us, and the anxiety to bring ourselves to the steadfast fulfilling of her desires in this work, thrilled by the nation's magnificent stand for humanity and patriotism, the women of our state realize that they are living in an age which is pulsing with activities, and that they must give to our work the very best of their strength and judgment.

We have in our state president, Miss C. R. Wendell, of Dover, a presiding officer of rare dignity and good judgment, and it is with gladness that we welcome her to continued duty another year. The state has added six unions in the past year, and the reports of the corresponding secretary and superintendents show a steady gain in the practical work of the departments, exceptionally fine papers being given by nearly all our superintendents.

The exercises of the convention were held in the North Congregational church, the altar of which was appropriately decorated with the state and county banners, and many beautiful palms. This is one of the oldest churches in this historic old town, which has given to New Hampshire so many governors and men of note in the early colonial days, and the harbor of which is said to be one of the finest on our Atlantic coast. The delicious collations were served in the Baptist vestry, and provided by the different churches of the city.

The memorial service of Thursday noon was most touching and sacred. New Hampshire has lost two county presidents the past year, both noble and capable women, and this is the first gathering of our state unions since our dear Miss Willard was taken from us. Mrs. Rice, of Boston, and Mrs. Hoffman, of Kansas City, Mo., two women who knew and loved her so well, brought their tribute to her worth and gave us tender and beautiful glimpses into the life and character of this, our departed leader.

The musical program was under the direction of Mrs. Bates, of Somersworth, and added greatly to the attraction of the exercises. Mrs. Hoffman's lecture on Thursday evening, subject, "The Reason Why," is (in the mind of the writer) the most forceful temperance lecture ever presented at our conventions. The convention closed with an interesting gold medal contest, seven contestants taking part, with the medal awarded to Morton Hopkins.

Quoting from the Portsmouth Chronicle, "The convention which closed in this city on Friday will go down as one of the most important and largest attended ever held in all the twenty-five years' existence of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U."

ELIZABETH PARTRIDGE,
State Reporter, Claremont.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

My heart has been deeply touched during the past week by the letters which have reached me from all parts of the country, expressing regret at the statement made in THE UNION SIGNAL of October 20 that I am to retire from the office of corresponding secretary at the next National Convention. Will you kindly, dear sisters, in this rush of ante-convention work, take my Notes as personal letters upon this point? I would gladly write to you each one, but program, reports, proof and countless other things are waiting, and I cannot, therefore, take the time to thank you, personally, for all the kind words you have said. I do thank you, however, most sincerely, and if anything could have made me "reconsider" my decision it would be the earnest appeals which have come from you that I should do so.

That decision, however, cannot be reconsidered. It could not have been even prior to the Massachusetts convention, and, since that time, the dear sisters of my own home state have settled the matter finally by calling me to the presidency. It will be with genuine regret as well as genuine joy that I shall lay down my National work. I am sorry to leave the post where I have striven so long to serve you, but I am glad with an unspeakable joy to turn my face homeward and to come into closer contact with the work as state president. I have only thanks and blessings for the dear women who have made my work so happy here. God bless you all and help us to work together more earnestly for the coming of His kingdom!

I want to call attention to the article in this issue by Miss Greenwood, upon "Pulpit Hospitality and Our Devotional Services." I am sure it will find a cordial response in the hearts of its readers. Miss Greenwood will be open to calls en route after the National Convention, and may be addressed at her new residence, 351 Carlton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Honor Roll for this week is as follows:

Mrs. Mabel L. Conklin 8
Mrs. L. E. Bailey 2

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

National Convention Corner.

Pulpit Hospitality.

A MESSAGE FROM THE EVANGELISTIC SUPERINTENDENT.

In a few days the memorial Convention will be held at St. Paul. Great things are always expected of the W. C. T. U. in the city which extends its hospitality. Women good and true are now working to make perfect the many arrangements for our entertainment. They hope for a blessing from our sojourn in their midst. Not only homes, but churches will be freely opened to our white-ribbon ministry. By invitation of the pastors and church officials we shall be their welcome guests, standing in the sacred place to represent our great cause and give to large congregations a Sabbath message. Shall it be a Verbum Dei—a veritable message from God? To abuse the confidence reposed in us by pastors and people is to lose a great opportunity for good, and do lasting injury to the cause we love. Almost universally, it is expected, when a representative of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is invited to speak from the pulpit, especially on the morning of the Lord's Day, that she will present our cause from a gospel and spiritual standpoint. When this is not done, when political or merely practical issues are presented, without a Scriptural foundation or spiritual application, a feeling of dissatisfaction almost always follows. Frequent letters from our true friends have reached me lamenting the absence of gospel temperance in the Sunday ministrations during our Conventions. Hence, as the appointed watchman upon the towers of Zion, or as the dear leader we shall so miss used to say, the "white-ribbon pastor," I venture to suggest again this year, to all who accept pulpit hospitality, that they present the temperance gospel. May God touch our lips with a coal from the Crusade fires, and our hosts realize that they have entertained "angels unawares."

Each morning at 8:10 o'clock, a prayer-meeting will be held in the House of Hope Presbyterian church, midway between the People's church and Windsor Hotel headquarters.

Friday, November 11, the Convention will open with a prayer and consecration meeting, followed by the memorial service. Saturday from 11 to 12 will be the Crusade meeting, and all original Crusaders will be invited to the platform.

Monday from 11:15 to 12 A. M., Consul Booth-Tucker will participate in the service. Tuesday at 11:15, a Bible service, with brief address by the National superintendent, upon the integrity and indestructibility of the Bible, and texts and tributes from others. Wednesday at 11:15 A. M. a praise and prayer service.

The annual sermon will be preached Sunday afternoon at 3, in People's church, by the World's and National evangelistic superintendent. Let earnest prayer ascend that all these services and the entire Convention may be very spiritual and helpful, because of the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit.

ELIZABETH W. GREENWOOD,
World's and Nat. Supt.
351 Carlton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Entertainment.

Delegates whose names are sent to Mrs. C. L. Webber, chairman of the entertainment committee, will be provided with homes from November 10 through November 16, but earlier or later than that it will be necessary for them to provide for themselves.

FATTY Degeneration of the tissues, heaviness and discomfort are promoted by excessive starch food.

Dr. Gaillard says:
"In the study of Cereal Foods it is only necessary to remember that the gluten of such foods is their nitrogenized element, the element on which depends their life sustaining value, and that this element is, in the foolishly fashionable white flour, almost entirely removed while the starch, the inferior element is left behind. To use White Flour from which the gluten has been removed, is almost criminal: that it is foolish and needless needs no further demonstration."

Franklin Mills Flour
A Fine Flour of the Entire White is rich in gluten and will relieve consumers from excessive starch eating.
If your grocer does not keep it, send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied.
See that the Flour delivered bears our label; avoid substitutes. Booklet free.
The genuine made only by the
FRANKLIN MILLS CO., LOCKPORT, N. Y.

CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; it is such a relief." AYLMER L. HUNT, 1689 Russell St., Detroit, Mich.

CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe, 10c, 20c, 50c.
... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...
Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 322

This refers not only to delegates in general, but to state presidents as well as superintendents and organizers who come previous to the evening of the 10th, or remain after the 16th. St. Paul would gladly entertain for the meetings previous to the Convention date, but not being able to do so this announcement is made in answer to many questions.

Entertainment can not be furnished free to visitors, secretaries, husbands, etc. These can obtain rooms for fifty cents per day, two in a room. Room and board can be had for $1.50 per day.

Hotel Windsor, room and board, special rates per day, $2.

Hotel Metropolitan, European, special rates, room per day, two in room, fifty cents each. Board and room, two in a room, $1.50 each.

The Astoria, same rates as Metropolitan.

Hot dinners will be served in the dining-room of the People's church for 20 or 25 cents. Suppers 10 or 15 cents.

Chairmen of Nat'l Convention Committees.

General Committee of Arrangements, Mrs. C. S. Soule, 105 East Isabel street, St. Paul.

Entertainment Committee, Mrs. C. L. Webber, 1729 W. Minnehaha street, Hamline, St. Paul.

Finance Committee, Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, 37 East Tenth street, St. Paul.

Press Committee, Mrs. L. M. Rich, 1397 Hewitt Ave., St. Paul.

Boarding House Committee, Mrs Arella L. Phillips, 717 Geranium street, St. Paul.

Decorating Committee, Mrs. T. H. Lyles, 337 St. Peter street, St. Paul.

Important Change of Address.

All state presidents, National organizers, lecturers, and other speakers who expect to be at National W. C. T. U. Convention in St. Paul, and are willing to speak on Convention Sunday, are requested to send their names and place of entertainment to the chairman of the pulpit committee, Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, chairman committee Sabbath services, 669 Dayton avenue, St. Paul, Minn., care Mr. George Brown, instead of to the place given heretofore.

THE ante-executive session of the National W. C. T. U. Convention is called to meet in Conover Music Hall, corner Sixth and St. Peter streets, at 9:30 on the morning of November 9. State presidents will please note time and place and be in attendance at the first hour if possible. A two days' meeting will, it is hoped, greatly facilitate the work of the Convention.

Notice.

Hon. John G. Woolley has just completed a series of lectures in Nebraska, prior to election. Mr. Woolley has twenty dates in Nebraska between the 10th of November and the 17th of December. Any organization, whether it be W. C. T. U., Epworth League or any of the young people's societies, can secure him by addressing Mrs. M. A. S. Monagon, 1031 N. 28th street, Lincoln, Neb.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Official.

Peace and Arbitration.

Following is a program for the local W. C. T. U. meeting preceding Peace Sunday, the third Sabbath of December.

Singing, Coronation.

Scripture Reading, Matt. 5.

Prayer for the United States that it may not take its stand among the great military nations of the earth.

Reading (responsively), "God's promises to the meek."

Singing, "When peace like a river."

Reading, "What women may do to promote peace on earth."

Reading, "Plan of work for local superintendents."

Reading, original essay, "What our union can do to prevent the spread of militarism in our midst."

The appointment of a local peace superintendent, if there is none.

For suggested reading selections, Address

(MRS.) H. J. BAILEY,
World's and Nat. Supt.
Winthrop Center, Me.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec.—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—This morning, in conversation with Dr. Smith, a member of our homœopathic staff and a physician well known in Chicago, she kindly consented to give us a letter for the SIGNAL column. We feel sure you will read it with pleasure, and understand how much the hard working women of our board appreciate such a word of encouragement by the wayside. Here it is:

MY DEAR MRS. INGLEHART:—It is said that converts to the church of Rome are more enthusiastic and more zealous in advancing her ideals than are the children to "the manor born." So with me in the matter of non-alcoholic treatment of surgical and medical cases. It has taken much argument on the part of my friends, some sad experiences outside and some wonderfully satisfactory experiences inside the walls of the Temperance Hospital to bring me to the acknowledgment that the use of alcohol in the treatment of any disease or in any surgical emergency is absolutely unnecessary, and the armamentarium of the physician and surgeon has other most valuable and potent substitutes.

A very recent experience in the Temperance Hospital is the inspiration of this testimony, and I will be glad to "cry aloud upon the housetops" to medical men and women, the fact that in a beautiful part of our city away from the noise, smoke, dust and traffic, aye, to one side of the tinkle and jingle of the cable and electric cars, and yet, convenient to both, is to be found a location where with some outlay an ideal hospital may be evolved, and where even now, in an old building with many disadvantages and meagre resources, rarely good services are rendered by superintendent and good nurses. I wish very much a large delegation of the W. C. T. U. might visit us and see for themselves what we have and what we need.

Only a few weeks ago in giving chloroform for a minor surgical service despite the caution of the interne who was administering the anesthetic, the patient ceased breathing. The pulse was still, and to all appearances the woman was inarticulo mortis. Four years ago I would not have been satisfied with a hypodermic of strychnia and the exhibition of ammonia or nitro-glycerine, but should have felt bound to pour down the throat of the victim a fair amount of either whisky or brandy. Trusting this time, however, to non-alcoholic treatment exclusively, I was happily rewarded by the prompt revival of my patient, was able to complete the operation, and later discharged the lady rejoicing in renewed health, to be herself an exponent of the excellent service of the National Temperance Hospital.

When you, dear friend, go to the next Convention, I pray you urge upon the members of the W. C. T. U. assembled from all the length and breadth of this fair land to come up to the help of the Lord, in this His appointed work and send of their substance to increase our store to the end that we may have a better building, fitter appliances, more nurses that the hospital may be an object lesson which can be known and read of all men to prove that ours is the best method and ours the only safe method to meet conditions arising from disease or accident.

Very cordially yours,
JULIA HOLMES SMITH.

Our genial editor finds it necessary sometimes to caution us about the length of our column, but I must tell you not to forget that our "holiday sale" will be held the first week in December. Any donation which you may send for that purpose will be gratefully received. Please send all packages direct to the hospital, care of Mrs. E. A. Millner. All donations of money to Mrs. C. E. Bigelow, 539 West Adams street, Chicago.

Yours for service,
MRS. MARGARET INGLEHART.

THE October number of the Pacific Ensign, organ of California, edited by Mrs. Nellie Blessing Eyster, was glorious with illustrations. Pictures of the state president, Mrs. Ensign, and others appeared.

"Sanitas" Means Health.

How to have thoroughly sanitary surroundings is told in a pamphlet by Kingzett, the eminent English chemist. Price 10 cents. Every household should contain this little help to comfortable living. It will be sent free to subscribers of this paper.

THE SANITAS CO. (Ltd.),
636 to 642 West 55th Street, New York City.
Disinfectant and Embrocation Manufacturers.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Drinking Fountains

FOR

MAN and BEAST

Manufactured by

The J. L. Mott Iron Works

84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.

311-313 Wabash Av. CHICAGO

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright 1896, by the J. L. Mott Iron Works.

HISTORY OF THE
WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00 Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.

AGENTS WANTED

both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address

DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF
OUR WAR WITH SPAIN

ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.
STOP SMOKING!
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

READ

FREE TO WOMEN

I suffered for 10 years with uterine troubles, painful periods, leucorrhœa, displacement & other irregularities, and finally found while traveling in Europe the original & genuine simple, safe home treatment, that cured me without the aid of medical attendance. This is natures own remedy for women. It costs nothing to convince yourself of its merits for I send it free with full instructions to suffering women.

MRS. E.H. PAINTER, 126, 33rd St., Chicago

LADIES! MAKE $100 A MONTH.

easily representing me. Many make more. A great opportunity. Send 2c. stamp for particulars.
Mrs. Gervaisea Graham, 1250 Michigan Ave., Chicago

A YEAR OF PLEASURE FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Little Folks is a beautiful new magazine full of best pictures and stories. Send for sample. Agents Wanted Everywhere. S. E. CASSINO, 34 Pope Bldg., Boston, Mass.

WRITERS WANTED to do copying at home. Law College, Lima, O.

Publisher's Notes.

The NOVEMBER BIBLE READING in the monthly series issued by the W. T. P. A. is one of Miss Willard's beautiful Bible talks never before given in this course. The title is, "The Master Calleth." It was first prepared for a young women's Sunday afternoon meeting in Boston during Miss Willard's work for Mr. Moody in 1877. The words of the foundation text, "The Master is come and calleth for thee," spoken by one sister to another nearly twenty centuries ago, came also to the young women of Boston from a sister's lips, and to-day our publishing house sends them out to white-ribbon women everywhere as a message from a sister in heaven, one who herself always responded, and, we believe, still continues to respond, with glad alacrity to every call of the Master. It is a Bible Reading particularly fitting for the Convention month—the first without her—and we trust it will be used by every local union in the country.

The Frances Townsley Calendar for 1899 will be ready early in November. It is composed of a sentiment for each day in the coming year, the material being garnered by the request of friends from Rev. Miss Townsley's sermons, lectures, and addresses, with a few entire poems of the author published in such standard publications as The Youth's Companion, the New York Independent, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Baptist Standard, etc. Miss Townsley is a National evangelist of the W. C. T. U. and at present is pastor of the Baptist church, of Vassar, Mich. The calendar is gotten up on neat paper with clear type, arranged for daily use, and the proceeds are to be devoted to Christian and reform work. There are many suggestions to young men and maidens; some to the aged; and not a few have felt that the preparation of this souvenir might be a means of real good to those who shall own a copy. It is expressly suitable as a Christmas gift. For terms address

REV. FRANCES E. TOWNSLEY,
Vassar, Mich.

"Press On and On."

Our Chieftain's Orders.

Mrs. Oberholtzer's beautiful Memorial Ode in honor of our Chieftain, music by O. H. Hawley, is selling rapidly, and is very popular for W. C. T. U. public and parlor meetings. It is a solo with chorus, tender, stirring and martial, printed in sheet form and has a lovely half-tone of Miss Willard on the cover. Price 10 cents per copy, mailed postpaid, 4 copies for 30 cents. When one dozen or more is ordered by a union special price of 60 cents per dozen is made. Address all orders to Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga street, Philadelphia, Pa.

National Superintendents Take Notice.

The board of National superintendents will meet in the state capitol building, St. Paul, Thursday, November 10, at 10 A. M. Afternoon session at 2 o'clock. Entertainment has been provided for the superintendents for that day. An interesting program has been arranged, and matters of great importance will come up for consideration. A full and prompt attendance is desired.

LOUISE C. PURINGTON, Chairman.
MARIE C. BREHM, Sec.

Good Goods, Well Advertised.

Going the rounds of the press is an item stating that the Royal Baking Powder Company is the largest advertiser in America. Of course, the business itself must be an enormous one to justify so great an expenditure in publicty. There is no fallacy more dangerous than that success can be gained by advertising an article of indifferent merit. But, given an article of the highest quality like Royal Baking Powder, which when the housekeeper has once used she finds if she desires the best food she cannot do without, then the greatest measure of success is attained by keeping it continuously before the public. Great merit and good advertising are both essential to make a product a great success. The Royal Baking Powder possessing the first, its proprietors have wisely used the second, and the result is apparent throughout the land. The Royal company believe that there is no medium for advertising like the newspapers, since in these enlightened days everybody reads them.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

AT the Missouri state convention a medal contest was given, the speakers being the state organizers. Mrs. Nelle Burger won the medal. The door receipts were $99.

MRS. DORCAS J. SPENCER, state corresponding secretary of the California W. C. T. U., was chosen and invited to deliver the address of welcome at the recent Good Templars' convention in San Francisco.

MRS. U. F. BRUUN is the only Scandinavian woman in the field for woman's suffrage in America, and the only Scandinavian speaker in South Dakota working in the suffrage campaign. She speaks every night, and will until the National Convention, which she will attend.

MRS. V. F. COX, National superintendent of Sabbath observance, has been invited to speak on "the need of the Sabbath to develop a noble family life in our new possessions" at a convention called in Washington in December to discuss "Our Country's New Responsibilities."

THE Ashland, Wis., union feels itself fortunate in having as a member Mrs. Emma W. Shores, a Crusader and associate National superintendent. A visit from their state president, Mrs. Mary C. Upham, was counted a great blessing by them. The union is increasing in membership, and advancing in good work.

A CONTRIBUTION of five dollars from Mrs. Mary Beaver, of Pennsylvania, an aunt of ex-Governor Beaver, was sent to the National treasurer to be applied to the organizers' fund. Miss Margaret Wintringer sent the money, and said in her letter, "To me, the outlook for the W. C. T. U. seems more hopeful than it has for years."

MOUNT SALEM church in Wilmington, Del., made a special feature of their decorations the night Mrs. Ellen A. D. Blair spoke there. The monogram of W. C. T. U. in electric jets was suspended over her head, and under it the letters L. T. L., also in electric lights. Large audiences and large collections greeted and cheered Mrs. Blair all over Delaware.

MRS. LAKE and Dr. Geisel in their western trip took purity pledges from 1,487 men. They held 402 meetings, and secured 972 new members to the unions. They addressed meetings in state penitentiaries, police stations, rescue homes and public schools and formed eighteen purity bands of young men, and sixteen bands of young women. They spoke before Sunday-schools, and Y. M. C. A. meetings besides the W. C. T. U. meetings addressed. In every city the chiefs of police were consulted with reference to rescue work. They also visited the women of sorrow in the scarlet homes. After the National Convention they go south for a like campaign.

ON Miss Willard's birthday, September 28, appropriate exercises were held in each of the four public schools, mothered by the Neal Dow W. C. T. U., a small country union of Somis, South California. The children listened with rapt attention to the story of our Chieftain's beautiful life as told them by Mrs. May G. Tongier, state lecturer. Referring to the heroes of the Spanish war she said that Miss Willard was as truly a hero as any of these and that her picture should be upon the walls of every school-room in the land with those of Sampson, Dewey and Schley. Acting upon the suggestion the union at a meeting held that afternoon, voted to supply each of the schools under its jurisdiction with a picture of Miss Willard.

THE most interesting state convention since the organization of the W. C. T. U., was held in Ogden, Utah. The reports of the unions showed small increase in membership, but a determination to hold on and work earnestly was manifested. Two new unions were reported. Interesting papers on such subjects as "Coöperation of Parents and Teachers." "Possibilities for Temperance through Legislation," and "Peace and Arbitration," were read and followed by discussion. The officers elected for the coming year were: President, Mrs. Frances Smith, Ogden; first vice-president, Mrs. Tibbals, Salt Lake; second vice-president, Mrs. Boyden, Provo; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. W. Martin, Manti; recording secretary, Mrs. C. D. Savery, Salt Lake; treasurer, Miss Mary Neilson, Mt. Pleasant; state organizer, Mrs. Lulu Shepard, Salt Lake.

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD'S birthday anniversary was commemorated September 28, by the Milford, Conn., union, at the home of its president, Mrs. Effie Pittlado. Flowers radiant with the gorgeous colors and tints of the fall, decorated the rooms and especially the easel, on which stood a fine picture of Miss Willard. A good program entertained the company. Reminiscences of Miss Willard were given by Mrs. Pittlado, from her personal acquaintance with her. The no-license campaign was discussed and the no-license ballots, which the union had bought from the state secretary of the Temperance Society, were distributed to those who would give them out to the voters near the polls on election day. Two hundred copies of the Connecticut Citizen on the license question had been purchased, and they too were given to the members of the union to distribute to the voters before election day. Every room on the first floor of the Methodist parsonage was filled with guests and a more earnest and enthusiastic gathering was never held by the W. C. T. U. of Milford. This is the union that was about to disband a year ago and that has now received the county banner for the greatest increase of membership.

FOR YOU

FOR that sour stomach use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they digest the food before it has time to sour, ferment and poison the blood.

FOR loss of appetite, take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because food promptly digested creates a natural desire for MORE.

FOR loss of flesh, use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; they increase flesh in the only common sense way, that is, by digesting flesh-forming food, and assisting the weak stomach in disposing of it.

FOR gas in stomach and bowels, causing distress, belching and headaches, use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; always indicated in such cases.

FOR palpitation of the heart use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets because this symptom in nine out of ten cases is caused from a disordered stomach.

FOR impure blood use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; pure blood can only result from wholesome food thoroughly digested.

FOR every form of weak digestion and stomach trouble (except cancer of the stomach) Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest, most natural, most successful cure. No patent medicine, but composed of digestive acids, pepsin, bismuth, Golden Seal and similar valuable stomach remedies.

For sale by druggists at 50c. for full size package, or by mail from Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. Kindly ask your druggist first.

FREE PRIZES!

ONE OF OUR GIFTS.

For a few hours work introducing our Flavoring Powders among your friends. Everyone recognizes at once their superiority to liquids—they contain no alcohol—are fine fruit and flower essences and give such delicate and rich flavors, that once used always used and you have gained a permanent customer. One box goes twice as far as one bottle of the liquid flavorings. One to ten flavors sold at most every house. WE TAKE BACK GOODS THAT YOU CANNOT SELL. Write for further particulars and Premium Catalogue of hundreds of useful articles which we are giving away every day. Addr. W. H. BAIRD & CO.,
18 TELEPHONE BUILDING, E. E., PITTSBURG, PA.

Silk Remnants for Crazy Work.

At a great bargain we offer a big package of beautiful silk remnants. Each package contains from 40 to 50 large pieces of silk—carefully trimmed—and is prepared especially from our large accumulation of exquisite patterns of silk remnants, and they are especially adapted to all kinds of art and fancy work. The most beautiful colors and designs. All remnants of large size. With each box is two skeins of the very best embroidery silk, assorted colors. Send us 14 cents in stamps or coin and get this beautiful assortment, postpaid. For 50 cents we will send enough silk remnants for a quilt 4 sq. yards Address Paris Silk Ageney, Box 3045, New York City.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Official Organ of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

(EIGHT-PAGE MONTHLY.)

An Illustrated Children's Temperance Paper.

TERMS.

One copy, per year	$ .25
In clubs of ten or more	.20
In clubs of fifty or more, to one address	.12
Sample packages for distribution, 100 to one address	1.00

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The regular issue of the paper coutains, aside from illustrations, stories, poetry, etc.

QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON SUPPLEMENT.

Especially for the use of teachers in Sunday-school. Four pages containing temperance lesson helps, suggestions for observance of temperance Sundays, etc. This supplement can be secured w thout the CRUSADER at the rate of 65 cents per 100 copies, $2.75 per 500, $5.00 per 1,000. To regular subscribers the Supplement accompanies each paper free of charge.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

Encouraging Words from Our Subscribers.

"I enclose you money to pay for THE UNION SIGNAL to 1899. 'Tis so much better, so much more general news, so much more than in days gone by. I enjoy the clear, large type. Altogether 'tis a weekly, welcome visitor in my home."

"Please find enclosed herewith $5 to pay my subscription two years in advance. Hope other delinquents may do likewise."

"More than a year ago I wrote to you that I must stop taking THE UNION SIGNAL, but loved the paper so dearly I felt I could hardly give it up. I hoped then better times would come to me. Misfortune has followed me and I have not a dollar left me. My home and nearly all its contents have been destroyed by fire, my clothing, papers and books all gone. My husband, an aged clergyman, now a hopeless, helpless invalid, requires my constant care and attention. This is my sad story. I must now ask that my beloved paper be discontinued and if I can I will pay all I owe. It has been a great comfort and help to me in my shut-in life, and I have tried to make it helpful to others. I sent it first to an aged W. C. T. U. sister who did not feel able to subscribe for it. After reading she sent it to our county president, and from her it went to our depot pocket to scatter the good seed by the wayside. I am sorry and sad to write you such a letter. It is all I can do at present, but if ever I can I will pay you all."

"Enclosed find $5 to pay my subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL. I could not do without the paper. I do not believe any one, man or woman, could help being a white-ribboner if they would read THE UNION SIGNAL. My husband is a white-ribboner, and I have three boys who are strong for the cause as far as their ages will admit. It is in their father's and mother's blood and they could not be anything else. Our oldest boy is a member of the Methodist church and has refused to take fermented wine at the sacrament. The prayer of my heart is above everything else that my children may give their lives to the temperance cause, as the liquor curse is doing more against bringing the world to Christ than all things else together."

"Please find enclosed check for two years' subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL. The years seem so much shorter than when I was younger. I thought I would spend $2 for my much loved paper, which I hope will be supported until temperance becomes triumphant over many evils now existing in our beloved land."

This is the season of the year when our expectant eyes are eagerly watching for new subscribers, and for the renewals ever welcome. Kindly look at the little yellow label on THE UNION SIGNAL and see if the subscription has expired. If all our subscribers would but renew and each secure an additional name, the paper would take an upward leap in every way. Dear friends, it is your paper, and we believe you will stand by it as you do the grand reform which it represents. Please let us hear from you soon.

TO BE CONTENT AND HAPPY

Use "Garland" Stoves and Ranges.

LARKIN SOAPS AND PREMIUMS.—THE LARKIN IDEA fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free Sample Soap if mention this publication. THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., BUFFALO, N.Y.

Holiday Goods.

Christmas Booklets.

Handsome Covers.
Beautiful Illustrations.
Appropriate Selections.

5 Cents Each, or 50 cents a doz.

Strong Consolation

Watchwords	Thoughts of Peace
Love	Favorite Texts
Gleanings	The Master's Voice
Hid Treasure	The Seed Basket
Better	Thy Pilgrim Path

The Almighty Giver

10 Cents Each, or $1.00 a doz.

Looking Unto Jesus

Our Daily Bread	Mementoes
Thy Kingdom Come	Heart Cheer
Our Father	Gems Divine
Thy will be Done	Olive Branches
Thine is the Glory	Golden Threads

Hallowed be Thy Name

Specially adapted for Sunday Schools, printed in full color and containing a text for every day in the month.

10 Cents Each.

Finely illustrated in color, shaped edges, tied with silk cord or ribbon.

Sunward Glances

A Happy Day	A Day Dream
Joyous Yule	Abide With Me
Xmas Greetings	The Perfect Day

Xmas Morning Wishes

15 Cents Each.

By Charlotte Murray, Frances Ridley Havergal, and other well known authors, richly illustrated in color, shaped edges, tied with silk cord or ribbon.

An Old Time Wish

Golden Records	Forget Me Not
Afterward	At Dawn of Day
Trusting Thee	Sweet Childhood
Joy's Argosy	Christmas Gladness
First Flowers	Another Christmas
Just	God Knoweth How
Gifts	Thy Pilgrim Way
Otherwhere	Unanswered Yet

Rays of Sunlight

Daily Food

A dainty little book of texts especially adapted for Sunday School classes, bound in cloth, 15 cents.

20 Cents Each.

Handsomely illustrated in color and gold, shaped edges, tied with silk ribbon or cord.

Recompense	At Evening Time
Dependence	His Loving Kindness
Living Music	Christmas Jewels

25 Cents Each.

Embossed covers, rich in design and finish, tied with silk cord or ribbon.

Again and Not Again

Angelus	Unsearchable Riches
Love Only	Lead, Kindly Light
A Benediction	Christmas Chimes
Xmas Message	Golden Memories
Christmas Story	The Lord's Prayer

Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me

Hark! the Herald Angels Sing

Boxed, 35 cents.

Calendars for 1899.

Our stock of Calendars are all of the latest design, and will be found of the high art order. Some printed in full color, some in monotint, tied with silk cord or ribbon and with appropriate selections for the year.

Turn-Over Calendars of Four Leaves, 10 cents each.

The Pansy The Little Folks

Turn-Over Calendars of Six Leaves, 15 cents each.

The Nasturtium Round the World

Turn-Over Calendars of Twelve Leaves, 15 cents each.

Thou Art, O God Daily Strength

Bright Beams

Drop Leaf Calendars of Six Leaves, 15 cents each.

Silver Cords Divine Thoughts

Gems of Thoughts

The Fireside Calendar . . . . 30 cents
Six turn-over leaves with rural scenes in monotint.

Drop Leaf Calendars, boxed, 25 cents each.

My Calendar — Four leaves.
The Golden Way — Three leaves.
Fan Calendar — Children Design.

Turn-Over Calendars, silver chain, boxed, 25 cents each.

Pearls of Thoughts — Four leaves.
I Will Fear No Evil — Twelve leaves.
I Shall Be Satisfied — Twelve leaves.
A Life Song — Twelve leaves.

Three Gems, boxed, at 35 cents each.

Fan Calendar — Rich in color, six leaves.
Sweet Childhood — Beautiful in design, three drop leaves.
Sweet Fairy — Butterfly shape, 12 x 9 inches.

At 50 cents each, boxed.

The Peace of God — Four drop leaves, exquisite in design.
Love's Calendar
Faith, Hope and Charity — A gem, twelve drop leaves.
Sweet Violets — Six turn-over leaves, embossed in gold.

These prices are net; no discounts allowed.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
The Temple, Chicago.

DR. WORST'S NEW SCIENTIFIC CATARRH INHALER.

With Medicine
For one year mailed
FREE!
To all Readers of the UNION SIGNAL.

Cures Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever, Colds, Pains and Roaring in the Head, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Headache, Partial Deafness and all diseases of the Air Passages by inhalation.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For a short time I will mail to any reader, naming this paper, one of my new Scientific Catarrh Inhalers with medicine for one year, on three days' trial free.

If it gives satisfaction, send me $1.00, if not, return it. Address,

Dr. E. J. Worst, Dept. 5, Ashland, O.

Burlington Route

BEST LINE TO ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS

CANCER

The following and many other reliable persons testify that I thoroughly cure Cancer without the knife. Hon. E. W. Jackson, President Board of Education, Lima, Ohio, was cured seven years ago of lip Cancer. Prof. H. McDiarmid, Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio, cured seven years ago of face Cancer. Had undergone several operations before with knife. Address, Dr. C. Weber, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, for further particulars and free book.

740 Silk Fringe Cards, Love, Transparent, Escort & Acquaintance Cards, LAUGHING CAMERA, Prize Puzzles, New Games, Magical Illusions &c. Finest Sample Book of CARDS Biggest list of Premiums Visiting and Hidden Name All for 2c. stamp. OHIO CARD CO., Cadiz, Ohio.

POLICEMAN (to a number of young men on footpath): "Come, now, move along, there! If all the people in Aberdeen were to stand on the pavement, how would the rest get past?"

White Ribbon Special Trains to St. Paul, Nov. 10, 1898.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

On Thursday, November 10, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. will run two White Ribbon trains Chicago to St. Paul for Delegates and others attending the annual meeting of National Meeting of the W. C. T. U.

The Daylight special will leave Union Passenger Station, Chicago, at 8:30 A. M., arriving at St. Paul evening of same day, passing through Milwaukee, the summer resort towns of Wisconsin, and along the Mississippi River from La Crosse to St. Paul. The whole route is one of most delightfully varying scenic beauty.

The evening train leaving at 6:30 P. M. will arrive in St. Paul at 7:50 A. M. Friday. It will be electric lighted throughout, with Dining Car, Sleepers, Day Coaches and Free Chair Car.

An additional train with like equipment will leave at 10:15 P. M., arriving in St. Paul at 11:30 A. M. Friday. For return trip, four trains daily St. Paul to Chicago.

The Route of the Pioneer Limited—the only perfect train in the world.

The route of the United States Government Fast Mail.

Reduced rates and further information may be had on application or by addressing C. N. SOUTHER, Ticket Agent, 95 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NORTH-WESTERN LIMITED

Electric Lighted

Is the finest train between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, the Superiors and Duluth. It leaves Chicago 6:3 P. M. daily, reaches St. Paul 7:50 and Minneapolis 8:3 next morning. It is new ly equipped with Library Ca, Private Compartment Sleeping Car, Palace nSleping Car, Free Reclining Chair Car, Dining Car aed Coaches. Returning it leaves Minneapolis 7:30 P. M. and St. Paul 8:10 P. M. and arrives Chicago 9:30 A. M. Other trains for St. Paul and Minneapolis leave Chicago at 8:30 A. M. daily except Sunday and 10:15 P. M. daily.

Tickets will be sold on the certificate plan of one and one-third fares for the round trip.

All agents sell tickets via THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY. For rates and full information apply to nearest ticket agent or to

H. A. Gross, 461 Broadway, New York.
J. E. Brittain, 368 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
T. P. Vaille, 601 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
C. Traver, 507 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.
E. B. Spain, 210 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.
W. A. Cox, 435 Vine St., Cincinnati, Ohio.
D. W. Aldridge, 127 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio.
W. H. Guerin, 67 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.
A. H. Waggener, 7 Jackson Place, Indianapolis, Ind.
Or W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 43. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, November 10, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS . . . 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Temperance—About Women—Educational—At Home—Abroad . . . 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, In Memory. By Abbie A. Wyman . . . 3
Poem, A Life for Others. By Ethlyn Pratt Cooke . . . 3
A Lost Star. By E. Craft Cobern . . . 3
Municipal Ownership . . . 4
Willard Hall Echoes . . . 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
"Am I My Brother's Keeper?" . . . 5
The South Dakota Equal Suffrage Amendment . . . 5
Anti-Vivisection Sentiment From New England . . . 6
LOCAL UNION . . . 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS . . . 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, Fate of a Lie . . . 7
From Uncle Joseph's Memory Book . . . 7
A Great Day . . . 7
Our Cozy Corner . . . 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Completed "Sphere" . . . 8
The Report of the Ohio State Liquor League Legislative Committee . . . 8
Sounding Brass . . . 9
Our Nation's Shame . . . 9
Cigarets . . . 9
Personals . . . 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Farewell to Miss Clara Parrish—Y's at Work—Y Almanac for 1899—World's Wave Crests . . . 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Iowa—Massachusetts—District of Columbia—Tennessee—Rhode Island—Delaware . . . 10-12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES . . . 13
NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL . . . 13
Call for a National Christian Citizenship Convention at Washington, D. C., December 13-15, 1898 . . . 13
NATIONAL CONVENTION CORNER . . . 14
OUR LIBRARY TABLE . . . 14
PUBLISHER'S NOTES . . . 15
SIGNAL NOTES . . . 16

NATIONAL CONVENTION.
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA, NOVEMBER 11-16.

RED-LETTER DAY.
PEACE DAY.—The third Sunday in December.

Notes and Comments.

CHICAGO has had the privilege of seeing and hearing the Rev. Thomas Champness, of England, widely known as founder of the Joyful News Mission, whose special work is the training of men as evangelists. Mr. Champness has spoken twice a day during the past week in Mr. Moody's church.

THE clans are gathering in St. Paul as we write. Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon went on Friday, others from Headquarters left on Monday, still others on Wednesday, and the last contingent leaves Thursday night. The regular Convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL will be the issue of December 1.

A PURITY conference precedes the National Convention on the 9th and 10th. The executive committee also meets on the same two days before the Convention, and on the 10th there are meetings of the board of superintendents and board of organizers. The places of these various meetings have been given in the Convention Corner.

PROFESSOR HERRON'S lectures each Monday noon in Willard Hall are drawing audiences which fill that room to its utmost capacity. The self-sacrificing spirit of the true reformer is manifest in all the speaker says, as from a heart full of a Christlike yearning to lift the burdens of the world he preaches the gospel of mutualism, as opposed to—or rather to be evolved from—the self-destructive system of individualism. The earnest, attentive faces of his hearers and their frequent expressions of applause, show that the "new social conscience" is awakening, the new order of things finding lodgment in the minds and hearts of the people. The subject of Professor Herron's fourth lecture is, "The Christ of the Future."

SPEAKING in commendatory terms of the South Carolina dispensary law, a writer in the Congregationalist mentions "only one incident of its operation as giving ground for serious objection," and that is the omnipresence of the empty bottle. A man buys liquor at the state saloon, and, as per statute, goes somewhere else to drink it—perhaps on the street, or down some alley, perhaps into some field or park—then throws the bottle away. Sometimes it gets broken, and the bits of glass are a source of considerable annoyance to cyclists and to barefoot boys. But the unbroken bottles are innumerable. In the gutter, over the fence, in the streets, behind the buildings, in the parks, under the bushes, in the woods and in the streams—wherever the eye rests there lies the ubiquitous dispensary bottle. Viewing a South Carolina landscape o'er, the writer referred to is moved to parody the famous lines of the Ancient Mariner, thus: "Bottles, bottles everywhere, and not a drop to drink." A more apropos rendering (though poorer metre) would be, "Bottles, bottles everywhere, and every drop has been drunk," and as a result many a drinker has been drunk, too. The fact that over at the government dramshop there is plenty more drink waiting to be drunk and to make drunk, is to our mind the one serious objection to the South Carolina dispensary law.

THE most potent argument men calling themselves good citizens have for the advocacy of the saloon, is the revenue argument. Take the Raines law for instance. Its supporters compute the result somewhat as follows: "The revenue from the Raines law in 1898 was $11,638,189. Under the old law it was $2,917,124. The difference—$8,721,065—would come out of the taxpayers if it did not come out of the saloons. As there are 1,159,158 voters in the state, probably less than half of them, or about 580,000, are taxpayers. Thus the enforcement of the Raines law is equivalent to a saving of $13.32 per capita of taxes to the taxpayers of the state." These figures, it will be observed, take into account voting taxpayers only. Women have no place in the calculations of the New York politician. We do not know how many women taxpayers there are in that state, but any schoolboy studying primary arithmetic can see that were they counted it would considerably reduce the per capita annual sum saved. And, granting that revenue is "the principal thing," what taxpayer of New York can honestly deny that the liquor traffic of that state costs him, or her, directly or indirectly, more than, say ten dollars a year? Even if it did not cost him one cent in money what good and patriotic citizen would not gladly pay ten dollars a year additional taxes in order to be rid of the entire wretched poverty and crime-breeding business?

THE Convention program is most attractive. The first evening will be given up, as usual, to addresses of welcome and responses. Gov. D. B. Clough, ex-Governor Ramsay, Archbishop Ireland, Rev. S. G. Smith, D. D., Mrs. Bessie Laythe Scovell and Mrs. Stella B. Irvine will make the addresses of welcome; Miss Mary L. Page, president of the W. C. T. U. of West Washington, Mrs. Frances W. Leiter, Mrs. Mary E. Cartland, president of North Carolina, and Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, the responses. Saturday night will be the property of the Y's. The vested choir from St. Paul's Epsicopal church will have charge of the music for that evening. Mrs. Boole will speak and there will be "snapshots" from the four Y organizers. Miss Blood, of the Columbia School of Oratory, will give an address, and there will be two recitations, one by Miss Dixie Smith, of St. Paul, who won the diamond medal at the Minnesota state convention, and the other by Miss Cora Seberry, secretary of the Y Branch, of New York state. On Sunday the annual sermon will be preached by Miss Greenwood. Monday night will be State Benefit Night and the program will be in every way worthy of the six winning states. Tuesday night will be filled with addresses on the two cardinal principles of our work, total abstinence and prohibition. Miss Belle Kearney, Mrs. Leonora M. Lake and Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman will be the speakers. Wednesday night, the first hour will be occupied by the children, for whom a beautiful program has been prepared by Miss Gordon and Mrs. Rice. The rest of the evening will be devoted to a roll-call and consecration service. The members of the Convention will respond to this roll-call with quotations from Miss Willard's writings; state songs and hymns will be sung and the evening will close with a prayer and hymn of consecration. Saturday afternoon will be filled with introductions of fraternal and visiting delegates and guests. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, will make an address on the "Gospel of Health;" Consul Booth-Tucker will also give a brief address at that time. All things point to a most interesting and profitable Convention.

Current Events.

Temperance.

EIGHT saloonkeepers at Lisbon, O., were fined in all $600, including costs, on pleading guilty to violating liquor laws.

THE police commissioners of Kansas City, Mo., are a unit on the ruling that no saloons can be established near the public library.

OFFICIAL figures on the recent vote taken throughout Canada, on the question of prohibition have been given out by the state department. The majority in favor of prohibition is 13,884.

TEMPERANCE agitation in Kentucky moves on. The grand jury at Henderson has indicted fifteen saloonkeepers for selling illegally; Lafayette, Rockport and Lewisport have voted "dry," and on December 10 local option will be voted on at Somerset.

IN Norfolk, Va., Judge Hanckel, in the corporation court, affirmed the decision of Police Justice Tomlin, in establishing the right of the city to fine saloonkeepers for keeping slot machines in their places. Saloonkeeper Anderson was fined twenty dollars, and noted an appeal.

BY a unanimous vote the judiciary committee has recommended to the Chicago city council for passage Alderman Francis' ordinance prohibiting saloons from being established in strictly residence districts, except a majority of the residents of the block give consent. The measure also prohibits the establishing of a saloon within 250 feet of all churches and schools.

REPLYING to a question put to him by a member of the war investigation commission, Gen. H. V. Boynton said: "No, not every regiment at Chickamauga had a sutler's store, but nearly all had what is a thousand times worse—a regimental canteen." And then he added that the thousands of carloads of beer sold the volunteers did more to undermine their health than any and all other causes combined.

AS showing how one member of a trade can injure all others, we instance the action of the town council of Farmington, Van Buren county, Ia., in closing all the saloons because one man was killed in a row in one of the saloons in July last. The council says that the killing of the man will cost the county more than all the tax would amount to for a year, to say nothing about the injury to the county from having a reputation for lawlessness and insecurity of life and property.—Mida's Criterion (liquor organ).

THE Assistant Attorney General of the United States has rendered an opinion in which he holds that it is the duty of the various boards of education to enforce the law passed by Congress May 20, 1896, that makes the study of alcoholism, with reference to its effects upon the human system a compulsory branch of study not only in the public schools of the territories, but in the various Indian schools wherever located, and in the naval and military schools of the United States. Teachers also must pass a satisfactory examination on this special subject if they have not already done so.

AT its recent meeting in Duluth the Presbyterian Synod of Minnesota adopted, among others, the following resolution:

> We uphold the fact that the Presbyterian church has long been teaching that temperance is total abstinence from the use of all intoxicants as a beverage, and that the liquor traffic, licensed or unlicensed, is a curse to be combatted by every Christian citizen.
>
> We call the attention of our people to the fact that teachings contained in such pamphlets as the one which has recently been issued from the press, written by one of our Presbyterian ministers, and which is entitled, "The Truth on the Temperance Question," are contrary to the deliverances of our General Assembly, and are in violation of the teachings of Scripture, and that we deplore the distribution of such literature because of its false and pernicious doctrines.

A DECISION has been handed down by the appellate court at Leavenworth, Kan., affirming the judgment of the district court that a liquor debt cannot be collected by a process of law in Kansas. Jacob Weismann, keeper of a "joint," bought several barrels of whisky and refused to pay for them, claiming that the whisky was sold to him in violation of the Kansas prohibitory law. The wholesale house contended that a collection could be made, for the reason that the company is not chartered in Kansas. The court held to the contrary, and said that it was illegal to sell whisky in Kansas except for medical and scientific purposes, and, furthermore, that the debtor had no standing in the state.

About Women.

SISTER MARY ELIZABETH FLANNAGAN, of Baltimore, a nurse in the division hospital at Camp Poland, Knoxville, Tenn., died of typhoid fever on November 1.

MRS. ANNE MARIE LEE, mother of General Fitzhugh Lee, died November 3, at the home of her son, Capt. Daniel M. Lee, at Richmond, Va. She was eighty-eight years old.

DR. AGNES KEMP, of Harrisburg, Pa., has been commissioned by the Countess di Brazza, chairman of the committee on peace and arbitration, National Council of Women, to solicit and collect funds for the prosecution of their work.

THE W. F. M. S. has a scholarship in Albion college for missionary candidates. Miss KcKinley, the present beneficiary, it was reported to the committee in charge, was sharing it with Miss Mamie Rowley, and by economy and industry they will be able to graduate together next commencement.

Educational.

THE abolition of the evening schools at Providence, R. I., and the discharge of the supervisors of penmanship, drawing, cooking, sewing and physical culture reduces the school expenses by $82,000. This was made necessary by the refusal of the city council to provide the sum called for by the school board.

THE school board of Manhattan and the Bronx, N. Y., has re-enacted the bylaw placing a ban on women teachers who marry which had been omitted when the board drew up a new constitution and bylaws last summer. The restored bylaw reads as follows: "Should a female teacher marry, her place shall thereupon become vacant. No married women shall be appointed teachers or principals without the consent of a majority of the board of education."

CHARLES A. SCHOTT, of Washington, chief of the computation division of the coast and geodetic survey, has been awarded the Wilde prize by the Academy of France. The Wilde prize is a coveted honor, open to the world, to be conferred on the one judged the most worthy from among those who make discoveries or write works on astronomy, chemistry, geology, physics or mechanics. The award to Mr. Schott is based on a work on terrestrial magnetism. The committee which made the award consisted of some of the best known scientists in France, including MM. Savvan, Bertrand, Levy and Berthelot.

PRESIDENT HARPER has announced that before January 1, 1900, the University of Chicago authorities, in all probability, will have secured sufficient additional gifts to meet the conditions named by John D. Rockefeller in his last offer of $2,000,000 to that institution, that he will give that sum provided an equal sum shall have been raised from other sources before the end of next year. In this connection Dr. Harper said that when the $2,000,000 shall have been secured it will be used to establish and develop technical schools, such as law, medicine and applied sciences. Of the $2,000,000 to be raised to claim the offer of Mr. Rockefeller nearly $1,500,000 has already been secured.

At Home.

THE city council of St. Louis, Mo., has passed a curfew law, the hours being fixed at eight o'clock in winter and nine in summer for children under fifteen years.

A BITTER race war is in progress in North Carolina. What was until lately a political contest between Democrats and Republicans and Populists has developed into a fight between whites and blacks for the control of the city of Wilmington and Hanover county. The situation is serious.

IT has been decided to give an exposition in St. Louis in 1903, in commemoration of the centennial of the Louisiana purchase. This action was taken mainly on the advice of Director General Davis, of the Chicago Columbian Exposition, who explained that the Chicago enterprise had done more for the west than any single affair in the history of this country.

THE latest news from Paris at this writing is to the effect that the Spanish commissioners flatly refuse to cede the Philippine Islands to the United States for a money consideration, claiming that the conquest of Manila was accomplished after the signing of the protocol, and was therefore illegal. Negotiations have not been broken off, however, a fact that denotes Spain's desire to make terms of some kind.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made by the navy department for the establishment of a naval station at Honolulu, and plans for erecting wharfs, hoists and sheds for coal are in preparation. The necessary authority to use land in Honolulu for the purpose has been obtained by the President, who sent to the department for promulgation a proclamation setting aside certain public property for the use of the navy.

COL. GEORGE E. WARING, JR., died of yellow fever in New York city, October 29. He had gone to Havana by appointment of President McKinley to work out a solution of the yellow fever problem in Cuba and Porto Rico, and had returned with a large collection of notes which contained ideas which may save the lives of thousands of American soldiers. He was taken ill after his return to New York and before he had had time to make his report at Washington. His body was immediately cremated. Colonel Waring came into prominence as commissioner of street-cleaning in New York city under the administration of Mayor Strong.

SEVENTEEN Cubans from the Spanish military prison of Ceuta, in Africa, arrived in New York on November 3, from Gibraltar. They had been sentenced to terms from thirty years to life imprisonment for taking part in the Cuban insurrection. They were released by the Spanish just after the signing of the protocol, and their expenses to this country were paid by the United States. All but one of them will be sent to Cuba. He is Fernandez Sierra, an American citizen, who will remain in New York with his mother. He had been sentenced to thirty years for filibustering. More than 300 other Cuban political prisoners at Ceuta will be released and returned to Cuba.

Abroad.

AN order issued by Captain-General Blanco allows all Spanish soldiers now in Cuba, who desire to do so, to receive their honorable discharge and back pay, and remain in Cuba. About 15,000 soldiers are reported to be accepting the opportunity.

THE French court of cassation has decided in favor of a revision of the Dreyfus case. The question was taken up by the court October 27, and the decision was reached October 29. The release of Dreyfus was not ordered. The revision will be not in military, but in judicial hands, and will not be open to the public.

A NEW republic is the "United States of Central America," dating from November 1. Provision is made for the admission of Guatemala and Costo Rico if they elect to enter the new union. A federal form of government is adopted, the constitution providing for a president, elected for four years by the direct vote of the people, with a provision against immediate re-election.

DIRECT evidence connecting General Weyler of Cuban fame and memory with the wholesale looting of the Philippine treasury, has been unearthed in Bilibid prison. The books of the treasury show that Maximiano Rosales and Julian Reyes were sent to prison as scapegoats for the vice regal thieves, but they have been liberated. Investigation discloses the fact that Weyler and his associates looted the treasury of about $1,300,000 in Mexican silver. No attempt had been made to cover up the robbery. The entire deficit was explained by the arrest of Rosales and his companions and their conviction on the charge of theft.

Contributed.

In Memory.

BY ABBIE A. WYMAN.

A HUSH has fallen upon the host white-ribboned;
Out from the realms above, a messenger,
Swift and beautiful descended
And bore from earthly dwelling place
A spirit true and valiant.
Our leader rests. The shadows are about us.
A few brief days we pause to scatter
Flowers, and place the emblems white
About that form so fair.
We tell the story of her life,
And sing the songs she loved.
We thank our Father for her years on earth,
And cry to Him for present needs,
Then, with eyes made clearer by our tears,
With hearts drawn closer by this tie of common sorrow,
And purpose strengthened by the thought of her whose voice or pen
Around the world was known in truth's defense,
We take our work again, nor lay it down
Until God's plan is wrought,
Or summon sounds to higher service.
So best we can do honor to her memory
And build her monument.

Cambridgeport, Vt.

A Life for Others.

BY ETHLYN PRATT COOKE.

MY life was a vessel the Master found,
Full of sin and self to the brim;
But He cleansed and shaped it to His will,
For I gave the vessel to Him.

He filled my chalice of life to the brim,
With love and hope and peace divine;
And held in the hand of the mighty God,
It is His—this life of mine.

Yet He never meant I alone should quaff
Its sweetness day by day,
But, pressing the cup to other lips,
I must give my life away.

Many there be who shall need the love
That sweetens my life's bright day-
I must pour it out as Jesus did
To all who come my way.

Hopeless, sad and weary ones
Are round about alway,
His hand will pour a blessing out
As I give my life away.

Oh, fill my chalice with Thyself,
Thou life of Christ, I pray!
Or else I fail, for Thou must be
The life I give away.

Baltimore, Md.

A Lost Star.

BY E. CRAFT COBERN.

EVANGEL stood flushed with triumph behind the stage curtains, bending slightly forward, her opera cloak, hastily caught up to protect her throat, forgotten in her hand. Every nerve was an ear, eager to lose no vibration of the applause that thrilled her soul and body sharply, almost like pain.

It had been three years since she had bade farewell to this same audience previous to sailing for a course of study abroad, and this was the tribute to the self-denying effort to perfect her superb voice. It was a delicious moment—a prophecy of the future, when the great of all lands would yield to the magic of her voice, and she might even be the guest of royalty. She remembered the parting words of her Parisian teacher: "Ah, Mees, zar ees non ambeesion too deesy for you. Make art seestar, lofer, and you sall be eemortal as Jenny Lind."

It was only a few moments that she stood alone. Friends pressed about to offer proud congratulations, then above the hum of many voices, the slamming of closing opera chairs, the rustle and distraction of preparations for leaving the concert room, she heard from some one on the stage before the curtain a request that the audience be reseated. In surprise Evangel glanced at the friends nearest for explanation, but her silent question met only happy, mysterious looks in reply.

"Come with me," a girlhood friend said, taking her hand and moving forward toward the curtain. Suddenly the bell rang and the curtain began to rise, while there was an animated movement among the friends behind her to the right and left, leaving the two young women standing alone. Evangel looked upon the crowd of expectant faces before her and then at the half-frightened, smiling face of the girl beside her, and whispered, "What does this mean, Frances?"

"Wait," was the only response, as the young woman lifted the cover from a box in her hand, took from it a wreath of roses, and placed it upon Evangel's head, saying clearly at the same time, "We crown our Queen of Song."

Then the air was rent with cheers, as Evangel, touched beyond the power of speaking, stood with girlish uncertainty as to what she ought to do written in her very attitude. But she did not need to do anything, for the curtain fell again, to her intense relief. Once more the friends pressed closely about her, joined by others from the audience.

"Our little girl will yet be heard of around the globe," a white-haired gentleman said, taking her hand.

"Yes, she has entrancing expression and marvelous execution; she can be the lone star in the opera, if she chooses that field," rejoined her friend, Frances.

"I hope Miss Evangel may try that field, for at present our greatest singers are only quasi-great. That arpeggio in your last aria was marvelously done," the musical critic of the city remarked, heartily.

"May I introduce Signor Palio?"

Evangel turned toward her aunt. The excitable little tenor could not wait for formalities, but bowing profoundly, exclaimed in broken English his rapture at hearing a voice once more that was equal any score of the greatest oratorio. For an hour, Evangel, excited, ecstatic, listened to such words of praise, being introduced to friends of her friends, bowing, smiling, chatting, until the numbers about her gradually decreased.

The Rev. Mr. Marsdon had been standing aloof from the crowd, watching Evangel intently, but now the young assistant pastor of the church to which she belonged came forward to speak with her.

"I am not a lifelong friend like many here—shall I say Evangel as of old?"

"Please do, Mr. Marsdon."

"But I wish to voice my congratulations also. I know that you can rise to any place in the art of music which you may seek, but do not let fame be the only prize which you follow, lest it come between you and the uplifting of this poor, old world. Is your voice consecrated, Miss Evangel?"

Evangel felt instantly a bit of resentment toward the young minister, who for a year before her departure for Europe had been a valued companion in good works. She felt as if he would chide her in the joy of success, and his words rasped her nervously sensitive mind. She glanced into his face, about to reply lightly, but its earnestness and the remembrance of his own sacrifice of ambition and hope of wealth to become a poor under pastor of a great church made her pause. The hand of renunciation had stroked his brow, sweeping away the lines of self love, leaving only nobility and truest manhood.

"Mr. Marsdon, I have given some of my time and some of my money to humanity and to Christ, but I fear I have never thought of my voice as being of value except in the concert room. However, I am to try singing a solo in church next Sabbath, at the afternoon song service. Can you not come?"

"I thank you, Miss Evangel, but I have a funeral down by the wharf at that time. It is a sad case. The child was the mother's only daughter and her last living relative. The girl was an invalid for several months, and the poor mother worked early and late to give her what comfort she could, beside being kept awake whole nights to care for the child. Sometimes," —he hesitated as if considering the sentence he was about to speak, "sometimes I think I become hard toward my race, but such a heroism as this woman has shown leads me back to faith."

"The distress of the Old World used to pain me so intensely, but in this country it does not obtrude itself. I nearly forget that there is such a thing as sorrow here."

After a few more words Mr. Marsdon bade Evangel good-night, and her tired aunt hurried her away to the carriage in waiting, lest some other enthusiastic friend detain them longer.

Triumph and excitement had driven sleep from Evangel's eyes. She tossed wearily trying to find the repose she so much needed. But the throng still swarmed before her. She lived over and over again the excitement of her singing. The words of praise spoken to her repeated themselves like an irrepressible refrain till she became irritated and arose. She threw a steamer rug about her and sat down in a little white and gold rocking chair, breathing with a sense of relief as the cool fingers of the night soothed her throbbing temples.

It was too late for moonlight, but the stars, which always watch, were so serene they subdued and calmed her. She thought of the young minister's question. What would it mean? What would it require? Did it mean to give up her career? Ah, no! the voice was a gift to use —but used unselfishly—that is it.

She slipped from her seat upon her knees to think more earnestly, more devoutly, but suddenly a battle raged fiercely in her soul and she hid her face upon her arms. She saw it all. The world of wealth and luxury as it rode gaily to the opera house to spend a pleasant evening, gratified and enchanted by her voice and marvelous execution. She listened again to the encore calls and thrilled with exultation. She would have money for the poor, she would do good as Jenny Lind had done. Then her flaming imagination conjured another picture. A weary, bowed, careworn, poverty-stricken throng returning home from the noise and dirt of the shops, to the noise and dirt of the tenement blocks. They ate a scanty supper, then returned to their work yet again, or lounged about the low streets, the men seeking the saloons, the women gossiping or going to the saloons, too.

They loved music and music is uplifting. Poor hungry and thirsty lives, no wonder their faces harden and age early; the soul-expanding, tender influences are entirely lacking. A sweet ballad with uplifting words might purify a whole city, as the Marseillaise of France could inspire a whole army. Money had no need to influence her life, for she had excess of money.

"A song missionary." Evangel started as if a voice had spoken to her. She raised her head as if to shut out the vision her soul was seeing, but she could not and she dropped her face upon her arms again. Finally arising she threw herself upon the bed and slept feverishly.

It was late when Evangel breakfasted the following morning, and too exhausted to vocalize or read or embroider, she sat by the fireplace in the music room lounging on a divan, looking very pretty among the red and gold pillows. She was in a most comfortable state of dreamy semi-consciousness, when some one asked admission by a quiet tap on the door. Thinking it to be the maid on her morning rounds about the house, she gave a sleepy affirmative to the question without unclosing her eyes. The newcomer crossed the room and stood silently before the fire a moment.

"Pardon me, Miss Evangel, I should have known you would be too tired—"

"Oh, Mr. Marsdon, pardon me. I was nearly asleep and thought it was the housemaid," Evangel exclaimed, rising. "Oh, I am so glad to see you." She placed a chair near the divan and resumed her seat.

"I was walking near the house and could not—or at least, did not—resist the temptation to come in, but I fear you are not anxious for visitors this morning."

"Mr. Marsdon, you know you are always welcome, and this morning is no exception to the always. How have my mission boys done since I left them three years ago?"

"Some of them are doing well. Jim and Curley are clerking in a substantial shoe house, having worked up to good positions. George Curshmire is in the penitentiary and the other boys have become teamsters or day laborers in some manual line of work. They missed you for months and most of them left soon after you did, Miss Evangel."

"They missed me. I am so glad. Did I really fill a place in the mission? Did you miss me Mr. Marsdon?"

Evangel was busy wondering if she had ever been of even the most humble consequence to the world and did not notice Mr. Marsdon's silence, until he arose and walked the length of the room and returning stood before her.

"Why did you ask me that question, Evangel? It brings surging to my lips all that I had determined to keep unsaid. Miss you! These three years have taught me something of what loneliness could mean."

"I—I—I did not mean—I do not"—Evangel stopped, looking up at him frightened, shrinking, astonished.

Instantly Mr. Marsdon regained his usual poise.

"Pardon me, Miss Evangel, your life is predestined for you. Let me tell you a little fable. Years ago a prince loved a queen. He was good and noble, but she had almost a world in her possession. She was queenly in character as in wealth and honor. There was nothing the world could give but was hers. The prince loved in silence; it would have been too much for him to ask of her to share his comparative poverty, to leave her conquests and her kingdom to become merely his wife."

Mr. Marsdon held out his hand and took Evangel's cold, quivering hand in his. "Your path is among the stars. My stars must shine on the other shore—I shall not be apt to find them in the slums," he said smiling seriously. "When do you go back for your season in London, Miss Evangel?" he asked releasing the hand.

"I have not yet signed the contract, but it will be in about two months."

"I am glad you stay yet a little. You will permit me to call?"

"Oh, yes, as of old."

"I have a sick family to see this morning—"

"And you never asked me to go with you," pouted Evangel.

"Oh, would you go?" The young minister's face lighted radiantly.

"I will be ready presently. What shall I take, roses or bread?"

"Plenty of bread," was the reply.

. . . . . .

It was Sabbath afternoon, and in a little tenement house on Water street, among the wharfs, a little company was gathering. In the center of the room stood the open coffin, as bleak as the bare walls. A woman with a short, thin crêpe veil over her face sat near it—the sole mourner. As the friends came in they shuffled awkwardly toward the box holding the silent sleeper, and after conversing in low tones, if they happened to be in couples or groups, they retired to a seat.

The clatter of heavy boots on the bare floor, and the buzz of half-restrained conversation annoyed Mr. Marsdon, who was finding his text in the Bible, as he stood with his back to the door ready to speak. At the sound of his voice the noise ceased, and the little company composed itself to listen to the man whose very name brought it a feeling of comfort.

But soon there was a movement of surprise among them, their eyes were turned to the door, and their heads met in couples as they whispered and looked. Almost involuntarily Mr. Marsdon glanced over his shoulder to see the cause of the unusual interest. He paused in the midst of a sentence and gazed a moment, forgetful of everything else save the presence of Evangel who hesitated in the door, then without stopping to see the dead face she seated herself, while Mr. Marsdon groped desperately, but vainly, for the sentence he had begun. It was only an instant before he gained his composure, though his heart behaved cruelly all through the remainder of his sermon.

There was no music, no flowers—nothing to soften the dreariness, the misery of the lonely woman whose sobs were repressed with iron Scotch resolution, although usually the mourners in this grade of civilization scream and cry without restraint.

With the closing sentence of the tender attempt to comfort, the undertaker, with coarse, creaking boots, and coarse, half-muffled voice came brusquely forward to place the coffin lid. With a regal poise of her patrician head Evangel arose, threw back her cape and stepped to the coffin, murmuring, "Wait," to the undertaker, who stepped aside. She unfastened from her bosom a cluster of luxurious roses and laid them softly in the rested hands, then looking at Mr. Marsdon her eyes filled with a new light and she began Frances Havergal's noble hymn,

Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee,
Take my hands and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.

Take my feet and let them be
Swift and beautiful for Thee,
Take my voice and let me sing
Always, only, for my King.

She began bravely, but her lips trembled and the tears were near to falling, for it was the consecration hymn of her voice.

After singing the two verses Evangel turned and taking the suffering mother's hand in hers, began the sweet old Scotch hymn,

I am far frae me hame,
An I'm weary aftenwhiles.

Art, self, were forgotten. This was the beginning of her song mission work. Like the monk Augustine of old, who sang the gospel to the pagans of Great Britain, she would give her life to singing Christ and salvation to this people, that perchance He might be sung into their lives.

When the song was ended there was utter silence for a few heartbeats, then the Scotch woman lifted Evangel's hand almost reverently to her lips.

The funeral cortège passed from the room and down the dark stairs, the minister leading. It was sweet to breathe the free air again after the confinement in a small room with ill kept bodies and clothes.

It was just a moment Evangel had to speak to the pastor of this life-beaten flock, but she whispered with blushing cheeks and downcast eyes, "Mr. Marsdon, sometimes a queen is willing to abdicate her throne for love."

Denver, Col.

Municipal Ownership.

[Extracts from an address by the Hon. Samuel M. Jones, mayor of Toledo, given at the convention of the League of American Municipalities at Detroit, and later by request in Willard Hall.]

PUBLIC ownership is only another name for coöperation. All over this broad land of unparalleled richness, men—industrious, honest, earnest men—are compelled to tramp in enforced idleness, and vainly beg for a share in the wealth their hands have produced.

Begging for toil is not a new proposition, but it is one wholly at variance with any just conception of democracy or brotherhood. A man begging for leave to toil, which is, in other words, leave to live, can not be a good citizen. The greatest good that we are to find through municipal ownership, will be found in the improved quality of our citizenship.

. . . . . .

Through the work that has been done in this very city (Detroit), to control street railroad and electric lighting, thousands of dollars monthly of the people's money that were being heaped up as private wealth is now saved to the people. Selfishness has made, and will continue to make, every conceivable effort to keep the people from taking what belongs to them, but we are rapidly approaching a period where history, not less than theory, is coming to our aid.

When Glasgow, Leeds and Plymouth adopted public ownership of the street railways, they bettered the service, reduced fares, shortened hours of labor and raised the wages of men. Every city in this or any other country that municipalizes its work of improvement, substitutes day labor for contract, gets better work, pays better wages, and usually shortens the hours of labor, not only making money, but what is infinitely of more importance, making men.

. . . . . .

The growth of sentiment in favor of public ownership, as seen in this convention of representative men, indicates that the mind of the people is rapidly clarifying on this question. They are beginning to see that no good reason exists why all the people in the city shall say to a few of the people, the lighting company, the water works company, the street railway company, "Now, all of us will give you (a few of us) the right to get rich off from the rest of us." Large numbers of the people are beginning to see that the only wealth that is in any sense theirs is the commonwealth, and with instincts that are perfectly natural they are striving to regain possessions that have passed out of their hands, usually through the practice of deception and fraud.

. . . . . .

We have had a striking example of the lawlessness of capital in the experience of the government in attempting to tax corporations to raise revenue for the war. The government says, "We will tax the telegraph companies so much for each message sent." It would have been easy enough for the framers of the law, if they desired to tax the individuals direct, to say that each person sending a message should pay so much, but they had no such purpose. Their purpose was to tax the telegraph companies, as they plainly stated in as plain language as can be chosen. The government says, we will tax the telegraph companies, but, says the telegraph company, we will tax the people, and immediately an order is issued that every patron of that company shall contribute his mite to relieve the corporation of a share of the burden that the government sought to impose upon it. Identically the same thing is true of the express companies, and as these corporations have appealed to the courts to aid them in evading the law, the people can only stand and await the result.

. . . . . .

The League of American Municipalities has brought out the fact that hundreds of cities now operating their own public utilities in one form or another prove that the question of the wisdom of municipal ownership has passed out of the domain of the problems. The question that the people are now considering is how to get selfishness to release its grasp upon these valuable heritages of the people. I confess I know no better way than to appeal to the patriotism of every loyal citizen. Patriotism calls men to leave home and family or school or shop or farm to go at their country's call, heedless of the weary march and rusting idleness of the camp, the carnage and terrors of battle, and he who shuns his country's call is counted as ingrate, and his name is held in everlasting odium and contempt. And upon the patriots, who, from all over this land have so nobly responded to their country's call to go and fight for the relief of the Cuban reconcentrados, a grateful people is now lavishing its wealth of love and affection.

Why does not patriotism call for service in the time of peace as well as war? Why should the soldier go out to face pestilence, danger and death in order that the good of all may be conserved, while the financier is honored and counted great for remaining at home amidst the luxurious appointments of a comfortable office, seeking to conserve only his own good? Why, if we truly love our country, should not our hearts be moved to pity as we contemplate our own great army of disinherited, of disheartened, discouraged, hopeless ones, beaten in the race of life? Why should our enthusiasm not be aroused for them? And why should not the patriotism of the financiers who have shown conspicuous and marked ability in providing for themselves so inspire them to come forward in the hour of the city's peril and offer their services for the good of all of the people in the ministry of social need in building a public lighting plant, managing a street railway or financiering any work of improvement for the benefit of all the people?

I believe the time is coming, and may God hasten the day, when we shall come to see, as did Frances Willard, the great apostle of temperance, before her death, that poverty is the cause of drunkenness, no less than drunkenness is the cause of poverty, and that, if we pursue our investigations in a logical, careful manner, we will find that the poor man is the corollary of the millionaire and that of a necessity from which there is no possible escape if we are to have millionaires on the one hand, we must have poor men on the other.

. . . . . .

I deny any man the right to say that I am making a warfare upon wealth. I am pleading for more wealth. I am pleading that more of our people now doomed to hopeless poverty may share in the wealth that their hands have produced. I plead that the captains of industry, the men who are honored for their ability as bankers and financiers, as street railway magnates, as managers and owners of great railroad corporations, express and telegraph companies; I plead with these as fellow citizens of a republic of equals; I plead with them from the standpoint of one who loves his fellowmen with a passion that will never die. And I say to you, my brothers, who hold in your hands the wealth of the world, where is your patriotism? Do you love your country? If you do, then you love your fellowmen, and there never was an hour of greater need that you should manifest your love for your fellowmen than the present hour; that you should cease your hoarding of dollars and turn your attention to your idle brothers, and devote your ability, not to massing more wealth for yourselves, but to saving the people, of whom you are one, from the fearful social distress and agony of this hour. I am not asking for charity. We have too much of that. Charity seeks to continue the present order, seeks to palliate the trouble for to-day, but I am pleading for a social order of fair play, a social order of doing as you would be done by. And I deny any man or woman the right to any claim to a love of country unless that man or woman is as ready to serve the country in times of peace as the most devoted soldier in time of war.

. . . . . .

I must not be misunderstood upon this point. That man or woman, rich or poor, high or low, black or white, does not live for whom I have in my heart any other feeling than that of brotherly love. I am resting upon a rock bottom conclusion—that we are all made of one common piece of clay; that we have one father, even God, and all we are brothers; that if our problems are ever to be solved, they must be solved together.

The trouble is not so much with the individuals that compose our social structure as with the form of the structure itself. The bricks in a building may all be good bricks and yet the building be so constructed and faulty in its architecture, that instead of ministering to the needs of the human family, its very existence may be a menace to life itself. And the imperative demand of this hour upon us, as representatives of the municipalities in America, is, that we shall set ourselves to the task of so changing our system that through the medium of public ownership the wealth of the people may again come into the hands of those who have produced it, and the realization of the dreams of our forefathers shall be fulfilled, and we shall have the perfected republic in which every man shall be secure in the possession of the fruit of the labor of his hands.

Willard Hall Echoes.

THE Chicago Central Woman's Christian Temperance Union opened the doors of Willard Hall for the prayer service which the National evangelist, Miss Greenwood, had called for October 26, on behalf of the National Convention to be held in St. Paul. A common sorrow, a united purpose, a steady faith in God brought a representative audience from the surrounding unions.

. . . . . .

The first hour was under the leadership of Mrs. Matilda B. Carse. Subject, "Prayer for wisdom and direction to guide the affairs of the Temple at this crucial time." A tender, thoughtful pleading prayer for wisdom followed the Scripture lesson, after which Miss Eva Shontz, in her winning, enthusiastic way, talked of what the young people in Chicago hoped to do. Prayer and testimony followed.

. . . . . .

At twelve o'clock petitions for prayer were presented. For a young man tempted because it is election time; for a young man walking in the wrong way; for a sick friend; for a straying husband; for two brothers; for a son.

Mrs. Isabel Wing Lake had for her subject, "Prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the W. C. T. U., and a revival of the Crusade spirit among the workers." The Scripture, "Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in the depth, or in the height above," came with unusual clearness and power from her handling of that subject. Hearts were aroused and fired with enthusiasm.

It was most tender when reformed men testified to the great help of the open door of Willard Hall at the noon hour. They cannot go from night to night at the mission meetings without help, and Willard Hall and the Christlike sympathy extended to them helps to keep them strong. As one man said: "For God's sake, keep this place open. Fear not; trust in God, we cannot do without this meeting."

. . . . . .

The last hour was led by Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. Subject, "Prayer for the National Convention." Dear Anna Gordon read from Miss Willard's own Bible the words of Isaiah: "In returning and rest shall ye be saved: in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Also Isaiah 40: 31, and the Crusade Psalm of which Miss Willard said, "It commences and ends with its song of praise, and also has its plan of work." Prayer and testimony followed.

A reformed man said, "I want you to carry this word of cheer to the National Convention from the drunkards who come here. I have known the forms and faces of countless scores of men who come weary, discouraged, disheartened, cast down; they have gone out strong and rested and strengthened. They did not have strength to wait for the mission at night and came and received the power of the Holy Spirit. I want to mention the consecrated leaders you have had here, as true representatives of the Man of Sorrows; they have been upholding and uplifting Jesus. We would like to send a wreath of immortelles as a tribute to your peerless leader, Frances E. Willard, and also to the leaders who have helped me and others. An immortal soul is worth more than the wealth of all the world, and these doors have opened heaven to these souls."

. . . . . .

Prayer has been marvelously answered the past week. A woman, her husband, son and daughter and little girl reunited. A lost boy found and restored. A man who, first of September, when he signed the pledge, could not give his address because his family was gone, came to tell that he has been kept by God's power and they are united, and his wife is full of thanksgiving.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

"Am I My Brother's Keeper?"

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I was stopping in a country town, for a few days, last summer, and had just retired for the night when through my open window I heard this cry, "I shall shed blood, I shall shed blood; boys, don't take me home, this will kill my poor mother, oh, this will kill my poor mother." I rose and went to the window, and on looking out saw several men trying to persuade a young fellow to get into an open buggy, while he was fighting with all his powers against it. He was hatless and coatless, and crying like a child, but even in his wild frenzy his one thought seemed to be of his mother, for after they had succeeded in getting him seated between two others, the last words that I heard as they drove rapidly past was, "This will kill my poor mother, boys, don't take me home."

I do not think they succeeded in getting him home, for they drove back directly, closely followed by the poor fellow, who had evidently gotten away from them in some way. As he again entered the saloon, some bystander made the remark, "and the cat came back." It was a good joke and brought forth hearty applause from the men (?). What did they care for his mother? what cared they for his soul? doubtless it never occurred to them that the fellow had a soul; he was sport for them, that was all. But he was "too far over" to suit the saloon man and must be disposed of some way, so again they tried to get him home, but he cried so loudly, and fought so desperately and always the same wild cry, "Boys, don't take me home; I don't want to be arrested, but for God's sake don't take me home, it will kill my poor mother."

At last they decided upon another course. I heard one say, "Let's take him to the Railroad House and put him to bed." This hotel being in the opposite direction from his home he went quietly and I heard no more of him. Of course, being a stranger in the place, I knew nothing of him nor his history, so in the morning I asked my hostess who he was. She told me his name, and then said: "He was converted last winter in revival meetings and did well for a time but has gone to drinking again." And why? Why are so many going back and taking the broad road to destruction? I asked myself. Are we to blame? We, as Christian people, are we our brother's keeper? In times of revival, perhaps, we invite a young man to go forward for prayers; he is ready to give his heart to God and makes the start. While the revival lasts and he is found in the church, we speak to him, and perhaps we shake hands with him sometimes, and all goes well for a season.

Then the revival closes, and how is it? "Are we our brother's keeper then?" Perhaps he is not a popular young man; maybe he is poor and dresses shabbily; by and by he gets tired of coming to church where only the minister and one or two of the leading church people speak to him. We meet him on the street and simply pass him by; we do not see him. But here comes another young fellow. He is not a Christian; he even takes a drink now and then; but he is dressed well and carries himself proudly, and we speak to him. Why the difference? Is not this poor, struggling lamb of the fold worth as much in God's sight? Look at the temptations he has to resist. Saloons on every side, with open doors; the smell of liquor in the very air he breathes, and the dreadful thirst growing stronger every day; the jolly saloon-keeper, with his pleasant smile and kindly greeting, the hearty handshake and "How is your health? glad to see you, come in and get warm." Perhaps he is out of work and discouraged; all these and more against him. Perhaps at the very moment you passed him by he was undecided what to do, and had you shown your sympathy for him, given him a kind word or look of recognition, it might have decided him for the right.

Would it not be well for us, white-ribbon sisters, to first see that we wear our own white ribbon, and then ask some weak brother to wear one as a reminder of our faith in him, that whenever he is tempted to drink, the little badge might call to remembrance our words to him and his promise to "touch not, taste not, handle not"?

When men hear such cries and witness such scenes as the one I have noted, why will they continue to vote for saloons? Are we not, in a sense, our brother's keeper, and should we not try to keep him from the temptations that beset him on every hand? (MRS.) IDA PAIGE.

Madison, N. Y., Oct. 22, 1898.

The South Dakota Equal Suffrage Amendment.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The time draws near when the vote is to be taken in the state of South Dakota as to whether the wives and mothers of the state shall have a right to express an opinion at the ballot box. The suffragists are on the tiptoe of expectancy and the outlook is bright for victory. The amendment to be submitted reads as follows:

"SECTION 1. Every person, resident of this state, who shall be of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, not otherwise disqualified, belonging to either of the following classes who shall have been a qualified elector under the laws of the territory of Dakota at the date of the ratification of this constitution by the people or who shall have resided in the United States one year, in this state six months, in the county thirty days and in the election precinct where such person offers to vote, ten days next preceding any election shall be deemed a qualified voter at such election,

"1. Citizens of the United States.

"2. Persons of foreign birth who shall have declared their intention to become citizens conformable to the laws of the United States upon the subject of naturalization."

"Shall the above amendment to the constitution in relation to Section 1, Article 7, be approved and ratified?"

I have given the full text of the amendment, thinking it might be helpful to other states that may be contemplating the passage of a similar measure. The most effective work has been in the country precincts, and some of us have driven by team twenty-six miles and more over the prairie for one appointment. Never did women do more earnest, self-sacrificing work, and the president of the Equal Suffrage Association of the state, Anna R. Simmons, is one of the noblest Romans of them all.

The Black Hills will give a large majority for suffrage. Wherever we find miners in the northwest, there we find suffragists. The Scandinavian vote will be very large. At the state convention of the Scandinavian Total Abstinence Society the vote was unanimously in favor of the amendment. The same was true at another large church convention held in the Lutheran church by Scandinavians at Bradley. A number of Lutheran churches have opened their doors to our speakers.

During the coming week a Norwegian minister is to hold a debate in Sioux Falls, arguing from the Bible that equal suffrage is right. Surely the world moves. Another hopeful sign is the fact the Catholic bishop of the state is an ardent suffragist, and his position will influence many Catholics to vote for the amendment. The Congregational church, also the Methodist denomination, have passed strong resolutions in favor of the measure, and last, but not least, the press of the state is with us. I am safe in saying that ninety-five per cent of the newspapers are either advocating the amendment or are silent.

Dear sisters, this is your battle as well as ours. The state treasurer, Mrs. M. L. Bennett, Clark, S. D., is in great need of funds. If South Dakota and Washington can win the victory this year, other states will soon follow.

Unwomanly to vote? Yes, when it is unwomanly to love our country and our homes; when it is unwomanly to want pure boys and girls; when it is unwomanly to want good schools, good rulers and good laws, then and then only will it be unwomanly to vote.

Yours for victory,

EMMA A. CRANMER.

Aberdeen, S. D.

Anti-Vivisection Sentiment From New England.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—It is always pleasant to find that those engaged in one branch of reform are not indifferent to other branches, and so it was doubly pleasant to me to see in THE UNION SIGNAL an article on vivisection. To instruct the ignorant and the unthinking as to the methods and aims of vivisection is the present object of all our anti-vivisection societies, although we have an ultimate object which differs from this—I refer to our final appeal to the legislative bodies of our own country and of the world. It seems to me that those who practice or favor vivisection overlook the higher destiny of man—that which raises him above the brute which he is able to torture.

There are indeed more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in the philosophy of the vivisector. He may love wisdom, mere abstract knowledge, the acquisition of facts, which are wisdom in truth, but which can never be put in practice. But in this love he centers his thoughts, his aims and aspirations. There is with him no striving after the highest life possible to man, that life which taking human ills as they come, looks beyond them for the realization of all hopes, and scorns to relieve himself or others by resorting to the torment of the helpless.

I do not believe that vivisection has aided nor can aid our physicians in their care of the human beings who look to them for help; but were such a thing possible as real beneficial results from vivisectional experiments it seems to me that we ought cheerfully to forego them, in order that we may keep our moral nature free from those contaminations which are unavoidable consequences of the arbitrary and irresponsible use of power.

Let us be just to our fellow men, in trying to hinder them from brutalizing themselves by experimentation on living animals; let us be just to the helpless brute creation by trying to prevent these experiments from being made upon them.

Yours truly,

SAMUEL BRAZIER,

Secretary of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society.

Local Union.

DEAR SISTERS OF THE LOCAL UNION:—My thoughts have been turned (in the brief intervals which have come to me for thought of late), not alone to the National Convention but to the work of our organization, after our Convention shall be a thing of the past, and I have been wondering especially how that Convention can best serve the general work of the local unions. Of course the local union, from whose numbers a delegate has been chosen to attend the National Convention, will know how to utilize both the delegate and the Convention. If it is a wise local union, "echo meetings" will be held, not one "echo meeting" but several, emphasizing the various phases of the work as presented at St. Paul. To the majority of local unions, however, the privilege of sending a delegate to the National Convention will be denied. How may they best utilize the Convention? I am thinking especially of the unions of country towns and scattered neighborhoods. By what means may the mighty impulse of our work, which surely will be given to those who attend the St. Paul meeting, reach these sisters? The Convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL comes immediately to my mind as the first answer to the question; later comes the annual report of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Armed with these two, the most remote unions should be able to ally themselves with everything that will be done at St. Paul and to note things even more fully than the delegates themselves, since they can learn without the weariness attendant upon Convention days, the advance steps which will be recorded there.

Let me beg of you, dear sisters of the local union, to give to these suggestions, not merely a cursory glance, but careful study. Anywhere from two to half-a-dozen meetings could be well invested in studying the Convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL, discussing for yourselves the questions that will be discussed at St. Paul. Think for yourselves how you should have voted on different questions had you been there. Take, for example, the proposed amendments to the constitution, of which this year there are three. No one knows how they will be decided, but when the Convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL reaches your hands, you will know. Do not, however, let the decision affect your judgment; discuss the matter de novo. Do the same with the various reports that will be presented by the superintendents, chairmen of the committees, and in particular, the reports of the three affiliated interests. Acquaint yourself with the main features of the reports of the corresponding secretary and treasurer. Learn what states have gained and what have lost; learn where has been the greatest advancement in our work, and where the greatest retrogression. Have at least one evening meeting, in which you will follow the program of some evening at the National Convention. You may not have Mrs. Hoffman, Miss Kearney, Mrs. Booth-Tucker, Mrs. Lake and the other speakers whose names are upon the National program with you, but you will have speakers of your own, and you may take as large a part as you please of the addresses delivered by the distinguished orators at the National Convention.

I firmly believe that such a following up of the Convention by every union in our organization would mean a mighty incentive to better work everywhere. Will you not give the plan a trial? Come into touch with us, not only when we shall gather at St. Paul, but keep in touch with the entire organization through all the days and weeks of the year. It is only as we know each other that we become an organism rather than an organization, and surely to be an organism, in the highest meaning of that term, filled with one life, actuated with a common impulse, is the desire of every true-hearted white-ribboner.

Yours for service,

KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.

THE Christian women of this land are the strong right arm in temperance reform. They have stirred up the dead sea of our indifference in the past when all others would have gone to sleep. Too much credit and praise can not be given these wearers of the "bow of ribbon white."—The American Issue.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Jacob said unto his household, . . . Let us arise and go up to Bethel; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress and was with me in the way which I went.—Gen. 35:2, 3.

I love the Lord because he hath heard my voice and my supplications. Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore I will call upon him as long as I live.—Psa. 116:1, 2.

THE hearts of all our praying women should rejoice. The first great answer to their prayers has been heard for the House Beautiful. Let us continue to hold on to God by faith, never taking our eyes from Him, and we will see greater things still. Mr. Marshall Field returned from Europe a short time ago. I have had two interviews with him. The final one this morning (November 2), when he made in writing a new proposition to aid the Temple, the full text of which I will give in my report at the National Convention. I will merely say at this time that the offer is a most generous one, much more so than the previous one. We have, however, first to pay off the Temple Trust Bonds; he extends the time until January, 1900, and now that business has so generally revived, let us hope that long before the dawn of the twentieth century we will be able to claim Mr. Field's munificent gift.

✠

It comes to me to-night with such vivid freshness, and sinking of heart, that just a year ago our great National Convention was in session at Buffalo, and our sainted Frances was presiding with a brilliancy which seemed to outshine all her former efforts. I can yet hear her voice ring out that wondrous plea for the House Beautiful. "Now in conclusion," I hear her say,—and my own heart stands still, as it did on that memorable day, "I will say in regard to the Temple: I believe the enterprise will succeed; I think if you give it up you will find yourselves saying within the next twenty-four hours what the Alabama senator said, 'Where are we at?'" . . . I thought I would get my speech in before the matter of re-election came up. . . . I stand by the Temple whatever the results to me. If it were voted here to do no more for it, and I were not elected, I should go out and beat the bush to get the money exactly the same." How can any one that heard that plea think for a moment of not standing by the payment of the Temple Trust Bonds?

✠

The Danbury, Conn., W. C. T. U. completed their $100 pledge some time ago, and I am reminded by Miss M. J. Stevens that we have not acknowledged it in THE UNION SIGNAL. Miss Stevens is a royal friend of the Temple. We have just filled an order for her for half a dozen of Miss Willard's pictures that she sold to her neighbors and they are all much pleased with them, she writes. She also sends resolutions passed by the union of loyalty to the Temple. Miss Maggie Mehring, Bruceville, Md., says: "I am so much in love with the beautiful picture painting you sent me of Miss Willard, that I now enclose $3 that you may send me three more copies for my friends."

✠

I am glad to announce that Miss Eva M. Shontz has fully recovered her health, and that sight seems to be returning to the eye that was supposed to be hopelessly blind. She is at the Temple every day, at the office of the Young People's Christian Temperance Union, inspiring the Chicago young people with her own splendid enthusiasm and zeal. Never has such a crusade against vice been inaugurated in Chicago as is being now carried on by the Y. P. C. T. U. under the leadership of Rev. J. Q. A. Henry, but with all their great work in this direction the Temple is not forgotten, and subscription books have now been placed in the hands of the members and they have started a crusade to raise $100,000 for the Temple.

✠

All money from Wheels, subscription cards, tablets, pledges from unions, etc., should be sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, and drafts should be made out in the name of Mr. G. B. Shaw, treasurer Temple Trustees. All orders for supplies for the above should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Room 1118, The Temple, Chicago. Also orders for Miss Willard's picture or application for agencies for its sale should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

Our Children.

Fate of a Lie.

FIRST somebody told it,
Then the room wouldn't hold it,
So the busy tongues rolled it
Till they got it outside;
When the crowd came across it
They onward did toss it
Till it grew long and wide.

From a very small lie, sir,
It grew deep and high, sir,
Till it reached the sky, sir,
And frightened the moon;
For she hid her sweet face, sir,
At the dreadful disgrace, sir,
That had happened at noon.

And so, evil-boded,
This monstrous lie goaded,
Till at last it exploded
In smoke and in shame.
While from the mud and from mire
The pieces flew higher.
And hit the sad liar
And killed his good name.

From Uncle Joseph's Memory Book.

UNCLE Joseph Gregg sat all day in a big room at the top of the house reading or writing piles of papers which he told his nephews were "MSS." His hair was as white as the silk in a milkweed pod. But his eyes were so bright and black they never thought of him as old. Indeed, no one did who had once heard him laugh.

After three o'clock the boys might go up and visit him, and John and James, the twins, went up one afternoon, two steps at a jump, to tell him about the circus come that morning to town.

"You just ought to have seen it! The p'cession was two miles long!" cried John.

"My! it was as much as sixteen miles long!" puffed James, who was almost out of breath. "And the old elephant was as big as this house, and the camel-leopard had a neck—well, sir, I guess it was five yards long!"

"The chariot was 'most as big as the 'cademy," interposed John, not to be out-talked. "And such a string of horses as there was! My, Uncle Joseph, I guess there was a thousand, or maybe two thousand!"

Uncle Joseph often told the children stories. They came into his head as dreams come into the heads of other people. Sometimes he read them stories out of a little volume bound in scarlet leather, smelling of rose leaves and spice, and fastened with golden clasps, which he called his "Memory Book." When the boys paused for lack of breath, he said, smiling:

"I've no doubt the circus was fine. Now, for a change, suppose I read you something it reminds me of."

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir," said the twins, and drew themselves into the depths of the wide sofa.

"Once upon a time," began Uncle Joseph, "a knight and his squire were traveling through Spain on their way to join the army of the Crusaders. They were brave men, and the squire, like Sancho Panza, dearly loved to talk. And a man who talks very much often says things that are neither wise nor true.

"The journey, which they performed on horseback, was long and difficult. The road led through mountain defiles and dense forests. They often heard the cries of wild and ferocious beasts and saw venomous snakes. Once a red fox bounded lightly across their path.

"'What a fine fox!' cried the knight. 'I never saw one larger.'

"'I have,' said the squire, confidently. 'In Brittany, where I was born, the foxes are as big as cows.'

"One day a fallow deer peered at them through a thicket, and the knight pierced its head with an arrow.

"'Is it not beautiful and large?' he exclaimed, proud of his trophy.

"'Large for this country, perhaps, but you should see the deer in Brittany,' said the squire. 'I have often seen them as large as horses.'

"'And, pray, how large are the horses?'

"'Oh, sir, as large as—well, twice as large as any other horses in the world.'

"Just then the roar of a great river was audible, and the knight, springing from his horse, knelt in prayer. The squire, not knowing what to make of his master's actions, waited till he felt bursting with impatience, then cried:

"'Tell me, sir, why you pause now to pray! I thought, up till now, morning and evening prayers were all that were demanded of the most pious knight of the Holy Cross.'

"'We are near the Ebro,' said the knight, and resumed his petitions.

"'And what if we are?'

"'All liars who attempt to ford it are drowned; and, while I do not recollect ever to have told an untruth, I am but a poor weak creature, and I want to commend my soul to God.'

"After a few seconds the squire gave a deep groan. 'O my master!' he exclaimed, 'perhaps the animals of Brittany are not so large as I seem to remember them.' The roar of the river sounded fearful in the silence that followed, and the poor fellow added, 'God have mercy upon me! The red fox of Brittany is but a common red fox, and the deer but common deer; and as for the horses they are but sorry cobs. Lord, have mercy upon me for a miserable offender!'"

"Was he drowned?" asked James, after some moments of silence, during which he had looked at John and John had looked at him, and both had thought of the circus.

"I hope not," said Uncle Joseph; "but I hope he was cured of exaggerating—a foolish habit, that makes any one addicted to it, to say the least, ridiculous."—Sunday School Times.

A Great Day.

"CHILDREN," asked Miss Mary, the teacher, "do you know what day this is?"

"Yes, ma'am!" cried Bobby Wilkins, looking up with sparkling eyes.

"Does any one else know?" asked Miss Mary.

No one spoke.

The boy John knew very well what day it was, but he was off in the clouds, thinking of William the Conqueror, and did not hear a word Miss Mary said. Billy Green knew, too, but he had been reproved for chewing gum in class, and was in the sulks, and would not speak. Of course Joe didn't know, for he never knew anything of that kind; and none of the girls were going to answer when the boys were reciting. So Bobby Wilkins was the only one who spoke.

"It is a day," said Miss Mary, looking round rather severely, "which ought to awaken joy in the heart of every American, young or old." Bobby felt his cheeks glow, and his heart swell. He thought Miss Mary was very kind.

"It is a day," she went on, "to be celebrated with feelings of pride and delight." Bobby felt of the bright new half-dollar in his pocket, and thought of the splendid kite at home, and of the cake that mother was making when he came away. He had not wanted to come to school to-day, but now he was glad he had come. He had no idea that Miss Mary would feel this way about it. He looked round to see how the others took it, but they all looked blank, except the boy John, who was standing on the field of Hastings, and whose countenance was illumined with the joy of victory.

"It is a day," said Miss Mary, with kindling eyes—for the children were really very trying to-day—"which will be remembered in America as long as freedom and patriotism shall endure."

Bobby felt as if he were growing taller. He saw himself in the president's chair, or mounted on a great horse, like the statues of Washington, holding out a truncheon.

"One hundred and twenty years ago to-day," continued Miss Mary.

"Oh—oh, my! it ain't!" cried Bobby Wilkins, springing up. "It's only seven."

"Bobby, what do you mean?" asked Miss Mary, looking at him severely. "You are very rude to interrupt me. What do you mean by 'seven'?"

"My birthday!" faltered Bobby. "I ain't a hundred and anything, I'm only seven!"

"Come here, dear," said Miss Mary, holding out her hand very kindly. "Come here, my little boy. I wish you very many happy returns, Bobby, dear. But—but I was speaking of the Battle of Bunker Hill."

Our Cozy Corner.

"Dare to do right, dare to be true."

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Where do you think our last new Cozy Corner cousin lives? Read her letter and you will see that it is dated at Hamilton, Bermuda. Perhaps you may not all know that the great bulk of our beautiful Easter lilies comes from the Bermuda Islands. Marion tells us that they have no snow there, and it is the warm climate which makes lily culture possible and profitable. Just imagine great fields of stately, beautiful white lilies! Suppose we ask Marion to write us another letter and tell something of how they grow and ship the lilies. That would be very interesting to us all, and next Easter when our churches are decked with the fragrant, white blossoms, they will give us a loving thought of the far-off cousin and seem almost like a letter from her.

There is always room for one more in the Cozy Corner, and every boy or girl who reads THE UNION SIGNAL has a standing invitation to join us. Every new member means a widening of the circle that is going to spread temperance influence all over the country as my young folks grow up. Lovingly yours,

AUNT MARY.

Nephews and Nieces.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I'm a little girl ten years old. I am a member of the Christian Endeavor here. We have seven saloons here now. I think I would like to be one of your nieces.

With love,

Decorah, Ia. CARRIE PARKS.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I would like to be a niece and join you in your fun. I am the president of the L. T. L. here. Mrs. A. Gorden is our leader. I live on a farm of sixty acres. We raise vegetables of nearly all kinds. I am ten years old. Yours for the right,

Argos, Ind. BESSIE CANNON.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a girl ten years old and would like to join the Cozy Corner. I have one brother and one sister. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL. I like to read the Children's Page. I belong to the Junior Epworth League. My mamma always wears her white ribbon. Papa is a Methodist minister. There is no snow here in this country, and it is very pleasant in the winter. Yours lovingly,

MARION PRESTWOOD.

Hamilton, Bermuda.

DEAR AUNT MARY:—I am a girl ten years old. This is my first letter to the Cozy Corner; I would like to join it, and have some of the children write to me. My grandma stays with us and wears the white ribbon and I enjoy reading the Children's Page of THE UNION SIGNAL. I belong to the L. T. L. I live on a large farm and keep a dairy. I am taking music lessons, and can play quite well. All my aunts and grandmas live on the farm. I have great fun in the hay lofts with my cousins.

Your niece, MARION STEWART.

Providence, R. I.

Soft-Shelled Nuts.

ENIGMA.

45.

I am composed of 12 letters.
My 9, 3, 8, 11 is conceited.
My 2, 3, 11, 12 is a common form of capital punishment.
My 1, 10, 4, 1 is to give a slight coloring to.
My 7, 3, 6 is something used for fuel.
My 6, 3, 11, 5 is something the Merrimac did.
My whole names a great day.

Denver, Col. ALICE TAYLOR.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE PUBLISHED NOVEMBER 3.

No. 44. Zaphnath-paaneah.—Gen. 41: 45.

Correct answers to No. 42 was sent by Dwight Foster, Sessumsville, Miss., and Amy Robinson, Harlem, N. D.; to No. 43 by Mary Quillin, Ipava, Ill.

UNION SIGNAL
AND WHITE RIBBON
WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON, MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

The Completed "Sphere."

"WHILE there have been hundreds of women whose work for humanity has been conspicuous, there are three who will rank in history as the greatest, each as the champion of a distinct cause; Harriet Beecher Stowe, of freedom from physical bondage, Frances E. Willard, of freedom from physical appetite, Maude Ballington Booth, of freedom for the sin-bound soul. Slavery, drunkenness and irreligion! From the apex of the twentieth century these triple giants of hell will look back with savage regret that these three women were ever born!" So says one of our religious journals.

We in the ranks may not be able to occasion such deep-seated regret, but it is within the possibilities of the least aspiring Christian Temperance Union woman to make the powers of hell lament that she was ever born. What inspiration in the thought! What can the women mean who hang back from making that kind of a record? Go around with pencil and paper in a public meeting to enlist them. "Oh, I guess not," "I couldn't do anything." Alack a day! It would not do for any one else to say so!

In reading the column of tributes to the various departed ones, subtle difference can be detected. Some run something like this: "She was little known to the public but devoted herself to the welfare of her family, never neglecting its interests for any other consideration," rounding up with, "Her children rise up and call her blessed." White-ribbon women do not care for exactly that kind of an epitaph. We know what it means. It praises one or the other; a selfish woman looking out only for her own, or a well-meaning, narrow, dull-minded one bringing up selfish offspring to look upon her self-effacement as their just due, and no matter what the obituaries say, not faithful to their interests while bringing them up to be entirely self-centered with no conception of universal brotherhood.

"Oh, well," says one, "give me the woman who makes home comfortable before any of these advanced females who live for the public!" The speaker is right, provided there be any such. Of the two the so-called "domestic" woman is certainly to be preferred. She is infinitely better with her one virtue of stupid fidelity than she would be without it. But the ideal home maker must be all this and more. She must be broad, aspiring, philanthropic. The true home maker must be in touch with humanity.

There is no such training school for the direction of such energies as the Woman's Christian Temperance Uuion, for its watchword is "The Home." It is safe for the most conservative, for the welfare of the home is the central thought and underlying motive of every branching line of effort. But it is for everybody's home. Its membership will never be praised for confining its benefits within their own four walls. Give us the Christian Temperance Union woman! In our opinion no woman has fully consecrated her life to God and thus filled and fully rounded out her individual sphere if she has refrained from enlisting in its ranks.

"Well, what do you do? What have you to show to make us think it worth while to join you?"

Results? Why nobody can sum those up, for the work is almost altogether seed sowing. It requires faith and far-sightedness to make a woman persevere in this work. We live much on the "substance of things hoped for," and it has "substance" to the initiated.

Our women of Illinois brought a thirteen thousand woman power to bear on a not exactly enthusiastic legislature and secured a temperance instruction law strong enough to take hold of the great cities and force compliance. No one can tabulate results, but no white-ribboner of Illinois would transfer her thirteen thousandth share in the achievement. Not one would consent to sign away her two hundred thousandth share, more or less, in what is stirring all along the line. Results are God's lookout. Don't ask us about them.

There would be some strange differences if all trace and influence of our movement could be eliminated from the last quarter of a century. Where would be some of the undertakings whose movers would swell with pomposity were it intimated that "a woman's hand hath done this"? There would be cases of such emasculation as would not leave so much as the set of quotation marks which should rightfully be displayed!

How shall we demonstrate the source of that growth and enlightenment of a transformed public opinion, new rules of action, a new common habit of thought—that unsuspected spiritual force which has brought even to where she stands the slightly scornful questioner of the W. C. T. U.? How can we place a finger on this and that appearance of spontaneous evolution and establish with convincement the claim, "this is our outgrowth"? Have you taken note how silently and suddenly medical science looms up bewilderingly leagues in advance of the points last sighted, and Mrs. Hunt is invited to sit with the doctors? How much more appropriately might a degree be conferred than upon those utterly unscientific notables, so frequently complimented!

If results, correctly labeled, were continually manifesting, our grand minority would soon be a vast majority! What would be the consequence were every subdivision of our work to be "manned" with enough women to really make it what is indicated and intended in our great and comprehensive prospectus? We could set the date for the millennium to begin! There is laid out a veritable garden of the Lord, but there is nothing like adequate force put on the work. We need all the women in the world!

The Report of the Ohio State Liquor League Legislative Committee.

THE October number of the American Issue, organ of the National Anti-Saloon League, published at Columbus, Ohio, printed in full the report of the Legislative Committee of the Ohio State Liquor League as given to the annual convention held at Tiffin, September 13 to 15. We quote a few sentiments from this report to add testimony to the oft repeated assertion that the trade controls parties, bribes legislators and proposes to break the laws it cannot mend.

Immediately after the convention last yea the president was authorized to appoint a Legislative Committee. This was done, and J. J. Ardner, Tim McDonough and John F. Weiss were appointed. This committee, together with Mr. McCaffrey and Mr. Hughes, sought a conference with the leaders of the two dominant parties, which conference was granted. At said conference we made our wishes known in reference to legislation and at the same time giving them to understand that we should take no part in the coming election, only to oppose such members for the legislature as were known to be against our interests, all of which seemed to be satisfactory to both EXECUTIVE COMMITTEES which had charge of the campaign. I immediately drew up a circular containing the names of candidates which were opposed to the traffic, regardless of their political belief and sent them to our members in such districts where candidates resided, advising our members to vote and work against their election.

. . . . . .

But to our surprise one of the great parties forced upon us the candidacy of a man for Speaker who, on all occasions, expressed his hatred of the traffic. We went to the leaders of that party and reminded them of their promises made us before the election, and, while they assured us they intended to carry out their promises, they denied having anything to do with the Speakership fight. To elect this Speaker meant that committees would be composed of men prejudiced against us, and to kill our measures in committee, regardless of the sentiment of the House, and to secure no relief measures for our dealers meant the extermination of our League. It was a fight for the life and death of our League. While we were somewhat discouraged at the turn of affairs, we at once went to work to SECURE VOTES to elect a liberal Speaker.

But this was up-hill work, for nearly every member had the promise of the chairmanship of some prominent committee and could not be induced to change his vote. It was at this critical moment that the brewers came to our rescue, and by means best known to themselves, secured enough votes for the election of a liberal Speaker.

. . . . . .

We afterwards returned and decided upon the following plan of action: First, to prevent all obnoxious legislation; second, to bring about a modification of the Adair Law and of the Fair Ground Limit Law, no more, no less.

Then follows an account of how they secured the amendments to the laws named and this exhortation:

But our dealers must not for a moment imagine that the Antis have given up the fight on account of the reverses they encountered last winter; they are of a revengeful nature, and will do their best at the next session of the legislature to bring about the repeal of the amendment we secured last winter. I would therefore caution our dealers not to abuse the amendments secured, but on the other hand, discourage the sale of liquor to drunkards and minors. By adhering to that rule you will disarm your enemies of a powerful weapon and command the respect of the community at large.

. . . . . .

This personal tribute is paid among many others:

Joe M. Shaffer rendered valuable assistance by SWINGING A CERTAIN SENATOR INTO LINE THE LAST MINUTE ON THE ADAIR LAW, WHILE WITHOUT HIS VOTE THE AMENDMENT MIGHT HAVE BEEN LOST; in fact, every member of the board contributed to our success.

The American Issue has this to say about other parts of the report not quoted here:

The statement contained in the report "That the Anti-Saloon League threw up the sponge before the session was half over, and issued a statement that no legislation, favorable or unfavorable, would be enacted at this session," and that "Women were stationed at the doors of the House and Senate" is not true. They have also attributed to the Anti-Saloon League the authorship of bills which properly belongs to others.

Couple this report with the speeches made at the banquet where such destructive sentiments as "Freedom is the right to do what you please, to go where you please and when you please without asking anybody" were expressed, and one has an epitome of the political and ethical code of an organization of which its attorney said in an interview at the time of the convention:

The fact is they are a thorough political organization. Their delegates here are the shrewd politicians of the state. They can turn forty thousand votes just where they desire in any election in this state. Each saloon-keeper controls on an average four votes, and there are about ten thousand saloons in the state. When it comes to the saloon vote in Ohio, there is practically but one voter, and that is Tim McDonough of Cleveland.

What is true of Ohio is true of other states.

We add two reflections: Liquor leagues know no party lines when it comes to defending "the trade." Temperance people haven't as yet united in their attacks upon the business. Our exhortation is in the words of Miss Willard sent to two reform parties, prabably her last public message, "Tell them to get together."

Sounding Brass.

THE inexperienced and the young are apt to consider it "smart" to answer quickly and without deliberation. Such are liable to feel called upon to have a decided opinion at the first mention of a subject, and having committed themselves, they generally strive to establish their words.

Every good teacher knows how difficult it is to get children to talk with their brains instead of simply with their mouths. The habit once acquired of pouring out speech as though it were worth something of itself, the habit of giving a dogmatic opinion as though it were based on something, the habit of making a pretense to knowledge, becomes second nature, but the paucity of the poor deluded person is as apparent to an intelligent person as the fabled ostrich with its head in the sand. Such people have a desire to seem to know which is commensurate with their ignorance. They essay to give directions, to explain difficulties, to state experiences in the lives of others, to report dealings in families, schools, churches, and a thousand other things of which their knowledge is very imperfect and very limited.

It is a curious experience to place one of your own plans before such an one and within twenty-four hours have him return it to you with variations and as a matter with which you are not very conversant and he is. Or to have him assist with corrections and addenda as you are giving the plan to a third party. To investigate before giving an opinion, to be cautious about committing one's self until the subject is mastered, to speak circumspectly, is to be classed as a dolt by such an one. Very well! Would that the world had more such dolts. Then it would have fewer that insist that they know other's thoughts, that they can interpret other's acts, that they know the significance of glances and have an X ray for every emotion. Good "horse sense" that does not arrogate to itself supernatural power is a blessing to this world wherever it is found. Ignorant arrogance that has actually coddled itself into believing it can blind intelligence by assumption is a curse. Blessed is the child who is taught to establish the words of its mouth and whose imagination is not allowed to feed upon itself, for the product is likely to be a religious or a society bigot. To know that one knows is a great thing. To know that one does not know is equally great.

Our Nation's Shame.

UNDER the above caption the journal of the Universalist young people, Onward, quotes the solemn charge made by Rev. Carl F. Henry, in his parish paper, that what killed the greatest number of our soldiers was, not lack of medicines, not lack of food, but it was the presence almost everywhere of beer, rum or whisky, the use of which so thoroughly disarranged the digestive organs that no food gave nourishment, and the soldiers who indulged in these stimulants fell a prey to disease. Rev. Henry adds to the above:

On the outskirts of the little city of Middletown, Pa., near which thirty thousand soldiers at Camp Meade are quartered, three houses of ill-fame are being guarded by United States soldiers, appointed by the military authorities. The guard is not there to keep men out, but to "maintain order and protect the women from drunken soldiers." God in heaven! Is it for this service that patriotic fathers and mothers have given their loved ones to their country! The situation justifies the wrath of a Harrisburg gentleman who, upon seeing a corporal of eighteen or nineteen years on duty there, said, "An officer who would put an eighteen or twenty-year old boy on duty as guard of a house of prostitution ought to be damned." Have I written plainly? Do not the conditions call for plain speaking?

Such conditions do call for plain speaking, and we are glad that this brother has put in words the thoughts of the mothers of those soldiers and of every informed and right-minded person.

Cigarets.

SUPPOSE a boy has a lot of cigarets and smokes a few of them every day. Is there any injury in this? I can tell you, for I have had such boys for patients. Such smoking, even in so-called moderation (as if there were any such thing as moderation in stimulants for the young!) will do three things for him: 1. It will run his pulse up to one hundred or more per minute. 2. It will reduce his weight below the healthy standard. 3. It will reduce his strength and general vitality, as will appear in his pale complexion and his diminished appetite. . . . Cigaret smoking is one of the worst habits physically that a boy can form. It injures the heart and digestion, and it tends to check the growth. It gives a lad false and silly notions, and it does not bring him into good company.—Harper's Young People.

THE Temperance Congress recently held in Boston for the purpose of considering methods of overcoming the liquor traffic expressed its great desire to be the evolving of a common platform on which men of different political persuasions will be so brought together and aroused that their combined energy will be trained against the liquor business. Dr. George Lorimer, in his opening address, told how, in the last campaign for no-license in Boston, the increased vote for the saloon came from the so-called respectable, refined, people of the Back Bay district, and other wealthy and aristocratic portions of the city, where the people are not willing to have saloons and will not permit them, but vote to have them, and then thrust them upon their less fortunate brothers in the poorer districts. He suggested that it would be far better to have them opened next door to the churches rather than next door to the weak and poor.

PHILADELPHIA has a Breckinridge case on hand. Theodore B. Stulb is asking the twelfth legislative district to send him to the state assembly. Our brother, Josiah W. Leeds, says Stulb was dismissed from his office of chief of the health department, by the governor some months ago because he was in complicity with the keeper of a disreputable house not far from the city hall—a resort of many politicians. The woman, Agnes King, was sentenced to prison for two years and Mr. Stulb now asks to be sent to the state legislature. Mr. Leeds says this man's offense would darken the paper to rehearse it and asks through the columns of the Public Ledger whether the people will not at the ballot box rebuke the reckless and contemptuous partisanship which has made him a nominee for a high office; also his own shamelessness in seeking election to a position of honor and profit? So mote it be.

Personals.

MRS. HELEN L. BULLOCK, chairman of the Sabbath service committee, and Mrs. Frances W. Graham, musical director of the Convention, were callers at Headquarters on their way to St. Paul.

EMMA A. CRANMER has been in the field much of the year, working in Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and South Dakota. She has averaged a speech about every other day since the Convention at Buffalo, and is in the best of health.

THROUGH a typographical error the address of Mrs. Ada Unruh was not given correctly in our issue of October 27. After the National Convention until January 1, she can be addressed for engagements at 11 East Seeley street, Adrian, Mich.

MISS SWANKIE-CAMERON lately gave an account of her trip to America at the annual meeting of the Y's of the B. W. T. A. She is remembered among us with much pleasure and we have no doubt she had many interesting things to communicate to the young women.

MISS EFFIE LITTLEFIELD, a young woman prominently identified with the work of the W. C. T. U. in Maine, and her mother have just established a W. C. T. U. library in their home town of Winterport, Me., in memory of the father and husband, Captain Littlefield, who was a leading citizen and a prominent prohibitionist.

MRS. HARRIET NEWELL VAIL has been agitating the question in her Illinois town as to whether Christ made intoxicating wine. She says she has found that the christening of the battleship Illinois has set the people to thinking. She asks this question, How long shall we stand by in silence and let bartenders hand the word over the counters along with the glass of "liquid damnation," that "Christ made and used wine"?

MRS. LUCY H. WASHINGTON, who has held the office of county president of the Orange county, N. Y., W. C. T. U. for the past seven years, resigned at the last annual meeting on account of ill health. Mrs. Washington has long been a National worker, one of the original Crusaders and National organizers, and her many friends will be glad to learn that the medical treatment she is receiving is proving beneficial and restoration to health is hoped for soon.

MRS. M. L. WELLES, formerly of Illinois, and now of Tennessee, writes from Chattanooga: "Camp Thomas was certainly the worst managed institution you ever dreamed of. Sixty thousand men keeping house alone is not ideal under the best conditions, and these boys were not trained along housekeeping lines. The first six weeks there was not a single woman as nurse, and even a woman as a visitor was not wanted over much, but, oh, what a change came toward the last. Soldiers crowded our Rest just to shake hands with a woman, and we were not young either, you know. I think you may like to make note of a few facts gathered from officers in regard to canteens. The Colonel of Fifth Pennsylvania, no canteen, told me that in the middle of July, during the most intense heat, the Fifth Pennsylvania and Fourteenth Minnesota (canteen) were on parade. Out of the Fifth Pennsylvania but seven men were overcome and had to drop out, while from the Fourteenth Minnesota seventy-five were compelled to drop out. The Fifth Missouri, no canteen, and Third Tennessee, canteen, in forced march in July, the Fifth Missouri had only five men overcome, while the Third Tennessee had seventy-one fall out. It was universally acknowledged that the no canteen regiments stood the heat much better than the others."

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Farewell to Miss Clara Parrish.

THE leading article in the Japanese department of the last issue of the Kuni-No-Hikari (The Light of Our Land) commenting upon the Temperance League, speaks very feelingly concerning the departure of Miss Clara Parrish. The following is the substance of the article:

"The importance of a Temperance League in Japan having been long felt by temperance workers, the leading members of the various societies held several meetings with this object in view, and discussed the matter to some extent; but unfortunately, owing to the peculiarities and traditional feelings attaching to each society, these meetings always ended in failure. This, as a consequence, was detrimental to the development of the temperance cause in the Empire. In all these years, while carrying on the campaign under such unfavorable circumstances, we have been strengthened and encouraged from time to time by sisters sent out to us by the World's W. C. T. U. We have now at last been enabled to realize our long-cherished end, the organization of a Temperance League in this country.

"This success, both in its origin and progress, is owing largely to the workers sent out from America on various occasions; but the consummation of this undertaking, not to speak of the extraordinary progress it has made of late, we do not hesitate to say, is entirely due to the indefatigable efforts of Miss Clara Parrish, whose keen insight at once fixed upon such a league as a necessity, as soon as she arrived on the field. She found many difficulties in the way to overcome, but she has worked patiently and carefully during the past two years. With the coöperation of foreign and native workers she has at last achieved brilliant success. This is indeed a matter of heartfelt congratulation, not only for the cause of temperance itself, but also for the sake of our country, whose welfare has been so greatly imperiled by alcoholic influences.

"Now Miss Parrish is going to leave us for Burma. While we are most earnestly wishing her health, happiness and success in her new field of labor, we should like, according to Japanese fashion, to make her some present as a souvenir. But what would be most pleasing to her? Would it be a nicely written testimonial, expressing our appreciation and gratitude, or would it be a collection of curios? Neither of these, we believe, would be most fitting and pleasing. There is one thing, however, which she asks from us, and that is the assurance that we, the members of the temperance societies in all parts of the empire, should constantly keep her wishes in mind, and always direct our attention towards the maintenance and development of the National Temperance League, to which she is so strongly attached and for which she has labored so hard and long. This being the case, let it be our earnest prayer that Miss Parrish will never have cause to be anxious on this point, and never regret the time and labor she has expended in this direction. Wherever she goes, whatever her field of labor, may she have peace and prosperity, and may the National Temperance League of Japan always stand out clearly as a living monument of her zeal, devotion and untiring labors!"

Sho Nemoto, editor of The Light of Our Land, gives expression in an editorial to his appreciation of Miss Parrish's work, and Mrs. Eliza Spencer Large, her present successor, sends the following resolutions, passed by the Foreign Auxiliary W. C. T. U.:

WHEREAS, Miss Clara Parrish, the World's W. C. T. U. representative, is about to leave us,

Resolved, That we desire to record our hearty appreciation of the efficient service she has rendered, in advancing the cause of temperance generally, and that of the white ribbon cause especially; also of her dauntless spirit in the face of difficulties, her unwavering faith in the final triumph of the cause she represents, and her happy tact and bright enthusiasm, as evidenced in her association with all. We lovingly commend her to those among whom she will next labor, wishing her "Godspeed" as she goes "around the world."

Resolved, That we extend to Mrs. Large, as the successor of Miss Parrish, our hearty coöperation in the work, trusting that by our united efforts this noble cause may progress until the right shall prevail.

Y's at Work.

TEXAS.

FOR several years nothing has been done in Texas in the Y department. In 1887 we had good Y unions all over the state, but there has not even been a state superintendent of this work for some years. At the state W. C. T. U. convention last May this work was again taken up, and I was appointed state superintendent. It has been very difficult for us to do much, as we have had to begin at the foundation and build all over again. The Y's of other years have married, disbanded or merged into W's. There are now but two Y's in the state of which I know. We are making strong efforts to organize and to get each district to elect a district superintendent. At the convention of the sixth district held at Ennis, October 21, 22, the work was brought prominently to the front and a district superintendent elected. We hope to organize all over the district before our next convention.

In the state work the past four months we have presented our work to four different assemblies of young people's societies. We petitioned Epworth League conferences and B. Y. P. U. conventions for each member of individual societies represented in the convention to become pledged total abstainers. The result was most encouraging, as three out of the four petitioned passed resolutions granting our petition and pledging their hearty coöperation to the Y. W. C. T. U. The other convention has never been heard from, although postal cards have been sent asking result of the presentation.

A Y. W. C. T. U. column has been opened in a popular county paper of Ellis county.

One item which may be of interest, although not strictly Y work, yet we feel free to report it, as it was done by the Y superintendent of the sixth district before she entered into our work. She is a teacher, and a temperance girl. At the close of her school, in April, she held a medal contest, in which four boys and two girls spoke for the silver medal. She presented the pledge on four different occasions, securing ten, five, twenty-seven and three signers, respectively, a grand total of forty-five who took the pledge and had pinned upon them our emblem of purity, the ribbon white. I saw some of these dear boys and girls only a few days ago, and they were still wearing the little bow.

We hope to create an interest in Y work in Texas that will cause the grand Lone Star state to come to the front as a Y state. With Marion B. Baxter would I say, "On each day's crest I see a sign of victory."

May God bless the Y work all over our Union and give our officers strength.

MARY RICHMOND,
State Y Secretary.

Ennis.

Y Almanac for 1899.

THOSE desiring these beautiful calendars as Christmas gifts should send at once to Mrs. Frances B. Yarnall, 1011 Park avenue, New York city, as the edition will soon be exhausted. Price 25 cents. Those sending postoffice orders please have the same made out to station K, New York city.

One of the Y secretaries writes: "I have promised our local Y that this year I would give a Y Almanac to every member who secures ten due-paying new members during the year."

World's Wave Crests.

THE following resolution was passed by a unanimous standing vote of the Japanese convention:

Resolved, That we request the secretary to send a message from us, as the Foreign Auxiliary W. C. T. U., to Lady Henry Somerset and to Anna Gordon, expressive of our loyalty and love to the former, and of our sympathy and love for the latter.

News from the Field.

[State reporters are earnestly requested to send no news over two months old. Brief and frequent reports are preferable.—THE EDITORS.]

Iowa.

THE state convention was held in Waterloo, October 11–13, with an attendance of about one hundred and twenty-five delegates. The meeting was opened by state president, Mrs. Dunham, and followed by a consecration service led by assistant state evangelist, Mrs. Stout.

The four general officers, seventeen district presidents and fourteen department superintendents responded to roll-call. Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, National evangelist, Miss Lilian Phelps, of Canada, and Mrs. Charlton Edholm were present. State treasurer, Mrs. Godfrey, gave her report: Total receipts, $3,485.05; expenditures, $2,756.84; on hand, $718.21. The report of state corresponding secretary, Miss Belle H. Mix, was full of cheering items. Thirty-two new unions have been organized during the year.

Report of financial agent, Miss Clara A. Stephens, showed that in addition to other amounts, fifty dollars had been received from different unions to make life-members of the following named veterans in the service: Mrs. M. H. Dunham, Mrs. L. D. Carhart, Mrs. Joanna B. Shesler, Mrs. L. B. Benedict and Mrs. Clara Drake White.

The reports of department superintendents were replete with interest showing a vast amount of good solid work accomplished.

Mother L. B. Benedict reported having received $1,388.03 the past year in aid of the Benedict Home in Decorah. Total number of adults and children cared for since opening of the home, 641.

It having been ascertained that Mother Benedict's seventy-fifth birthday occurred on Friday, the convention gave fifty-two dollars, which was afterwards raised to seventy-five dollars for a birthday present for this dear, devoted saint, who is doing a work for unhappy unmarried mothers that few women in this or any other state could or would undertake.

State and National evangelist, Mrs. Anna M. Palmer, who was appointed to give a Bible exposition, introduced in her stead, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, who spoke on the first chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians. Mrs. Lichtenwalter reported 2,594 W. C. T. U. Heralds and only 1,077 UNION SIGNALS taken in Iowa. This ought not to be. No member is fully qualified for our wonderful work who does not take and study thoroughly, both state and National organs.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Charlton Edholm spoke on "Traffic in Girls." On Wednesday evening there was singing by children's chorus, music by the choir, addresses of welcome and response by Mrs. Penman, address on "Rescue Work," by Mrs. Edholm, which was sad and thrilling beyond description. Mrs. L. G. Johnson gave the "Pauline Injunction," with good financial results.

Thursday was crowded with routine work interspersed with cheering episodes. The president's address was full of good points. She spoke in terms of severest censure against the diabolical army canteen-saloon system.

The daughter of our state regiment, Miss Berthe Bowers, of Creston, gave a fine report of L. T. L. work. Miss Bowers was made state organizer.

Tender memorial services for our promoted Chieftain and Iowa comrades were held. A beautiful picture and a bust of Miss Willard graced the platform.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, Burlington; vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Shesler, Spencer; corresponding secretary, Miss Belle H. Mix, Danville; recording secretary, Mrs. L. D. Carhart, Marion; treasurer, Mrs. Carrie K. Godfrey, Lyons.

The Bible expositions on Thursday and Friday were conducted by our beloved evangelist, Mrs. Palmer.

The diamond medal contest, the first ever held in the state, was a fine success in every way. An admission fee of twenty-five cents was charged on contest evening, bringing nearly one hundred dollars into the state treasury.

Miss Hazel Strayer, one of Waterloo's most promising young women, won the elegant medal, which was made of solid gold, set with diamonds.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

In addition to this, the young lady also won the privilege of one year's free tuition in one of the leading schools of oratory.

Miss Ella Moffat stated that the most marked advance in franchise department this year was the number of women voting in our towns and cities on school questions, public libraries and other matters pertaining to tax levy. In her home city, Marshalltown, 105 women voted.

Delegates to National Convention at St. Paul are Mrs. Sara Ferris, Waterloo; Mrs. Satella Penman, Rock Rapids; Mrs. J. B. Shesler, Spencer; Miss Clara A. Stephens, Burlington.

The hospitality and kindness of Waterloo people were unbounded. The faithful work of Mrs. Nellie Strayer, chairman of entertainment committee, will long be held in grateful remembrance by our delegates. It is an unwritten law of our organization that the chairman of this committee shall be delegate at large to National Convention, but owing to the statement that Mrs. Strayer could not go, another was put in her place. When the convention learned that Mrs. Strayer could go, all the delegates were elected, but they made her an alternate, with the earnest hope that she might be able to attend.

Friday was crowded with work, which was well rounded up under the skillful management of Mrs. Dunham.

Miss Lillian Phelps, of Canada, gave an excellent address on Friday evening.

Des Moines unions extended a cordial invitation for the next state convention to meet in that place, which was accepted.

CLARA DRAKE WHITE,
State Reporter, Volga.

Massachusetts.

THE twenty-fifth annual convention was inaugurated with a banquet in Lorimer Hall, Boston, October 11, and was a brilliant occasion, which Governor Wolcott honored with his presence and address. There were many other noted speakers and guests present.

The convention was called to order Wednesday, October 12, in Tremont Temple, by the state president, Mrs. S. S. Fessenden. The roll of delegates reached its full limit, 361. This was the largest number present at any state convention, and with the large audiences made it seem more like a National than a state convention. The beautiful auditorium of the Temple was made still more attractive by the national colors and county banners. Ferns and palms adorned the platform, where a fine, life-sized, crayon portrait of Miss Willard had a prominent place.

The early morning prayer-meetings were led by National and state evangelists.

The department reports by state superintendents showed encouragement all along the line. The memorial service for departed comrades was a most touching one, with sketches of prominent members by different women. Dr. Louise C. Purington paid a beautiful tribute to the life and work of Miss Willard. Solos during this service added their hallowing effect. The president's excellent address was given in the afternoon.

The first evening was devoted partly to addresses of welcome. Mrs. A. C. Ferguson, president of Suffolk county union, which entertained the convention, gave the welcome for the W. C. T. U. Mayor Quincy spoke for the city, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore making the response.

A pleasant feature of the evening was the introduction of members of the state W. C. T. U. who were Crusaders in 1873-74. There were ten ladies in the line, each one of whom was presented with some carnation pinks.

Mrs. Fessenden, the president, and Mrs. Baker, the corresponding secretary, for excellent reasons, had declined to serve in those positions longer, and much to the regret of all, ballots had to be prepared for new officers. Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson was unanimously elected president, and Mrs. H. D. Walker, corresponding secretary. The other officers and most of the superintendents were re-elected.

A new feature was introduced, or perhaps I should say added. This was a Ministers' Temperance Congress which united with the W. C. T. U. in some of its sessions, Rev. George C. Lorimer, D. D., presiding over the Congress. Such subjects as "What Ought to be Done Next?" "Substitutes for the Saloon," "Anti-Saloon," etc., were taken up.

It was pleasant to see the brothers on the platform in such fraternal relations, and it is to be hoped that much good was done. Mrs. Mary H. Hunt was one of the speakers and brought encouraging facts to the attention of the audience.

Music arranged by Mrs. W. G. Harris was one of the notable features of this convention. Quartets, octets and choruses with numerous solos, added pleasant variety to the exercises. The delegates were entertained in a royal manner in a hall beneath the temple, everything being under the most efficient management of a member of the Boston W. C. T. U.

Numerous telegrams of greeting were sent and received. Mrs. Stevenson, the newly elected president, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens and Miss Anna Gordon were among the number to whom messages were sent, also to several state conventions. The convention lasted three days and the time was all too short for looking backward in review over the past year and forward with new aims and plans into the year to come.

MARY L. WYATT,
State Reporter for October, Boston.

District of Columbia.

THE twenty-fourth annual meeting was held in Washington, D. C., Church of Our Father, October 20, 21. There were 113 officers and delegates present, besides a large representation from the rank and file of the various unions of the city.

The chief event of the opening session was the annual address of the retiring president, Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, its theme being Christian love and unity. Mrs. Platt retires from work in the District union on account of changing her residence to Seattle, Wash. She has been, probably, the most popular president the District W. C. T. U. has ever had, there being less of the inevitable friction during the three years she has held the gavel than ever before. At the close of her fine address a rising vote of thanks was tendered her for her good services, with regrets at parting, but congratulating the West in having gained so consecrated a worker for humanity and prohibition as she has proved herself to be on every occasion.

"A PERFECT FOOD—as Wholesome as it is Delicious."

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S
BREAKFAST COCOA
"Has stood the test of more than 100 years' use among all classes, and for purity and honest worth is unequalled."
—Medical and Surgical Journal.
Costs less than ONE CENT a Cup.
Trade-Mark on Every Package.
WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.,
TRADE-MARK. Established 1780. DORCHESTER, MASS.

The newly elected officers were, president, Mrs. Clinton Smith; vice-president-at-large, Mrs. M. S. Hartsock; corresponding secretary, Miss F. S. Weightman; recording secretary, Mrs. E. F. Shelton; treasurer, Mrs. T. A. Williams; Mrs. Grace Morris, superintendent of young women's work, and Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, delegate-at-large to the National Convention at St. Paul. Mrs. S. H. Martin was the other delegate elected to the National Convention.

The members of the local board of superintendents were, largely, as were three of the executive officers, Miss Weightman, Mesdames Shelton and Williams, re-elections of officers who had proved their right to the compliment through years of faithful service.

Mrs. Clinton Smith, the newly elected president, has resided in the District since 1891. Since her residence in the capital city she has taken an active part in the local temperance work, her address and tact soon placing her in prominent positions among the aggressive workers. During the past year she has been leader of the Young Woman's Branch of W. C. T. U. work, and has served the West End union as president for the past six years. She has also been prominently identified, locally, with the Anti-Saloon League, and most efficient in presenting the legislative work of the W. C. T. U. before the congressional committees of both Houses, relative to excluding the selling of liquor in the capitol or the new Library of Congress restaurants.

The District unions feel that while they have had to endure the pain of losing so rarely good an executive officer as Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, they have been blessed in securing so good a substitute as Mrs. Clinton Smith.

In the afternoon of the second day's session, a beautiful and appropriate memorial service in remembrance of District workers who had gone to their final home was conducted by Mrs. L. D. Merrick of Le Droit Park union. These departed sisters were: Mrs. Morgan, of Hamlin union, Mrs. R. S. Fuller, of Frances E. Willard union, Ada J. Carter, Miss Alma Jones, Mrs. Margaret Wayley, and Mrs. King of Southwest union, Miss Lizzie Amos, of Georgetown union. The speakers were Mrs. Hamlin, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Cohen and others. The memorial services were the most impressive features of the second day's session.

Mrs. Clinton Smith was elected a member of the board of directors of the National Anti-Saloon League, which holds its convention in Cleveland, O., December 6–8.

Taken altogether the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U. was a most successful occasion. Steps were taken just before adjournment to duly celebrate the next year's silver anniversary of the District W. C. T. U. in proper form, and a committee was appointed to that end. Mrs. Nellie Bradley chairman.

Owing to the importance of the work done by the superintendent of soldiers' and sailors' department, Miss Lavinia Chase, during the summer months at headquarters, in feeding the boys in blue, a special evening—Tuesday the 19th, was devoted to hearing reports of the work. Miss Chase was ably supported in this work by a committee of ladies who gave their services to the task of serving lunches from June 23 to October 1. Over six thousand soldiers were served with meals, and while feeding the bodies of the soldiers their spiritual welfare was also looked after. Many of the boys in blue signed the pledge in the rooms where free lunches were served. No doubt a more detailed report of this important and most creditably performed branch of work will be made for publication in some form later on.

EMILY LEE SHERWOOD,
Press Supt., District W. C. T. U. Washington.

Tennessee.

THE W. C. T. U. of Tennessee held its seventeenth annual session at Jonesboro, October 11–14. The convention was called to order promptly at nine o'clock, Wednes-but we don't eat it on that account. It is an astounding fact that we do eat white bread simply because it is white. The vital part of the wheat kernel is dark colored, and to make white flour it is almost entirely discarded. On the contrary the

Franklin Mills Flour
A FINE FLOUR OF THE ENTIRE WHEAT
is produced from the entire wheat berry denuded only of the woody, innutritious, indigestible outer skin or husk, which is not food.
If your grocer does not keep it, send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied.
See that the Flour delivered bears our label; avoid substitues. Booklet Free.
The genuine made only by the
FRANKLIN MILLS CO., LOCKPORT, N. Y.

day morning, October 11. Roll-call showed an unusually small attendance of delegates, a fact easily accounted for when we consider that Jonesboro is in the extreme eastern part of our long state and the great expense of getting there.

The house was beautifully decorated with our national colors everywhere, our national flag occupying the place of honor at the back of the platform.

The convention was pleasant and harmonious throughout, not a discord jarring the proceedings. I think that never before at any convention have we had so many and such good reports from superintendents of departments. There was scarcely a report called for that was not ready, for, if the superintendent was not there herself to read it, she had, in almost every case, sent it in, and all showed good work done throughout the state.

The usual routine work went on from day to day, interspersed now and then with various other necessary business. One of the most important items of business came up the first day, and was acted on by the convention without a dissenting voice. It was that every union in the state, for the coming year, laying aside every outside interest, try to raise a sum of money outside of their regular dues, either by subscription or by holding entertainments, for an organizers' fund, this money to be sent to the state treasurer; the executive committee to appoint organizers for the different sections of the state as they have the money, for in no other way can our work grow and prosper as it should.

Wednesday night was devoted to the usual addresses of welcome and the response, and the president's annual address. The addresses of welcome were from the mayor of the city, from the principal of their high school, from Rev. Mr. Eakin for the churches, and from Mrs. Welles for the union. The response was made by Mrs. Abernethy, our state treasurer. Our president's annual address was full of good things, reviewing the work of the past year, and having a good line of suggestions for work the coming year.

After the speaking was over we had a "symposium of nations" represented by the young people of the town. About twenty-five or thirty girls dressed in the costumes of the various countries where the white-ribbon work has been carried, came into the room headed by the Goddess of Liberty and Aunt Columbia, passing twice around the auditorium and then on to the stage, where they grouped themselves artistically, singing, "Around the World." The costumes were perfectly gotten up, the faces and make-up of the girls all being exactly as represented in pictures of typical women of the various countries, and was an object lesson no one could forget, as to the extent of our work and the spread of the white-ribbon cause. Each girl carried a banner, showing what nation she represented. This symposium was so well carried out that its repetition was called for and given the next night. Thursday night there was a paper on "Motherhood," by Mrs. Holman, and a talk on prison work by Mrs. Blevins, whose husband has charge of the state convicts at Brushy Mountain. Friday night was devoted to memorial services for Miss Willard and our own fallen comrades. Throughout all the services we had splendid music by the young people of Jonesboro.

One thing made us all sad, and that was that on every hand we missed "the sage of the Tennessee W. C. T. U.," our beloved and honored leader and honorary life-president, Lide Meriwether. There has been no woman found in the state to take her place among us. No one with such brilliant intellect, personal magnetism, and power to enchant and delight, as did she in her magnificent addresses before our annual conventions.

Our treasurer's report showed a good financial condition of our state treasury, with a small increase of membership over the past year.

Our corresponding secretary's report showed good work done over the state, Chattanooga and Memphis being deserving of special mention for the magnificent work done in those two cities. Chattanooga, with the uplift of the state convention held there last year, started out beautifully. Then came the soldiers and their work among them, which gave them prestige all over the city, with a constantly increasing membership. Memphis, with union No. 1, doing better work than ever, and three magnificent new unions, all doing good work, deserves also special praise.

One item of business was the placing of all local presidents on the state executive committee. On Friday morning the election of officers took place, all the officers of the past year being re-elected. Mrs. A. A. Gibson, president, Mrs. Bettie M. Donelson, vice-president; Mrs. Silena Moore Holman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Emma B. Karr, recording secretary; Mrs. Mary B. Abernethy, treasurer. The changes in superintendents of departments were: Scientific temperance instruction, Mrs. Lydia Johnson, Morristown; soldiers, Mrs. S. P. Lowe, Chattanooga; Sunday-school work, Mrs. S. J. Dosser, Knoxville; purity, Mrs. Georgia Mizell, Nashville; work among railroad men and drummers, Mrs. Agnes Brinkerhoff, Memphis; mercy, Mrs. Lucy Gray, Knoxville; juvenile organizer, Mrs. O. C. Rife, Memphis; medal contest, Mrs. C. A. Patton, Jonesboro; non-alcoholic medication, Mrs. Edna Fitzgerald, McMinnville; franchise, Mrs. M. A. Clopton, Milan. The other superintendents remain as last year.

It was unanimously agreed that the convention at Jonesboro was one of the most pleasant, delightful and successful conventions we ever had.

SILENA MOORE HOLMAN,
State Reporter, Fayetteville.

Some-how the brilliancy of the cut glass and bric-a-brac is dimmed after the washing. It's the fault of the soap, most of which contains rosin and alkali. Ivory Soap contains neither; makes foamy suds. Rinse thoroughly with clean water and the glass will sparkle with a new brilliancy.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Copyright, 1898, by The Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati.

Rhode Island.

OCTOBER 12, 13, will long be remembered by white-ribboners and friends of the temperance cause as the time of a blessed meeting, the annual convention. Newport union had worked long and well to make every arrangement complete for the success of the meeting and the entertainment of delegates. The number of delegates represented nearly every union in the state, and was quite as large as usual. The people of the city came out in good numbers, so the church was well filled, and the evening meetings were unusually large. One of the pleasant features of the program was the presence of the police matrons of the state, who are all Christian white-ribboners, and whose reports of work accomplished was most touching. We all felt very grateful for the effort these women are making, and prayer was offered for blessing on their labors. We missed the presence and help of our dear Mrs. Barney, but she had left a written greeting for us and a present for our president in the shape of a pretty olive wood gavel, which she purchased for her at Jerusalem during her round-the-world trip.

Our president's annual message was full of hope and cheer urging the need of united effort against the enemy of the church and home and recommending new plans of work.

A very touching memorial service was held at the twilight hour for our departed comrades. The president spoke tenderly of our peerless leader, Miss Willard, and others bore tribute to the beauty of the lives of those who have crossed the river this year.

The pastors of the churches attended the meetings, and kindly greetings were heartily expressed. Our speakers from a distance were Madame Barakat and Mrs. Margaret D. Ellis, who gave us spiritual lessons at the noontide hour, and fine evening addresses.

The whole spirit of the convention was so united, peaceful and harmonious that we truly felt the presence of the Lord was with us. We had our election of officers as usual in the business-like Australian ballot, which saves much time and confusion. The officers were re-elected unanimously.

The resolutions were strong and emphatic, but the few that called forth discussion were dealt with in a very united spirit and harmony prevailed through all. Though we can not boast of five hundred new members, we are happy to find that two hundred "new" women have put on our badge and taken their places in our ranks. May the day be hastened when our warfare shall be accomplished and victory be sounded through our state.

L. F. NICHOLS, JR.,
State Reporter, Westerly.

Delaware.

THE white-ribboners of Delaware held their nineteenth annual convention in the M. E. church of Camden, on October 12, 13 and 14, which was very largely attended, and the sessions of which were filled with great enthusiasm and earnestness on the part of these noble warriors for the cause of purity against the evil and ruinous effects of "alcohol" on the human race.

It was with sad hearts the state union lamented the absence of their beloved and zealous president, Miss Madge Hilles, who had so faithfully and successfully agitated the cause of temperance in our state for so many years, and had gained the love and esteem of all her co-workers.

Our corresponding secretary, Mrs. Elma Pyle, ably officiated as president, and Mrs. Anna S. Wharton, as recording secretary, in the absence of Miss Anna Vandever. The reports of the county presidents were very encouraging, indicating a steadily increasing membership and growing interest throughout the state. The total membership in the state is as follows: W's, 884; Y's, 86; L. T. L., 653; total, 1,623.

The Loyal Temperance Legion has an increased membership of about one hundred and fifty, which is not included in the above report, having recently been added, owing to the influence of the chalk talks given throughout the state by Mrs. Blair.

The report for the year, by Miss S. E. Rawlins, treasurer, was very interesting, showing total receipts to be $601.89, with expenditures of $387.70, leaving a balance in the treasury of $214.19.

As the numerous unions all over this country have been making the

THE MODERN STOVE POLISH

Enameline

PASTE CAKE OR LIQUID.

Every Package Guaranteed.

J.L.PRESCOTT & CO., NEW YORK.

most strenuous efforts during the past year to reclaim the Temple in Chicago from the great indebtedness resting upon it, the workers in this state have not lacked in their desire to see this purpose accomplished, and have been using their best endeavors in this direction. As the various state unions have an amount set aside for this end, pending the decision of the National W. C. T. U. Convention in St. Paul, as to whether they shall endeavor to liquidate the $300,000 Trust Bonds now resting on the Temple or give up their hope of retaining it, after Mrs. Clara Hoffman, our National recording secretary, by request, explained the position of the National W. C. T. U., and some discussion, the convention adopted the following:

Resolved, That while we deeply deplore the necessity, we must heartily indorse the action taken by the General Officers and the executive committee of the National W. C. T. U., at the called meeting, held in Chicago, on July 15, 1898, in regard to the Temple.

The report of the scientific temperance instruction work for Delaware, as presented by the state superintendent, Mrs. J. R. Milligan, shows decided improvement and awakening. The state law has been greatly strengthened and it is to be hoped that the text books will be found in all of the grammar and high school grades. The superintendent has visited personally each county, and has presented the plan of work to two county institutes. She assures the National W. C. T. U. and all our readers, that Delaware will yet be a bright and shining light upon the scientific temperance instruction question.

Mrs. N. B. Smithers, our superintendent of work in prisons, jails and almshouses, has been giving her entire time and influence to the matter of establishing a workhouse in the state of Delaware, instead of our present jails.

Very interesting and instructing addresses were made by William T. Smithers, Esq., of Dover, and Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, recording secretary of the National W. C. T. U.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Elma Pyle; corresponding secretary, Miss Carrie M. Hance; recording secretary, Mrs. Anna S. Wharton; treasurer, Miss Carrie S. Rawlins.

As we enter upon another year's work, with our new officers in their places, let us, each and all, be loyal to our belief, and loyal to our God, trusting Him as our guide in the accomplishment of our great and chief desire—the abolishment of vice and intemperance from our land.

CARRIE M. HANCE,
Reporter pro tem, Wilmington.

Obituaries.

Died, at East Chatham, Columbia county, N. Y., on October 3, 1898, BESSIE A. ROWE, aged sixty-nine years. She will be fondly remembered as a faithful member, and as the first president of the local union.

***

Died, October 15, 1898, MRS. JANE N. MALTBY, aged sixty-one years, charter member of the Bristolville W. C. T. U., Trumbull county, Ohio. A touch of her life was an incentive to all for a higher living. Her comrades deeply mourn their loss.

Official.

Important.

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION WORKERS, ATTENTION!

Loyal Temperance Legion conferences will be held each morning of the National Convention at 8:15 o'clock. All L. T. L. organizers and superintendents are expected to be in attendance promptly. All others interested are invited. For place of the conferences inquire at the Convention Bureau of Information.

HELEN G. RICE,
General Sec. of L. T. L.
1597 Washington St., Boston.

The L. T. L. Room.

The December number of the Loyal Temperance Legion Helper (organ of the New Jersey L. T. L.) will be devoted to the L. T. L. room in the Temperance Hospital. A large edition will be printed so that copies may be furnished other states for free distribution. Will state L. T. L. superintendents please notify me at once how many they can use, that I may know how large an edition to order?

ALICE M. GUERNSEY,
Custodian L. T. L. Hospital Fund.
17 Webster Place, E. Orange, N. Y.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

For the last time before the meeting in St. Paul I sit down to have my weekly talk with my beloved constituency. If the talk is not of the briefest, it will be only because I shall have indulged a woman's love of gossip, even in the press of immediate, important work. If you could drop in at Headquarters just now, you would see a seeming chaos of proof sheets, packages, banners in the process of packing, and countless other things. The National treasurer has been lost to sight, although to "memory dear," for several days, and when seen is always in the act of adding up columns of figures. The report of the corresponding secretary is already in type, and I regret more than I can express that several states have sent in no reports this year. They are, however, chiefly the newly organized colored state unions, with the addition of Idaho, Nevada and Arizona. We are so jubilant over the gain in membership that I can hardly keep from telling you here how much it is, but will refrain until the Convention shall disclose it.

I want to give one word of caution concerning the badges and programs at the Convention. In previous years they have been treated by some of the delegates as if the supply was inexhaustible, whereas we are obliged, for the sake of economy, to have published no more than shall be needed. Please remember that when a copy of the program is placed in your hands, it is to serve you throughout the entire Convention, and that we can not furnish in limitless numbers, copies for friends, etc., glad as we should be to do so. Please remember, also, that if a badge is lost it can not be replaced, as we shall have only enough to supply one to each delegate. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The Honor Roll for this week, which makes its last appearance in this issue, since it has been decided to discontinue this effort for the inciting to an increase of members, contains the names of Mrs. Helen D. Harford, 32.

Mrs. Mabel L. Conklin, 2.
Mrs. Mary C. Johnston, Harvey, 2.
Miss Onie Hixon, 2.

In the first issue after the Convention, the names of the successful competitors will be announced.

May God bless you and make this the most successful Convention we have ever held.

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Nat'l Temp. Hospital.

1619 Diversey Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

Pres.—Mrs. Margaret Inglehart, 1610 Grace St.
Vice-pres.—Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 LaSalle Ave.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Ralph S. Greenlee, 1692 Graceland Ave.
Rec. Sec—Mrs. Watson Thatcher, 787 Walnut St.
Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St.

MEDICAL STAFF.

Regular—Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D., Pres.
Homeopathic—John R. Boynton, M. D., Pres.

Form of Bequest.

I give and bequeath to "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital Association" the sum of (———) for the use of said institution absolutely.

DEAR SISTERS:—A joint meeting of the hospital staffs was held last night to consider questions of importance to the institution. Much interest was manifest, approaching real enthusiasm. One thing is certain that our hospital has outgrown its present quarters and our utmost capacity is taxed and still there is not room.

As a board we would strive to recognize the Hand that has guided us during this past year, at whose beginning the clouds seemed so dark and threatening. We are receiving commendatory letters these days which lend their part to lighten careworn hours, also of inquiry concerning our holiday sale. Any articles such as are customary for such sales will be most acceptable, and thankfully received.

Letters of caution are occasionally received concerning such remedies as our physicians sometimes give to the public as those better than the "old alcoholic remedies" (so called) also letters "thanking us for those remedies." Thus we get a diversity of opinion. To all of our friends who read the hospital column we would say that "an ounce of prevention is worth a thousand pounds of cure," and it is always best and safest, where medicine must be taken, to consult a practicing physician, and if you demand non-alcoholic treatment, if he is in touch with the times, he will see that you have it. A physician on our staff recently said, "Very soon we will furnish you with a statement of what the National Temperance Hospital has taught the medical fraternity." When the statement comes, the readers of this column will receive the benefit.

Donations of canned fruits and jellies are coming in, for which we thank our friends who so practically remember the hospital each year; donations of groceries and vegetables will also be acceptable.

Yours in the hope of a new hospital with ample facilities to fill the ever increasing demands for more room and better accommodations for patients and nurses.

(MRS.) MARGARET INGLEHART.

One thousand styles and sizes.
For cooking and heating.
Price from $5 to $70.

GARLAND STOVES AND RANGES
The World's Best

Often imitated. Never equalled.

Best Cookers. Strongest Heaters.
Last Longest. Use Least Fuel.

Made only by
The Michigan Stove Company
Largest Makers of Stoves and Ranges in the world.
Sold Everywhere.

Call for a National Christian Citizenship Convention at Washington, D. C., December 13-15, 1898.

Our country has been suddenly called to develop into self-governing citizenship millions of people that have but recently emerged from savagery, and other millions that have been degraded by long-continued oppression. We therefore invite to the above-named convention all Christian citizens for a conference, with special but not exclusive reference to our new island territories, on the following questions:

Should suffrage be limited by educational tests or otherwise in the new island territories?

Should civil service reform be extended to the new island offices?

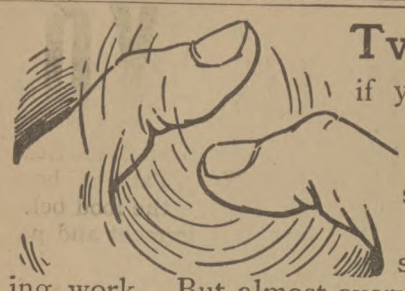
Should the national laws for our present territories, requiring scientific temperance education, forbidding prize fights—bull fights also—restricting divorce, and forbidding bigamy and fornication, be extended to our new island territories?

Should the American civil Sabbath be also extended to these islands as essential to the development of safe popular government?

DYSPEPSIA

"For six years I was a victim of dyspepsia in its worst form. I could eat nothing but milk toast, and at times my stomach would not retain and digest even that. Last March I began taking CASCARETS and since then I have steadily improved, until I am as well as I ever was in my life."

DAVID H. MURPHY, Newark, O.



CANDY CATHARTIC
Cascarets
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
REGULATE THE LIVER

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good, Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c.

... CURE CONSTIPATION. ...

Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago, Montreal, New York. 311

NO-TO-BAC Sold and guaranteed by all druggists to CURE Tobacco Habit.

Twiddle your thumbs, if you've nothing better to do, in the time that's saved by washing with Pearline. Better be sitting in idleness than to spend unnecessary time washing with soap, doing unhealthy and wearying work. But almost every woman has something or other that she talks of doing "when I get time for it." Washing with Pearline will save time for it. 576

Millions NOW USE Pearline

Should our enlarged army, in new dangers in the tropics, be protected there and elsewhere by the suppression of the regimental saloon or "canteen"?

Should the policy of prohibition be maintained in Alaska and the Indian Territory and extended to our new island territories?

The Convention will consider also the new obligations that come with our new relations to purify our nation itself in its suffrage, its civil service, its Sabbath, and from those evils that center in the saloon, not for our own sake only, but also for the sake of the world.

The Convention is to give special attention to pending moral measures in Congress. Hearings before congressional committees will be arranged. The call is signed by the following and others:

Josiah Strong, Pres. Society for Social Service, New York.

Anthony Comstock, Sec. Society for Prevention of Vice, New York.

Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, W. C. T. U. Supt. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction, Boston.

Mrs. M. D. Ellis, W. C. T. U. Supt. Department of Christian Citizenship, Newark.

Mrs. V. F. Cox, W. C. T. U. Supt. Sabbath Observance Department.

M. D. Kneeland, Sec. New England Sabbath Protective League, Boston.

J. B. Davison, Sec. Wisconsin Sunday Rest Day Association, Milwaukee.

E. D. Wheelock, Pres. National Christian Citizenship League, Chicago.

Joshua Levering, Hugh Johnston, both of Baltimore, Md.

Send for further particulars, about November 20 or later, to either of the undersigned, all of Washington, D. C.

WILBUR F. CRAFTS,
210 Delaware Ave., N. E.
FREDERICK D. POWER,
1107 Wallach Place.
MRS. CLINTON SMITH,
720 19th St.,
Committee of Arrangements.

National Convention Corner.

Chairmen of Nat'l Convention Committees.

General Committee of Arrangements, Mrs. C. S. Soule, 105 East Isabel street, St. Paul.

Entertainment Committee, Mrs. C. L. Webber, 1729 W. Minnehaha street, Hamline, St. Paul.

Finance Committee, Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, 37 East Tenth street, St. Paul.

Press Committee, Mrs. L. M. Rich, 1397 Hewitt Ave., St. Paul.

Boarding House Committee, Mrs Arella L. Phillips, 717 Geranium street, St. Paul.

Decorating Committee, Mrs. T. H. Lyles, 337 St. Peter street, St. Paul.

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE.

Will send free Book of Particulars how to cure "Drunkenness or the Liquor Habit," with or without the knowledge of the patient. Address Dr. J. W. Haines, No. 439 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

Entertainment.

Mrs. Webber, chairman of the entertainment committee, will call at the several meetings held on Thursday, the 10th, by the executive, the superintendents and organizers, and will assign them to their places of entertainment by card.

Any of the delegates who are not met at the depot and assigned places will report to the committee of entertainment at the Kindergarten Parlor, People's church, Pleasant Ave.

Hotel Windsor, room and board, special rates per day, $2.

Hotel Metropolitan, European, special rates, room per day, two in room, fifty cents each. Board and room, two in a room, $1.50 each.

The Astoria, same rates as Metropolitan.

Hot dinners will be served in the dining-room of the People's church for 25 cents. Suppers 10 or 15 cents.

Important Change of Address.

All state presidents, National organizers, lecturers, and other speakers who expect to be at National W. C. T. U. Convention in St. Paul, and are willing to speak on Convention Sunday, are requested to send their names and place of entertainment to the chairman of the pulpit committee, Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, chairman committee Sabbath services, 669 Dayton avenue, St. Paul, Minn., care Mr. George Brown, instead of to the place given heretofore.

THE ante-executive session of the National W. C. T. U. Convention is called to meet in Conover Music Hall, corner Sixth and St. Peter streets, at 9:30 on the morning of November 9. State presidents will please note time and place and be in attendance at the first hour if possible. A two days' meeting will, it is hoped, greatly facilitate the work of the Convention.

Reserved seats for the National Convention are selling fast, and all who desire them should write at once to Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, chairman of committee on finance. Seats are reserved only when the money for the same is sent to her. The price per seat is one dollar.

Notice.

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, of Missouri, National recording secretary, will spend the last two weeks of November and the first two weeks of December in Chicago. She will be able to give a few addresses in Chicago and in the outlying towns. Any union or club desiring her services can obtain date and full particulars by addressing Mrs. Minnie Barker Horning, The Temple, Chicago.

Our Library Table.

GOOD AMERICANS, by Mrs. Burton Harrison, is an interesting novel, which sets forth the Anglo-American traits of character with which this author always invests her heroes and heroines. Price $1.25. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

THE OLD PATHS; personal reminiscences and experiences, by Miranda L. Vorn Holz, a Crusader in the W. C. T. U. and an evangelist of the Methodist church. Edited by her daughter. Published by M. W. Knapp, Revivalist office, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A new book by Clara Louise Burnham, the clever novelist, is always eagerly welcomed. Her latest work is called, "A Great Love." It is a modern love story with an unusual ending, which fully sustains the author's reputation in that particular line. Price $1.25. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, Ill.

FORTUNA, a story of Wall street, by James Blanchard Clews, 12mo, 224 pages. Bound in cloth. Price $1. J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company, 57 Rose street, New York.

Mr. Clews, the author of this work, is one of the well-known Wall street bankers of that name, and a recognized authority on financial affairs, besides being a writer of considerable note on topics relating thereto. Under the above title he has written a financial story which embraces finance, politics and love, and is therefore both instructive and interesting.

THE BOOK OF THE OCEAN, by Ernest Ingersoll. Profusely illustrated. Square octavo, 279 pages. Price, $1.50. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

Mr. Ingersoll writes at length about naval battles and warships in language that can readily be comprehended by young people, about the ocean and its origin and about the phenomena of waves, tides and currents. He describes the building of ships, from the remotest times to the present, and he gives the romantic story of the early voyages and explorations. There are several hundred fine illustrations.

FEATHERED PETS, just issued, is the most complete book on this subject ever published for less than $2. It contains 140 pages, is copiously illustrated and full of information on the care of canaries, parrots and other cage birds. How to tame, train and care for them. How to keep them in good health and cure in case of sickness or accident. How to teach parrots to talk, etc. The subject of breeding canaries profitably and training the voice of the young birds is treated fully. Price 25 cents, or the cloth-bound volume 75 cents postpaid. Chas. N. Page, publisher, Des Moines, Iowa.

THE GREATER LIFE AND WORK OF CHRIST, as revealed in Scripture, man and nature. By Rev. Alexander Patterson. Some of the vital and pressing questions of the day are treated here, such as Christian testimony to the inerrancy of Scripture, the method of creation, the sociology of the New Testament gospel and Christ's vital connection with and redemption of nature and His place and plan in eschatology. The book is now in its second and revised edition. The first edition having been exhausted within so short a time, gives evidence of a real interest in the theme as well as the author's treatment. Price, $1.50. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN AND BEAST
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS
84-90 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK
311-313 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Copyright, 1898, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

FREE

56 PIECES FULL-SIZE, For Families.

There is no fake about this; send your address at once. Every person answering this advertisement can get a Handsomely Decorated Set, absolutely free—we mean it. There is no trick, no juggling with words, nothing but what is honest. Our offer is in black & white, no misrepresentation of any sort; everybody can receive & take advantage of it, & we positively will not go back on it no matter what it costs us. We wish to put our paper on top, & will do anything to get it in the lead quickly. It is one of the best & most interesting Fashion, News & Story Papers in existence. You can prove all we say, the absolute truth, if you will send us 10c. silver or 15c. stamps to cover expense of postage, mailing, addressing & packing, & we will send you the paper for 3 months free. ☞Every one can have their choice of Breakfast, Dinner or Tea Set Free. All Sets carefully boxed & packed at our expense. POPULAR FASHIONS
New York City, DEPT. 523. P. O. BOX 2617.

HISTORY OF THE
WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION
A book of 350 pages, 12x21 inches in size, printed on the finest quality of book paper, and containing more than 300 illustrations by the official photographer—pictures of all the buildings and of all the prominent officials, both men and women. Only 300 copies left. Original price $15.00 Now offered for $7.50. Bound in half leather.
AGENTS WANTED
both man and woman, with whom liberal arrangements will be made. Address
DIBBLEE & MANIERRE
WOMAN'S TEMPLE, CHICAGO

High Arm

Warranted Ten Years.

$10 to $25 SAVED
in buying direct from factory. 30 days free trial. No agents large profits to pay. No money in advance
$65 Kenwood Machine for.....$22.50
No better Machine at any price.
$50 Arlington Machine for.....$19.50
Other Machines $8.00, $11.50 and $15.00
all attachments free, over 100,000 in use. Catalogue and testimonials free
Write today for special freight offer.
CASH BUYERS' UNION,
158-164 West VanBuren St., B-30 Chicago, Ills.

FREE to suffering woman a simple home treatment. Mrs. E. H. Painter, 126 33d St., Chicago

Publisher's Notes.

We have received a copy of the "Annual Report and Souvenir History of the Loyal Temperance Legion of the State of New York." It is gotten up in excellent form by Mrs. H. A. Metcalf, general state secretary, and its appearance proves clearly the power of the Senior organization in that enterprising state. It contains list of officers, superintendents of departments, dates of annual meetings, L. T. L. pledge and motto, etc. The Minutes of the sixth annual convention, which was held at Auburn, N. Y., July 5, 1898, are of special interest, and are rendered attractive by excellent halftones of Mrs. Metcalf and many of the other officers, as well as by an excellent likeness of Mrs. Theodosia M. Foster, better known to the literary world as "Faye Huntington," who became identified with the Senior L. T. L. work in its early days. The entire set of books in one of the L. T. L. reading courses (evangelistic) is from her pen, and in many cases has been of incalculable benefit to L. T. L. workers. The souvenir ends with the L. T. L. Marching Songs and list of graduates since 1890 and seals won since 1891.

The NOVEMBER BIBLE READING in the monthly series issued by the W. T. P. A. is one of Miss Willard's beautiful Bible talks never before given in this course. The title is, "The Master Calleth." It was first prepared for a young women's Sunday afternoon meeting in Boston during Miss Willard's work for Mr. Moody in 1877. The words of the foundation text, "The Master is come and calleth for thee," spoken by one sister to another nearly twenty centuries ago, came also to the young women of Boston from a sister's lips, and to-day our publishing house sends them out to white-ribbon women everywhere as a message from a sister in heaven, one who herself always responded, and, we believe, still continues to respond, with glad alacrity to every call of the Master. It is a Bible Reading particularly fitting for the Convention month—the first without her—and we trust it will be used by every local union in the country.

Responsive Reading for November, "Temperance and Labor," by Mrs. Mary G. Stuckenberg, National superintendent of that department. As Mrs. Stuckenberg says, since the majority of the people of this nation are laborers, the importance of this department is evident. She suggests methods of enlisting work people in the W. C. T. U. and of strengthening this particular department generally. She urges a systematic study of the labor question and gives information as to what literature to send for and where it can be obtained.

This is the season of the year when our expectant eyes are eagerly watching for new subscribers, and for the renewals ever welcome. Kindly look at the little yellow label on THE UNION SIGNAL and see if the subscription has expired. If all our subscribers would but renew and each secure an additional name, the paper would take an upward leap in every way. Dear friends, it is your paper, and we believe you will stand by it as you do the grand reform which it represents. Please let us hear from you soon.

A Famous Route.

In traveling it is usually a question of distance and time. The traveler is at one point and wishes to reach another. These points are far apart and it takes just so much time to go that distance, and so the traveler takes the fastest train, and a sleeper on night trains if possible. He takes dinner at the starting point and breakfast at his destination, and the intervening space is a blank. There are routes, however, where the intelligent traveler does not do this. For example: he may wish to go to New York, Philadelphia, Washington or Norfolk from any point in the west, or come to the west from any of these points. He can take a dozen different routes, but there is one that is pre-eminent for luxury, courteous treatment, historic interest and scenic beauty. Between Cincinnati and Chesapeake Bay the rivers have made a roadway, and the engineers long ago utilized it for a railroad. Over this pathway the orange-colored palaces of the Chesapeake and Ohio's F. F. V. shoot through tunnels, skirt the mountains, hang over cliffs at whose foot rivers rush over rocks and rapids. This railroad passes through the "bloody ground" which Boone, and Brady and Kenton held against the savages, and where hundreds of thousands of brave men met in deadly strife a hundred years later.

No more beautiful scenery can be found the wide world over than the valley of the Shenandoah, or the beautiful Piedmont valley as seen from the heights of the hazy Blue Ridge Mountains. The battlefields of the civil war where the blue and the grey lie side by side, are thick set along this historic line of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway all through Virginia. When the seashore is reached the traveler is at once interested in Hampden, the place where the first English settlers of Virginia landed, and where they built a church in 1649 that is still used as a place of worship. Near Old Point Comfort and historic Fortress Monroe, Hampden Roads, lies the scene of the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac, which revolutionized naval warfare. Or by the other branch the traveler can go directly to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia or New York.

Mrs. Gervaisea Graham, doing business at No. 1250 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, and whose advertisement has appeared from time to time in these columns, has been enjoying a large and constantly increasing business even during the hard times of the past three years. She is furnishing employment to thousands of women, and some have been enabled through her efforts to build up a trade that is paying them more than $1,200 per year. By Mrs. Graham's methods a woman can engage in a profitable business on an investment of only four dollars. Her plan can be had by any one who has sufficient interest in the matter to send her a postal card for full particulars.

For the World's Temperance Sunday, November 27, 1898.

"Questions and Notes on the Sunday-school Temperance Lesson" are unique, taking, "have the right ring," and impress truth. Commended by eminent workers. Forty cents per 100 postpaid. Special rates on large orders by express. Samples free. Connecticut Temperance Union, Rockville, Ct.

Regimental Roll of Honor—No Canteen.

The following is a partial list of regiments having no canteen. Will friends send us others with the name of the colonel.

Second Ohio, Sixth Ohio, Fifth Pennsylvania, Colonel Theodore N. Burchfield; Fifth Missouri, Twenty-first Kansas, First Nebraska, Second Nebraska, Colonel C. J. Bliss, now brigadier-general; One Hundred Sixtieth Indiana, One Hundred Fifty-ninth Indiana, Colonel Barnett; First Illinois, Col. Turner; Third Illinois, Colonel Bennitt; Fifth Illinois, Colonel Culver; Second Kentucky, Colonel Gaither; the District of Columbia Regiment; Battery D, Pennsylvania, Captain Hunt; First Mississippi; Second Mississippi, Col. Montgomery; First New Hampshire, Col. R. H. Rolfe; Eighth Massachusetts Regulars, Col. Pew; Thirteenth, Eighth, Twelfth Pennsylvania, H. A. Comsen commanding Third brigade. First Washington (state), Col. Wholley; Fifteenth Minnesota, Col. Shandrew; Ninth Illinois, Col. Campbell; Second Arkansas, Colonel Cook; Fifty-second Iowa; Fifth Massachusetts Regular, Colonel Whitney, no intoxicants sold in their canteen; Eighth Ohio Volunteers; Third Nebraska, Col. W. J. Bryan; First Texas, Col. W. H. Mabry; Fourth Ohio; First and Third Kentucky; First Wisconsin, Colonel Schadel; First South Dakota, Colonel Frost; Second Missouri; Second Virginia, Col. James C. Baker; Forty-ninth Iowa, Col. Wm. G. Dows; Fiftieth Iowa, Colonel Jackson; One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Indiana, Colonel Studebaker; Third United States Engineers, Rev. Sam Small, chaplain; Sixth Illinois, Col. Jack Foster; First Arkansas.

Cigarets and Their Defenders.

The cigaret trust gives employment to a large and presumably high-priced literary bureau, whose duty is to prove that the popular prejudice against cigarets is unfounded, and that the products of the trust are really calculated in the highest degree to promote the physical, mental and moral health of the community. Notwithstanding the lying advertisements sown broadcast by the literary bureau, the fact remains that any young man attempting to secure employment with The Journal would find his chances reduced by thirty per cent if he smoked cigarets, and that his chances of keeping his job would decline by another thirty per cent if he continued to smoke them after he got it. Cigaret smoking clouds the brain and saps the nerves. Nobody ever regretted letting it alone, but a good many people have regretted beginning it.—The New York Journal.

How General Neal Dow Kept Liquor Out of the Camp.

We had hardly more than anchored there (Port Royal) when a sutlers' schooner came alongside the Mississippi with liquor to sell. I sent a soldier on board to ascertain if liquor was for sale there, and finding that to be the case, dispatched an officer with my compliments to the captain, and the message that if he sold any liquor at all I would have him tied to our masthead. There was no trouble from that source.—From Neal Dow's Autobiography.

Buy of those who advertise in The Union Signal.

FOR YOU

FOR that sour stomach use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they digest the food before it has time to sour, ferment and poison the blood.

FOR loss of appetite, take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because food promptly digested creates a natural desire for MORE.

FOR loss of flesh, use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; they increase flesh in the only common sense way, that is, by digesting flesh-forming food, and assisting the weak stomach in disposing of it.

FOR gas in stomach and bowels, causing distress, belching and headaches, use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; always indicated in such cases.

FOR palpitation of the heart use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets because this symptom in nine out of ten cases is caused from a disordered stomach.

FOR impure blood use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; pure blood can only result from wholesome food thoroughly digested.

FOR every form of weak digestion and stomach trouble (except cancer of the stomach) Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest, most natural, most successful cure. No patent medicine, but composed of digestive acids, pepsin, bismuth, Golden Seal and similar valuable stomach remedies.

For sale by druggists at 50c. for full size package, or by mail from Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. Kindly ask your druggist first.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR the only Official and superbly Illustrated HISTORY OF

OUR WAR WITH SPAIN

ITS CAUSES, INCIDENTS, AND RESULTS. A reliable and exhaustive story of the war, Civil, Military, and Naval, from its beginning to the close. With many fine steel plates, maps, and choice engravings. By Hon. HENRY B. RUSSELL, assisted by SENATOR PROCTOR (Vt.) and SENATOR THURSTON (Neb.). One Agent cleared $200.00 in first two weeks, another $400.00 in three weeks. 1,000 more Agents wanted. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freight, Give Credit, Extra Terms, and Exclusive Territory. Write for terms to the exclusive publishers,
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

It rests with you whether you continue the nerve-killing tobacco habit. NO-TO-BAC removes the desire for tobacco, without nervous distress, expels nicotine, purifies the blood, restores lost manhood, makes you strong in health, nerve and pocket-book. 1,500,000 boxes sold, 400,000 cases cured. Buy NO-TO-BAC from your own druggist, who will vouch for us. Take it with a will, patiently, persistently. One box, $1, usually cures; 3 boxes, $2.50, guaranteed to cure, or we refund money.

STOP SMOKING!

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago, Montreal, New York.

CANCER

The following and many other reliable persons testify that I thoroughly cure Cancer without the knife. Hon. E. W. Jackson, President Board of Education, Lima, Ohio, was cured seven years ago of lip Cancer. Prof. H. McDiarmid, Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio, cured seven years ago of face Cancer. Had undergone several operations before with knife. Address, Dr. C. Weber, 121 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, for further particulars and free book.

BEST BATTERY ON EARTH, $5

Will not get out of order. Can be carried in trunk or satchel, as there is no liquid to spill. In handsome polished hardwood box. Cures Rheumatism, Paralysis, Headaches, Nervous Diseases. Marshall Truss Co., 506 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

New England Conservatory of Music

Unequalled advantages in all departments of Music and Elocution. The Conservatory home for young women provides every comfort and safeguard.
George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.
Pupils received at any time. For prospectus address
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

EVERY LADY SHOULD READ THIS

I will send free a positive cure for all female diseases, irregularities, etc. A simple private treatment, a common sense remedy that never fails. FREE with valuable advice. Mrs. L. HUDNUT, South Bend, Ind.

---

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Signal Notes.

AUSTRALIAN rabbit skins are being converted into sealskins for the American market.

THE pulpit furniture in the new church at Yokohama, Japan, was carved in the industrial department of the Methodist girls' school in Nagasaki.

THE Beer and Wine Trade Society, of Birmingham, England, has sent out a circular to its members, urging them to refuse to serve very young children.

TOLSTOI leaves all practical matters relating to his publications to his wife. She supervises the printing, attends to the correspondence and reads the proofs.

IN Spain it costs £20,000,000 to maintain the army and only £300,000 to educate the children. It is the exception to find a Spanish farmer who is able to read or write.

INVESTIGATIONS in France go to show that the mortality among the children of women working in tobacco is considerably more than double that of children of other working women.

THE annual drink bill of Victoria for 1897 has just been compiled by Mr. J. D. Merson. The expenditure for last year reached £4,295,347, or equal to £3, 13s, 3d, per head for every man, woman and child in the colony.

REV. CHARLES GARRETT, addressing a Band of Hope demonstration in Newcastle-on-Tyne, said it was computed that there were 800,000 drunkards in England, which was equal to two drunkards for every Wesleyan class member.

THE banner lodge I. O. G. T. of the world is found in Glasgow, and is named the "City;" its membership is more than 200 what it was a year ago, and now reaches 865 in good standing. The Grand Lodge of Scotland reports an adult membership of 42,833, with 36,192 juveniles, the increase for the year being 1,895 adults and 3,675 juveniles. The total membership in Scotland at present is 79,023, or 5,570 more than last year.

THE Salvation Army expedition to the Klondike, which consisted of six officers, met with a cordial reception on arrival at Dawson City, and immediately started meetings in the open air. The city administrators have ceded a piece of ground one hundred feet square, on which a barracks is about to be erected. They have also granted a permit for the officers to hew wood within three miles of the city for the purpose of building.

IT is stated that there are 1,000,000 villages in China in which the gospel has never been proclaimed; that the Bible has only been translated into about seventy of the 591 languages and dialects that are found in Africa; that in Japan there are 185 times as many heathen temples as there are Protestant Christian workers; that in one province of India, containing 24,000,000 people, there are only six missionaries of any church or society; and that every hour 2,570 people die who have not once been told about the Saviour of the world.

More than ordinary care is exercised in accepting advertisements for The Union Signal.

LARKIN SOAPS

AND PREMIUMS.—FACTORY TO FAMILY
The Larkin idea fully explained in beautiful free booklet. Free sample Soap if mention this magazine.
The Larkin Soap Mfg Co., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Holiday Goods.

Calendars for 1899.

Our stock of Calendars are all of the latest design, and will be found of the high art order. Some printed in full color, some in monotint, tied with silk cord or ribbon and with appropriate selections for the year.

Turn-Over Calendars of Four Leaves, 10 cents each.

The Pansy The Little Folks

Turn-Over Calendars of Six Leaves, 15 cents each.

The Nasturtium Round the World

Turn-Over Calendars of Twelve Leaves, 15 cents each.

Thou Art, O God Daily Strength
Bright Beams

Drop Leaf Calendars of Six Leaves, 15 cents each.

Silver Cords Divine Thoughts
Gems of Thoughts

The Fireside Calendar . . . . 30 cents
Six turn-over leaves with rural scenes in monotint.

Drop Leaf Calendars, boxed, 25 cents each.

My Calendar Four leaves.
The Golden Way Three leaves.
Fan Calendar Children Design.

Turn-Over Calendars, silver chain, boxed, 25 cents each.

Pearls of Thoughts Four leaves.
I Will Fear No Evil Twelve leaves.
I Shall Be Satisfied Twelve leaves.
A Life Song Twelve leaves.

Three Gems, boxed, at 35 cents each.

Fan Calendar Rich in color, six leaves.
Sweet Childhood Beautiful in design, three drop leaves.
Sweet Fairy Butterfly shape, 12 x 9 inches.

At 50 cents each, boxed.

The Peace of God Love's Calendar Four drop leaves, exquisite in design.
Faith, Hope and Charity A gem, twelve drop leaves.
Sweet Violets Six turn-over leaves, embossed in gold.

Christmas Cards.

A most complete and attractive line of Autographic Christmas Cards, beautifully lithographed in color and monotint, landscapes, figured pieces and embossed cards, packed in handsome boxes with envelopes to fit the cards.

Holly Berries Home Pets
8 folding cards in box, 40 cents per box; single cards, 6 cents each.

Ploughland
Rosebuds Purple Violets
Pansies In Gay Attire
Stray Blossoms Xmas Robins
Ballard Concert Sprig o' Heather
On Mountain Heights
10 single and folding cards in box, 40 cents per box; single cards 5 cents each.

Dainty Ware Christmas Robins
Primroses Two Little Maids
Wild Roses Golden Ivy
Carnations Marguerites
10 folding cards in box, 60 cents per box; single cards 8 cents each.

Early Day Leafy Dells
For Thoughts
10 folding cards in box, 70 cents per box; single cards, 10 cents each.

An assortment of higher priced cards at 12 and 15 cents each; also packages of 6 assorted cards, 25 cents per package.

Sunday School Cards.

Package of 100 cards, 15 and 20 cents per package.
Package of 50 larger cards, 20 cents per package.

Our Father Cards
The Lord's Prayer on 6 cards. 5 cents a package

Praise and Thanksgiving
The Ten Commandments
The Twenty-Third Psalm
Size, 3½ x 4; package of 10 cards, 20 cents.

The Ten Commandments
The Twenty-Third Psalm
Size, 6½x4½; package of 10 cards, 25 cents.

The Books of the Bible
Size, 6½ x 5; package of 10 cards, 30 cents.

Reward of Merit Cards.

The Lord's Prayer The Beatitudes Ten Commandments
Illuminated texts on heavy board with beveled edges; sizes, 7½x5¼; single cards, 8 cents; Package of 10 cards, 75 cents.

These prices are net; no discounts allowed.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
The Temple, Chicago.

VICI
LEATHER DRESSING

It is easy to see which side of this shoe has been polished with Vici Leather Dressing. The lustre, the softness, the look of newness, all testify to the merits of this great medicine for leather.

VICI Leather Dressing is prepared for all kinds of leather—all kinds of shoes. Sold by all dealers. It is made by the makers of Vici Kid, known and worn the wide world round.

An instructive book, handsomely illustrated, about shoes and their care, mailed free.

Robert H. Foerderer, Philadelphia, Pa.

White Ribbon Special Trains to St. Paul, Nov. 10, 1898.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

On Thursday, November 10, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. will run two White Ribbon trains Chicago to St. Paul for Delegates and others attending the annual meeting of National Meeting of the W. C. T. U.

The Daylight special will leave Union Passenger Station, Chicago, at 8:30 A. M., arriving at St. Paul evening of same day, passing through Milwaukee, the summer resort towns of Wisconsin, and along the Mississippi River from La Crosse to St. Paul. The whole route is one of most delightfully varying scenic beauty.

The evening train leaving at 6:30 P. M. will arrive in St. Paul at 7:50 A. M. Friday. It will be electric lighted throughout, with Dining Car, Sleepers, Day Coaches and Free Chair Car.

An additional train with like equipment will leave at 10:15 P. M., arriving in St. Paul at 11:30 A. M. Friday. For return trip, four trains daily St. Paul to Chicago.

The Route of the Pioneer Limited—the only perfect train in the world.

The route of the United States Government Fast Mail.

Reduced rates and further information may be had on application or by addressing C. N. SOUTHER, Ticket Agent, 95 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NORTH-WESTERN LIMITED
Electric Lighted

Is the finest train between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, the Superiors and Duluth. It leaves Chicago 6:3 P. M. daily, reaches St. Paul 7:50 and Minneapolis 8:3 next morning. It is new ly equipped with Library Ca, Private Compartmen t Sleeping Car, Palace nSleping Car, Free Reclining Chair Car, Dining Car aed Coaches. Returning it leaves Minneapolis 7:30 P. M. and St. Paul 8:10 P. M. and arrives Chicago 9:30 A. M. Other trains for St. Paul and Minneapolis leave Chicago at 8:30 A. M. daily except Sunday and 10:15 P. M. daily.

Tickets will be sold on the certificate plan of one and one-third fares for the round trip.

All agents sell tickets via THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY. For rates and full information apply to nearest ticket agent or to

H. A. Gross, 461 Broadway, New York.
J. E. Brittain, 368 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
T. P. Vaille, 601 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
C. Traver, 507 Smithfield St., Pittsburg, Pa.
E. B. Spain, 210 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.
W. A. Cox, 435 Vine St., Cincinnati, Ohio.
D. W. Aldridge, 127 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio.
W. H. Guerin, 67 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.
A. H. Waggener, 7 Jackson Place, Indianapolis, Ind
Or W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

W. C. T. U. Convention, St. Paul, November 11.

The Chicago & North-Western R'y will make reduced rate on the certificate plan of fare and one-third for the round trip on account of this meeting. Special accommodations for delegates will be provided on "The North-Western Limited," leaving Chicago 6:30 P. M. Thursday, November 10, arriving St. Paul 7:50 A. M. This train is electric lighted throughout, has reading lamps in each berth and offers the finest service between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. Tickets and reservations can be obtained upon application to agents of connecting lines or at offices of the company, or by addressing W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Ave., Chicago.

To California.

Attention is called to the excellent service of the North-Western Line to California and the favorable rates which have been made for single and round trip tickets for this season's travel. Best accommodations in first-class or tourist sleeping cars, which run through every day in the year. Personally conducted tourist car parties every week to California and Oregon. Choice of a large number of different routes without extra charge.

Particulars cheerfully given upon application to agents Chicago & North-Western R'y or connecting lines.

THANKSGIVING NUMBER.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE: THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XXIV.—No. 44. Issued Weekly. CHICAGO, November 17, 1898. [Price $1.00 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

NOTES AND COMMENTS 1
CURRENT EVENTS:
Spain not Inclined to Yield—At Home—About Women—Temperance—Educational—Abroad 2
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, My Home. By Frances E. Townsley 3
The Thanksgiving's Morrow. By Louisa A'hmuty Nash 3
Thanksgiving Day Reflections. By Rev. W. Howatt Gardner 4
Economy. By Isabella Webb Parks 4
Willard Hall Echoes 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Two Purity Evangelists in the West 5
Petition Victories 5
Clean Towns 6
Scientific Temperance Instruction in Bermuda 6
LOCAL UNION: 6
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, A True Fairy Tale 7
A Chapter in Exodus. By Mrs. F. M. Howard 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Blessed Thanksgiving Day! 8
The Relation of Reforms to One Another 8
The Miracles of Scripture 8
A Pitiful Petition Against Sending Liquor to Africa . . 9
A New Departure for Deaconesses 9
The Union Signal Signally Complimented 9
Saloons do Big Business 9
Already Come to Pass 9
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Our Young Women—Y's at Work 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
The Secretary's Letter 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
New Jersey—Michigan—Nebraska—Oklahoma 10-13
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 13
W. C. T. U. NOTES 13
Convention Call—Our Country's New Responsibilities—A New Anti-Canteen Petition 14
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 15
THE HOME 15

RED-LETTER DAYS.

PEACE DAY.—December 18.

CRUSADE DAY—December 23.

THE subject of Professor Herron's lecture in Willard Hall next Monday noon will be "The Conflict of Christ with Civilization."

AFTER the usual animated discussion, the National Convention decided by a vote of 236 to 52 to admit the board of superintendents to the executive committee. This action is the culmination of thirteen years of persistent effort on the part of the superintendents, and we are glad to announce this result.

THE Honor Roll has not proven itself so great an incentive for securing new members as had been hoped. Many have worked heroically, but, on the whole, gains have not been as expected. The total number of new members recorded is 6,000, of which 4,760 have been secured by women, 380 by men. The number of names enrolled as having secured ten new members is 121.

THE seven states which, having made a gain of over 500 during the year, will participate in the honors of Benefit Night, are Minnesota, Ohio, Texas, North Dakota, Kansas, Southern California and Indiana, which last leads the van with a net gain of more than 1,000 members. Twenty-nine states, reports the National corresponding secretary, have made lesser gains since the last Convention.

AFTER the books of the National treasurer were closed, Mrs. Barker's heart was made glad by receiving word from Dr. Bessie Cushman, administrator of George Woodford's estate, that $1,000 was awaiting her at the Commercial National bank, in accordance with Mr. Woodford's will giving this amount to the National W. C. T. U. This gift is timely, and is greatly appreciated by the General Officers.

INQUIRIES are coming to the office concerning the "Crusade number" of THE UNION SIGNAL. In reply, we would say that in view of the fact that the report of the National Convention this year will necessarily be largely in the nature of a commemoration of the Crusades and of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the W. C. T. U., there will be no special display Crusade number. The issue of December 15 will, however, be devoted chiefly to Crusade reminiscences, and in each of the three first issues of December unions will find abundant material for the suitable observation of Crusade Day, December 23, which this year marks the quarter century milestone in our history as a National organization.

THE poem, "My Home," on page 3, written several years ago, was sent to Miss Willard after her address in Willard Hall last Thanksgiving Day. In response our dear leader wrote to the author as follows: "Your little poem is a charm. I have put it in my Bible. What you have so tenderly expressed is one of the most familiar thoughts of my heart. The poem ought to be in THE UNION SIGNAL. Will you not send it?" And in sending it, at the request of the editor, Miss Townsley writes, "I well remember that Thanksgiving address of Miss Willard, the last in the Hall which bears her name. Oh, how surely I felt it was her swan song before the eternal Thanksgiving day in the real home!"

HURRAH for South Dakota! The woman suffrage amendment carried on November 8, by a good majority, and that state takes its place as fifth on the roll of honor. The women of South Dakota have been working seven years for the rights and privileges of citizenship. Their efforts to this end in 1890 met with defeat, but an appeal made to the legislature in 1897 resulted in the submission to the voters of a woman suffrage amendment. The election of last week made this amendment part of the state constitution, thereby placing women as voters upon an equal footing with men. Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and South Dakota now stand for the principle of "no sex in citizenship"—a splendid exhibition of Trans-Mississippi push and progress!

IN this issue we can not do more than just note the auspicious opening of the twenty-fifth annual Convention. Chicago delegates left that city in the worst storm of the season to find when they reached St. Paul most delightful weather. Glorious sunshine and invigorating air were features of opening day for which delegates and visitors were duly thankful. A solemn moment was that on Friday morning when the Convention was called to order by another voice than her's whose beloved presence as she stepped upon the platform was always greeted with tumultuous applause. To Mrs. Stevens in this trying hour every heart went out in loving sympathy and loyalty, as, hand and voice trembling with emotion, she took up the ribbon-decked gavel and spoke the first words of the Memorial Convention. The issue of December 1 of our paper will be the regular Convention number, and as there will be, as before announced, no special Crusade number, as full reports as possible will be given, particularly of those parts of the program commemorating the Crusades.

IT is to be noted that not only are our statesmen discussing the merits and demerits of that new issue in American politics, the "expansion" policy, and its consequence, an increased standing army, but that the brain which is behind the hand that rocks the cradle and—we are told—rules the world, is giving considerable thought to the subject also. And it is a question quite within the legitimate sphere of womankind, even though that sphere may be regarded as bounded by the four walls of home. Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch considering the subject of imperialism in a pertinent article entitled, "The Manifest Destiny of Women," published in a New York paper, points out that colonial interests would mean to America, as it means to England, a loss of balance between the sexes at home, and that the resultant economic conditions are such as to draft women into the industrial army to fill the gaps made by a large standing army and a big navy. Women do not weep and wait while men go a-soldiering, but they go forth to fight the battle of life in field and factory. Mrs. Blatch concludes with these words: "Do the women of America wish to outnumber the men of their country; do they wish prostitution to increase; do they wish to be pushed out of their work of home-building into that of field and factory? If not, the time has come, especially for the women of the working classes, to make their voices heard, and tell their men-folk that it is not the nation's destiny to raise the Filipinos and lower their own women to the level of Continental Europe."

Current Events.

Spain Not Inclined to Yield.

Work of the Peace Commission Remains at a Standstill.

THE Spanish newspapers assert that the government of Spain is sending instructions to its commissioners at Paris not to yield on the question of Spanish sovereignty over the Philippine Islands, which is asserted to be entirely outside of the protocol, wherefore the commissioners are not authorized to discuss it.

It is further asserted that the Spanish government will declare that it has not been authorized by the Cortes to negotiate the cession of the Philippine Islands.

The Liberal advises the Spanish Peace Commissioners to leave Paris after lodging a protest against the demands of the Americans.

The Heraldo asserts that the Spanish government has resolved to maintain Spain's sovereignty in the Philippine Islands, and it adds that it has been suggested that Emperor William of Germany, who is expected to visit Cadiz and Madrid soon, on his way back to Germany from the Holy Land, be asked to arbitrate the questions in dispute between Spain and the United States in the event of the peace commissions of the respective countries now in session in Paris failing to come to an agreement upon the terms of the proposed treaty of peace.

The next communication from the Spanish commissioners will deal with the rights of either commission to discuss Spanish sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and with the American contention that the retention of public moneys and customs collections at Manila is justified by the fact of the military occupation of the place by the American forces and warranted by the protocol, even if faulty, as claimed by Spain, because such action commenced after the suspension of hostilities.

At Home.

A PRACTICAL gift to the poor of Washington is that of 1,000 cords of wood by Pierre Waggaman of that city.

AFTER a bitter fight of several hours the city council of Rockford, Ill., by a vote of 8 to 6, passed a curfew ordinance compelling all children under sixteen years of age to be off the streets by nine o'clock at night.

THE War Department has decided to bring back, at government expense, the remains of soldiers who have died in Cuba, Porto Rico and Manila. The remains will be carefully disinfected and placed in hermetically sealed caskets before shipment.

THE bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church of America have sent the following message to the Czar of Russia:

> Your majesty's appeal to international discussion will stimulate the consciences of civilized nations, and the inauguration of this noble movement may well be considered "a happy presage for the century which is about to open," and mark an epoch in the progress of the world.

THE will of the late O. D. Hadsell, of Chicago, an eccentric bachelor, who died recently, bequeaths his estate of $50,000 to the trustees of the First Methodist church, the income to be used to clothe and feed one hundred newsboys and waifs for ninety-nine years. It is said that Mr. Hadsell was once a newsboy in New York city.

THE capitol at Washington was badly damaged by fire resulting from an explosion in the basement on November 6 The room of the United States supreme court was seriously burned, the library of the court was practically ruined and priceless legal records were destroyed. The explosion is attributed to a defective gas meter.

KANSAS will furnish the first colony of immigrants to settle in Cuba from the United States. John T. Veney, a colored Baptist preacher well known in Topeka, has made arrangements for a settlement of colored persons near Santiago, and expects to start from Topeka with about thirty families in twenty or thirty days. His idea is to establish a town on the high land above Santiago, which he will call Topeka.

THE Maria Teresa, the Spanish warship raised by Hobson, which left Caimanera on her way north last week, encountered a storm off San Salvador, November 1, and was abandoned in a sinking condition. No lives were lost, as the crew was transferred to the convoy. The ship has since then been located near Cat Island, where she lies stranded about two miles off shore. It is possible that she may yet be saved.

MAYOR QUINCY, of Boston, has notified the schools that the permanent bath house for the free use of the public has been opened, and has requested the teachers in the schools within a reasonable distance of it to encourage their pupils to use it regularly. The charge of one cent for the use of a towel and one cent for a piece of soap is made except on Saturday afternoons, when everything is free to school children.

THE Chicago Penny Savings Society has been granted articles of incorporation by the authorities at Springfield. It is this organization which introduced the penny saving system into the public schools of the city. The work is carried on independently of the Board of Education and is said to be highly successful in its purpose of inculcating habits of thrift in children of school age and in incidentally discouraging purchases of chewing gum and cigarets.

THE race war in North Carolina which grew out of the election contests, has culminated in riots which have resulted in the loss of a dozen lives. President McKinley has directed United States Marshal Melton and United States Attorney Althrop, of South Carolina, to proceed at once to Greenwood in that state, and to report forthwith by wire the condition prevailing there. Upon their report will depend the decision to use or not to use federal forces in South Carolina.

THE New England Sabbath Protective League, of Boston, has issued to the public a protest against a circular distributed among the schools. The circular was issued by the music commission of the city, at the suggestion of the mayor, calling attention to the Sunday evening concerts in Music Hall, under the charge of eminent conductors. The teachers were asked to call the attention of their pupils to the concerts and to the fact that they offered educational music at a low price. The league protests against such a use of the Sabbath.

COMMISSIONER-GENERAL T. V. Powderly, of the Immigration Bureau, in his annual report to the Secretary of the Treasury, gives the total number of immigrants who arrived in the United States during the last fiscal year as 229,299, a decrease as compared with the fiscal year 1897 of 1,533. During the year 3,030 were debarred, and of this number there were twelve insane, one idiot, 2,261 paupers, or persons likely to become a public charge, 258 diseased persons, two convicts, 79 assisted emigrants, and 417 contract laborers. One hundred and ninety-nine were returned within one year after landing. Of the whole number over 14 years of age 1,416 could not write, 43,057 could neither read nor write, 27,608 over 20 years of age had $30 or over, and 96,203 had less than $30.

About Women.

MISS BERTHA LEBUS and Miss Sarah Wilde, of Los Angeles, Cal., lately passed a brilliant examination for admission to the bar before the supreme court.

MRS. MARGARET BLACK, of Glasgow, Scotland, is a member of the city board of education. She is also an officer of the school of cookery, and is active in other lines of valuable work.

MISS HELEN GOULD has received a twelve-inch projectile from the navy department to decorate the grounds of Lyndhurst, her country place, south of Tarrytown, and serve as a souvenir of the war with Spain. It weighs 800 pounds.

ELECTION returns from Idaho show that a number of women have won out for office. Mrs. Clara Campbell, Republican, of Ada county, and Mrs. Hattie Noble, Democrat, of Boise county, are elected to the legislature. Miss Permeal French has been elected state superintendent of public instruction. County school superintendents are nearly all women.

MISS ANNA M. SACKETT, of Waukesha, Wis., has revoked a legacy of $5,000 to Carroll College in that place, because the trustees persist in permitting the students to play football. Miss Sackett saw one game and changed the legacy.

A DISPATCH from West Branch, Mich., states that Mrs. Merrie L. Abbott of that place bears the distinction of being the only woman in the world ever elected to the office of prosecuting attorney. The supreme court will be asked to pass on her eligibility.

TWENTY-FIVE Methodist pulpits in Indianapolis, Ind., including the two German, were occupied October 30 by the missionaries and other women in attendance at the meeting of the general executive committee of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

THE stenographer and translator of the Peace Commission is a Miss Marie McNaughton, from the state of Michigan. She passed a high grade of examination a year ago for translator in the Bureau of American Republics. She is one of only two women who are paid by the government the salary of $2,500.

Temperance.

FRANK S. REGAN, of Rockford, the recently elected Prohibition representative from the tenth district, Illinois, is the first prohibitionist in the House since 1886, when the same district elected James Lamont over Captain Berry, an obnoxious Republican. This time a Democrat is defeated. Mr. Regan is a lawyer and abstractor, an expert court stenographer and has won fame as a cartoonist or chalk talker.

THE Moville, Ia., city council has enacted a rigorous ordinance against drunkenness. For the first violation the culprit may be fined not less than five dollars, and for the fourth or any higher number not less than $100, and the mayor has no authority to suspend or remit the fine after it has been made a matter of record. Those who cannot pay must be imprisoned until the fine is liquidated at the rate of $3.33 per day.

Educational.

IT is stated that W. C. Macdonald has given a further sum of over $25,000 to the electrical department of the science building of McGill University, Montreal.

JAMES LAW and sister, of Shushan, N. Y., have donated to Monmouth College $50,000, on condition that the institution raise a similar amount. The offer has been accepted by the trustees, who entertain no doubt but the college will meet the requirements. The donors desire their gift to constitute part of an endowment fund, especially devoted to the chairs of sociology and literature. The Laws have also donated $15,000 to the Allegheny Theological Seminary and $35,000 to the mission boards of the United Presbyterian church.

Abroad.

THE Norwegian storthing has adopted a resolution to introduce a purely Norwegian flag, without the emblem of the union with Sweden.

THE mails from Sierra Leone, West Africa, bring news of the hanging at Kwellu of thirteen murderers of American missionaries, members of the United Brotherhood of Christ, in the Sherbro district of Sierra Leone last May.

GREAT BRITAIN, France and Italy have accepted Russia's proposal to appoint Prince George, of Greece, high commissioner of the powers in the island of Crete. The Turkish government has appealed to Germany and Austria against the proposal, but ineffectually.

AN old age pension bill has passed the present New Zealand assembly, which applies to all persons over sixty-five years old. The pension amounts to only ninety dollars a year, or about $1.75 a week, and no one who has an income of over five dollars a week, or property worth more than $2,700 will be entitled to it. Again, five dollars of the pension will be deducted for every five dollars of income which a pensioner may receive from other sources. There are certain other qualifications, among them twenty years' residence in the colony and ten years' exemplary conduct.

Contributed.

My Home.

BY FRANCES E. TOWNSLEY.

In my Father's house are many homes.—John 14: 2.
[Free rendering of literal Greek.]

I HAVE none here. Nay! Do not say I'm wrong;
I have full many friends whose hearts are true;
Whose hand's fond pressure in my need is strong
To fill my fainting soul with courage new.

They give me shelter from the summer's heat
And winter's snow, in kindest, gladdest tone,
In their own homes—ah, this the grief complete—
THEIR homes—alas! I have none of my own.

"My Father's house." Once, years and years ago,
A father's care gave me a royal place
In his own dwelling, and, his darling child,
I wore the crown of love's unbounded grace.

An orphan now, of His most precious words,
Each one of which with peace or healing comes,
No sweeter can be read me than the Lord's
"Within my Father's house are many homes."

The wife's assurance, and the mother's grace,
The father's ownership and certainty,
The child's demand for love and rest and place
Unearned, yet given freely, royally—

Are sweet to see; yet unto no such band
Christ's farewell word with such deep meaning comes,
As unto lonely hearts who understand
The "In my Father's house are many homes."

He said, "I do prepare for you a place."
Prepare? A place for me? Where I belong?
Whose right of ownership none may displace,
Because the love which makes it mine is strong!

Prepare! He knows what things I love the best,
What tokens of His grace I long to share;
He knows my weakness and my need of rest,
And how to answer each unspoken prayer.

His home and mine! I can afford to wait,
And waiting, smile; for One who needs me sore
Is fitting up my mansion. At its gate
He waits to open unto me the door.

He wooed me with Love's pleading, yearning breath,
He asked for me in dark Gethsemane;
He trod for me the sepulcher of death,
And lives, to claim my love eternally!

And without me His joy is incomplete;
One place is empty until I shall come;
And when I fall before His blessed feet,
He'll lift me to His heart, in my own home!

Vassar, Mich.

The Thanksgiving's Morrow.

BY LOUISA A'HMUTY NASH.

"WELL, Jennie, how do you like the home, now winter is coming on?" asked her husband.

"I like it better and better," was her answer, "and I see no signs of winter yet. The air is soft and warm, and, but for the fallen leaves, I could not believe we were already in November."

"Then you don't regret the city at all?"

"Why, no, certainly not. Didn't I tell you I was made for the country all along? It's somehow native to me. And how do you like it, Steve, now you've made a good trial with all the fresh kinds of work?"

The Brimblecombes had been years paying into a farming concern (the "Home Making Company") of the Pacific slope, so that when they felt like it they could leave the crowded eastern city behind them, with its long business hours, its street-car journeys, its constraints and conventionalities. The farming concern got everything ready for them, built their house, fenced in their acres, planted their orchard trees and small fruits, stirred up the virgin soil, and would have put in their first crop if they had wished it. They were not to undergo the hard lot of the pioneers, felling the trees, burning the brush, and waiting for a clearing before they could sow and plant, then fearing the advent of a forest fire to destroy their rough-hewn shanty, and hungering for speech of neighbors that were nowhere within eight or ten miles. No, the Brimblecombes had paid reasonable installments for their ready-made privileges, but having got them, they never begrudged the money so well bestowed. Up and down the breezy valley were snug homes, each with its setting of fruitful greenery. There was the village, somewhat as the man remembered it out of his childhood's days in the old country. There was the little store of all sorts; the postoffice, with the mail and express wagon coming in day by day from the railroad depot and the outer world. There was the community fruitdryer just now busily at work. There was the gristmill, with its water-wheel turned by the mountain stream, the sun glinting on the tiny torrent as it shone out from between the stately firs. And the schoolhouse, with its calling-bell stood on the little hill above, and—"there was no saloon in the valley"!

The schoolhouse on the hill served for Sunday services, and there was an ex-minister among the settlers who preached none the worse a sermon nor prayed none the less fervent a prayer because he tilled his garden ground through the week. Was it not quite as respectable an occupation as the tents that the apostle Paul made? There was an ex-doctor, too, worn out with the sick and the dying of the city on the plain. But he got little cause to call him off his beloved fruit ranch, for in this bracing air, filled with the ozone from the yet standing fir trees, and breathed on by a kindlier heaven than in the northern climes, there were few sick people. The invalids grew strong and hearty again, and the children were bonny as the early spring time.

"This place reminds me more and more of Devonshire—'dear Devon,' as we used to say—when we went into the midland shires to school," said Steve to his wife one bright November day. "I could almost fancy myself back in the old haunts; there's the hill and dale, the 'cumbes,' as we Devonshire folk called 'combes,' the little trickling stream and all, except that we had no grand fir trees like those" (pointing where the finger-tips went straight up into the sky), "or those where the hands hang down as though they were tired of pointing up. Neither do we have the fringe of burnt woods on the farther hill, where it looks golden in the setting sun. That belongs to the new world. Guess that the fir timber was all cut down hundreds of years ago! Strange that the English folk never planted it again fresh (the same as they keep doing still in Scandinavia), and were content to have it shipped from there! It grows right enough, as one can see by the gentlemen's parks and 'conifer walks,' as they call them."

"I should think the orchards remind you of Devonshire, too, from what your auntie says," put in his wife. She was American born, but always liked her husband to talk to her of the old home.

"Yes, that they do. I have not seen such fine rosy apples since I left the west of England when I was a boy. They make me think of my father's orchard at Throughleigh. The apples went there mostly for cider. The farmers used to pay their men partly in cider then, instead of their having full wages to take home to their wives. They'd drink and drink this liquid wage up, and fine havoc it made of them sometimes! It made me so mad when I used to go out working, that I could not handle the money I worked for, that that was one reason—mixed up with a lot more—why I came over here. Still cider isn't bad stuff in moderation. It never did me any harm, and I thought just for 'auld lang syne' I'd make a little this year, instead of sending all the apples to the dryer or to market. It will come in well for filling a chink at our Thanksgiving dinner, Christmas, and such like!"

"But, Steve, I thought you did not approve of the cider goings-on in Devonshire," expostulated Mrs. Brimblecombe.

"Nor did I; but making just a little for your own use is a very different thing to paying your hired men on it—don't you see, Jennie? Besides, using it up when it's almost fresh is quite a different article. The devil gets into it when it's casked up months and months."

"It's impossible to tell the exact moment when the devil does get into it, so I don't think it very safe at any time," said Jennie meekly. "But do as you like about it; it's only a little you're making, I suppose. We used to see such terrible sights where we came from that the bare thought of any strong drink almost frightens me."

"Of course the city and the country are two very different places. In a city it's always best to steer clear of it with a wide berth; but in a quiet little valley like this, with no reporters round, a glass of sweet cider can't do any one any harm. There's no need to be so straight-laced, Jennie!"

"But the children, Steve. Harry takes notice of everything, and Jackie, too, for that matter. What do you think of that little fellow saying to me, when he saw me making the brandy sauce for your birthday pudding, 'Why, mamma, aren't you afraid of growing up into a drunkard if you have brandy sauce?' The little darling! But it's just as you say."

"Well, call it 'apple ade' if you like, Madam Fussy," said Steve, a little nettled. He had been in the habit of always thinking his way the best way, and had not been accustomed to any one gainsaying it, and his Jennie was what one might call indolent-willed. She had plenty of will of her own, but it was easier to her nature not to take the trouble to exert it. "You know best, dear," she would say in the sweetest way in the world, so of course Steve continued to consider that he knew best. He was a kind-hearted man and if she had not brought him up to that way (for husbands and wives have a great deal to do with the bringing up of each other) it would have been better for both of them.

Thanksgiving dawned with the autumnal promise of a fine day. It broke with the morning mist, which like the primeval mist of Eden, kept the mountain valley green and fresh all through the summer suns. Now as it rolled away, the dried bracken on the hilltops took on a rosy red, and the cattle wandered far aloft, seeking the wild pea before its pods were all shed.

The children were all proud of their schoolhouse church, for their yesterday's half holiday had been spent in decorating it for the admiring gaze of the elders, when they assembled to praise God that morning. The children sang their Thanksgiving song with lusty young voices and glowing hearts:

Things bright and beautiful,
All things great and small,
All things wise and wonderful,
The Lord God made them all.

And the verse that pictured so well their new home:

The purple-headed mountain,
The river flowing by,
The rushes by the fountain,
Tell us that God is nigh.

The Brimblecombe dinner was a great affair, for they had many young and old relations in the colony to join their board. Jennie had spread herself on a true Devonshire junket with its upper layer of real Devonshire cream, in which she had mixed "plenty of love" (the way with the housewife who tries to please her loved ones).

"Now for the Devonshire cider to cap mother's dish," said Steve, as from the bit of a basement they had, he called to little Harry to bring a pitcher. He showed him how to take out the "spile-peg" that it might run better, tapped it, and called it "fine."

Cousin John Vellacott smacked his lips at table and called it "fine," too, "splendid old Devonshire tipple." And Harry was given a whole glass to himself, because Thanksgiving "comes but once a year, and when it comes it brings good cheer"! His bright eyes sparkled, and a deeper rose than usual mantled his plump, round cheeks, as he carried his glass round for his father to fill up again.

"Harmless as Adam's ale, Jennie, my dear," said Steve, casting a deprecating glance towards his wife.

"You know best, dear, you came from Devonshire, and I did not," was her mild response. But she did not like the look of her Harry's eager, excited ways. She got him off to bed earlier than usual, saying he had a long, tiring day for such a little man. Then combing his light, curly hair with her fingers, she said softly:

"My boy is too sleepy to say his own little prayer to-night, mother must say it for him—

God bless my darling, and keep temptation from him, make him a blessing to his parents, and teach us how to train him and fit him for his home above."

She dropped a warm tear as well as a fond kiss on his curly head. She did not like the look of the almost hectic flush, nor yet the sound of the quick, hard breathing that met her ear, and she promised herself that she would pour off a quart or so of this cider without telling Steve, that it might be emptied before it worked mischief to anybody.

The morning brought her an unusual load of clearing-up duties. The boys had played hide-and-go-seek in and out of her kitchen as usual, and her fearful thoughts were laid to rest.

At dinner time her husband called Harry to take his place at his father's side, but no Harry came.

"Jackie, where's Harry?" asked his mother.

"Hawy tir'd, Hawy gone to s'eep, me not s'eepy," lisped the pretty baby.

"But you were both playing hide-and-go-seek; who hid last, you or Harry?"

"Hawy hid, and went to s'eep, I tell 'oo," said the child, with persistence.

"Couldn't you find him then?"

"'Es, I find him, a'ter I been to see 'oo, but Hawy didn't call whoop, 'cos he been to s'eep, I tell 'oo; and Hawy wouldn't wake up when I call him."

"Where did Harry go to sleep? Not on his bed, for I have been to see. Come and show fadie where Harry went to sleep, like a clever little man." And his father took him down from the high baby chair, and taking his hand, let the child lead him wherever he wanted.

But childish memories are short, and Jackie was a long time finding the place. He led his father to the stable and to the barn, besides over the house. Then returning thither, light suddenly broke in upon him, and pointing down below to the cellar door he said:

"Down there, fadie, Hawy went to s'eep."

Sure enough, there was Harry, stretched out on the cold earth floor, close to the cider cask, with his curly head lying upon a piece of wood that happened to be there. The sight of the child, with a white face now, seemed to take away the father's breath. He no longer heard the baby prattle by his side saying, "Hawy, wake up! 'Oo'll have no dinner!" He lifted him gently up. His limbs hung limp, and the movement did not seem to disturb him. With trembling arms Steve carried him in to his mother and laid him softly on the bed.

Hurriedly Dr. Vincent was sent for, but he could give no relief. Hearing where the child was found, he guessed the cause of this alarming condition. Going down to examine the spot, they found that the "spile-peg" had been removed, and there was a straw lying near through which he had evidently sucked the cider.

The breathing came fainter and fainter, and it was not very long before the last breath was drawn, and with a little kind of sob, the young life sighed itself away.

"Clearly," Dr. Vincent said, "a case of alcoholic poisoning."

Piteous were the groans that shook the strong man's frame, and heartrending the father's self-upbraidings and bitter reproaches.

And his mother, with streaming eyes, as she once more let her fingers stray through his bright curls, whispered to herself: "Safe from all temptation."

From that sad day father and mother took sweet counsel together. Jennie no longer allowed the weeds of indolence to grow over her own will-power, though it was through gentleness it ever worked. Steve helped her in this, and the twin-flowers of strength and beauty grew up and bloomed from Harry's grave.

Nashville, Ore.

Thanksgiving Day Reflections.

BY REV. W. HOWATT GARDNER.

IN some respects our Thanksgiving Day resembles the Jewish feast of Tabernacles. That was a national institution appointed by the great Jewish lawgiver, Moses. It was also called the "feast of ingathering," held annually at the end of the harvest season. By dwelling during the feast in crude booths, or tabernacles, built of the branches of olive, palm or pine trees, outside the walls of Jerusalem, and within the streets, the people were reminded of the struggles of their forefathers in the wilderness, unhoused, sometimes in despair, then filled with hope, ever pushing on in search of "the better country" where they might develop their national life. This feast recalled God's gracious guidance in past history, and acknowledged present blessing in abundant harvest. Its peculiar characteristic was the spirit of rejoicing, praise and thanksgiving. This spirit entered largely into the life of ancient Israel. Not only in their law was "the sacrifice of thanksgiving" prescribed, but their national hymns express praise and thanksgiving. "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise. Be ye thankful and bless the Lord," sings their greatest poet.

Not alone for the individual, but for the nation to be grateful augurs well for the perpetuity of the nation. For a people to realize that their dependence is on God is the surest way to build safely. As long as the nation of Israel welcomed in their midst the righteous, living God, and believed that He had a vital interest in their welfare, their national prosperity was assured. But when they forgot the God of their fathers they fell, as a nation, to pieces, as does the arch when one pulls away the keystone.

Thanksgiving Day is our American feast of tabernacles. It is a memorial day as well as a day of thanksgiving for the blessings of the past year. We have a history as remarkable as that of Israel. Our forefathers, desiring civil and religious liberty, landed on the bleak coast of New England, built for themselves crude huts, or tabernacles, from the trees of the forests, battled with elements of nature, struggled in a veritable wilderness, dug and delved among the rocks of that country, to impart to us their sturdy character and to lay the foundations of our national life. They went forth to sow with prayer and to harvest with thanksgiving. This day, first observed for many years in New England and proclaimed by the governors of the different states, became, soon after the Civil War, which knit together the many states as never before, a national holiday by proclamation of the President.

But the old spirit and fervor of our fathers has been lost. Our official proclamations have become a formal matter, some of them even colored in the interest of partisan politics. We make the day to pamper our physical sensations; some make more of feasting than of thanksgiving; some give themselves entirely to gluttony and wine-bibbing; as a people we forsake the house of our God. Is there not a reason for this decadence of Thanksgiving day?

During the Civil War a new spirit entered into our national life. The commercial spirit reared itself in opposition to the Holy Spirit, Mammon against God. Men became intoxicated with the vast resources of the country and the possible accumulations of wealth. While many, moved by patriotism, went forward to give their lives for their country, others stayed at home and laid the foundations of colossal fortunes. While shot and shell were flying fast and piling high the dead, some were scheming how they might fatten on the bonded debt of the nation. The Civil War destroyed one social evil in abolishing a slave holding class, but ushered in a new warfare between the producing class and the speculative or capital holding class. The nation that attempts to "serve God and Mammon," which Christ declared an impossibility, is unstable and in danger.

Since the Civil War, particularly of late, two dangerous sentiments are astir. The demand is made that the machinery of government should be used in the service of what is called the "business" or "vested interests." The demand is made for "the business man" in politics, as the representative in legislatures and in Congress. Will the business man or paid attorney of great combinations of capital adequately represent the interests of the ordinary toilers and producers of wealth? Not unless he has recently met with a change of heart. To ignore the great army of producing citizens in the functions of government is perilous. Already legislators are corrupted, the judiciary debauched, and even the army employed to subserve and guard "vested interests," as though there were no other interests anywhere except the interests of those who control vast industrial enterprises and wield the godless power of combined capital.

The words spoken in a critical moment at our nation's birth are still pertinent for our nation's growth,—"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Notwithstanding, the horizon is bright with promise. There are socially healthful indications. A very sensitive public opinion is an indication of a sound national conscience. The people are very jealous of their heritage from the fathers. Let any bold, unmistakable effort be made to abridge any right of the people, and the public conscience becomes aroused. Not long since an attempt was made to suppress the reasonable freedom of thought and utterance of a distinguished president of a prominent university in the east. At once all over the country a storm of protest arose. On an enlightened public opinion dependence can be placed. It may sometimes seem slow, and even recreant, but it soon reasserts itself, and the more powerfully.

Another sign of health is in the progress of democracy. It is asserted that the anticipations of the fathers have not been realized; that such a government as they planned is practically out of the question; that universal suffrage is a failure and some other form of government must be substituted. In fact, democratic government in this country has never been fully tried. Most valuable elements in democratic government, the initiative and referendum, direct legislation and proportional representation, have not been used, as in Switzerland. Democratic government is coöperative. Officials are responsible to the people, and not to a class, however powerful in wealth. A healthful indication also is in the facility with which the people become independent in politics, and in the vigorous attempts to revolt from "boss" rule. The shackles of party are not binding hard. The "boss," whether in city, state, or nation, is the creature on whom "vested interests" depend to secure their ends. They provide the funds for campaigns, while the "bosses," their political vassals, manage the primaries and whip in the voters.

For a sensitive public opinion and the progress of democracy, let us be thankful. But what is public opinion, if not enlightened by the Spirit of God? What can Democracy do, if God live not in it? Let us believe that God is as surely interested in the affairs of this nation as ever He was in the affairs of Israel. Let us develop a strong consciousness of our dependence on Him, and be not in haste to attribute our successes and abundant crops, to the tariff, gold standard, our party, anything rather than God. "In Him we live, and move, and have our being."

Livingston, N. J.

Economy.

BY ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

IN its broadest sense, viz., the wise expenditure of all we have, money, time, strength, intellectual and physical gifts to reach the best ends, economy is one of the noblest of virtues. But, unfortunately, to many persons economy means only non-expenditure, or saving of money without regard to whether there is any good purpose in the saving or not. The attempt, as George Eliot expresses it, "to nibble off an existence and leave the smallest possible deficit" seems to such persons the height of human virtue. Beside the profligacy which first wastes its own and then encroaches upon its neighbor's possessions, even this kind of economy may well appear a virtue, yet in truth its effect upon character is only less deleterious than the opposite vice. He who denies himself food and clothing that others may be fed and clad, obeys the Master's teaching; he who wears himself out watching over the sick and suffering does as Christ would do in his place. But he that does any of these things for the mere sake of wasting and mortifying his body, sins against himself and his Maker. So he who saves money from things of less importance to use it for the highest needs, does a wise and virtuous thing, but he who denies himself or others what would contribute to their physical, intellectual or spiritual growth for no other purpose than saving in itself, sins against himself, his fellows and God.

Our complex and costly civilization with its treasures of art and science, literature and mechanical invention and its unequal distribution of wealth, has made true economy one of the most difficult of virtues. On every hand, an infinite number of good and desirable things invite us. It is not strange that many err on the side of profligacy and exemplify "Poor Richard's" maxim: "Pride breakfasted with plenty, dined with poverty and supped with infamy." But, avoiding Scylla, others fall upon Charybdis. "Wealth is not a matter of how much we have, but of how little we want," preach the wiseacres of thrift. "Learn to want nothing and you will be as well off as if you desired much and had your desires gratified." Such doctrine practiced would put an end to all human progress. It is because his wants are never satisfied that man is capable of a progressive civilization. It is a virtue to be content in whatsoever state we are only when we can not better that estate. It would be a positive crime for a modern Christian to voluntarily shut himself in Paul's prison. It is right to desire the good and beautiful things which our Christian civilization provides, for "the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," and it was designed for the use and enjoyment of His children, provided only we desire true character so much more that we can never be tempted to forfeit character for any of these incidentals.

Above all, it is duty to long for the things which contribute to the development of our highest nature. The man who denies himself the best literature with which this age abounds when able to get it, who adds dollar after dollar to his bank account when he might hang upon his walls the choicest pictures, who starves out all his capacity to enjoy music in order that he may swell the already unnecessarily large sum laid up for old age or a "rainy day," is to be pitied as we pity the equally small soul that spends all its living upon gewgaws and tinsel. And he who is deaf to his own soul's highest needs is not likely to be touched by the needs of his brother.

Life is not meat and drink. It is the highest development of our whole nature, the noblest use of all our powers. Whatever contributes to this is true economy.

Atlanta, Ga.

Willard Hall Echoes.

'Tis always noontide somewhere,
And across the shining continents from shore to shore,
Somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.
—Adapted from Longfellow.

"THE power of personal influence" was brightly and forcefully portrayed by Mrs. Owen Hitchcock, of Canada. The illustrations were both tender and humorous, and the deep, underlying principle of life brought out by these word pictures aroused thought and brought tears of memory and sympathy to the eyes of many. We shall be glad to hear Mrs. Hitchcock when she speaks again December 1.

. . . . . .

The testimonies of three young men came clear, positive and earnest:

"God never asks you to go through a path unless He leads."

"Temptations come, but are never too strong if you are in the companionship of Jesus."

"God brings His people through the furnace, He does not leave them alone in it."

At the close of a service a young man came to sign the pledge. "I lost my wife nine months ago and I have been steadily growing worse and worse. I know God can help me. I frightened my wife by going away on a spree when she was ill, and she died before I could ask her to forgive me. I have prayed to her every night since, but she does not answer me. Will God tell her how sorry I feel?" Oh, the blackness of the night of separation! Remorse, remorse! Remember to speak the kind word while the loved one is here. Give the flowers when the eye will brighten and the hand be outstretched to receive.

. . . . . .

A man came in, said he wanted to commit suicide—that he was an outcast—no place for him in the world. When we told him we would pray for him he looked up and said, "Will the God you pray to, hear me? He used to answer my mother's prayers."

A man who is a skeptic said he did not need prayer or the pledge, but he often comes to Willard Hall. Pray earnestly that through the services here he may see his need of the Saviour. His influence is so strong in the wrong direction.

(MRS.) JESSIE BROWN HILTON,
Leader Noonday Meetings.

Correspondence.

Two Purity Evangelists in the West.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—For the past fourteen months Dr. Carolyn Geisel and myself have been journeying from state to state in the interest of the National rescue work to discover, if possible, from the outlook of the chiefs of police in the different cities and from the thought of the different ministers of the gospel, what more could be done by our white-ribboners to save these sinking souls. We have learned much in this interchange of thought and experience, and observed, too, keenly, the suffering and desire on the part of many for release from their bondage in the Scarlet House. In each of these homes visited in the one hundred and ninety-four cities we passed through, we felt if the Christian people but knew the anguish, sorrow of heart and torture of body, there would be home missionaries from the churches doing this work for the Master. I think I never realized the magnitude of our dear Miss Willard's work until touching the extremity of the fields in which she has labored. One or two facts of the many may be of interest to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL.

At Salt Lake city where in the lap of Mormonism drunkenness is not common, but prohibition is unpopular, Miss Willard has planted for a glorious harvest, and the temperance workers are alive in the Master's service. So many incidents related to us by our hostess, Mrs. Lusa Young Gates, daughter of Brigham Young, while at Provo, Utah, were historical facts which we had not known. She entertained us royally and took much pleasure in taking us where curious tourists are not allowed. We spent an afternoon in "Aunt Zina's" home, the former wife of Joseph Smith, the originator of Mormonism. After his death Aunt Zina was sealed to Brigham Young. We were interested to know of their difference in belief, the baptism for the dead by immersion, the marrying for the dead, and the fact that before Joseph Smith's death he claimed to have a revelation telling him the location of the Garden of Eden. Aunt Zina said with a settled belief that the Garden of Eden was in America. When asked where, she replied, "In Adamandi, Davis County, Mo." Oliver Cowdrey was the man who took down the writing which Joseph Smith read through the Urim and Thummim from plates in the rock. May the good Lord bless these dear earnest souls, and help our white-ribboners to shine a light into their lives that will tell in eternity. Our most permeating influence in mission work is love, and from my experience with the Salt Lake union they are no strangers to the fact.

We were sorely depressed when seeing the Piute Indians swarming near the depot at Ogden, huddled in their blankets on the ground to sleep. We went down in the early morning to see them arise. The women folded up their primitive beds, while the men formed in a circle, before breakfast, to play cards. A poor Mahalee went to a saloon near by, and purchasing liquor, brought it to the waiting crowd. Again I sought these mistreated Indians out in Wadsworth, Nev., going out to their "wickieups." I found them drinking, playing cards, gambling, swearing, and many of their women are victims of the white man's crime. There, too, Miss Willard's influence had extended, and I was glad to see our W. C. T. U. sister, Mrs. J. W. Smith, had started a work among these poor souls, with energetic efforts to bring them to the Saviour. Mrs. Frances Smith, of Ogden, Utah, lately elected state president of Utah, is a grand woman for the post. May God raise up many such. She has an efficient corps of workers, consecrated women, for service. Across the great American desert we followed our leader's footsteps, and found that Nevada, sparsely settled as it is, had a concentrated force in its Woman's Christian Temperance Union to do away with the lottery bill in Nevada in 1898. I wish some woman of means would go that way and work with them without remuneration and cheer their hearts.

We leaped from the forty miles of snow sheds into a yard of orange blooms and summer fruits. Sacramento lured us, but we sped on to Oregon to find that dear Mrs. Anna R. Riggs had been faithfully scattering seed beside all waters, and has had under her care, in the Home for Erring Women, twenty-one girls of sin in 1898, that were eleven years of age. We are becoming a nation, indeed, of child lepers. We visited her home for girls, but did not see her, as she was quite ill. The rescue workers are falling from overwork, because the laborers in this neglected branch of work in the vineyard are so few. But my story is so long I must take another time in which to finish it. Yours faithfully,

ISABEL WING LAKE.

Chicago, Ill.

Petition Victories.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—I have revamped a former argument for petitions to cheer the W. C. T. U. in their present splendid but arduous work in that line.

The December session of Congress will have before it more important questions than have been up since the Civil War, such as the extension to our new island territories of the laws that require temperance education and forbid prize fights, and easy divorce in our present territories, and the prohibitory law now in force in Alaska and Indian Territory. For such extension we should at once petition and support the petitions by letters, and, best of all, by personal interviews with congressmen and senators while they are at home. A like course should be taken in behalf of the anti-canteen bill, of importance to our enlarged army in tropical perils and in behalf of imperiled civil service reform.

A critic of our movement has said: "Petitions are all waste paper, no more effective than cheap handbills thrown into street doors." This is the echo of the so-called "practical statesman" who calls our work, "Sunday-school politics." But when there are no petitions he plays another tune: "Who wants this? there are no petitions." Whatever the discount on the old style petitions made up of unclassified names, our new form of petitioning is not "waste paper." Are the deliberate votes of indorsement on petitions by Congregational, Baptist and Methodist preachers' meetings, by Evangelical Alliances, by General Assemblies—are these and thousands more of such petitions from local churches of all creeds no more influential with congressmen than the handbills thrown in at their doors? Are the votes of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Knights of Labor and the official indorsement of hundreds of local labor organizations—are these also worth no more than a newspaper's rejected poetry? Is Cardinal Gibbons' signature on a petition of no weight in Congress? And what of the thousands of letters that are sent to Washington, like an ever increasing snowstorm?

If the petitions of all kinds are so ineffective, what led Congress to order three editions of the Sunday Rest hearing in 1889 in quick succession, making 42,000 in all—12,000 more than the largest issues of documents on any other public question in that Congress at the public expense? And the Sabbath closing law for the World's Fair was a yet grander victory for petitions. All these bills and those relating to liquors, tobacco, gambling and the age of protection are but fragments of one reform, the Christianizing of society.

Congressmen ought to lead off in political, as ministers do in moral, reforms. But, in fact, ours is a wheelbarrow government that goes ahead in legislation only when it is irresistibly pushed from behind. But when most of the churches have laid hold together of one of the handles of the wheelbarrow, and most of the labor organizations have put their strong hands together on the other, Congress will pass such pending bills as the Sunday law for the District of Columbia and the other labor bills to provide for an industrial commission, industrial arbitration and postal savings banks.

WILBUR F. CRAFTS,
Supt. Reform Bureau.

Washington, D. C.

Clean Towns.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—That education, culture and refinement produce environments antagonistic to the saloon is often illustrated, and nowhere more forcibly than to-day in California.

The town of Menlo Park, situated amid the most beautiful of surroundings, is far from pleasant to pass through owing to the number of saloons lining its thoroughfares, one, most unfortunate to relate, being conducted by a woman. But now there promises to be a change, for when Miss Jennie Flood deeded her Menlo property to the State University a few weeks ago, the university regents immediately ordered an investigation to determine whether the saloons were within a mile of their newly acquired property or not, for drinking houses are forbidden nearer than this. The investigation proved that they were within the radius, and they will have to be closed, which means much for the advancement of Menlo Park. This is a good demonstration of what university regents, and the best of the citizens, really think of saloons.

Palo Alto, a mile distant, is a good example of what a university town, or any other kind of a town, should be. The streets are clean, the business houses handsome and prosperous and no saloons to be seen. The town is filled with beautiful homes, and the surroundings are pure and elevating owing, a great deal, to the absence of drinking houses and their degrading accompaniments.

In Pacific Grove, also, where the school of methods is held each summer by the temperance women, the business streets are free from saloons and the town is one of great beauty and cleanliness. Where there is nothing to degrade, the inhabitants of a town have greater ambition to add to the natural attractions of their place of residence than do the inhabitants of other cities who can not keep pace with the many vices continually introduced. In Pacific Grove the great pines still stand about the busy little business center, no liquors are served in the beautiful hotel, and the whole air of the place is suggestive of tranquillity and refinement. It is little wonder that it is favored by temperance people, by Christian workers and by Chautauqua assemblies.

It is here that Mrs. Henrietta Skelton and Miss Sarah Severance, both workers for women, one in temperance the other in the suffrage field, have their homes and spend what little time they have to spare from their labors.

MAUD B. RODGERS.

Menlo Park, Cal.

Scientific Temperance Instruction in Bermuda.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Some time ago you published, at our request, a letter from Mrs. Viccie L. Prestwood, of Hamilton, Bermuda, outlining at some length the situation there, and asking very earnestly that helps be sent her. We forwarded to her copies of two elementary textbooks on physiology from the indorsed list. She writes us under date of October 24, that these two books have been introduced into the Hamilton high school.

We think this is such a gratifying gain for temperance education in Bermuda that we feel sure you will be glad to note the fact in THE UNION SIGNAL. Those who read the letter will be especially interested in this result.

Very sincerely,

MARY H. HUNT.

A CAPITAL story of a lesson in neatness which Admiral Dewey once gave his men is going the rounds, and is so good it ought to be true: "While in a foreign port Dewey ordered the heaviest hoisting tackle in the ship out of the hold without delay. Nobody could see any occasion for it, as there seemed to be nothing either to be taken on board or sent ashore. But when, after two hours' hard work, the tackle was ready, the admiral ordered that a large wad of tobacco which had been thrown under one of the guns be hoisted overboard and dumped into the sea."—The Christian Advocate.

A GREAT deal of so-called spiritual conflict is simply spiritual rebellion.—Hannah Whitall Smith.

Local Union.

THE following excellent program is sent by the superintendent of the department of work for soldiers and sailors for the state of Florida. I trust it may be used by the local unions all over the country. I want to commend in particular the use it makes of THE UNION SIGNAL. When the W. C. T. U. shall have learned to truly avail itself of its official organ, we shall find that we have in it a vast storehouse of supplies, and a well equipped armory for carrying on our peaceful war.

W. C. T. U. Program for November.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

1. HYMN.—"Stand up, Stand up for Jesus."
2. READING SCRIPTURE.—II Timothy 2:1, 7, and Deut. 20:1, 4.
3. PRAYER.
4. SONG.—"For God and Home and Native Land." Page 106, White Ribbon Hymnal.
5. EXTRACTS from UNION SIGNALS:
   (a) August 18, page 9, 1898—Authority for the Canteen System.
   (b) August 11, page 9, 1898—The Army Canteen System.
   (c) August 11, page 9, 1898—Legal Advice by Col. E. F. Ritter.
   (d) August 18, page 13, 1898—Petition Against the Canteen.
   (e) September 29, page 5, 1898—The War of Institutions. Sugg. No. 1.
6. HYMN.—"My Soul, be on thy Guard." (Sing with energy.)
7. DISCUSSION.—"How may the W. C. T. U. Assist in Abolishing the Canteen System?"
8. SONG.—"America."

Florida seems to abound in excellent programs, as the following will show. I do not wonder that in her report the corresponding secretary of Florida gives credit to its carefully prepared programs for the increase in interest during the year.

W. C. T. U. Program for October.

NARCOTICS AND NON-ALCOHOLIC MEDICATION.

1. SONG. "Christ for the World We Sing," Page 1, White Ribbon Hymnal.
2. SCRIPTURE READING.—Psa. 8: Matt. 5:8; Rev. 22:11, 12.
3. PRAYER.
4. SONG. "Will It Pay?" Page 20, White Ribbon Hymnal.
5. READ extracts from
   (a) National Leaflet No. 32, "The Tobacco Toboggan."
   (b) National Leaflet No. 12, "Tobacco and the Drink Habit."
6. READ Florida Cigaret Law and Constitution of Anti-Tobacco League.
7. DISCUSSION.—"How may the Union Help the Local Public Schools?"
8. READ extracts from
   (a) National Leaflet No. 78, "Narcotics and Narcotism."
   (b) National Leaflet No. 82, "Narcotic Drugs."
   (c) Department Leaflet No. 231, "Substitute for Alcohol."
9. DISCUSSION.—"Why is Gum Chewing Injurious?"
10. SONG.—"Coronation."

(Send to the Temple, Chicago, for the leaflets, price one cent each. After the meeting pass them among the members for reading.)

Program prepared by Mrs. C. H. Newell, Tavares, Fla.

QUESTION.—Can a woman be a member of the W. C. T. U. and not a prohibitionist?

ANSWER.—The only conditions of membership in the W. C. T. U. are the signing of the total abstinence pledge and the payment of the membership fee. It is therefore possible for W. C. T. U. members to have a variety of opinions in matters pertaining to method, etc. I should certainly say that no woman could be a member of the W. C. T. U. without becoming a prohibitionist in principle, whatever her view of the subject might have been when she entered the organization, but we have learned by experience that it is possible for women to be most faithful and efficient members of our organization who are not what are technically called, Party Prohibitionists.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Behold, God himself is with us for our captain. The Lord of hosts is with us. The God of Jacob is our refuge. The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.—II. Chron. 13:12; Psa. 46:7; Psa. 34:7.

IT is with much regret that I have to prepare this column before going to the Convention at St. Paul. Whatever the outcome, however, at the Convention in regard to the House Beautiful, it cannot thwart God's design. That there is a way out, and a triumphant way, I have no doubt. My faith in this is stronger than ever, if possible. So, dear praying band, keep on your holy mission. Pray on, and work on, and we will surely see the desire of our hearts accomplished.

✠

This morning a letter full of cheer was received from Verulam W. C. T. U., Natal, South Africa, enclosing £20, 16s., 8d. ($100). The treasurer, Mrs. M. Adams, writes: "The accompanying resolution was passed at the last meeting of our union, expressive of our deep sympathy with you at this time." It is as follows:

"Resolved, That the major portion of the proceeds of a sale of work held on Saturday, September 24, be devoted toward the liquidation of the Temple debt. The treasurer is hereby requested to forward $100 to Mrs. Carse, in Chicago, with the assurance of earnest sympathy in the burden of anxiety that is now upon her, and we prayerfully trust that the House Beautiful may be secured to the white-ribbon host as the Frances Willard memorial for all time." Signed, Mary Ellen James, president. From Mrs. Mary Price Smith, president of the W. C. T. U. of the province of Burma, India, a lengthy and most sympathetic letter, pledging Burma to stand by the Temple, has been received. From Rangoon, Burma, India, a letter has come from Mrs. Bertha B. Roach. Some time ago she ordered some of Miss Willard's pictures. She writes: "The pictures of Miss Willard arrived in perfect condition and we are delighted with them. I need not tell you how earnestly we hope you may be successful in your attempt to secure the Temple for the W. C. T. U. and make it a memorial to our beloved leader. Surely no other memorial could be so fitting."

✠

The letters we are receiving daily show the interest and anxiety the rank and file feel in the payment of the Temple Trust Bonds. Mr. R. J. Ginnis, Moro, Ore., writes: "If at the National Convention the W. C. T. U. votes to pay off the Temple Trust Bonds, I will send you a check for $100, for my wife, toward the payment of the same."

Mrs. Florence Whitman, secretary Nappanee, Ind., W. C. T. U., writes that the union has just pledged $50, conditioned on the $300,000 Trust Bonds being paid; this is in addition to $100 this generous union has already given. Mrs. Whitman says: "I feel that to lose the Temple would be one of the greatest defeats the temperance cause has ever had." A letter has just been received from the president of the New London, Conn., W. C. T. U., saying that they have just held their annual meeting, and a resolution was unanimously passed to stand by the Temple Trustees; they are also at work raising another $100, which they will send very soon. Mrs. F. A. Bailey, secretary East Pierre, S. D., W. C. T. U., writes that they have money in bank awaiting the decision of the National Convention in regard to the Temple. She says: "We are hoping and praying that the W. C. T. U. will be able to hold the Temple against all opposition." The Wilmington, O., W. C. T. U. is also holding $100 awaiting the same decision; so is the Bridgeport, Conn., union holding a like sum, and this is true of scores of unions.

✠

All money from Wheels, subscription cards, tablets, pledges from unions, etc., should be sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, and drafts should be made out in the name of Mr. G. B. Shaw, treasurer Temple Trustees. All orders for supplies for the above should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Room 1118, The Temple, Chicago. Also orders for Miss Willard's picture or application for agencies for its sale, should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

Our Children.

A True Fairy Tale.

DO you know of the house
Where gingersnaps grow?
Where tarts for us children
March out in a row?
Where wishing is having,
Where—isn't it grand!
Just up in the garret
Is real Fairyland?
Where youngsters can caper
And romp and halloo,
For they always do right,
Whatever they do.
You don't know the house?
Then, oh, deary me,
I'm sorry for you!
Why, it's grandma's, you see.

A Chapter in Exodus.

BY MRS. F. M. HOWARD.

"MOTHER never gave up so before," said Aaron Swift, disconsolately. "Father's had the blues bad enough, but mother always found something nice for Thanksgiving dinner, if it was n't any more than a fat chicken to stuff and bake."

"She says chickens is too precious this fall. Eggs is thirty cents a dozen," wailed Nettie. "Just think o' livin' another whole year before another Thanksgiving."

"If the hen turkey hadn't been the obstinatest old bird that ever lived she wouldn't have lost all her young ones," continued Olive.

"Yes, but pa was counting on that brood to help on the old groc'ry bills," pouted Nettie. "I think groc'ry bills and taxes are just horrid. Pa always has 'em."

"Well, cheer up, chicks, something will turn up yet," cried Aaron more hopefully. He was the eldest of the Swift family, and often took upon himself the role of comforter. "It's a whole week yet to Thanksgiving. Time enough for lots of things to happen. See, isn't the hill lovely with the snow hanging like little bouquets on the evergreens? Maybe our Thanksgiving dinner is shut up in there somewhere."

"I hope so, if it will be brave enough to fly over three feet of snow to get to our oven," Nettie said, still aggrieved. Usually the brightest and gayest of the girls, the early winter, with its unprecedented snow fall, shutting them in doors, and the family economies more than usually pressing after a year of toil which had seemed to bring forth only a crop of disappointments and failures, had been too much for her good nature, which had quite failed when her mother announced the necessity of foregoing the customary Thanksgiving feast.

"We can be thankful, Nettie, with potatoes and cabbage for dinner," said Olive, gravely. It was her nature to look more at the cause than the occasion of Thanksgiving. "We are all as well as can be, and there's wood enough to keep us like toast all winter."

"Bushels of nuts to crack, too, and the sorghum is unusually nice," continued Aaron, the shadow all gone from his fine black eyes in recounting the real blessings of their lot. "After all, girls, we haven't any right to fret when we have everything we really need and a little over."

Out in the kitchen Mother Swift was feeling the depression even more than the children. We do not realize how we are bound by habit and association until some of our cherished customs are broken in upon.

The Swifts had come out to this western country from New England, where Thanksgiving was as religiously kept as the Sabbath itself.

In all Mrs. Swift's life the time had never come before when there was nothing, actually nothing, with which to mark the day from the monotonous round of its fellows, and for the first time in her western experience she was homesick; her very soul longing for the flesh pots of the old New England home, where the gobble of the Thanksgiving turkey never failed, and the cream pots and the butter firkins were always full.

She could almost snuff the scent of the old amiliar cellar, with its bins of apples waiting for her choice, and beyond it the vegetable room, filled with everything needed for the winter. The day would come when the western farm would yield its fruits as regularly, but it would take patience and experience, and also that of which they had least of as yet, capital.

The farm was located near the Mississippi, in the shelter of a pretty wooded bluff, and to the right a growing, thrifty village afforded a market for all they could spare of their farm product.

In summer the prospect was charming, but the winter shut them in to a monotony which became irksome at times, and Mrs. Swift sighed heavily as she darned on one of the gaping holes in Aaron's socks, and a tear rolled down her still comely cheek.

"Mother's crying!" announced Nettie, in an awed voice, as she stole back to Aaron and Olive, after witnessing the amazing sight surreptitiously.

It was mother who was always bright and cheerful under all circumstances, mother whose face created the sunshine in the home, and to see her in tears was a revelation.

"I won't say another word about Thanksgiving, if I have to sew up my mouth," said Nettie, fiercely, shutting the offending member grimly.

"Nor I," added Olive. "Less talk and more work."

Olive's pins and needles in life would always lie straighter than Nettie's; her emotions would never prod and prick her as did those of her more nervous and excitable sister.

"I'll go hunting in mother's cook book and see if I can't find some new way of cooking cabbage."

"And I'll go hunting, too," Aaron added, with an encouraging smile. "If mother cares enough to cry, Thanksgiving is worth an extra effort from all of us."

Olive beckoned Aaron into the pantry the next day. A savory smell met him at the door, and upon the shelf lay a big round cake, brown and luscious enough for New England itself.

"It's a pork cake, with dried apples cooked in sorghum for fruit, in it," whispered Olive.

"My, but it smells like wedding cake," Aaron said, with an appreciative smack. "It's a good thing there's more than one way of making a good thing. Now if I understood the chemistry of manufacturing a turkey out of a piece of salt side pork, we should be all right."

"It'll come," said Olive. "I feel it in my bones, that somehow or other we are going to have our Thanksgiving."

"Well, I hope your bones are reliable, Olive," replied her brother. "I wouldn't mind for us younger ones; we've got a whole lifetime before us, but it does hurt me to see mother miss it so. I couldn't find even a rabbit track yesterday."

Two days later Aaron came in beaming, his great black eyes shining with excitement. More snow had fallen during the night, and his crisp, black curls were moist with the flakes which had fallen from the trees on his way to the barn.

He beckoned Olive mysteriously. "Come out to the barn, Olly, and see the Thanksgiving dinner," he whispered.

"Oh, Aaron, really, truly?"

"All ready to fly into the pot."

Olive peered into the round hole in the door of the granary, under Aaron's direction, and there, huddled up in one corner, was a large brood of quails which had sought refuge from the deep snow, pretty, timid creatures, which in their trusting helplessness would not have tempted Aaron to kill and eat at any other time.

"Oh, Aaron, quail pie is even better than turkey," cried Olive, clapping her hands with delight.

"If only we could keep it from mother," Aaron said, "I'd like to surprise her."

"But nobody's piecrust is like mother's," Olive objected. "Quail pie without mother's crust on it would be too dismal a failure."

"It's all owing to your bones, Olive," Aaron observed laughingly, as they trudged back to the house through the deep snow. "Can't you feel up some more nice things?"

"Quail pie, fruit cake and pumpkin pie, what more would you have, Aaron Swift?" Olive turned upon him, her eyes bright with fun, her cheeks red with exercise.

"A bushel of grandfather's snow apples off the old farm. While a fellow's wishing, he might as well wish for the unattainable and be done with it. I believe I miss the apples almost more than anything else out here. The dried article don't fill the bill, somehow."

"Wouldn't you like a slice of green cheese off the moon to eat with them?" asked Olive, mildly sarcastic. "One is just as reachable as the other."

The quails were simmering in the pot, fifteen of them, fat and tender, and Mrs. Swift was rolling out her unapproachable crust on Thanksgiving morning when an outcry arose among the children.

Nettie had been the first to spy the big home-made sleigh coming over the drifted road from the village.

"It's Uncle Phil and Aunt Ellen," she cried excitedly, "and they're coming to spend Thanksgiving with us."

"I just couldn't stand it," said Aunt Ellen, in a voice snappy and crisp as Mrs. Swift's best pie-crust. "I told Phil that snow or no snow we'd have one more Thanksgiving together if we never had another. What's Thanksgiving for, I'd like to know, if families can't get together and say grace under the same roof. Here, Phil, you'd better bring that bag right in before you put the horses out. I hope to goodness they ain't frosted none."

Aunt Ellen's voice would have been a valuable acquisition to a drill master, there was such a wholesome ring of authority in it. The cats and the hens moved lively before it at home, but her family had learned how much of tenderness and kindness of heart lay hidden under the peremptory speech, and took their time for obedience.

"All right, Ellen," Philip replied easily, as after some pulling and uncovering he shouldered a bag which he deposited on the kitchen floor.

"Pa sent us out a barrel of apples from the old farm, Calista, and I thought mebbe you wouldn't spleen at eatin' some of 'em," Philip said, as he shook hands with his sister and kissed the girls, who flocked around him with uproarious welcome. They liked Aunt Ellen, but made a hero of Uncle Philip, as children will, adoring him and hanging on to his simple stories and cheery words as if they were oracles.

"Oh, Phil, if you knew how I have longed for them," said Mrs. Swift, her gingham apron flying up to her eyes in a vain attempt to hide her tears. "I believe I was never so homesick as I have been this fall."

"We came just in time, then," said Aunt Ellen, briskly. "My senses, if Aaron Swift hain't got his teeth in one of those snow apples a'ready. There's some pound sweets in the bottom—them's for your mother, and don't you touch 'em, young man. Nettie, you go get a pan and set some of the golden pippins baking for dinner."

Tears and emotions fled like scudding cats before Aunt Ellen's breezy ways, and Mrs. Swift's apron came down and the spirits of the family came up to a typical Thanksgiving pitch in less time than it takes to tell it.

"We didn't have any turkeys this year, but there's a fat goose all baked and ready to warm up out in the sleigh," pursued Aunt Ellen, as she divested herself of traveling raiment, more unique than beautiful. "I thought if your children was as hungry as mine are, we should need all we both had to fill 'em. What are you winking at Aaron for, Olive Swift?"

"I was thinking how frightfully near we came to not having any dinner at all," laughed Olive, telling the story of the quails and the previous perplexity.

"A Thanksgiving in the wilderness with quails for meat. A chapter in Exodus for all the world," replied Aunt Ellen, her sharp tone softening. "Well, I hope we're all properly thankful."

They were. The long table groaned with its burden before all the contents of the hamper from the sleigh was unpacked. Aunt Ellen never did things by halves, and when she gave thanks she gave them pressed down and running over, and her thanks were typified by the food supply to-day.

"Bless your bones, Olly," said Aaron, after he had eaten until he could hold no more, "I shall always have the greatest respect for their prophetic powers in future. She felt it in her bones, Aunt Ellen, that we were going to have something unusual for dinner to-day."

"I should think so," replied Aunt Ellen, with crisp decision. "That quail pie was the best I ever ate."

Clinton, Ia.

UNION SIGNAL

HAND WHITE RIBBON WORLD'S

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR—LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR—MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS—MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON, MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.
Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

EDITOR BOOKS AND LEAFLETS—MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, Pres.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treas. MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Sec'y.
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. HANNAH J. BAILEY, Winthrop Center, Me.
MRS. LUCIE B. TYNG, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, The Temple, Chicago.
MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, Burlington, Ia.
MRS. EVALYN GRAHAM, Newark, O.
MRS. ELIZA H. GAGE CUTTER, Joliet, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, The Temple, Chicago.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary—MRS. F. E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

All money orders for THE UNION SIGNAL or other publications of the W. T. P. A. should be made payable to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and not to the editors.

Please examine the label on your UNION SIGNAL and if past due kindly remit.

Blessed Thanksgiving Day!

WE have much to be thankful for—the abundance of a rich harvest and brooding peace, flash into our thoughts.

After the clash of arms and the slaughter of human life we will not glory in conquest, but rather forget the faults of other nations. We may be grateful for added responsibility which comes with added territory, but it would be wise to accept it prayerfully in the face of the bitter mistakes we have made, and it would be well to think more of regenerating Cuba and the isles of the Pacific and less of ourselves.

It is not easy for the hearts in darkened rooms to-day, mourning sons and brothers to see God's face in the gloom, and if we give thanks for brave men and brave deeds, for the heroism that faced death unflinchingly in the trenches or on the seas, it should be in humility, that the world has not progressed far enough in God's way to be relieved of the curse of war, but we can be unreservedly thankful for the voices that have rung out in all the land for peace.

Let us be thankful that never before have so many men and women been pleading for the right in defiance of the wrong. Never before have so many thoughtful ones faced the evils of the times, the great underlying causes of sin and misery, and sought to solve the knotty questions of our modern civilization.

We are thankful for the mothers of the nation, their increasing interest in the care of little children, as well as in the welfare of the nation. The banding together of women in various organizations and their handling of practical questions is making the world a better place to live in. They are touching vital questions here and there, and calling a halt to the onsweeping of vice and impurity. They are helping to make ugly places beautiful, and are reaching out a hand to the unfortunate—educating, protecting, uplifting. This intellectual enlightenment and the heart culture that stands for the regeneration of the world is something for which to give thanks.

We are glad, too, that in the church inspired prophets ring out a warning voice that rouses others from their lethargy. For each and every disciple that is following in his steps in lowly places, healing the sick, comforting the broken-hearted, feeding the multitude, we give thanks. Even the feasting and the cheer of social fellowship that knits souls together in joy and in sorrow, and gives its undertone of gladness to the minor strains of life, are just cause for gratitude.

We are especially thankful for the beauty and influence of the pure, white life of Frances E. Willard, whose memory remains with us like a benediction. There are so many lonely hearts, so many hard places in life, so many strangers within our gates, and we are so apt to be absorbed in our own narrow selves, that we are glad to remember that we can be truly happy in service for others; and that in that which makes them happier and better we may find the human touch which sanctifies, and then the divine touch which glorifies lives.

We are thankful for a day that brings a resting, breathing place to this work-a-day world for all, when we can think of God's goodness to us, when we can remember His poor, and can have a special opportunity to do good to others.

That Thanksgiving day may not be a mere name or a time of questionable indulgence, determine to make it a beautiful anniversary in the home, help to make the Thanksgiving service a success by being there yourself, do everything possible to make the aged, the sick and the poor happy, and the spirit of gratitude will fill your own heart.

The Relation of Reforms to One Another.

A PRACTICAL question which constantly confronts the reformer is what attitude he shall take toward lines of reform other than his own. There are those who urge that we have quite enough to do in our own field without attempting anything else; but more than this and above all else, that, if we lend our assistance to other reform workers or advocate their cause, we shall needlessly add their antagonists to our own. Under the lead of our lost Chieftain, the W. C. T. U. has steadfastly given its open support and sympathy to the workers in every part of Christ's kingdom. In many instances it has taken up work not, in the judgment of many people, connected with the temperance movement. This we believe to be the true policy. The opposite policy is advocated from a narrow and mistaken view of the situation. It sounds plausible to talk of attacking evils one at a time, but the individual who attempts to reform his own life by overcoming first one fault and then another, will die before he has won his first victory; and the social reformer, however careful he may be to meddle with no reform but his own, will find that all evil doers count him an enemy and that his policy of neutrality involves him in hopeless inconsistencies and difficulties. For all evils are but shoots from one root—evil, and he who attempts to root out one is really digging at the root of all. The children of darkness, who are always wiser in their day and generation than the children of light, understand this well. They do not mistake friends for foes and he who thinks to receive the help of any portion of the forces of evil in a warfare for the right will find his mistake. He will deceive those who should be his friends and allies and they will train their guns upon him, but he will not thus deceive his enemies.

Division of labor is as necessary in reform work as in mechanical pursuits, but it is a fatal mistake for those engaged in it to suppose that because the labor is divided the work itself is not one. We cannot serve God and mammon, nor is it possible to serve neither. There is no such thing as being neutral in any conflict between right and wrong. We are bound to give our whole influence to every righteous cause. Whatever of prestige and of power we have gained through our work and victories in our own field, duty demands we shall bring to the support of every other good cause. If that other cause is but in its beginning, if it is despised and ridiculed, so much the more is it necessary that we give it our open and hearty support. But our own cause will be thereby brought into disrepute. For the time being, possibly, but that is not the question we are to consider. Our business is to do right. God alone is responsible for the consequences. And being responsible, God has so ordered the affairs of this universe that no person nor association of persons loses anything by doing simply what is right. Events will prove that few, if any, whose allegiance is worth the having, will be even temporarily alienated. On the contrary, they will in the end be won for both causes. It will soon appear, too, that we have gained immeasurably by alliance with those who are naturally our friends, for he who stands bravely for everything right will at last marshal all the forces of good.

The arguments which would induce us to keep silent concerning other righteous but unpopular movements are the same by which the political parties justify their refusal to take up temperance and other moral issues which are pressing for solution. If it is a cowardly policy for them, it is surely no less cowardly for a Christian organization.

For Christian workers to attempt to maintain neutrality in any conflict between good and evil is like one wing of an army maintaining neutrality when the other wing is engaged in battle. It is actual, even though it be unintentional, treason. The result can only be to strengthen the foe and divide our own forces.

The Miracles of Scripture.

INFIDELS have done their utmost to weaken the force of the evidence in support of the miracles of Scripture. Great efforts have been made to disprove the truth of the new Testament history, and to show that the supernatural acts of Christ and His apostles have no reliable foundation but are purely mythical and unworthy of belief. The reason of this is evident. If there is good evidence that those miracles were performed, the truth of Christianity and its doctrines is established beyond all reasonable denial. To show that such evidence does not exist becomes a necessity if infidels ever hope to disprove the divine origin of the Christian religion.

But the more attentively the proofs of the New Testament miracles are examined by intelligent and impartial minds, the more irresistible do they appear. Ebrard, one of the best known and most critical scholars that Germany has produced, said, after carefully examining the subject, that no events in history were better attested than the gospel miracles. Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, said with reference to the resurrection of our Lord: "I have been used, for many years, to study the history of other times, and to examine and weigh the evidences of those who have written about them; and I know of no fact in the history of mankind, which is proved by letter and fuller evidence of every sort, to the mind of a fair inquirer, than that Christ died and rose again from the dead."

The witnesses to the New Testament miracles had nothing to gain by giving their testimony, but, on the contrary, they sacrificed everything that men and women of the world hold dear in order to proclaim what they had seen. Paley well said of the apostles of Christ: "These men could not be deceivers. By only not bearing testimony, they might have avoided all their sufferings and have lived quietly. Would men in such circumstances pretend to have seen what they never saw; assert as facts what they had no knowledge of; go about lying to teach virtue; and, though not only convinced of Christ's being an impostor, but having seen the success of His imposture in His crucifixion, yet persist in carrying it on; and so persist as to bring upon themselves, for nothing, and with a full knowledge of the consequence, enmity and hatred, danger and death?"

The testimony of Paul is in itself an irrefragable proof of the reality of our Lord's resurrection. For that he should all at once have embraced Christianity, after being one of its most zealous opponents, and have taken upon himself for its sake, a life of self-denial, proves that he must have received some overwhelming evidence of its truth, and that his testimony to the resurrection of Christ is worthy of belief. Lord Lyttelton, a cultured skeptic of the eighteenth century, was convinced of the truth of Christianity through investigating Paul's evidence, and he wrote an essay showing its value in the argument for the Divine origin of the Christian faith.

A Pitiful Petition Against Sending Liquor to Africa.

A REMARKABLE petition came to National Headquarters a few days ago from West Africa. It was sent by Mrs. M. L. Rentlinger in a letter dated Benito, West Africa, September 16, 1898, and was addressed to Mrs. Katharine L. Stevenson. Letter and petition read as follows:

"As a subscriber to and constant reader of your temperance organ, I feel satisfied that it will be the best medium through which to bring to the public a communication from the 'Dark Continent,' representing at least a ray of the coming light inseparable from the entrance of the Word of the Lord. I am sure it will call forth earnest sympathy and prevailing prayer, which moves the arm that moves the world, and when He arises in His might, the seemingly impossible becomes blessed reality.

"But I will let the petition speak for itself. It was sent us a few weeks ago by one of our native pastors, with the request that we forward it to the 'temperance society in America.'"

THE PETITION.

"We, the women of Corisco church, meet today to prepare for the communion, which will take place on the third day of this month; and, considering the evil which liquors from foreign countries are doing here, we beg you not to confine your efforts for promoting temperance to your country alone; but include also the Gaboon and Corisco mission field. Use all your Christian influence with your people to make them quit manufacturing rum, gin and brandy, as well as all other liquors, and sending them to our people.

"Pray to God to kill the appetite for rum, gin and brandy among our people. Do help us, we beseech you. Our church here has about 110 members. We only append twenty names. Take this as the voice, not only of 110 women, but as the voice of all the women connected with our churches in this part of Africa, and two-thirds of the women in our district."

"Signed:

"HIKA IBIA.	MWAJOMOTO.	AKEBUDWE.
"TANALAKU.	IVAHA.	IKWAVEI.
"BOKAKA.	NENGE.	BELIKA.
"YAKA.	BEVINGO.	OPEGE.
"MABENJANI.	MATOTA.	NGALO.
"BABEPE.	IKENGE.	ULUNDA.
"MWAMBONGANI.		ELOMBWANAYAVE."

"Comment is unnecessary. I will only add that the name, Babepe, represents a woman of very strong character, who has suffered much through this curse of drink. Her husband, to whom she was really much attached, was very kind to her, except when under the influence of strong drink. When she could stand this no longer, she assembled a few of her friends, and commenced by saying to her husband, 'I have to tell you that as a Christian I cannot marry a polygamist.' 'Well, I am no polygamist; you are my only wife.' 'On the contrary, alcohol is your head wife, I the second, and I only wish to say that one of us must be put away; decide which it shall be.' The man, knowing well the value of a good wife, promised reform, and was fairly successful in keeping his pledge; but such cases are very rare." So ends the communication from Africa.

What shall we say to these sisters? To whom shall we appeal? Is there a way out of this slaughter save by prohibition of the whole business? Who will bring us out of this bondage, this fiery furnace that consumes our own people and calls forth a protest even from heathen Africa. Little do those poor, dark-skinned sisters know how helpless American women are.

We can only pass this pitiful petition on to the President of the United States, to the members of Congress, to the supreme court, to the state legislatures and to the citizen voters. Take it, men and brethren, and may it go with you to bed and rise with you in the morning. May it be burned into your hearts and scorched into your brains; may it make your consciences writhe with agony and your hearts break with pain, and no rest come day nor night, week in and week out, until you do your duty towards this great evil and our nation is delivered from this curse—and free from the crime of debauching even the savage nations of Africa.

A New Departure for Deaconesses.

ADVANTAGES which Protestant parents have heretofore sought at convents may henceforth be had under evangelical influences. At its recent session in Chicago the Rock River conference, after an earnest debate of nearly two hours, enthusiastically and all but unanimously made over Jennings Seminary at Aurora, Ill., to the Methodist Episcopal Deaconess Society. This will be opened at New Year's as a school for young ladies, and will be wholly in charge of deaconesses. The school is expected to be successful and self-supporting from the first.

In Germany the work of the deaconess has been confined to nursing the sick. But in America this free sisterhood sets itself to do any good work which a Christian woman can and ought to do. So there are editors and church visitors and evangelists and workers in many forms of philanthropy—and now literary teachers are to be added to the deaconess staff.

The Union Signal Signally Complimented.

WE mean to be real modest after we quote what a friendly editor says about the National and World's organ of the W. C. T. U. It is this: "THE UNION SIGNAL is one of the most ably edited reform journals in the world. Its editorials are consummately logical, acutely analytic, illuminatingly convincing, graceful in power, artistically perfect as newspaper literature. The W. C. T. U. is to be congratulated upon its organ."

There now! Who says a man cannot pay an overwhelming compliment when he sets his head to it? And now, having duly appreciated and enjoyed this unstinted praise we will read a chapter about Uriah Heap, in David Copperfield, and try to be as humble as humble can be.

Saloons do Big Business.

THIS is how the saloonkeepers and their official friends uphold the majesty of the law in Chicago. We quote from the Chicago Record:

"Saloonkeepers in the down town district treated Mayor Harrison's election-day proclamation with cool indifference, not to say supreme contempt. The front doors of the drinking places, in most instances were closed, but the rear and side doors and 'ladies' entrances' were open to the thirsty who had the price. Within one block of the office of Chief of Police Kipley, over fifteen saloons sold drinks, straight and mixed, and did a thriving business. When word was brought to the chief of this state of affairs he waxed indignant. His mobile features showed plainly that his feelings were hurt. He tugged, with the air of a man whose best friends had 'knifed' him, at his military mustache and goatee and said with a great heartfelt burst of feeling:

"I ordered all saloons closed, and if my instructions are not being obeyed there will be trouble. Warrants will be taken out for the saloon men who have disregarded the orders of this department."

"A Randolph street wet goods merchant was told that Chief Kipley was going to take out warrants for the arrest of the 'boys' who had wounded his affections. He smiled as he mixed a 'dry Manhattan' and said:

"So? Well, why didn't he tip it off that we were to close up good and tight? Informer years when the 'old man' meant 'biz' he sent a patrolman down the line to tell us his word 'went' this time. Well, Joe did not do it. All we knew of the order was what we read in the newspapers and it's got so now you can't believe all you read in the papers. At least that's what Joe Kipley has said, for I heard him say so down in the fourth ward, where he spoke once at a political meeting."

Comment is unnecessary.

Already Come to Pass.

A CORRESPONDENT who takes a hand in reform matters has this to say of a late editorial in THE UNION SIGNAL concerning the action of a judge in New York City:

"In your editorial, 'To Enforce Law Becomes a "Special Case,"' you ask, 'May it not come to pass that those who try to enforce law will not only be regarded as criminals but that they will be arrested and punished for their temerity?'

"In Cincinnati, that which you anticipate has already come to pass. Mr. Charles Pelton and Rev. George M. Hammell were arrested and tried under charge of 'perjury,' because they presumed to arraign a drunken policeman for conduct unbecoming an officer!

"They were acquitted because a keen lawyer compelled the police commissioners, under oath in the police court to testify that the accused had undoubtedly made statements to the best of their knowledge and belief.

"Evidently the time is coming when all citizens who criticise and condemn governmental methods of taxing, licensing and protecting the liquor traffic will be treated as traitors."

THE Mormon apostles are reported as still teaching the "divine institution of polygamy," and that it is as much a part of the faith of the Mormon church to-day as it ever was. The celebrated B. H. Roberts said in a long article defending polygamy, "God did approve of a plurality of wives, and that which He approves must be not only not bad, but good and pure and holy." But the edict has gone forth that instead of bringing converts to Utah, churches are to be established throughout the world.

Young Woman's Branch.

OFFICERS YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH, WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

World's Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
Nat. Gen. Sec.—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, West New Brighton, New York.
Associates.—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, New York City; Miss Ida C. Clothier, Manitou, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Miss Frances H. Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 378 Ferry St., Malden, Mass.; Miss Eva M. Shontz, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Round-the-World Missionary.—Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Our Young Women.

THE women who accepted their commission from the Lord in the day of the great Crusade, together with their compatriots whom they straightway mustered into a standing army whose lifework should be a "peaceful warfare" for the saving of souls, the perfection of home-making, the character building which shall make glorious our native land—these women are growing old; only laying down the armor when promoted to the better country, but younger hands must soon bear on the standard of the sacred cause. And truly, these are in some degree taking our places, but not to the necessary extent.

Can any body tell why this splendid work does not appeal more generally to the conscience and ambition of our younger women who could make it so strong, so popular, so effective, they who have had that training in affairs which is the privilege of this age and which renders our young women so capable of making things move? It is they who might, by setting up their standard, control society. It is they who might gather the children in the L. T. L. and supply that need which the day school and the Sunday-school do not reach. It is they who might organize the sewing class and the cooking class, drawing in the ill-taught, neglected little daughters of the poor, teaching them, too, of their own gracious womanhood; perhaps saving them from that which lies in wait for them on our streets as never, never before. Pursuits far more fascinating, one would say, than in a club just for one's own pleasure; interest far more intense than in research into the ways of the ancients, supposing there be not time for all these things. Fancy choosing a "Herodotus Club" when you might have a Y. W. C. T. U.

The first is a sort of worm eaten interest, which delves in the past just from curiosity to know about the customs, the costumes, the table manners, the when and the how of bygone days. Not the imperishable things, the genius, the heroism, the sacrifice—these things belong in the unbroken procession of the ages—but the curiosity shop conglomeration accumulated by the average history club woman. Wherein is the profit except in lessons to be applied to the issues of the living present? Just what the average history club woman stops short of. Fancy grubbing around in the moth and rust of the centuries when we need to be studying the way of escape from a like fate of a broken power, a buried art, a dead language, an almost forgotten record! In a day, too, when there are social, moral, economic questions of such intense interest, when we ought to be getting into the very heart of things and helping make history. It is a finer thing to mould a noble future than to analyze a fateful past.

There are so many things to claim the time and attention of our girls; we need not recount the multitude of diversions, even their church. We rejoice that the church is a name to conjure by, but girls are sometimes actually trained to see a clearer duty in making and selling molasses candy to buy a pulpit cushion than in the call to mould citizenship for the kingdom in the Loyal Temperance Legion.

One is not quite safe from misunderstanding in saying a thing like this. You will never hear a white-ribbon woman belittle the spiritual work of the church. The fantastic, money making things done in its sacred name do ofttimes make our very soul rebel! Are white-ribbon mothers educating their own daughters as they might and ought to do? For girls do need bringing up.

From thousands of the pulpits of our land have lately sounded the eulogies of Frances Willard, and most speakers have drawn from her life a lesson for girls. Yet practically not much is done to lead them to be the Frances Willard kind of girls. It is not an impossible ideal. You have known girls of her type. The story of Frances Willard's early life calls to mind one greatly like her in a thousand ways, who but for one thing might have become as eminent a woman; there was more of self, and her life and death were not a beneficence and a benediction, but a disappointment and a tragedy.

How shall girls be like Frances Willard? What is the very first step she would have them take? How long would they be without the outward sign of the meaning of all that fair and luminous life? Mrs. Plumb said of Julia Ames, "I coveted her for the W. C. T. U." and what a priceless treasure her coveting won for us in that dear and beautiful girl! Could we choose just one bequest from our sainted leader to the white-ribbon host, it would be her grace in winning for the W. C. T. U. the girls we covet.

Y's at Work.

RHODE ISLAND.

THE Young Woman's Branch of our W. C. T. U. was well represented at the state convention at Newport this year. Three Y delegates gave their reports as state superintendents, one acted as recording secretary for the whole session, in the absence, through illness, of the state officer, and others had important duties placed in their care.

Y night we had very interesting accounts of work done by the Y Branch, and one of the Y unions carried off the prize banner for the greatest gain in membership, having added a hundred per cent to their ranks. We had a lovely Y conference in the home of the Newport Y, the Beacon Mission. A long letter from our Clara Parrish was read, and much interest was manifested in her work. The plan of raising funds for the organizers was talked over, and it is hoped we will have a good sum for our faithful ones in this line of work. We were glad to find that so many had given funds to help Miss Parrish in her work, and we expect to help her more, also to give something for the Temperance Hospital during the year. As our correspondent with African Y's has been translated, we appointed another to take up the work, and some one to write Miss Parrish of our love for her and hopes for her success.

Since our return from convention, the Y unions have taken up their work grandly, and everything points to a busy and successful year of work. We are selling the beautiful Y Almanac, and hope to sell even more than we did last year. There has been a good increase in Y membership this year, and we hear that others are ready to join. May we increase more and more. Let us always remember that young women are waiting to be asked to become interested in our work, and that the Master has promised the victory to those who believe His promises.

ELIZABETH P. NICHOLS,
State Y Secretary, Providence.

OHIO.

MISS DELLA CONNETT, of Athens, Ohio, the new state Y secretary, is a graduate of the Ohio University with the degree of Master of Philosophy. She has been active in church and Sunday-school work for many years, has served most acceptably as local Y president and district W. C. T. U. secretary. She won a high place in the state oratorical contest in 1896, and has addressed, most acceptably, large temperance gatherings. We predict for her a successful year in the important position to which she has been called.

World's W. C. T. U.

The Secretary's Letter.

DEAR COMRADES:—Reading over a number of old letters the other day, I note in one Miss Willard said she wished World's superintendents would send me a short summary of their work every three months. I should be very glad if this could be done: it would give a general stimulus to our work. If we make widely known our work we shall win a larger and larger following.

DENMARK.—Mrs. Bendix has started a woman's paper, and she will be glad to insert news of our world-wide work. Please address her at Hotel Royal, Ved Stranden 18.

FRANCE.—Mrs. Bradbury, a well-tried worker in the B. W. T. A., has gone to reside in Paris, and we hope she will help the W. C. T. U. there.

GERMANY.—Fraulein Ottilie Hoffman last month organized a W. C. T. U. at Bremen. She also brought our work before a Woman's Congress in Hamburg.

B. W. T. A.—The National executive will meet at Hanley, Staffordshire, on November 13. A public meeting will be held that evening, when Lady Henry Somerset will preside. On the eve of the 12th a reception will be given to the executive by the Hanley association.

RUSSIA.—In response to the suggestion of Mrs. Bailey (World's peace department superintendent), the World's officers sent an address to the Czar, expressing deep satisfaction at his peace proposals.

INDIA.—The National convention will be held in December at Madras. We have not yet definitely decided on the appointment of a World's organizer for India, but hope soon to be able to report having sent one there, as the work urgently needs a well trained white-ribboner to continue the magnificent work of organizing both native and European W. C. T. U's throughout this vast empire.

JAPAN.—Miss Parrish left Japan for Burmah on October 5. The Japanese women have unanimously approved our selection of Mrs. Large to continue organizing our forces. Japan, India and Burmah are now depending largely on the World's W. C. T. U., and our work in the far East is far in advance of what it has ever been; but we need funds to help the great harvest we are month by month reaping. Miss Parrish will probably give a stimulus to the W. C. T. U. in China on her way to Burmah.

BELGIUM.—We announce with much sorrow the "home-going" of the president, Madame Chantraine. We anxiously are waiting to hear of some one faithful and true to our work, as she was, who will carry on the white-ribbon movement here.

NEWFOUNDLAND.—On September 28, 200 newsboys were entertained at a W. C. T. U. meeting at the British Hall, St. John's. Mrs. Peters and Sir Robert Thorburn gave addresses. Each boy was given a bag containing cakes. In the evening a public meeting was held.

AUSTRALIA.—Mrs. Ardill returned to Sydney on October 24. She has done a brave work, and we wish her "Godspeed," and shall be delighted to welcome her here again. Mrs. Harris is expected to arrive in England this month.

URUGUAY.—Miss Dornselaar reports that six influential women have recently joined the W. C. T. U. at Montevideo, and much progress is hoped as the result.

WORLD'S MISSIONARIES.—We are very glad to have Mrs. Barney in England, and she has already commenced work here with great earnestness. Ireland, we rejoice to know, has been visited by her. Miss Ericson has sent sixteen dollars, which she has collected, for our World's missionary work. Miss Shaffner has also helped in collecting money. This is not the first sum sent to us by these two loyal and devoted women. Please let us be cheered by others following their example.

WORLD'S CONVENTION.—I go to Scotland next week to attend the annual meetings of the Scottish W. C. T. U., when we hope to arrive at some decision with regard to the next convention. If neither Edinburgh nor Glasgow can invite us for the spring of 1900, then we shall consider other invitations.

Affectionately yours,
AGNES E. SLACK.
Ripley, Derbyshire, Eng.

News from the Field.

New Jersey.

IF it were not for the ever helpful thoughts and influences that attend life's duties, the scribe for New Jersey would surely hang her pen in discouragement in contemplating the unreported work from her state that should have appeared long since in the "News From the Field" of our beloved SIGNAL. Now, therefore, the successes for months past, many of which would have made interesting chapters to our busy workers had they been treated separately, must now be only briefly mentioned and the bountiful harvest

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

Made from pure grape cream of tartar

gathering of the twenty-fifth annual convention, held at "ye Elizabethtown," the oldest city of the state, be chiefly dwelt upon.

Perhaps no state has learned better the value of the midsummer meetings than has New Jersey. Two camp-meeting associations in well-known seaside resorts, Ocean Grove and Ocean City, gave two days each to the W. C. T. U. of the state in which to present the work of the organization; and Mount Tabor, in Morris; Pitman Grove, in Gloucester, and Maliga, in Cumberland counties, have each given a day to these respective county organizations, besides the large number of lawn socials, parlor meetings, etc., that have called out the multitudes to listen and learn of the aims and teachings of "these women," which are a great host.

John G. Woolley, Miss Belle Kearney, Volney B. Cushing and Rev. Anna Shaw represent the class of evening speakers that have been in evidence at these meetings, thereby gaining advanced ground in the inteligence of the people, at each presentation of the subjects in hand.

Since the summer meetings, she whom we like to speak of as "Belle Kearney," without any conventionalities, so wholesome and whole-souled is she, has toured the state, and won workers and well-wishers for the cause wherever she has gone; and at the same time won for herself a warm place in the hearts of the New Jersey women of which she may be justly proud.

"Rest Cottage," a name dear to every white-ribboner, and doubly dear to the women of this state because named by our former state president, Sarah J. C. Downs, in love for Frances E. Willard, was at once the scene of much activity on the part of our state workers and rest for the wearied ones who attended the state fair at Waverly a few weeks since. This work is under the immediate charge of Mrs. M. C. Campfield, superintendent of state and county fairs, a master workman in her department, who is each year ably aided by state officers, Mesdames Bourne, Demorest and others. Rocking chairs, ice water and an abundance of "canteen specials," State Fair Dailies, etc., were freely supplied to those who rested and read in the large cool rooms where meetings were held daily, thus reaching the ears of thousands whose attention can be gained in no other way.

The county conventions that have been held throughout the twenty-one counties of the state have been of a high order; the state president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, having been in attendance in many instances, tirelessly lending her strength and influence to the onward movement of all. The reports of these annual gatherings that have appeared in the state organ, the New Jersey Gazette, have been encouraging in number and character to the state press superintendent, much meat in little space being the general style in evidence. All these functions together with the ceaseless efforts of the faithful workers in every little local union throughout the state, made possible "the best convention in every respect," pronounced President Bourne, that the state has ever held. Order preserved itself. Whispering was not indulged in. Every woman was attentive to the business in hand. Peace over all. The busiest of any previous convention, sessions holding from 8 A. M. till late evening, and love, the greatest gift, reigned supreme.

This "silver convention" of the W. C. T. U. of New Jersey, with its 230 regularly appointed delegates in attendance, rounded out a quarter of a century; and as President Bourne said at the opening session, "When an organization lives and thrives that long it means something." Beginning twenty-five years ago with a handful of earnest, God-loving women, to-day the organization in the state, aye, in the nation, in the world, is a power which all must recognize, do recognize, and in the minds of right-minded people are glad to recognize.

At the executive committee held in a room of the chapel of the oldest and largest church in the city, all the general officers were present, as were the Y and L. T. L. secretaries, and more presidents of the twenty-one counties, and more superintendents of the twenty-three departments carried by the state, than had ever been in attendance before, making the largest state executive ever held. At the same hour Evangelist Jennie Fowler Willing, of New York city, was leading a delegates' praise service in the chapel proper. The convention was called to order by Mrs. Bourne, and Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, the county president of Plainfield, the convention's hostess, warmly welcomed its members to Union county.

Fine music by the choir, the Psalm and hymn of Crusade fame, heartily entered into by the full congregation that had gathered to greet Kentucky's silver-tongued Bain, who spoke from the subject, "Government, Civil and National," in which patriotism and temperance were so inseparably blended that the enthusiasm ran high and good work was accomplished.

Each morning session beginning at eight o'clock, consisted of an L. T. L. conference in the chapel, under the able direction of Alice M. Guernsey, and of an evangelistic training class, along physical culture lines, under the leadership of Jennie Fowler Willing, who also conducted each morning's praise service. Upon roll-call each member of the executive committee answered with a quotation from Miss Willard. The president's address was a comprehensive review of the most notable events of the year. She spoke in great tenderness of our promoted Chieftain, and of the consolation of her parting message, "How beautiful it is to be with God."

The corresponding secretary's report showed that there are 212 local unions, 24 Y's and 115 Loyal Temperance Legions in the state; 1,968 public meetings have been held, addressed by 237 speakers.

The treasurer's report proved that the state is in a good financial condition, the total cash receipts having been $5,948.49, disbursements, $4,050.11, with a balance in the treasury, October 1, 1898, of $1,898.38. The local unions have received $31,387, and expended $22,299.33 during the year, exclusive of membership dues. The state has a membership of nearly 8,000, 614 of these belonging to the Y's, and besides these an L. T. L. membership of 5,907.

All the general officers were re-elected with practical unanimity, and a Willard memorial service was led by Mrs. I. H. Demarest, aided by Mrs. Willing.

Miss Belle Kearney was the second evening's speaker. The third and last evening was demonstration night with one minute speeches by the twenty-one county presidents and twenty-three superintendents of departments, followed by singing Miss Lunden's "White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner."

The resolutions which were all adopted declared in favor of teaching children temperance, of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, of petition by ballots, against the army canteen, in favor of the Anglo-American treaty, of the curfew ordinance, of greater efforts to obtain signers to the pledge, pledges Lillian M. N. Stevens the fullest loyalty and support, indorses the action of the National executive committee in relation to the Temple, and heartily thanked everybody for the hospitality accorded the members of the twenty-fifth annual convention of New Jersey, who sang in closing, "God be with you till we meet again."

The five lectures awarded the five unions making the largest net gain in membership will be delivered by Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi.

EMILY R. KIRBY,
State Reporter, Woodstown.

"A PERFECT FOOD—as Wholesome as it is Delicious."

WALTER BAKER & CO.'S

BREAKFAST COCOA

"Has stood the test of more than 100 years' use among all classes, and for purity and honest worth is unequalled."
—Medical and Surgical Journal.

Costs less than ONE CENT a Cup.
Trade-Mark on Every Package.

WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.,

TRADE-MARK. Established 1780. DORCHESTER, MASS.

Michigan.

I AM going to begin with the fine things that we of this peninsular state are to have credit for. Firstly, it was Mrs. Annie Andrus, president of first district, who spoke to a crowded house in her own home town in Ontario, with such acceptance that her address upon "Issues of Prohibition" has been printed and circulated as a campaign document in this, their crucial hour.

Our flower mission superintendent, Mrs. Farley, of Battle Creek, has had printed a gem of thoughts in her department, the style of which would do credit to the W. T. P. A.; and our Y superintendent, a bright college girl, Mrs. Coleman, of Pontiac, gives us as her annual leaflet, the prize essay read at state convention, "How shall we make our meetings more interesting?"

That Slow Damage.

You see that common soap shrinks wool, and that's why you use Wool Soap There is no other soap that careful people use on wool.

Use common soap on the skin and you don't notice the harm so quickly. The skin repairs itself. But in time the skin loses its softness. Its natural tint reddens. Your complexion is spoiled.

WOOL SOAP

preserves the softness of wool just because its ingredients are pure. For just the same reason, it preserves the skin's softness.

You need Wool Soap in the bath room and the toilet room. There are plenty of soaps costing several times as much as Wool Soap, yet they all shrink wool. They cannot keep the skin soft.

IT SWIMS.

All Grocers and Druggists sell it.

WHEATLET

is the prince of good foods—

It is Made for Health NOT FOR LOOKS.

It is the food that thoughtful minds have been waiting for. It is all food—comprising the gluten and phosphates of whole wheat discarding all woody and fibrous bran. You can depend upon its cleanliness.

Our booklet, mailed free on request, explains and illustrates the remarkable food properties of Entire Wheat properly milled. Send for it.

If your grocer does not keep Wheatlet have him order some for you, or send us his name and your order—we will see that you are supplied. Avoid substitutes.

The genuine is sold in 2 lb. packages and is made only by the

Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y

Again I hear from our faithful president upon her itinerary working from June 27 to September 15, the time set by executive committee, some forty unions visited, county conventions, parlor meetings, picnics, farmers' clubs, all felt the inspiration of her voice and presence and like Mrs. Hoffman she still lives and is planning more work for herself.

Our state reports are out and well worth reading; fifteen cents each, of Mrs. J. R. Parish, Bay City, postage not included.

FIRST DISTRICT:—Our L. T. L. superintendent lives here, and says in her last letter her department is the training school for W. C. T. U. workers. Reports six new Legions recently. The call is out for their district convention, the speaker to be Miss Jessie Ackermann.

The Wyandotte union has a new feature. Each lady having charge of a meeting has it at her own home, and works it up. Mrs. Sprangler, for flower mission, with two attendants, spent a whole day at depot, giving out bouquets with text.

SECOND DISTRICT:—A banner is to be presented at their annual meeting to the union making the greatest increase during the year. The purity superintendent of this district is sending out chain letters to raise money to use in her department.

At the Bedford farmers' fair one day was W. C. T. U. day.

London union is caring for a sick man. Azalia has monthly teas; the lady who entertains, serves. The members pay five cents into local treasury. Rea has monthly sewing meetings, sewing for the hostess, who furnishes the tea, and each one present pays five cents into the treasury.

In Monroe county a patent medicine called De Witt's Bitters has been analyzed thirty-five per cent alcohol. A canvass of the county has been made and names of dealers reported to the prosecuting attorney.

THIRD DISTRICT bristles with county conventions, parlor meetings, contests. Eaton Rapids celebrated Miss Willard's birthday with songs and speeches.

FOURTH DISTRICT:—Reports three county conventions well attended, pastors helpful; two features, discussion of property rights of women in Michigan and a symposium on "Words of the Wise Concerning the Liquor Traffic." Kalamazoo secured 4,000 signatures to petition against canteen system. The illness of their president, Mrs. Calkins, has been keenly felt in state and district. She has been a blessing ever since her advent from Indiana.

FIFTH DISTRICT:—Also reports a list of county conventions. At one reports of departments obtained favor under name of Workers' Round Table; at another the address by resident clergyman, Rev. Kulp, upon "The Army Canteen." The history of Ottawa county, prepared by Mrs. Rork, one of the earliest members, was read. The flower mission superintendent reports gift of vases with the flowers. In this district have been some removals of prominent workers, many deaths. Mrs. Benjamin, who is also district president, urges activity on all lines as Paul did, for the time is short.

SIXTH DISTRICT:—What shall I say of my very own? Mrs. Dawson, its president, has attended every county convention but one; then dates conflicted and, denying herself the pleasure of meeting state workers, she went where she could be most helpful. Flushing is one of the most cultured towns in Michigan, and so, in spite of the weather Genesee county's was a perfect convention. The singing was of rare excellence, the elocutionary numbers fine. Reports fairly good. Two papers awakened discussion, those on narcotics and franchise. Some familiar faces were detained by illness, yet at memorial services only two unions responded with names of members by death. Loving mention was made of Miss Willard and the other National workers by our state president, and her evening address was well received, every point telling.

The youngest registered attendant was Dolly Madison, the little four-year-old niece of your reporter. Beginning early, we mean some day she shall be a worker.

At Lansing the union held a contest, purchased Testaments with the proceeds and sent to our soldier boys. Their local press superintendent furnishes a column for each issue of Epworth Messenger. The president of Oakland county held a W. C. T. U. institute at Birmingham, several ladies from Detroit helping in the exercises.

SEVENTH DISTRICT has well rounded out the year with annual convention at Cepoe; Mrs. Benjamin present, and as one result of the meeting thirteen new members added. Miss Bissell, the efficient Christian leader, declined re-election.

EIGHTH DISTRICT Convention was held at Chesaning. Rev. Hawks, of Saginaw, gave an evening address. Several unions put in their months in working for soldier boys; this and parlor meetings have been their line of work. Ashley, Pompeii, Middleton, St. Louis and Ithaca have mission stations according to state plan.

NINTH DISTRICT:—Mothers' meetings, gospel temperance and heredity meetings with much distribution of literature is the work of the unions in the order named. One thought in the report sent to me, "Riverton still keeps working away, which is surely a good report, since our regular everyday work often tells upon our enemy more than other more unusual efforts." This district has held an L. T. L. convention with twenty-one voting delegates; next year are to have a banner, also district song.

TENTH DISTRICT:—Reports from all unions since my last, show work for soldier boys in comforts for body and soul. The annual meeting is called at Caro. Among the eight topics for discussion I wish we might all hear "An Ideal Family and State," "What Constitutes a Womanly Woman," "The Value of Woman in Government." The death of the son of Mrs. Hill, our state poet, as well as others in that district, causes a loving prayer of sympathy from all who knew them.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT is afflicted in sickness of both president and president-at-large; annual meeting not to be held; membership day was well observed. Bay View is in this district, and the W. C. T. U. Institute, presided over by Mrs. Rounds, was unusually instructive and entertaining, with helpers from eleven states, literally from Texas to California. The topics for discussion were allowed ten minutes for presentation, and covered every phase of religious, domestic, political life you ever thought of. Bay View W. C. T. U. anniversary was celebrated at the Auditorium with a lecture, entitled, "The Worth of the Wage Worker," by Mrs. Leonora Lake, vice-president of the C. T. A. U. of America.

TWELFTH DISTRICT:—Report coming to me very short; illness has hindered the work in some counties. Ten meetings were held in Ishpeming and vicinity. Three in the open air were well attended. Mrs. Law has been at work in the district, and held some very successful meetings. Two special lines of work, a temperance worker among the soldiers and the Temple.

Two more honors have come to Michigan since I began this letter. Lillian Hollister, our state superintendent of parliamentary law, has prepared a "pocket manual," indorsed by Mrs. Benjamin, which is invaluable, and Rev. Frances Townsley, of the tenth, has gotten out a calendar for 1899. Her desire is to have this wall calendar "a means of suggestion, help, hope for the pilgrims on life's daily path of duty and privilege."

We, of Michigan, intend to live up to Monroe county's motto, "No step backward."

(MRS.) C. H. JOHNSON,
State Reporter, Flint.

This Is the Kind.

Illustration is 3-5ths Size Original Package.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Treas. says: "Rumford Baking Powder is used in my own house, and I know that the baking quality is fully equal to other high-grade powders which cost much more. The manufacturers, guarantee its purity and healthfulness, and that it will retain its strength unimpaired in any climate. I can therefore recommend it as a superior powder."

Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Nebraska.

THE twenty-fourth annual meeting of Nebraska white-ribboners was held in the United Presbyterian church, at Pawnee city, October 11 to 16. Considerable anxiety as to the attendance was occasioned by the situation, it being in the southeast corner of the state, as well as by the wonderful attractions offered at the Exposition upon that week; it being the Peace Jubilee, and boasted the presence of the President of the United States. How glad we were when we found our women so loyal! Although the attendance was not quite so large as at some former times, yet a good representation was present from nearly every section of the state. The most delightful hospitality was dispensed by the citizens of Pawnee, who came in great numbers to our business meetings as well as to the public lectures. One pleasant feature was the solicitation of a number of white-ribboners to address the chapel service each morning in the academy, sustained by the United Presbyterian denomination.

The business of the convention was well dispatched by President Walker, who is a very tactful and able presiding officer. Reports were short and to the point, and gave a very hopeful outlook for the future. The devotional services of each session were helpful and earnest to a high degree. All present constantly testified to the spirituality of the convention. The most perfect accord reigns in the Nebraska ranks, and the tide of good fellowship rides high in these pleasant feasts of the tabernacles.

The Temple matter came in for a good share of discussion, and a ringing resolution favoring the retirement of the $300,000 Trust Bonds was unanimously adopted.

Memorial services conducted by Mrs. S. C. O. Upton were held for our dear leader, as well as other translated ones in our ranks.

A model mothers' meeting was conducted by Mrs. Wakelin, former state president. The superintendent of literature at the exposition reported its widespread distribution, and the delight expressed by teachers and Christian workers in finding just what they needed.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. S. M. Walker, president; Mrs. D. V. Wheelock, vice-president; Mrs. M. M. Claflin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. M. Bunting, recording secretary; Mrs. E. M. Cobb, treasurer.

The evening meetings were splendidly attended and of great profit. The first was given to welcomes from the city by Hon. J. L. Little, the churches by Rev. Petra, the union by Mrs. E. A. Fulton, and responded to by Mrs. Claflin, after which came a roll-call of years, when the years of the twenty-three past conventions were called and spoken of briefly each by a woman who had been present at that convention. Not one year was missed since the beginning in 1874. The reminiscences were greatly enjoyed by all. The second evening was devoted to the subject of the army canteen, by Mrs. Wheelock. "Patrons' Meetings," by Mrs. Hartley, after which Mrs. Ada W. Unruh gave her splendid lecture, "That Old Bachelor." The third evening was filled by Mrs. Charlton Edholm, who spoke in an impassioned manner upon the subject of her life work, purity and the rescue work.

Mrs. Unruh, who was present throughout the convention and helpful in so many ways, and Mrs. Ed-

Gail Borden

Eagle Brand

Condensed Milk
HAS NO EQUAL AS AN INFANT FOOD.
"INFANT HEALTH" SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.
NEW YORK CONDENSED MILK CO. N.Y.

holm, both left a blessed influence with our women, and their field work in Nebraska will be successful, we feel sure.

Nebraska women have the highest regard for and the most implicit confidence in their president, Mrs. Walker. She is a fine field worker, although this year has been largely required at home by the illness and death of her father; for the coming year every woman seems to have a large portion of faith for success, and as well and quite as indispensable the determination to do her part.

MAMIE M. CLAFLIN,
State Reporter, Ord.

Oklahoma.

"MOTHER NATIONAL" has been ably represented in our territory for forty-five days, by Mrs. Helen D. Harford. During that time she held seventy-four meetings, organized fourteen unions, obtained 262 active members, 176 honorary, and 111 pledged persons to total abstinence.

The second district met in convention for the first time at Perry, and organized for work under the leadership of Mrs. Emma Miller, of Guthrie, who was selected president for the incoming year. The Perry union did themselves great credit in entertaining the convention and helping to make it a success.

The first thing the Parker union did after organizing recently, was to hold a memorial service for Miss Willard. The address was given by an Evanston student, who heard Miss Willard make her last public speech in her old home. The collection netted six dollars for the Temple.

The Guthrie union has held parlor meetings successfully, considering the subjects of Social Purity, Heredity, Hull House, Social Settlements, and a report of Federation of Women's Clubs at Denver by Mrs. Carter, who was in attendance. The Guthrie union has organized the first colored union in the territory. Sister Stevens, of Clifton, writes of the powers of evil that pervade her neighborhood, but gives one "ray of hope" by stating that the young people are reading more good books than ever before from the public library of which she has charge.

A series of Demorest medal contests have been held in the far western counties of Greer and Rogers Mills, in charge of G. E. Jones, superintendent of public schools in Navaja, in connection with a grove meeting for instruction in music and elocution. Scientific temperance instruction has received an impetus. The territorial board of education has sent the county superintendents of public schools five questions pertaining to the effects of alcohol upon the human system. These questions are to be incorporated in the examinations of teachers, and they will be graded upon them the same as other studies, and required to teach this branch as well as the others.

Miss Mary G. Hay, of California, is now in this territory, organizing the forces of equal suffrage. She is literally making house-to-house visitations in securing helpers. A territorial convention will be held in Oklahoma City early in November, at which time Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt will be present, and remain in the territory until after the legislature closes.

The progressive methods employed in efforts to civilize our brother, "the red man," was strikingly illustrated by one of the teachers, Miss Harmes, bringing a number of Kickapoo Indian girls to Oklahoma city for a month's outing, renting rooms and keeping house with them. They visited many places of interest, but, perhaps, showed the most surprise at the printing press and telephones.

Our indefatigable and faithful corresponding secretary, Mrs. N. E. Oliver, is for the third time to be a partaker of the great and good things of a National Convention. The Territorial W. C. T. U. convention, for the seventh time, has conferred upon the writer the honor of reporting Oklahoma to the "News From the Field."

(MRS.) SUE UHL BROWN,
Ter. Reporter, Oklahoma.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

Through some singular circumstance, I find a few moments leisure before taking my train for St. Paul, and do not know how I can invest it better than by saying a few words of love and cheer to the dear women who will remain in their homes, with their thoughts turned toward the Jerusalem of our great Convention. How I wish you could all see with the spirit eye the busy scenes which have been going on at Headquarters during the past few days. Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Beauchamp arrived this morning, and the day has been full of conferences, to be succeeded by a formal General Officers' meeting to-morrow at St. Paul, whither Mrs. Stevens has preceded us by three days. I wish you might see the pretty badges, with their silver lettering, to commemorate the silver wedding of the Crusade; also the programs, which, to my partial eye, are things of beauty. I wish you might each one of you be with us in bodily presence as well as in spirit. We shall take great comfort in the thought that you will follow with your prayers each day and each hour of the great meeting. There are more vital issues pending at this Convention than at any other which has met for many years. We need wisdom and strength, and we need above everything else a love strong enough to sweep away all differences of head and bind us together in a harmonious whole, which shall unitedly march against the foe. I covet your love and prayers for us, for it seems to me we need them as never before, and never before, I am sure, in all the years that I have served you, has my own heart been so filled with love for every woman in the white-ribbon ranks and for every principle for which that white ribbon stands. God bless us, each and all.

